1. THREE PROFESSORS HAVE BEEN DESIGNATED as “Distinguished Professors.” Anthropology professor Louise Lamphere and Regents’ professors of Biology James Hemphill Brown and Randy Thornhill received the designations based on nominations from their respective departments. The designations are the highest faculty title the University bestows and are used only for a few of its most prominent faculty.

2. ACCORDING TO A REPORT released by “Community Voices: HealthCare for the Underserved,” the nation’s mental health care needs are largely unmet. The UNM Health Sciences Center will respond to the report at a news conference Friday, May 25, on the north lawn of the UNM Mental Health Center. The conference will address new proposed policy solutions aimed at expanding access to mental health care and providing early intervention services in New Mexico. Vice President for Health Sciences, R. Philip Eaton, M.D., Sen. Pete V. Domenici (R-NM) and New Mexico Secretary of Health Alex Valdez are slated to attend.
