WASHINGTON LETTER

WASHINGTON, D. C. JAN. 4, 1901.
How thoroughly Senator Hanna dominates the republican steering committee of the senate is shown by the threats of a cloture rule for the senate, if there is shown any attempt to filibuster against the ship subsidy, or the army reorganization bill, that have come from that committee since congress reconvened. Whether those threats can be made effective will depend largely upon the backbone exhibited by republican senators who are opposed to both bills. It is expected that before the army bill is voted upon a democratic substitute providing for a continuance of the present strength of the army for two years from the first of next July will be offered.

The reappropriation bill is being made the basis of a warm contest in the house, in which political lines are not drawn, but most of the democrats are supporting the substitute for the committee bill, which slightly increases the representation of a few states and reduces that of none.

General expression of suspicion of the motive in delaying action on the Nicaragua canal bill has brought out a statement from prominent republican senators that action will not be taken for at least a month, because of the desire to show England the courtesy of allowing it that much time to act upon the amended Hay-Pauncefote treaty. According to the same authority, the bill will be called up early in February and passed. That, however, doesn't seem to be the opinion of the president of the Panama Canal Co., who is in Washington, as he has publicly said that he considers his company still has a chance to sell out to the United States, which he pretends that it isn't at all anxious to do, as it can sell to England, France and Germany at any time. Whether this impudent Frenchman is bluffing or really has hold on any considerable number of senators sufficiently strong to hold up the Nicaragua canal bill will shortly become apparent.

Not even a resolution of the senate can get at that interesting document generally spoken of as the Lawshe report, being a detailed statement of the crookedness found in the handling of Cuban moneys by an expert accountant. Instead of answering the senate resolution calling for this report, Secretary Root went to Mr. McKinley for assistance in burying the report so deep that the senate cannot dig it up for its contents to create a sensation. In order to render this assistance Mr. McKinley will take advantage of his authority to decline to make public any document which in his discretion would be best kept secret. There is no way that the senate could force the president to make public this document, even were a majority disposed to try. But the fact that so much trouble has been taken to suppress this report and that Mr. A. L. Lawshe, the man who made it, has been given a big place in the Philippines, apparently to get him out of the way, shows that the revelations made by the report must be many times worse than the publication of the Neely stealings in Cuba.

There is an old-time row among Ohio republicans. Senator Foraker has accused several members of his party of fixing up a conspiracy to put Representative Dick in Foraker's seat at the close of his term, by a deal with the anti-saloon element and the use of the Ohio republican committee, of which Dick is chairman. Foraker is said to have given Dick a personal raking over that he will never forget and to have succeeded in getting Hanna to break with Dick, who has been his confidential man ever since he started out to be a political boss. Whether Dick, deprived of Hanna's support, will be strong enough to put up anything like a winning fight against Foraker, is doubtful, but the rumormongers are going to increase brotherly love among Ohio republicans.

Gen. Miles has a few facts in his possession about embalmment that have never been made public, but which may be included in the answer that he will make in his own time to ex-Secretary Alger's new attack on him. Speaking of the matter, Gen. Miles said: "Mr. Alger, by publishing a book and by the use of the public press in dealing with facts connected with the Spanish war, has laid himself open to reply by any army officer who is in any way affected by the statements made. While I have not yet fully decided on the course I shall pursue in the matter, it is very likely I shall at some future time put on record a few facts which it will be impossible to whistle down."

The administration has such a dread of secret talk, that they may have to resort to the expedient of recording facts from the lips of the officers.

command of the army if he replies to Alger have been made. Mr. McKinley, as all the world knows, would welcome an excuse to humiliate Gen. Miles, and since the senate military committee adopted the idea of Gen. Miles on army reorganization, in place of what was known as the Root plan prepared by Gen. Corbin, Secretary Root would gladly help. For that reason some of Gen. Miles' friends are trying to get him to wait until after his retirement to have his final say.

Dr. Calvin J. Pollock, of Kirksville, Mo., was the inventive early bird in the wee sma' hours of the new century. He desired to present the first application of the century for a United States patent, and through the enterprise of his attorneys, C. A. Snow & Co., of Washington, D. C. accomplished his object.

SHOCKING TRAGEDY.

Duncan McIntyre of Cerrillos, Shoots Miss Etta Anderson and Takes his Own Life.

Duncan McIntyre, a young man of 20 belonging to a prominent and highly respected family of Los Cerrillos, at an early hour yesterday morning shot Miss Etta Anderson through the head, and then turned his revolver with deadly effect upon himself. The young lady's refusal to consider a proposal of marriage was the cause of the act.

Miss Anderson, a beautiful and accomplished young lady of 18, returned to Cerrillos new year's day from St. Louis, where she had been attending school. McIntyre had been deeply in love with the young lady before she went away and renewed his advances when she returned. Friday evening he spent at the young lady's home, where a number of young people had gathered. Sometime after midnight he asked Miss Anderson for a few minutes conversation. He was heard pleading with her. Then suddenly she exclaimed with a shriek: "O, Duncan, don't!" An instant later a shot rang out, followed by another. The family rushed to the room and found both stretched motionless upon the floor, bleeding from wounds in the head. McIntyre was already dead. Miss Anderson lived for a half hour, retaining consciousness and speaking a few words to her mother.

Nothing could hurt you more, I know, than to feel that your father thought you did not love him and find him interesting to talk to. All this is a surprise to you, and this is exactly why I blame you, that you do not see. Your eyes are sealed with selfishness. If you had the unselfish, seeing eye you would notice how apt he is when your girl friends are with you to come about like a big, wistful boy and try to make a place for himself in the conversation, and how disappointed he seems when you say, as you always do, as if his presence were a restraint, "come on, girls; let's go up to my room." I saw a' this clearly enough when I was with you the last time, and I also saw just what he meant when he said what he did to me, and just why he said it. The place of the daughter in the home is as large or as small a place as she is able to make it. It is really a creative place, one in which she can be the brightest, happiest, most helpful influence in the home, or simply a parasite of the comforts and protection of the home, with no thought of any return on her part. I grieve to say that many of the young girls I know, including my best-beloved Amy, are sinners of his sort. You (and they) have let your outside interests drive out all conception of yourself as a part of a family, in which each member is dependent on each of the others for happiness—Helen Moody.

Among the passengers who recently arrived by steamer in New York was Jan Kruger, formerly a justice of the peace of the Transvaal republic at Pretoria. He had $1,000 in letters of credit and no baggage. He told the custom officers that he had been captured by the British and escaped and that now he wanted to settle in this country as far away from the Transvaal as possible.

The new state treasurer of Nebraska finds himself in a tight place. The new law, which fixes the amount of his bond, provides that it must be given through a guarantee company, and not by private sureties as heretofore. When he came to get ready for entering upon the duties of his office he learned to his astonishment that the annual premium charge by the company upon a bond such as he is required to give is three thousand dollars, while the salary of the office is only twenty-five hundred. There is an office that will have to seek the treasurer, and seek him very diligently.

Striking Study in Heredity.

Dr. Winship recently made a striking contribution to the literature of criminology, and of heredity at the same time, in a study of two families, both well known, the facts in the histories of which were practically verifiable in like degree.

One of these was the infamously well known Jukes family, notorious in prison annals. Max was the real name of the progenitor of the tribe, and the study of its personnel covers the several histories of 1,200 persons. Of these 310 were paupers, who had been supported by the public in almshouses during an aggregate, as for one person of 2,300 years. They were a physically unwholesome lot. Three hundred died in infancy from want of vitality and neglect. Four hundred were physically wrecked by excess. Fifty of the women lived in open debauchery. Seven committed murder, sixty were habitual thieves, and 130 were convicted of crimes of some kind, many of them several times. Of the 1,200 only twenty learned trades, and ten of these were taught in prison. The recognized traits in the whole family were idleness, ignorance and vulgarity. The cost to the public, in money, to say nothing of anything else, was reckoned, some years ago, at a million and a quarter dollars. Outside of the immediate family connection, the taint must have penetrated, indirectly, through other strata of the community, and so added to the cost in shame and suffering and dollars.

How much better would it have been for the world if the progenitor of this frightful brood of criminals and paupers could have been early removed.

The other study is that of the descendants of the distinguished divine, Jonathan Edwards. Among them Dr. Winship finds 285 college graduates and among these, thirteen presidents of colleges and other higher institutions of learning, sixty-five professors in colleges, and many principals of academies and seminaries. Forty-five universities and colleges, American and foreign, number members of this family among their graduates. Among the members have been sixty physicians, some of them distinguished and all of high rank, more than a hundred clergymen, missionaries and teachers of theology, eighty-three persons who have served in public office with credit and a surprising number of successful bank and insurance managers, presidents and superintendents of railways, miners, merchants, advocates of reforms, and leaders generally in industrial, commercial and professional life in more than thirty states of the Union.

Dr. Winship does not say that the stern morality of Dr. Edwards was in evidence in all. Aaron Burr was one of the connection, and there were others of whom the ancestor would not have approved.

But these two stories do make it plain that goodness and intelligence, and vice and stolid ignorance also, constitute "pertinent forces that descend from generation to generation, constantly widening, though only sometimes intensifying, in influence to bless or curse mankind. This is not novel in theory, but it has rarely been so powerfully illustrated by contrasting examples. It is not all in heredity nor all in environment. It is both.

Sandstone will not take the polish of marble, but even smoothness will not come to either without the labor of friction. Qualities are inherited, but they must be developed or checked in training. The moral re-enforces the theory that the only practicable way to eliminate this kind of evil is to begin with the children. A few generations of patience and character will be changed.—El Paso Times.

The Twice-a-Week Republic.

Every Monday and Thursday a newspaper as good as a magazine—and better for it contains the latest telegraph as well as interesting stories—is sent to the subscriber of the "Twice-a-Week" Republic, which is only $1 a year.

The man who reads the "Twice-a-Week" Republic knows all about affairs political, domestic and foreign events, is posted about the markets and commercial matters generally.

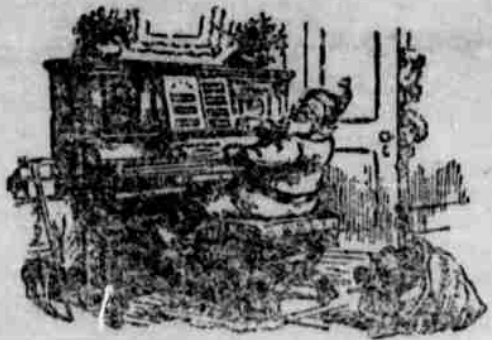

The woman who reads the "Twice-a-Week" Republic gathers a bit of valuable information about household affairs and late fashions and finds recreation in the bright stories that come under both the headings of facts and fiction. The is gossip about new books and a dozen other topics of especial interest to the wide awake man and woman.

A Mexican rented seven and one-half acres of old alfalfa land from Col. Dyer last spring, planted it in cotton and has already had ground time and one-half ton of cotton for his labor. The cotton is now in the field.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

To the Democracy of Eddy County, No. 1.
As I repeatedly announced to my friends prior to the convention held yesterday, I cannot be a candidate for the office of Justice of the Peace. And while I appreciate thoroughly the honor of this unsolicited endorsement tendered by my friends, for many reasons I am compelled to withdraw my name. Thinking one and all, I remain, Yours very truly,
JOHN L. ROBERTSON.

THERE is a great deal of talk about cheap freight rates on the Pecos Valley System when it has passed into the hands of the Santa Fe officials. It is difficult to see any logical reason for such speculation, and the cool-headed business men of the Valley will not prepare to accept a reward from the reduction of freight charges. Any material change in this direction will only come with competition. The greatest advantage to be derived will be in the development of the entire Valley by the immigration department of the Santa Fe system, which has performed so much work of this kind all over the west.

It is very amusing to watch various newspapers attempt an intelligent discussion of the negro question in the Southern states, when they have no more conception of what the real negro of the south is than they do of the doctrine of Confucius. No nation handle this question who has not "been there."

The withdrawal of Mr. Emerson's name from the democratic ticket leaves only one candidate on it, W. E. King, who so far has no opponent. Mr. King has the endorsement of his party, as well as of the public at large, which speaks well for his record for an official.

A POLITICAL club has been organized in New York City with the name Samuel J. Tilden Club. The names of Cleveland, Lamont, Whitney and other prominent democrats (?) is a guarantee that the true principles will be maintained. N. H. Such a membership is enough to disturb the bones of the man whom they have honored (?) by giving the club his name. This is the first step in the proposed reorganization. Reorganization is what is needed.

We quote from the Argus of this week, "The matter of county printing was taken up, and after getting bids from all the Carlsbad papers the board ignored their prices and designated the Carlsbad as official county paper, to print all proceedings and do all job work for county officials at their own figures." We regret that the Argus again makes statements that are without foundation and wholly untrue, as it has so often done before. It would be very easy to ascertain the real facts before publishing such gross errors as in this case. The Current explicitly agreed to print the proceedings of the county board for $200 less per year than the law allows, and also set a limit to job work prices. Why then does the Argus misstate the facts. In truth the Current could have had the printing at its own price, for the board decided that it was the only paper of "general circulation" in the county, as an investigation will show. Does the Argus want this investigation?

In justice to the county board we say that they have secured the printing of county matter at a much less figure than the law allows, and at the same time complied with the law in every respect. In this matter they are protecting the interests of the tax payers the very best possible.

While the lecture at the opera house last evening was not as well attended as it would have been with less sickness prevailing, still a fair sized audience greeted the poet of the Sierras. Mr. Miller's discourse on China and Chinese literature, and his trip to the Klondike, were appreciated by a very intelligent gathering. While not as entertaining as some expected it to be, the lecture teamed with new facts, new ideas and refreshing thoughts, well worth the price of admission. Mr. Miller is a charming personality, a delightful acquaintance, and a man of the most varied and ripened experience the writer has encountered in many years. He says Carlsbad is a famous place every where, and that the best thing done for the town was to change the name to one of significance. He expressed himself as delighted with his first visit to the far famed Pecos Valley.

A BILL

For the Protection of Stock Raising on Public Lands.

Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled,

SECTION 1. That chapter one hundred and forty-nine of supplement to the revised statutes of the United States, volume first, second edition, 1874-1891, entitled "an act to prevent unlawful occupancy of public lands," be amended by adding thereto the following section to be known as section 8:

Nothing in said chapter shall be held to prohibit the erection and maintenance of drift fences on the public lands of the United States, under such rules and regulations as may from time to time be established and promulgated by the commissioner of the general land office, who is hereby authorized and directed to make such rules and regulations as shall be deemed necessary to carry into effect this proviso:

Provided, that any drift fence erected under the provisions hereof shall be so constructed as to permit the free passage of sheep under the same.

CORN AS POULTRY FOOD.

An Emphatic Denial of the Contention of the "Anticorns."

When the writer began poultry keeping on a large scale, he was very "shy" of corn as a staple food for poultry, being influenced greatly by the current denunciations of corn as a poultry food and not competent to analyze the arguments of those attempting to demonstrate the unsuitableness of corn as an article of poultry diet. In practice he soon learned the value of corn and more corn. With added experience and opportunity to investigate the matter he learned that the success of the antecorn demonstration depended on assumptions which were probably false. He is still patiently waiting for some one who thinks differently to show that it is wrong. Attention is called to it at this time because there have just come to our notice two treatises of the corn question by leading English writers which, as far as their influence extends in this country, will, we feel sure, do more harm than good. We have hesitated to even allude to this matter in an issue of the paper which already contained one discussion on the relative merits of English and American methods best antipathy to things English should be thought the motive, when, in truth, the opposition is to the thing itself. But, believing that the effect of the antecorn teachings are, on the whole, bad for the poultry industry of America, and perhaps of other countries, too, we feel that it is in the line of duty to try a fair and the antecorn fallacy whenever and wherever it appears with an endorsement likely to give it serious weight with poultry keepers whose experience is not great enough to have taught them the true value of corn.

We unhesitatingly rank corn and corn products at the head of the list of poultry foods—the domestic fowls' staff of life—and assert that a poultry keeper who is not using it very liberally is not living up to his opportunities in the line of cheap food and better profit. It is not in the use, but in the abuse, of corn that the fault lies. One of the writers to whom we refer says, "This unfortunate result" (liver disease) "can in almost every case be traced to the use of Indian corn." We do not think either he or any one else can show that corn is more at fault than other grains except that corn is the grain most commonly fed. The inquiries we receive for treatments of liver disease run well up into the hundreds in a year and show conclusively that it is the too much grain diet, whether corn, wheat, oats or a variety, that causes liver disease. It is too much concentrated food, lack of green stuff and lack of exercise, not simply and solely too much corn. We are getting very tired of seeing corn made the scapegoat for all the bad results of poor poultry keeping. If the antecorn advocates will absorb a few such facts as these, perhaps they may devote less time to preaching against corn and the poultry world be thus much bettered.

Corn is the staple article of diet almost without an exception wherever superior poultry of any kind is produced in quantity for the American market. It is corn that makes rich eggs. The egg men in the cities will tell you that the richest eggs come, as a rule, from the sections where corn is most used; also that they have repeatedly taught shippers to improve the quality of their eggs by insisting on feeding more corn. There are poultrymen, lots of them, in this country who make poultry pay well who feed practically nothing but corn, grass and meat and have used this diet continuously for years. Such facts as these make any demonstration against the use of corn look, as the slang phrase puts it, like 39 cents.—Farm Poultry.

Improving the Opportunity. My small nephew was ready to start on a long promised week's visit to his grandfather's in the country. There was an exasperating delay in the appearance of the carriage to take us to the station. The young man worked off his impatience in various annoying ways for half an hour. Then suddenly he was seen to kneel beside a chair in the corner and bury his face in his hands. After a few minutes his mother said:

"Well, Kenneth, what are you doing?"

"Just getting my prayers said up for while I'm going to be out at grandpa's. There's a thing to do here, and I 'spect to be pretty busy while I'm there."—Harper's Magazine.

QUEEN OF MISSOURI.

Biddle's Record Surprises Even Those Who Think They Know Her.

The Missouri hen is a larger thing than the Missouri cow or Missouri horse, or even the Missouri mule—larger indeed than all the live stock in the state.

She is larger than all the possible inmates of the barnyard and all the grain and other farm produce which are grown in this great state.

I mean she is bigger in a commercial way—in the matter of dollars and cents.

I don't suppose that one citizen of the state out of 50,000 realizes the importance of the hen. In the gathering of the statistics for my annual report on the industries of the state I learned that even the farmers who raise the hen do not realize her importance as a comparative wealth producer.

Heavily stated, the facts are that Queen Chickabiddy and her product overtop in valuation all the horses, mules, sheep, oats, rye, grass seed, cane seed, castor beans, cotton seed, tobacco, hay and straw by over $50,000. And the hen is going to do better than that in Missouri. All my information shows that the industry of raising poultry has had a remarkable boom within the last two years and that the percentage of increase for next year will be proportionate.

In 1890 the figures of the railroad and express companies showed that 105,988,710 pounds of poultry were shipped by the Missouri counties. That meant an increase of 30,907,443 pounds or over one-fifth in the dressed poultry business alone.

Missouri last year shipped 34,875,040 dozens of eggs. Adding the value of eggs to that of the dead chicken shows that during the year the state secured $12,091,048.54 from the poultry raising business.—Thomas P. Rixey, State Labor Commissioner, in St. Louis Post Dispatch.

London's Meat Supply.

So far as the wholesale meat markets in London are concerned each succeeding year shows a huge increase in the quantity imported from America and the colonies and a gradual diminution in the bona fide English supply. Every annual report repeats the same story and proves that dealers are relying more and more on breeders abroad. Of the meat sold last year at Smith field only 27.3 per cent was country killed, the percentage in 1898 being 27.8, and 15.5 per cent as against 19.7 per cent town killed. Thus but 42 per cent of the entire consumption was forthcoming from the provinces. Foreign countries supplied 14.2 per cent, America 23 per cent and Australia and New Zealand 20 per cent. Probably the condensing consumers will never know how much of the last mentioned items they paid for at the rate of best English food and ate in the belief that it was the roast beef of old England.—London Telegraph.

AN OLD MAN'S DAILING.

The hair is white that sweeps across his deeply furrowed brow. The head that once was proudly poised droops forward feebly now. He swings no jaunty cane, but leans upon a heavy stick. And as I watch him come and go I notice that the step is slow. Which once was light and quick.

His hand is laid upon his arm, And low lights up her face. When he, with trembling gut string, Still looks for her the place. Where small distraction chance to lie, And he, with anxious pride, Not guard his and good by will— Must be for knight-as down the hill He lingers at her side.

A smile oft plays around her lips When she accepts his aid. For only loving, gentle hands Has time upon her laid. Her eyes are bright, her step is light. But he, with anxious pride, Not guard his and good by will— Must be for knight-as down the hill He lingers at her side.

—A. K. Kiley in Chicago Times Herald.

Prizes For Road Menders.

In some English counties prizes are offered for the section of road which is kept in the best order throughout the year. There is no honorable rivalry among the roadmasters for obtaining these rewards, and the winners are proud of their distinction as champion road menders. When all the roads are pre-eminent for their excellence, it cannot be an easy matter for the most critical committee to make the awards, but the effect of the competition is to put every man on his mettle and to increase the efficiency of the road service.

How different are these methods and processes from those which prevail in rural America, where highway commissioners draw their salaries and set gangs of laborers at work a few days before election or where farmers in the autumn, when there is nothing else to do, unite in a week's voluntary service as road menders!

Wisconsin's Good Roads Plank.

Otto Dornier, ex-chairman of the L. A. W. highway improvement committee, is still active in his work for good roads. His latest achievement is to secure, with the aid of State Senator Stout, a good roads plank in the Republican state platform of Wisconsin. The section adopted is as follows: "We believe that the demand for better highways made by the farmers of Wisconsin should be encouraged by the state as favoring an improvement of great practical value for agricultural interests."

Gravel and Macadam Roads.

The initial cost of a road depends upon the cost of materials, labor, machinery, the width and depth to which the material is to be spread on and the method of construction. All these things vary so much in the different states that it is impossible to name the exact amount for which a mile of a certain kind of road can be built.

WILSON & MASON,

FRUIT STORAGE.

A Frame House For Keeping Apples Without Ice.

The Vermont station gives a description, with illustration, of a frame storage house in which low temperature and ventilation are provided by throwing open doors and windows during cool spells in the fall and keeping them closed at other times. The house is 30 by 50 feet and has two stories and a basement. The basement and first floor are used for storing fruit and hold 1,000 barrels each. The second floor is for empty barrels, etc. The building has double walls and double windows. An oil stove gives heat enough to keep the fruit from freezing in winter. The lumber used in the construction of this house was as follows:

This bill is estimated at $143.00, and the house cost $1,500 finished. The labor of building was performed by the owner at spare times.

Such storage buildings as the one just described, which depend on the handling and utilization of low temperature during cold waves in early spring and fall, would not of course fulfill their purpose during the hot summer months. They are obviously best adapted to a cold climate, such as is found in the northern states. Here they can, in the opinion of the New Hampshire station, be made more useful in our present transitional period of storage construction than any other.

CROSS SECTION OF APPLE HOUSE.

Their defect is that they do not maintain a sufficiently low and even temperature, and they would be of little use in a warm climate. It is, however, but a step from such a fruit house to ice storage. Aside from the details of construction the only difference is that the upper story is used for storing ice, thus cooling the air in the top of the building, which sinks and in turn cools the room below.

Rye and Barley For Green Soiling.

For green soiling or pasturing both rye and barley may be sown early in September and on a rich soil as late as the last of October. But the earlier sowing will require lighter seedling and will yield more satisfactory results, according to Georgia station advice.

Barley is ordinarily confined to small, rich lots near the barn, and when sown early two bushels of seed will put in with answer, but the later sowing the heavier should be the seedling, even to as high as six bushels of seed to the acre.

On large areas, as when the cotton fields are to be sown for light winter pasture, three pecks of rye per acre or even less may give satisfactory results, but on good, rich, well prepared soil 1 1/2 to 2 bushels will be more satisfactory. When sown thickly, the stems will be finer and more tender.
Barley may be plowed in with scou-ers or put in with a grain drill or with a continuous harrow, and 1 1/2 inches covering will not be too deep. Rye, being a smaller seed and putting forth quite a delicate plant, may easily be covered too deeply. One inch is deep enough.

The California hemp industry is this year very rich, owing to the growers, and a widespread market and better

DRIED UP PASTURES.

WHAT TO DO AFTER LONG AND SE-VERE DROUGHT.

Grass Lands May Be Benefited by Available Nitrogen—How to Handle Pasture That Cannot Be Cultivated.
Economical Fertilizers.

Deficient moisture in many eastern sections has resulted in destroying or injuring some of the tender and better grasses, and in lieu of them weeds which are able to thrive where there is a minimum of moisture have in part taken their places, says Professor Roberts of Cornell in The American Agriculturist. How may these pastures and meadows be restored cheaply and most effectively? As soon as fairly copious rains descend the pastures which have not been too much injured might be sowed with the following mixture per acre: Two pounds timothy, one pound orchard grass, one pound mow meadow fescue (Festuca elatior) and one pound redtop. It would not be economy to sow more seed on pastures which are already moderately well covered with plants. Then harrow thoroughly—that is, two or three times with a spike toothed implement having small sharp teeth. The teeth of the old harrow should be drawn out and made thin for half of their length and sharp, so that they will enter the ground and break some of the old grass roots that new ones may be formed and that the seed may receive suitable covering. Then roll to press the dirt on the seed and the exposed roots. At the same time the seeds are sowed give the land a dressing of potash and nitrogen, say 50 pounds of nutrite of potash and 50 pounds of ni-trite of soda as a starter. Double this if your experience with commercial fertilizers leads to the belief that a more liberal application would be more profitable.

Grass lands are usually greatly benefited by available nitrogen, especially when applied in the spring. But this plant food is so expensive that we hesitate to recommend liberal applications of it to pasture lands where there is so little income per acre. Early next spring sow two pounds of alkali and one pound of white clover seed per acre and roll. Kill a few of the poorer cows, those which do not pay for their keep, and thus relieve the pasture until they can recover. If it appears best not to borrow money with which to purchase fertilizers, then try to find during fall and early winter some farm manure, any kind will do provided it can be distributed evenly. Scrape over the old barnyard, dig the rich earth out from under the stables, haul up the bed of manure and weeds mold and spread them.

Straw manure, straw and all kinds of refuse spread thinly at almost any time of the year will be beneficial.
Purchase a barrel of stone lime, water slake it and apply to one-fourth of an acre after the fall seeding and note results. If the pasture is very poor and fairly level and free from stone, plow and plant a part to corn and a part to oats. Possibly there may be time to plow and sow to rye this fall.
Use a part of the rye for early soiling, plow up a part and sow to oats, plow under a portion of the rye or the rye stubbles and plant to corn. From two to ten times as much roughage should be secured as would be if the pastures were grazed.

Many of the pastures are so rough and stony that they cannot even be harrowed and rolled to advantage. In all such cases about all that can be done probably is to sow seeds at already described and leave the fall and spring rains to beat them into the ground, hoping thereby to secure germination, which may be greatly assisted by spreading any refuse material thinly after the seeds are sowed. In addition in some cases the brambles, brush and coarse weeds may be cut and used to shade and protect the young plants in the poorer portions until they get foothold. But fear most farmers will not be willing to put any labor or expend any money on these rough places, not having faith that their efforts will be rewarded. Yet I have unbounded faith, founded on experience, that a little timely attention and a little grass seed, both judiciously expended, will greatly change for the better those pastures which are now making a heroic struggle for existence, but which unaided must in the end yield to the law of the survival of the hardest.

Horses' Eyes.

Curious mistakes occasionally arise in examining a horse's eyes, says the London Live Stock Journal. Some years ago a veterinary surgeon recorded a case in which the horse he was called upon to examine had been refused by the intending buyer because there was "something wrong" with the animal's near eye—an unaccountable yellow spot which only showed in certain lights. The veterinary surgeon could detect nothing amiss with either eye, but knowing the would be purchaser was a good and careful judge made inquiry of the owner concerning the circumstances under which the horse's eyes had been looked at, and being informed that it was at the stable door to get a good light on the eyes the veterinary surgeon had the horse placed as nearly as possible on the spot mentioned. Then, and only then, he saw the yellow spot in the near eye.
Convinced by his previous investigation that there was nothing wrong with the eye, he looked outside for explanations and after experiment proved the mysterious yellow spot to be neither more nor less than the reflection of the sunbeams in the yard. When a rug of newly pattern was thrown over the horse, a minute reproduction of it reflected in the yellow spot in the eye and showed to the world the purchaser had been deceived.
