ESPECIALLY FOR NEW MEXICANS

What are New Mexico's laws on marriage, divorce, and child custody? Is spousal support (alimony) required in all cases? How much child support must be paid? How do divorcing couples divide their property and debts? Everyone thinking about marriage or divorce should read this book to learn the answers and many practical suggestions.

This book does a remarkable job of putting into everyday language the answers to questions commonly asked by anyone going through a divorce.
—Leigh Anne Chavez, Attorney and Instructor, Domestic Relations Law

Anyone thinking of cohabiting or marriage should read this book first. Although full of useful and clear information about the divorce process, the book is also extremely valuable for couples planning a life together.
—Eileen Sullivan, Reference Librarian

This book is very thorough, but at the same time very lucid. It will be of great value to the public and to others interested in this area of the law.
—David L. Walther, Family Law Attorney

I learned a lot! This book sets forth realistic expectations of the divorce process and should save people many unnecessary legal costs.
—Barbara Wasylenki, LISW

Barbara Shapiro was a New Mexico specialist practicing in family law before she retired in 2000. While in practice, she frequently spoke and wrote about family law issues for both the public and legal community.

Antoinette Sedillo López is a professor of law at the University of New Mexico. She specializes in Family Law, Professional Responsibility and Clinical Legal Education.
