EX-TRAVELING AUDITOR WON'T QUIT

Earnest Refuses to Give Entrance to Auditor Sargent and Sits on the Lid. Newly Appointed Force Waits

ATTORNEY GENERAL RENDERS AN OPINION

The first of April was a real April Fool's Day at the capitol for A. G. Whittier the new traveling auditor and his force of assistants, according to press reports from Santa Fe. Howell Earnest, ex-traveling auditor refused to turn the office over and Whittier and his force of assistants could only await results. When Mr. Sargent, the auditor, reached the capitol he was officially informed that the office was not his and that those whom he had appointed would have to wait until the court decided whether or not the legislature that passed the bill giving Sargent the power to appoint the traveling auditor and his assistants was in reality a legislature at the time of the passage of this bill.

Sargent called on the attorney general for an opinion on this very complicated question which he gave in a letter to Earnest demanding that the office be turned over to the rightful official. This, it is said, lays the basis for mandamus proceedings which will be taken at once and it is thought that the matter will be thrashed out in court in a very short while.

The answer of Attorney General Clancy to Auditor Sargent's inquiry is in part as follows:

April 1, 1915

Hon. W. G. Sargent,
State Auditor,
Santa Fe, N. Mex.

You have today shown me a copy of a letter addressed by you to Mr. Howell Earnest, informing him that you had appointed Mr. A. G. Whittier state traveling auditor under the authority given to you by the provisions of House Bill No. 294, recently passed by the legislature, and requesting Mr. Earnest to turn over to the said Whittier, all official documents and other data, equipment, etc., that he has belonging to said office of State Traveling Auditor; and you have also shown me Mr. Earnest's answer to your letter, from which I make the following quotation:

"In view of the fact that said House Bill No. 294 was returned to the legislature at its recent session by the Governor without his approval and passed by the upper branch of said legislature over the Governor's veto on the afternoon of Friday, March 12, 1915, and in view of the further fact that the Attorney General of the State has rendered a written opinion that said legislature should have taken final adjournment at noon on said 12th day of March, 1915, it is not clear whether said House Bill No. 294 is a law or not. Then again, said House Bill No. 294 that was attempted to be enacted into law abolished the office of Traveling Auditor as such and created the new office of State Traveling Auditor with the same duties, but with out any provision concerning the disposition of the records and effects in the Traveling Auditor's office. For these reasons I do not feel warranted in complying with your request until these matters have been passed upon by a court of competent jurisdiction."

I have examined what appears to be a copy of the Senate Journal now in the office of the Secretary of State, from which it appears that the Senate, on the fifty-ninth day of the session passed House Bill No. 294, the Governor's objections notwithstanding, and that the President of the Senate, the Lieutenant Governor of the state, declared the bill had passed. I am, therefore, at a loss to understand how Mr. Earnest can assert that this bill was passed by the upper branch of the legislature over the Governor's veto on the afternoon of Friday, March 12, 1915. No court will go behind the record of the legislature as to any such matter as this. To do so would be a gross interference by the judicial branch of the government with the legislative department. The authorities are uniform on this point. If the legislative record itself disclosed that a bill had not been properly passed in accordance with the requirements of the constitution a court would probably hold that the bill had not become a law even though it had all the signatures of the officers of the legislature and of the Governor, but when the record shows that a bill was regularly passed, that is conclusive. Evidence to contradict the legislative record is never admissible.

Mr. Earnest is in error also in his statement "that the Attorney General of the state has rendered a written opinion that said legislature should have taken final adjournment at noon on said 12th day of March, 1915." The opinion of which Mr. Earnest refers is one which was given to Modesto C. Ortiz, Chairman of a special committee of the house of Representatives on March 11, 1915. In that opinion I said that as the law takes no note of fractions of days, the first day of the session was January 12, 1915, and that the second day began at midnight, and that by this method of counting the sixtieth day would be Friday, March 12, which must be the day of final adjournment at noon. In that opinion I did not make any references to the well established doctrine that the hour fixed for the adjournment of a legislature does not arrive until the legislature so declares and that if the record of the legislature shows a session to have been held on the fifty-ninth day or on the sixtieth day, the courts will not look behind that record or take any evidence by which its correctness could be impeached. In the present case the record shows that this bill was passed by the Senate on the fifty-ninth legislative day.

The other objection set up by Mr. Earnest that there is no provision in House Bill No. 294 concerning the disposition of the records and effects in the Traveling Auditor's office, which it abolished, is without any foundation whatever. The constitution of the State of New Mexico created an entirely new set of state officers but contained no provision whatever as to the records, files, documents and other data belonging to the various territorial offices, and it would have been quite as reasonable for Mr. Nathan Jaffa, who was Secretary under the territorial government to have refused to turn over anything in his office to the newly elected Secretary, Mr. Antonio Lucero, because there was nothing in the constitution as to the disposition of the records of his office."

TREASURER AND AUDITOR OF STATE

Are Not Entitled to Clerks as Provided in Vetoed Bill According to Governor McDonald

GAME WARDEN IS THE IMPORTANT MAN

Governor McDonald, in bitter language, assailed the state auditor and the state treasurer in his message in which he vetoed the deficiency bill providing among other things, clerks in the above named offices, says the New Mexico State Record of April 2.

These are among the most important offices in the state and require both expert and sufficient assistants, but the governor was unwilling that they should have the clerks which were named in the bill and drew his ever active blue pencil through the items which gave an appropriation for these purposes.

In contrast to this action is that on the part of the chief executive in signing the bill which had the following provision in the measure which provided for the game warden's office.

Sec. 1. The game and fish warden shall receive a salary of $2000, together with his reasonable and necessary traveling expenses to be paid out of the game protection fund.

Sec. 41. The state game and fish warden shall have the power to appoint one chief deputy, one office deputy, and such additional deputies as he may deem necessary. The chief deputy shall receive a salary of $1,200.

The office clerk shall receive a salary not to exceed $900, etc.

What's the reason? Is the department of the game and fish warden of greater account than those of the state auditor, or is it that the appointment of game and fish warden comes from the hand of the governor and comes in the pet class?

To listen to some of the veto messages that came into the legislature during the session one would have thought the governor was a teacher of morals and good government and that all he desired was the economical administration of state and business and the great good of the people of the commonwealth and that he was unselfish and patriotic official who thought nothing of police and was controlled by no other motives than a passionate longing for those things which would make New Mexico great and her populace content and happy.

The veto messages surely read good and sounded like the effluent outbursts from a real statesman.

Then just when we thought the governor was speaking from the heart and was thinking only of the interests of the people and was calling attention to the thoughtless extravagance of the auditor and the treasurer of our great state in asking for a clerk at the propertious and lavish salary of $900 or $1,200 per annum to aid in the proper conduct of their offices, he goes and knocks our confidence all in the head by giving his support and signature to a bill which gives the minor office of game and fish warden a boost in his own salary, a boost in the deputy, a boost in the deputy's salary and an extra clerk in the office who has not been heretofore provided.

O, consistency thou art a jewel, but thou are not found in the office nor discovered in the acts of the chief executive of the state of New Mexico.

Some way the idea has been in the minds of the common people of the state that the offices of the state auditor and the state treasurer were of some real importance and that there was more or less work to be conducted in those departments. There is not a bank in the city that does not have more clerks and assistants than are employed in either of the offices mentioned and to those who are unsophisticated in such matters it did not seem that a $900 clerk in the state treasurer's office and a $1,200 voucher clerk in the auditor's office was such an awful waste of the state's money. These simple and inconvenient and unlearned people also thought that the game and fish warden's department was one of minor importance as compared to the auditor and treasurer, until they learn from the governor himself, through his vetoes and his signatures of bills that the above named department needs half as much help as both the other departments combined.

Of course no one will think that there was any thought of politics in the action of the governor, and that he considers those officials who are given an appointment under his hand and seal of greater importance than those who are elected by the people, and handle the money of the state and attend to the disbursement of the same, but one cannot help wondering just why the auditor and the treasurer are refused a clerk and the game warden is given one in addition to the deputy, whose salary is increased, when heretofore the warden and a deputy have been considered capable of taking care of the duties of the office both at a salary below that which seems to have the sanction of the state's executive.

What's the reason and what's the difference?

LISTEN TO THIS

Well! Well! I wish you would listen to this. A revival has been in progress at the Methodist church a whole week and this is the first notice I have had of it. It states also that it will continue through another week. I shall now make my plans to attend some. If we could just have a real good revival in our town it would be a great blessing. I will see if I cannot get neighbor Jones to go with me.

Is this you really? If not let it be, at least the latter part. Come tomorrow and each day during the week at 7:45 p. m. and bring somebody with you. Come.

CATTLEMEN HELP TO PROTECT RANGE

U. S. Forest Service and Department of Agriculture Co-Operating With Cattlemen for Best Results

SHORTAGE OF RANGE IS BEING FELT BY CATTLEMEN

The day when there were areas of land upon which no stock was run has passed and the problem which confronts the stockman in other parts of the country and which is facing those who are located in Southern New Mexico, is the problem of getting the maximum amount of pasturage out of their range without injuring it. In fact the up-to-date cattleman is working hard on this problem at the present time and keeping in touch with various methods of grazing and protection that will add to the carrying capacity of his range.

The officials of the National Forest and the Agricultural Department have been making investigations along these lines since 1907 and these have included some extensive experiments made in the Wallowa mountains of northeastern Oregon. The results are made public in Bulletin 34 of the United States Department of Agriculture, a copy of which should prove interesting in range improvement. A copy of this book can be procured from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., and the price is five cents.

SYNOPSIS.

Joseph Hayward, an ensign in the United States army, on his way to Fort Harkin, meets Renee, a renegade Shawnee, who has been connected with all manner of atrocities, also headed for Fort Harkin, with a message from the British general, Hamilton. Hayward guides him to the fort. At General Harkin's headquarters Hayward meets Renee D'Auway, who professes to recognize him, although he has no recollection of ever having seen her before. Hayward volunteers to carry a message for Harkin to Hamilton, where Hamilton is stationed. The northwest Indian tribes are ready for war and are only held back by the refusal of the friendly Wyandots to join. The latter are demanding the return of a captured child, a religious teacher, whom they believe to be a prisoner. Hayward's mission is to assure the Wyandots that the man is not held by the soldiers. Renee tells Hayward to let her accompany him. She tells him that she is a quarter-blood Wyandot and a missionary among the Indians. She has been in search of her father. She insists that she has seen Hayward before, but in a British uniform. Hayward refuses her request and starts for the north accompanied by a scout named Brady and a private soldier. They come on the trail of a war party and to escape from the Indians take shelter in a hut on an island. Hayward finds a murdered man in the hut. It proves to be Renee D'Auway, a former French officer who is called by the Wyandots "white chief." Renee appears and Hayward is puzzled by her insistence that they have met before. Renee recognizes the murdered man as her father, who was known among the Indians as Wa-pa-tee-wah. Brady reports seeing a band of marauding Indians in the vicinity and with them Renee D'Auway. Brady's evidence convinces the girl that there is a British officer by the name of Hayward, who resembles the American. They find escape from the Indians and reconnoiter around the cabin at night. Hayward discovers a white man in a British uniform and leaves him for dead after a desperate fight. The Indians capture the cabin after a hard struggle in which Hayward is wounded. Renee saves Hayward from death at the hands of the savages and conceals him in the cellar of the cabin. Hayward discovers a half-breed negro in the cellar. They engage in a fierce fight which ends when the negro accidentally hits his brains out against the low roof of the cellar. Hayward meets his double, Joseph Hayward of the British army. The latter admits that he had held D'Auway a prisoner in the cabin, but that he knew nothing about his death. His object in detaining D'Auway was to help incite the Wyandots to war. The renegade declares that D'Auway was murdered by the negro, out of vengeance.

Her eyes wandered from me, whom she located by voice, toward the Englishman, who remained silent, his scarlet coat conspicuous in the glare. A moment their glances met, his face showing white and drawn, hers I could not see.

"Oh, so it is you, is it?" a metallic ring to the low voice. "I thought you were safely away before this. And you have been hiding here. I ought to have suspected that. Now I remember, you knew of the tunnel."

He did not answer, although I saw his lips move. What was the man afraid of? He had been sharp and snappy enough with me.

"I think you mistake, mademoiselle," I interposed, shocked at the expression of the man's face. "He has told me how it occurred; it was another who killed your father."

"What other?"

"A negro half-breed; I encountered him in the passage; we fought it out there in the dark."

"Alone? Where was this—this man?"

"He was lying unconscious beyond, next to the entrance."

"And—and," the words trembled on her lips, "you—killed the negro?"

"No, mademoiselle, I did not. We struggled together; then he fired at me, and in the flash saw my face. The sight seemed to frighten the man, for he broke away, and endeavored to run. In his haste he forgot the lowness of the tunnel, struck his head against a sharp projection, and died."

She stood motionless, her hands pressed to her forehead. Suddenly she turned from me, and faced him.

"Who was it?" she asked at last, her voice like ice. "Tell me the truth—was it Pleand?"

He dropped his eyes, with an odd gesture of the shoulders. The girl's rifle flashed to a level, so quickly I could not even throw out my arm.

"Say yes, or no! Please stand back, monsieur; this is my affair."

"Yes," the word seemed dragged from him.

"And you told monsieur here the negro killed my father? You said that!" His lips moved, but no sound came forth from them. She waited a breathless moment.

"That was a lie! You would not dare repeat that to me," she burst forth passionately, her whole body trembling. "You thought you could tell him, and he would believe you; would pity you, and let you go. You did not dream that I was here—I, Renee D'Auway, monsieur—to face you. You are afraid of me; yes you are—it is in your eyes. You think me an Indian? That I will avenge myself? Is that what you fear?"

He muttered something in Indian dialect I could not understand.

"You say that to me! You dare say that! You are a bold man to try and threaten me now. Ay, do it then—monsieur," and she stepped aside facing me, "this brute of an Englishman claims to be my husband."

"What," I exclaimed in shocked surprise. "He told me he attempted to make love to you, but failed, yet hinted that marriage might have been possible."

"He did venture that far. Then, monsieur, I will tell you the truth. He won my father to him—God alone knows how—and persuaded me to go through the tribal ceremony. To me, a Christian and a French woman, that mockery of form means no more than to him. It was the price I paid for peace."

"But the Wyandots?"

"In their eyes I am this man's squaw," her voice trembling with scorn, her hand pointing at him. "But in the eyes of God, I am not. His hand has never touched me—never will. Monsieur, I had to tell you."

"And I am glad you did. It is better for me to know."

"Oh, I begin to see," broke in the prisoner, finding his voice. "It is not my appearance that you object to, mademoiselle, only you prefer the Yankee edition."

I strode forward threateningly.

"You low-lived coward!"

"No, monsieur, let him talk," and she caught my arm. "We have no time now for a personal quarrel. We must save a man's life."

"Hia!"

"Monsieur Brady's. There is but one way. 'Tis for his sake, the endeavor to save him from torture, that I was so long in coming here. I did all that was in my power, but those Indians are not of my tribe. They might listen to me, but for the Englishman who leads them. He is heartless, more cruel than any savage; moreover Brady struck him, and he suspects me of aiding you to escape. There is no mercy in him, and I have failed. They mean to burn him at the stake, and I could do no more."

"Where are they now?" I asked in horror.

"Yonder on the mainland. I could not remain to witness the scene—I could not, monsieur. I was under guard, but stole away in the darkness, and came here, praying I might find you yet waiting. Now I know God has answered my prayers. He has shown me the way."

She turned from me, her eyes on his face.

"Are you any relative to Monsieur whom you resemble so much?"

He laughed unpleasantly.

"Lord, I hope not—if so the connection is too remote to be considered. I have no desire to claim any Yankee cousins. Why?"

"The reason is not material. I want you to hear me. I do not know you killed my father, but I suspect it, and am certain you lured him to his death. If it was Pleand's hand that did the deed, it was done at your desire. I would be justified as a Wyandot in killing you—even this American would grant me the right—but I am going to spare you, Monsieur—on one condition."

"What?" The very sound of his voice proved his realization of her seriousness.

"That you accompany me to the Indian camp yonder, and help me save that white man's life."

"What do I care?"

"You care for your own, no doubt. Well, monsieur, it hangs by a hair. Only on such a pledge will you go forth from here alive."

"You threaten to kill me?"

"It is hardly a threat—it is a certainty, monsieur."

"Tell me the plan then," he said roughly.

"I can control the Indians," she went on, "if the Englishman does not interfere. It will be your part to command him."

"Who is the fellow?"

"The fur trader—Lapplin."

He stared into her face; then laughed insolently.

"Then the game is up. By the gods, it would be more likely he burned me. You make sport to suggest I could influence that monster."

"I do not," her face changeless in its expression. "There is nothing for you to laugh at. I know you two are enemies, but he dare not ignore your uniform. He has no authority and you have. You can accomplish the rescue of this prisoner if you have the courage, and will. There is only one thing for you to say—yes, or no."

"Answer the lady," I commanded sternly.

His eyes settled on my face; they were furtive, cowardly.

"Oh—well—I'll go," he said slowly and sullenly. "But it's little enough good you'll get out of it, I promise you."

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Fire in the Clearing.

"Go on now," I commanded grimly, "and do not forget. Mademoiselle, do you go first, and show the way. I will keep good guard of the rear."

He climbed the stairs, muttering savagely, with me following so close behind, the muzzle of my gun touched his back.

"I am playing safe," I muttered grimly, "so don't try any tricks in the dark."

We came out on the shore, pausing a moment to gaze out across the water to the gloom of the mainland.

The red and yellow flames lit up the open space fairly well, but all around the black forest wall closed in tightly. It was like a grotesque picture in a frame. Before the fire, mostly with their backs toward us I counted twenty savages on the grass, their red skins and matted hair showing clearly. They were silent, motionless, apparently staring into the flames. The fiendish yelling came from beyond, from the other side of the fire, where I caught a fitful glimpse of wildly dancing figures, of arms flung in air, of brandished guns, and streaming hair.

I saw Mademoiselle rise silently to her feet, but my hand only gripped harder on the Englishman's shoulder as I watched. Brady advanced between two Indians, his arms bound behind him, a bloody cloth concealing his jaw. He was bare-headed, his clothing ragged, and he staggered slightly as he walked. An Indian struck him with a stick; a vicious blow, and Laplin jerked him forward between the chiefs and the fire. The warriors sat there impassive, emotionless, their eyes cold and merciless. Brady looked into that ring of savage faces without a quiver, throwing back his shoulders, blood trickling down one cheek. It even seemed to me his eyes smiled. Then one of the chiefs spoke without rising, in deep guttural voice. I heard the words, but they were meaningless, a jumble of sound, yet somehow menacing, gruff with threat. The discordant yelling ceased, and a dark mass of forms clustered beyond the blaze, drawing together in a half circle behind the prisoner. The light played over dark, sinister faces and sparkled in the wild savage eyes.

The girl stepped backward, noiselessly, until she stood beside me, her hand touching my arm.

"We are here in time," she whispered, "but can delay no longer."

"He is condemned then? They will not spare him?"

"The chief speaks in Shawnee, and I know little of the tongue, but there is no mercy in his words."

"And you mean to go out there, to face those fiends? Are you not afraid?"

She smiled, a sad, brave smile up into my eyes.

"Monsieur, I must," she said pleadingly. "It is not only his life, but my duty. I leave my rifle here, and bear this; with Christ I am not afraid."

And in her clasped hands, reddened by the flames, I saw a crucifix.

"Mademoiselle, if this man speaks a word of treachery; if by look or gesture he attempts to play us false, will you give me a sign?"

"Yes, Monsieur."

"Clasp your hands like this about your head; it will be his death warrant. Now, sir, are you ready?"

There was hate in his eyes, but I was glad of it.

"Oh! but I'll get you for this. Yes, I'm ready, you clod of a Yankee peasant! but you'll pay before ever you get out of these woods—oh, Lord! you'll pay!"

I half thought he would spring at me, and drew back, my rifle lifted. But he only laughed, his lips snarling, and strode past crunching his way through the thicket. I caught the swift upward glance of the girl's eyes—a message of thanks, a! more—and she had followed him. I sprang aside amid the trunks of trees, confident I could not be seen, that every savage eye would be riveted upon those two advancing figures. The light afforded me sufficient guidance, and I possessed some idea of where I wished to go. I found it with a dozen quick steps, and even as the first wild scream of discovery burst from the red throats, I crept in behind a decaying log, at the very edge of the opening, and trust my rifle barrel across the rotten bark. Deliberately, coolly, with full determination to act, I drew head on the red jacket.

They were not five yards away, advancing straight toward the startled group of chiefs, the girl slightly in advance, the firelight on her uplifted face, the white crucifix gleaming in her hands. The Englishman, a step behind, his first mad anger already dying, walked like a criminal, with lowered head, and eyes glancing furtively aside. Even by then the treacherous cowardice of him had returned. At sight of his face I cocked my weapon, every nerve taut as a bow-string, breathing through clinched teeth. I cannot say that I saw much of what occurred in that first moment—I had no eyes but for the red jacket —and yet I must have perceived it all. I remember now the whole scene, as if it hung painted before me, in all its vivid coloring and rapid movement. I saw the chiefs start up, grasping their weapons, at the first screech of alarm, a fierce intensity in their eyes. A glance at those two unarmed figures, and they stood still, gazing at them, yet with a shadow upon the dark, scowling faces that chilled my blood. The yelling ceased; there was no sound, but the pressing forward of bodies, and the crackle of flames. The Shawnee chief, a dark, saturnine face showing under his war-bonnet, stood erect with folded arms. Down the lane of warriors, apparently oblivious to their presence, Mademoiselle came, the Englishman slouching behind. The crowd of figures hid for a moment Brady and his guard, and surged in between me and Laplin.

There was silence; I could hear the wind in the tree tops, the restless movements, the heavy breathing of the excited savages; somewhere a dog barked. Renee stopped, her hand now touching the soldier's sleeve, her eyes on the dark, savage face confronting her. A moment he stared at her, then at the Englishman, while I held my breath.

"Why you—here—gain?" he asked in halting English, the face like bronze. "I—send you—to forest—why come—back?"

"Because I am a Wyandot and a Christian," she answered, the words slow and distinct. "We kill warriors in battle, not by torture. Sis-ete-wah. I come with this that I may beg your prisoner's life. See; it is the cross of the Great God."

"Huh!" he grunted. "Why should we listen—to a—squaw? The warriors of—the Shawnees—are men."

"So are the Wyandots," Sis-ete-wah; they are as the birds of the air. Once they came to the villages of the Shawnees. You know it well—they were warriors, under great chiefs. Yet they listen to words of wisdom from a squaw. I am Running Water; I have sat in the councils of my people; I am the daughter of the White Chief." She glanced about her proudly, looking into the ring of dark faces. I am a squaw, but I am a Wyandot—no Shawnee dare place a hand on me."

"Tis so," he answered gravely. "I know—but not my—young men. It best you go—I speak true—the white man will die—it has been decided—the Shawnees know not—your God—the God of the Long Robes—the white man dies."

"But he came in peace, not war; he was a messenger to the Wyandots."

The chief had stepped back, and lifted his hand, but now he stood statue-like before her.

"He great hunter—he warrior—we have met in—battle. He kill warriors—my tribe—now he die—it is spoken. Sis-ete-wah listen—no more."

"But you must! you shall!" she insisted. "Tis not the Wyandots alone who say this. You may refuse me; you may disregard the cross I bear, but you dare not disobey the word of the English—of the great chief across the water. If you will not heed the word of a squaw, listen to this man—a warrior of the Red Coats."

"I know him not," coldly, "nor care what he—says. He nothing—to Sis-ete-wah—why he—come here?"

"To stop this deed, this dastardly outrage; he speaks for the Great Chief. Tis best the Shawnees listen. Now, monsieur."

She stepped aside and the Englishman stood alone, facing the grim-faced Shawnee.

"You say you know not who I am, Sis-ete-wah," he said sharply. "Then I will tell you; you and your warriors. I am an officer of England, an aide to Hamilton. Will you hear me now?"

There was silence, profound breathless; the bold defiance had fallen upon them like a blow. Then, before even the chief could answer, the crowding ring of Indians was broken, and into the circle of firelight strode the fur-trader, his mottled face purple, his mustache bristling. One moment he glowered into the soldier's face, and the latter stepped back recoiling against mademoiselle, all his audacity gone. Laplin laughed, the cruel echo of it breaking the silence.

Held Many High Positions.

One hundred years ago March 16, Return J. Meigs became postmaster general of the United States. Mr. Meigs belonged to a family that played a conspicuous part in the early civil and military history of the United States. After graduating from Yale he went with his father to Ohio, engaging in the practice of law at Marietta. He was the first chief justice of the state of Ohio. After the Louisiana purchase President Jefferson appointed him a supreme court judge of Louisiana, and later he occupied a like position in the newly formed territory of Michigan. Mr. Meigs also served as United States senator from Ohio and as governor of that state. When his term as governor expired, President Madison gave him the post office portfolio in his cabinet, which he held for nine years. He resigned and retired from public life in 1823, but did not long enjoy the rest he had so well earned, for he died at Marietta early in 1824.

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

One More.

The valiant Sir Knight had been boasting of his victorious deeds before the fair company.

"I heard of one engagement which you have failed to mention, forsooth," remarked Sir Gregory.

"When I killed the eighty knights with—" inquired the valiant.

"No; this was a certain charge in which you were the leader," replied Sir Gregory.

"But I have led so many, I cannot remember," said the valiant.

"But," returned Sir Gregory, "this is still remembered. It was for a suit of clothes you had from Snip, the tailor, some two years since, and the charge still appeareth on the back."

And then they scraped right merrily.

SAGE TEA DARKENS GRAY HAIR TO ANY SHADE. TRY IT!

Keep Your Locks Youthful, Dark, Glossy and Thick With Garden Sage and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger. Adv.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest and most certain indigestion remedy in the whole world, and besides it is harmless.

Please for your sake, get a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any store and put your stomach right. Don't keep on being miserable—life is too short—you are not here long, so make your stay agreeable. Eat what you like and digest it; enjoy it without dread of rebellion in the stomach.

Pape's Diapepsin belongs in your home anyway. Should one of the family eat something which don't agree with them, or in case of an attack of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis or stomach derangement at daytime or during the night, it is handy to give the quickest relief known. Adv.

FRIDAY, APRIL 9, 1915

HONDO

It is reported that a young child was drowned in the Rio Bonito below Lincoln last Friday. Your correspondent did not get any definitive information in the case further than is here stated.

A light hail storm fell on the Ruidosa between Glenroe and San Patricio Tuesday evening. No damage resulted, but a cold wave seems to be passing over this section which may terminate in a killing frost.

Both the Bonito and Ruidosa rivers have been rising daily for the past two weeks. More water is now going down these streams than at any time before, in many years.
No damage is reported yet, but with continued warm weather overflows may soon be expected and probably be an injury to land and crops.

This is the latest spring in many years. Vegetation of all kinds is making very slow growth, while fruit and forest trees are just getting into bloom and leaf. Unless unusually late frosts or other blight occur, the biggest fruit crop ever known is in prospect.

The merchants in this part of the county have been caught recently by some check artist who has distributed a number of bad checks in the country. The checks all purport to be sheep men's checks and as most of those men are known to be good their paper is much in favor with merchants, but it is worth your life to say "check" in this neck o' the woods.

Elias Baca, a native of Hondo was arrested recently on a charge of passing a bad check. He waived examination and being unable to give the bond required was given into the custody of the constable to be taken to jail, but taking advantage of that official's carelessness, the prisoner took to the hills and forgot to leave his address.

At the election held for the purpose of electing one director for the three year term, and for or against a bond issue of $2500 for building another school room and repairing the one already in use, Teofilo Salas was reelected to succeed himself as director, and the proposition to issue bonds carried without a deserving vote. Some of the people were in favor of a $10,000 bond issue but after the question was thoroughly discussed it was thought best to make the amount $2500 and use that sum for building and equipment, and at a later date, perhaps, vote more bonds for the purchase of land for a small demonstration farm and play grounds.

Our little city was crowded the fifth with the ranchmen on account of the election.

The young people of Corona are enjoying quite a few picnics this beautiful spring weather.

Mrs. Willis Simpson and daughter of Duran, joined Corona's jolly bunch at the box supper last Saturday night.

From the amount of fruit trees and Shrubbery received by W. S. Dishman, B. F. Adams, G. C. Clements, and J. T. Davidson they anticipate on having flowers and fruit all summer.

Corona was a very busy little village the fifth on account of the school election. Quite a lot of interest was manifested and cars kept busy on both sides, A. C. McCamant and G. C. Clements being the candidates. 131 votes were cast A. C. McCamant 47 and G. C. Clements 84, giving Mr. Clements a majority of 37.

What turned out to be the largest vote ever cast in this precinct was in the school election on Monday of this week. A total of 81 votes were cast and the election was interesting from the start, as an issue over Socialism seemed to have arisen. Ernest Mathews was elected by a majority of 10 votes over J. M. Kimmons the present incumbent and socialist candidate. Oscuro cast but 23 votes in the last general election.

He was buried in the Lincoln Cemetery. The family have the sympathy of all their neighbors in their sad bereavement.

(From another correspondent)

Mrs. E. G. Raffety returned from a visit to El Paso last Sunday.

A nice board fence has been erected around our school grounds and some trees and a hedge set out.

S. F. Crews the genial Oscuro lawyer has finished putting the roof on his new cottage.

Thos. Keehn has fenced in 40 acres rabbit tight and is setting it to orchard.

Fruit trees are all in bloom and the prospect is good for a big fruit crop.

Mr. and Mrs. Griffin who have been visiting the family of C. H. Thornton left Tuesday for California.

No, the heavy cannoning heard last week was not the approaching Mexican army. It was only Mr. Raffety dynamiting for fruit trees.

Mrs. A. D. Groff proved up on her claim the third of the month and thus won her bet.

Mr. Edwards is having a few coats of paint put on the old Olson building which greatly improves its looks.

Ernest Selige who bought the improvements on the Dodge claim, is now installed in bachelor quarters on said claim and feels that he is monarch of all he surveys.

Otto Postler who has been stopping with Mr. Selige for a short time, has gone to Columbus to join a government surveying party.

Earl Black has his new house about completed. Grouting walls and metal shingles make a good substantial house.

At the school election Monday 82 votes were cast. The present incumbent, J. A. Kimmons, receiving 36 and Ernest Matthews 46.

Dr. Blaney has installed a large tank at his windmill and piped the water to his house. Thus do improvements encroach on the erstwhile desert.

The Sew and So club met with Mrs. Young last week and all report a fine time. The lunches the ladies serve at these club meetings must be very elaborate because on Saturday evenings they never eat any supper at home and the men folks fare about the same.

ROAD

LAND VALUES ARE INCREASED

English Country Residents Enjoy Good Roads and Are Ever Within Reach of Good Markets.

In England the highest ambition of a majority of well-to-do men is to have a "place" in the country. They don't hanker after city living the year around; indeed, they don't hanker after it at all, except as it may be forced upon them in order that they may live near their business. But the minute their business reaches such a point as to afford them some leisure, or the minute they acquire sufficient means to retire, they seek a home in the country. England has good roads, though in very early times none were worse, and these country residents are never beyond the reach of good markets and of the supplies which good markets offer. A country house ten miles from a market town, but connected with it by a good road—a road good at all seasons and in all weathers—isn't really so difficult of access as some country houses within a mile of some of our city limits.

An English Country Road.

Has it ever occurred to landholders in some of our own towns that good roads to their lands would not only bring those lands nearer the markets they raise produce for, but would also bring those lands nearer the city where business men do business, make them more available for residence and increase their value? No man wants to travel two or more miles every day to and from the city where his business is located over such "roads" as we have found existing in various parts of the country. No wonder the "state road" system has become so popular. But many men would be glad to drive their buggy or auto five or even more miles every day if the roads offered them were such that the drive was a daily pleasure and did not put them at an unreasonable distance from their offices in point of time.

PROFITABLE HOG FEED

Swine Raising Is Most Important Branch of Farming.

Feeding Facilities and Available Feeds on the Farm Must Be Taken Into Account—Blue Grass Is Satisfactory Pasture.

(By J. G. FULLER.)

Forage crops constitute a most important part of the food supply for swine. Since there is little or no profit in feeding hogs on grain alone, the swine raiser should arrange to develop his market animals as much as possible on dairy and farm products and forage crops, leaving the heavy grain feeding for the fattening and finishing period. Most forage crops are suited to swine feeding, and in proper condition and stage of growth provide at least a maintenance ration.

Native blue grass is a satisfactory pasture for the spring and early summer months or before it becomes dry and ceases to grow. By the middle of July this forage is of little value in many sections, as it is too dry, and from then until the fall rains begin to revive it again, should be supplemented with rape or other of the forage crops that can be grown for swine. However, it does furnish the first green feed in the spring and is always relished.

Rape has proved a valuable forage for swine. The animals are kept on blue grass until this gets too dry, and are then turned into a field of rape. The rape should be sown in three plats and at intervals of about three weeks.

The rape stalks should not be too closely pastured after the leaves are eaten off. When this plan is followed, the rape should be from 14 to 18 inches high when the pigs are turned into it. For less intensive feeding, where fewer animals are to be kept on the same piece of ground for a longer period, rape is sown broadcast with oats and clover. Five pounds of rape, six pounds of clover, and one bushel of oats are sown to the acre. The swine should not be turned into this until the crop is from eight to ten inches high, after which each acre with a good stand of the crop will supply 15 spring pigs with forage for the rest of the season.

Clover, before it becomes matured, is a most valuable forage crop for swine. For the corn belt, clover and corn make one of the best combinations known for cheap pork production. Because of the tendency of clover to kill out, it is most satisfactorily grown in a rotation with other farm crops rather than in small plats to be intensively stocked. But whether or not clover is a satisfactory forage for swine depends largely on the season as affecting growth, the stand, and the state of growth at which this is fed. Under favorable conditions, red clover has been found even more profitable than rape as a forage for spring pigs. The value of alfalfa for growing swine has been fully demonstrated in the western states, where it is grown abundantly, but in some of the north central states it has not been grown to any great extent and, as yet, in those states, the value of this forage crop cannot be fully estimated.

The use of clover, alfalfa, rape or a red-clover-and-oat mixture properly grown for forage should make a saving of from 25 to 30 per cent in the grain ration for growing and fattening swine. To get the best results, the crop must be carefully seeded, fed at the right stage of growth, and never overstocked at the beginning of the feeding period or trampled when the ground is wet. An acre sown to these crops, properly grown and cared for, should furnish forage for about four months for 15 to 20 spring shoats. Then, to finish the animals for market, heavy grain feeding is begun.

ANIMAL HOSPITALS ON FARMS

Quarantine Place Should Be Clean and Comfortable—Many Young Pigs or Calves Can Be Saved.

Every farm should have an animal hospital, where really sick animals can be cared for and nursed back to health and where those suspected of having some disease or any "off color" in any way may be put away from the balance of the herds and flocks.

There are many reasons for having such a place. First, there is the control and check of contagious diseases that might be accomplished by promptly isolating the first prospect and taking vigorous preventive measures with the balance. Thus many young pigs or calves that get "a bit off feed," continue to decline if kept with the balance of the herd because of their inability to "rustle" their share with their healthy, husky mates. If such are put by themselves and given special care and food for a few days they are soon back to normal and go on without serious setback.

This quarantine place should be a shed or building that is light, clean and comfortable, and one that can be thoroughly disinfected. It should be apart from other buildings and so situated that animals other than those quarantined cannot have access to it. The control of one outbreak of disease or the added gains on a few young animals will pay for such a building.

FEEDING THE YOUNG ANIMALS

Legumes Are Rich in Important Bone, Blood and Muscle Making Constituents—Mix With Corn.

Good feeds can be grown on the farm. Corn and timothy hay, alone will not do. Young animals cannot thrive on these feeds alone, as they do not contain what the body requires for proper development. These feeds are deficient in calcium and protein, which must be had to make bone, blood and muscle.

The legumes are rich in these all-important constituents and go well with corn. Good pasture should be provided, without which it is difficult to maintain breeding animals. The farm that produces fine Kentucky blue grass and plenty of it will furnish a lot of the best feed without labor.

Grape Pruning.

In pruning grapes it must be remembered that the fruit grown is on the new wood of the present season's growth which sprouts from wood grown the preceding season, and never on last year's wood. The fruit is borne near the base of the shoots. Each shoot should bear from two to six clusters, but only a limited number of clusters should be allowed to develop on a single vine.

Clean the stables twice each day. Use absorbents in the gutters. This will go a long way in keeping the air in the stable good.

In the modern aspect of affairs it will not do to let crop raising go or hazard. It is necessary to make as much of a certainty of it as possible.

As a rule chicks that grow their feathers slowly are hardier and grow faster than those that exhaust their strength by feathering out early.

The mare and little foal should run in a roomy and sunny box stall during the winter.

A farmer and dairyman should keep only as many cows as he can house and feed properly.

A man that does not like cows is wasting time when he tries to make a dairyman out of himself.

Train the colt to go straight ahead; a wobbly gait will condemn an other wise good animal in the markets.

ALWAYS CHANCE FOR STAYER

Perennial Candidate Clung to Hope That Fortune Might at Some Time Favor Him.

"There's always a chance," declared Representative Gilbert Haugen of Iowa, recently. "There's always a chance for the man who won't quit."

The congressman was illustrating the instability of politics. And he told this story in support of his contention: A certain politician was running for office in a district where he was hopelessly in the minority. He ran year after year, and was snowed under with a regularity which became monotonous.

But still he kept on running. A friend protested. The friend had been watching the politician's untiring efforts, and was perfectly convinced that he was wasting his young life. He concluded with the remark: "You haven't a chance in the world!"

"The thunder I haven't!" retorted the politician, indignantly. The friend was astonished.

"How do you figure you're going to have a chance?" he inquired. The politician thought for a moment.

"Well," he said at last, "there's always a chance of my opponent falling dead, ain't there?"

DAIRY AS FOUNDATION

One Never-Failing Money-Making Resource on Dry Farm.

New Settler Who Takes Herd of Milking Cows With Him Can Start Steady Cash Income With First Day in His New Home.

(By H. M. COTTRELL.)

Dairy is the one never-failing money-making resource in dry land farming for the family with little capital. The native wild grass is a dependable dairy feed. Kafir and sorghum, when given good treatment, never fail to produce feed crops. These sure feed crops make good silage and for ten dollars outlay and his labor the dry land farmer can build a pit silo. Buyers of cream pay cash at the time of each purchase. The dry land farmer with a herd of good dairy cows receives a cash income every week through the year, whether the season is wet or dry.

The new settler in a dry land country who takes a herd of milking cows with him can go out the first morning he is in his new home and milk the cows while his wife is getting breakfast. He can separate the cream and begin a steady cash income with the first day in his new home. The regular weekly return from the sale of cream enables the new settler to pay cash for his household supplies and he need not have store bills. The skim milk fed to hens and pigs adds to the profits.

The countless losses and failures in dry land farming in the Southwest have come from attempts to make a living from exclusive grain farming and no stock. A careful dry land farmer in eastern Colorado raised six profitable crops of grain in 18 years. The 1914 grain crop is heavy throughout the Panhandle. The last generally good grain crop in that district was in 1908. The man who depends entirely upon raising grain finds the wait between crops too long. It is particularly hard when the new settler comes at the beginning of a period of dry years. Where the main income is furnished by the dairy cows, the dry land farmer lives comfortably every year. He sows grain only in those seasons when there is ample moisture and the money that the grain brings is a surplus that can be used for investment.

When the dry land farmer has sufficient capital and is not obliged to have a weekly or monthly income, beef cattle, horses and mules are money-makers. Beef cattle can be finished to top the market on silage made from kafir or sorghum fed with kafir or milo grain and cottonseed meal. The gains are more rapid than the usual gains made in the corn belt.

When you think of dry land farming think of dairying. When you move to a dry land farm take ten to twenty good dairy cows with you. Make your main crops feed crops for the dairy cows. Store the surplus in cheap pit silos. Take good care of the cows and of the cream. You will prosper.

CORN STALKS TO HOLD SNOW

Added Moisture Makes Soil Less Liable to Blow—Wind Is Checked, Reducing the Drifting.

It is sometimes a good plan to leave some of the corn stalks standing. Every fourth row left standing will hold a lot of snow on the land. At the North Dakota experiment station it was found that one-fourth of the corn stalks left standing stopped about as much snow as when all were left. This will in many cases mean a good deal to the next crop. The added moisture will make the soil less liable to blow, and the standing stalks will check the wind a good deal, near the surface, and this also reduces the drifting. Better try leaving a few rows and see if it does not pay.

HOLDING MOISTURE IN SOILS

Thorough Soil Mulch of Two to Three Inches Should Be Employed to Prevent Evaporation.

Once making a reservoir for gathering the rainfall quickly and thoroughly by deep tillage, the dry farmer must plan how best to conserve this moisture and how to most economically use it. First should be considered the prevention of the evaporation of soil moisture. This means a thorough soil mulch of two or three inches through the growing of cultivated forage crops to the greatest possible extent or the proper handling of summer-fallowed land.

A sufficiently deep soil mulch to protect the soil moisture during periods of severe drought cannot be made on shallow-fallowed land.

Cultivated crops must hold first place on the drier lands because of the fact that their growing permits the saving of moisture to the soil. Very little crops should be grown on these lands that do not permit of inter-tillage.

A Close Observer.

Wife—I've noticed an odd thing, John. When you go to light the gas in the next room you invariably take two matches.

ON RUSSIA'S MIGHTY RIVER

Empire Owes Much to Historic Volga, Which Plays Important Part in Life of Nation.

In Russia the rivers are large and sluggish, owing to their great length and slight fall. The Volga is the longest river in Europe. It is 2,300 miles in length—that is, three times as long as the Rhine—yet its total fall is only a little over eight hundred feet.

The great bogs in the Valdai hills, where it takes its rise, are only 750 feet above sea level, while Astrakhan, at the mouth, is 65 feet below the level of the sea.

The Russian fondly speaks and sings of it as "Matushka Volga," or "Little Mother Volga." In gratitude, no doubt, for the bounteous supply of fish, caviar and game, as well as comforts and pleasures afforded by this historic stream, which plays so important a part in the economic life of the nation.

The products of Asia and Europe are carried on its waters; the two thousand odd river steamers are always busy, and the huge rafts, consisting often of thousands of logs, being floated or pulled down the stream, represent a small portion of the riches of Russia's inexhaustible forest lands.

STRENGTH.

Without Overloading The Stomach.

The business man, especially, needs food in the morning that will not overload the stomach, but give mental vigor for the day.

Much depends on the start a man gets each day as to how he may expect to accomplish the work on hand.

He can't be alert with a heavy, fried-meat-and-potatoes breakfast, requiring a lot of vital energy in digesting it.

A Calif. business man found a food combination for producing energy. He writes:

"For years I was unable to find a breakfast food that had nutrition enough to sustain a business man without overloading his stomach, causing indigestion and kindred ailments. Being a very busy and also a very nervous man, I had about decided to give up breakfast altogether. But luckily I was induced to try Grape-Nuts."

"Since that morning I have been a new man; can work without tiring, my head is clear and my nerves strong and quiet."

"I find that Grape-Nuts, with a little sugar and a small quantity of cold milk, makes a delicious morning meal, which invigorates me for the day's business."

THINGS WORTH TRYING

ALL GOOD AND JUST A LITTLE "DIFFERENT."

Effective Touches That Will Not Add to the Cost of the Dishes but Will Add Materially to Their Flavor.

Oh, you housekeepers who hanker after something a little different that will not add to the "cost of living," have you ever tried:

Tiny red peppers to garnish your salad plates and give the touch of desired color, when tomatoes are not to be had, or are prohibitive in price?

A center of yellow cheese for the tomato salad that is arranged to represent a poinsettia?

Halves of canned pears, piled up with white grapes and nuts for a salad in the pale yellow tones?

Or asparagus tips on white lettuce leaves if to get that special coloring you prefer not to use fruit?

Rings of green peppers on greenish lettuce, with a garnishing of French peas when an all-green salad is desired?

Roquefort cheese, grated, or chopped onion in your French dressing?

Cheese balls molded from a paste made of cream, chopped nuts and parsley, and seasoned with salt, pepper, a dash of paprika and Worcestershire sauce?

Or this same paste used as a filling for sandwiches? Thin bread and butter sandwiches of brown bread to be served with your salad in place of the more orthodox wafers?

A sprinkling of paprika on top of the regulation stuffed potatoes?

Small white heads of cabbage, boiled and adorned with a cream dressing. Instead of the more aristocratic and costly cauliflower?

Cabbage or turnips au gratin in place of potatoes cooked in the same fashion?

A sauerkraut stuffing for goose or duck if you have any hankering after "Dutch" dishes?

A boiled dressing made with cream instead of oil and seasoned with a double quantity of mustard with your Dutch suppers?

Tripe with a very highly seasoned cream gravy, or chicken livers broiled with bacon, when you are at your wits' end for something new and not too expensive in the way of meats?

Ripe bananas peeled, laid in earthen dish, water to cover, sprinkled with brown sugar and a few drops of lemon juice and baked slowly for about half an hour? If a few chopped nuts or dot of apple jelly are added to each portion the effect is prettier.

Beans Spanish.

Soak overnight two cupfuls of pink beans, then boil them until tender. Boil three sweet red peppers and put them through a sieve. Fry three slices of bacon until brown, then add the pepper pulp and one green pepper that has been minced fine and one shredded onion. Then put in the beans, adding plenty of juice, a little salt and some grated cheese. Cook together thoroughly.

Poached Eggs.

Put some water in saucepan to boil, add a pinch of salt and a little vinegar; let it boil very hard. Break eggs on to a plate one at a time and drop them into the boiling water exactly where it bubbles. Take eggs out with a skimmer and trim them nicely, although there should be no trimming necessary if properly done. Place each egg on a piece of toast and serve while hot.

Dry-Cured Hams.

For one hundred pounds of meat take four pounds of fine salt, four ounces of saltpeter and one pound of brown sugar; mix well, and rub the hams with the mixture every other day until all is absorbed.

Veal Croquettes.

Put two cupfuls of finely chopped veal in a saucepan, add two tablespoonfuls of fine bread crumbs, one teaspoonful of butter, the beaten yolks of two eggs, one teaspoonful of onion juice, quarter teaspoonful of salt, one saltspoonful paprika and a speck of mace. Stir the mixture over the fire until thoroughly heated, then set aside to cool. Shape into croquettes, dip in beaten egg, roll in fine crumbs, let stand one or more hours, and fry until well browned. Serve with tomato sauce.

For Grease Stained Floors.

You will be delighted to see how quickly grease spots will disappear from floors when you apply a little alcohol.

Variation in Light.

Morning light is from 10 to 20 per cent stronger than that of the afternoon, varying with the seasons.

In the local treatment of woman's ill, such as leucorrhoea and inflammation, hot douches of Paxtine are very efficacious. WHITE OAKS

Where is the almanac or the weather prophet who says New Mexico is a dry country?

Several people of this town, moved by the spirit of spring no doubt, have begun their annual itinerary. It is easier to move than to clean house, you know.

Judge Hewitt and Paul Mayer went down Monday to the county seat and sat, the one of the road commission board and the other—well, he held down a cushion chair I guess.

Two auto loads of White Oaks people went to Carrizozo last Friday evening and took in the musical entertainment given by the high school students of that place, which performance was about as good as is sometimes given by grown ups.

Prof. B. H. Dye and Col. G. W. Pritchard are each doing development work on their mining claims in this camp. It is safe to say that pluck and perseverance will finally win if their plunks hold out to the satisfaction of the fellow who pounds the drill. The place will always welcome efforts of this kind. We have the stuff under the ground here but there is a lot of barren rock mixed in with it, and it takes siew and shekels to get it out and off.

The people of this community were very painfully shocked last Tuesday morning to learn of the sudden death of Nita Taylor who passed away at the hospital in Carrizozo where she had gone for treatment only a few days before. The cause was some kind of internal hemorrhage.

Ruby Juanita Taylor was taken right in the flush of her young womanhood just when life was unfolding for her many bright possibilities and the future was becoming with a glad hand to those untied shores where ships go out to return no more. She was a universal favorite with her associates and will be sadly missed by them, while the kindest sympathy and condolence of the entire community will go out to the bereaved family where her place can never be filled.

Easter services were held at the congregational church here at 2:30 o'clock last Sunday, all denominations joining in the services. The altar and other portions of the church were tastefully decorated with flowers and growing plants appropriate to the occasion. Services were conducted by Rev. Lewis of Carrizozo who kindly motored up to meet the people of White Oaks in a spiritual and friendly way. Prof. McCurdy also came with him and helped out with the singing which was exceeding well rendered and added much to the impressiveness of the occasion.

The smiling, William Jennings Bryan face of Doc Randles is seen on our streets once more. He lately tunneled out from under the snow at his iron mines near the end of the Capitan mountains where he has been compelled to hibernate with a few other Hibernians during the greater part of the winter, but he thinks a blanket of snow four feet thick is better than a blanket mortgage and he looks as bright and chipper as if he had been stopping at a dollar a day hotel all these months. However he did not have much to do but tinker on the teeth of the wind and the blamed thing put up such a roar that he sometimes had to hypnotize it with an opiate until it finally got quieted down and then he came away.

THE HIGH SCHOOL OPERETTA

A large and enthusiastic audience was present at the High School auditorium last Friday evening to hear the operetta "Pauline" given by the pupils of that department. From beginning to end there was not an idle moment in the continued succession of mirth, music and song. For one hour and fifteen minutes the excellent training and unusual abilities of the cast of characters were made manifest. An attractive little plot added interest to the musical numbers, and the closing chorus left the audience most favorably impressed with the performance as a whole.

"After the show" a committee from the Carrizozo Civic League waited upon the "manager" asking for a repetition of the entertainment, the proceeds to go to the improvement of the cemetery. The request was gladly fulfilled, and a good-sized audience was present at a repetition of "Pauline" Monday night of this week.

Altogether, the participants have created a more genuine love for good music by the measure of success they have attained in the execution of a rather difficult amateur undertaking, and their efforts have not been unappreciated.

COMMISSIONERS MEET

The board of county commissioners has been in session here all week but will likely complete its work today. There was an unusual amount of business to be attended to, it being the regular quarterly meeting of the board. Much time was devoted to the adjusting of the county officials' salary and checking over the old accounts, etc. Some improvement work was passed upon for the county property at this place.

THAT'S WHAT THEY ALL SAY

Ed. Kelley returned Tuesday from Elvarado and other points in Texas where he has been visiting for several weeks. Ed. expresses himself as being glad to get back to the Sunshine state. He says he is more pleased with Carrizozo and the condition it is in financially than before he left and would not attempt to look for a place that is in better condition at this period of hard times than Lincoln County, New Mexico.
