On Oct. 2, between 10 and 15,000 public sector employees assembled in Buenos Aires to participate in a mass demonstration protesting the government's salary policy. An estimated 8,000 demonstrators were employees working and residing in the capital city. According to official news agency NOTICIAS ARGENTINAS, the mobilization was the largest in recent history, and was the first of its kind organized via the joint efforts of the Union Personal Civil de la Nacion (UPCN), and the Asociacion de Trabajadores del Estado (ATE).
