Learn More About ORCID iD at UNM

by Jonathan Pringle on June 16th, 2023 | o Comments

As first announced in a blog post from March 2023, UNM is now an institutional member of ORCID (Open Researcher and Contributor Identifiers). ORCID iDs are unique and persistent identifiers that ensure effective management and consolidation of your research and scholarly efforts - both at UNM and elsewhere. Not only is acquiring an ORCID iD a helpful tool for maintaining your professional identity and sharing it with others, it will soon be mandatory (by 2027) for inclusion when submitting any federal funding proposals. UNM's acquisition of an institutional membership provides the university's research community with the ability to connect individual ORCID iDs to a larger UNM profile, and through APIs enables related data from similar tools (VIVO, Faculty Success) to be shared across these and other platforms.

Interested in learning more? Consider attending a presentation this Thursday, June 22nd from 11 a.m.-12 p.m. As part of HSLIC's Knowledge Café series, Jonathan Pringle (Scholarly Communications and Digital Librarian) and Lori Sloane (Data Manager) will provide an overview and current status of ORCID at UNM.

We will address the following:

What is (an) ORCID (iD)?

Why ORCID?

ORCID How tos

(How to) Get an ORCID

(How to) Add your Works

Where to use your ORCID iD

ORCID@UNM: Challenges and Opportunities
