UNM News Minute #372 – March 22, 2007

INCOMING UNM President David J. Schmidly is appreciative but literally overwhelmed by all of the messages of support and invitations being sent to him from all over campus. As he is finishing up his teaching duties at Oklahoma State and his mentorship of graduate students, as well as trying to move, he says he's not able to reply as quickly as he'd like and he fears some things could fall through the cracks. For complete information on how to facilitate delivery of messages visit:

RECIPIENTS OF THE 2007 Clauve Outstanding Senior Award at the University of New Mexico have been announced by G. Randy Boeglin, UNM dean of students.

This year's recipients are Deanna Armijo, Dohnia Dorman, Timiyin E-Nunu, Valerie Garcia, Lauren Huesemann, Matthew Maez and Ambrosia Ortiz. Clauve Awards are given to UNM seniors who have at least a 3.0 cumulative GPA. The award is based on leadership and involvement as well as academics and is named after Dean Emeritus Lena Clauve. <http://www.unm.edu/~market/cgi-bin/archives/001821.html#more>

A POPULAR SUMMER program at UNM for disadvantaged children in the Albuquerque-area faces an uncertain future. The National Youth Sports Program, a highly successful program in 39 states, aims to help under served youth learn to "walk tall – talk tall – stand tall." However, federal budget cuts the past two years may force officials to cancel its summer program unless funds are found to keep the program afloat for June 2007. <http://www.unm.edu/~market/cgi-bin/archives/001824.html#more>

EVERY COOK HAS a blender to mix ingredients for dishes, but no one has a gadget to separate materials that have already been mixed into a batter. Now a University of New Mexico School of Engineering professor and his collaborators have figured out a way to both mix and separate on an extremely small scale.
