ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The publication of this special issue on Mexico's Energy Reforms was possible only thanks to the support and coordination of a stellar team.

We would like to extend our gratitude to our faculty advisor, Alex Ritchie, whose advice runs through issues 56.1 and 56.2, whose support was critical to the success of our March symposium, and whose knowledge and teaching has broadened our understanding of property and natural resources law. We are forever grateful!

We are also indebted to our citation staff, the incoming editors of the Natural Resources Journal. We are especially thankful to Colin McKenzie, Richard Moore, and Matt Ramirez for the time and insight they provided during the final editing stages. We look forward to reading 57.1 and 57.2.

Thanks also to the symposium planning committee, chaired by Symposium Editor Anne Minard, and also including Jeremy Faulkner, Richard Moore, Shane Maier, Selena Sauer, Cara Lynch, Alex Ritchie, Marie Andrews, and Melissa Lobato.

Finally, we offer special thanks to the Rocky Mountain Mineral Law Foundation, the sponsor of our symposium on Mexico's Energy Reforms. Thank you!
