The eScholar Innovation Center:
A Collaborative Initiative of the Libraries at UNM

Introduction

The eScholar Innovation Center (eSIC) is a collaborative initiative of the libraries at UNM, and is part of the Office for eScholarship Services. The purpose of eSIC is to be an advocate within the UNM community for e-scholarship and to support the transition from print to digital authoring. The concept of the Center is to provide specialized facilities, applications and resources to promote electronic publishing, online research collaboration, shared data sets, and open access scholarship, leveraging the support of the libraries, museums and the press at UNM.

The services of eSIC include consultation on author rights as well as the production of various digital media as scholarly products; facilitating dialog by offering of discussion groups and classes in collaborative writing and ePublishing; and supporting digital publishing, including editing, peer review processes, graphic design, marketing, distribution, measurement of use; and archiving, curation, and preservation of digital works.
