On Nov. 2, Carlos Orozco Sosa, general manager of the state-run railway company (FERRONALES), told a group of civil engineering students at the Universidad Iberoamericana that the company plans to invest $500 million per year between 1991 and 1994 on infrastructural development. Orozco said financing will derive from railway profits, the federal government, and the World Bank. (Source: Notimex, 11/02/90)
