DALLAS TRADE EXCURSIONISTS HERE

Met at Depot by Large Gathering of Clovis Citizens.

The special train of nine coaches bearing the Dallas Trade Excursionists arrived in Clovis Tuesday morning at 9.10 o'clock and were met at the depot by a special committee of twenty citizens, appointed by the Chamber of Commerce, and by at least a hundred citizens wearing badges of "Welcome Dallas," and "Dallas Day in Clovis."

The visitors numbering 118 who represent the leading business interests of Dallas, headed by their band of 20 pieces marched to the Chamber of Commerce hall where a short address of welcome was made by B. D. Oldham, president of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Oldham assured the visitors that the people of Clovis fully appreciated their visit—and also took advantage of the opportunity to do a little boosting for "The Magic City," which he termed as the "gateway to the southwest." At the conclusion of his address of welcome, he presented a large wooden key, made especially for the occasion, to the visitors with the assurance that the key unlocked the gates to the city and was theirs. On one side of the key was inscribed the words: "Welcome Dallas," and on the other the "Key to the Gate City." A tag was also attached on which appropriate slogans were inscribed.

J. R. Babcock, Secretary of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce responded, and told in a brief manner of the advantages of Dallas as a wholesale and distributing center. He praised the hospitality of the people of Clovis, and the warm reception accorded them, and said that the Clovis Chamber of Commerce membership of 555 was "the largest of any town of its size in the world."

After several band selections the meeting adjourned in order to afford the excursionists an opportunity of meeting the business men in their places of business. A stop of one hour was made here.

The members of the reception committee were C. E. Dennis, chairman; A. E. Curren, J. A. Latta, W. H. Duckworth, H. C. Herby, W. B. Cramer, M. Boyle, W. I. Laikart, Alex. Shipley, E. R. Hart, R. E. Brown, A. W. Skarda, S. J. Boykin, A. J. Whiting, W. A. Havener, Jno. Barry, Wilkie Carter, H. W. Crawford, C. A. Scheurich and B. D. Oldham.

Justus Sells Shop.

C. E. Justus has sold his barber shop to Williams and Crane who will assume charge on or about May 1st. Mr. Crane resided in Clovis for about four years before recently going to Vaughn where he purchased a shop and it is with pleasure that the News chronicles his contemplated return. They all come back to Clovis.

Wilkinson Townsite Co.

The News has just gotten out some aero-view circulars containing a descriptive write-up of Clovis and Curry county for the Wilkinson Townsite Co. who are owners of Pleasant Hill addition. These are the most attractive large circulars ever produced in Clovis and will be a big advertising boost for our town and county. J. W. Wilkinson is going on the road shortly with the view of selling Pleasant Hill addition lots.

The ladies of the Woodmen Circle gave a dance in the Moose Hall Monday night.

The Orlofsky jewelry stock will be sold out at cost by Fred W. James, receiver.

Sheriff Moye

Returns From Seattle.

Sheriff Dick Moye who went to Seattle, Washington several weeks ago for the purpose of taking into custody, one Henry Orlofsky and bringing him to Clovis to face certain criminal charges, as previously mentioned in the News, returned Tuesday morning and in conversation with a News reporter stated that Mr. Orlofsky was safely behind the bars and not out on bond as had been reported by the other paper, but as he had filed his appeal bond and had 90 days in which to prepare the documents for appeal to the supreme court, he was unable to return with the prisoner at this time.

The numerous watches and other articles of jewelry, taken from the store by Orlofsky when he suddenly departed, for which Orlofsky gave a bill of sale to his lawyers, were replevined by the Clovis National Bank and will arrive by express.

It was necessary for the bank to make a replevin bond to the extent of the value of the goods in order to get them.

GENERAL RAINS SOAK EASTERN NEW MEXICO

Precipitation to the Extent of About Four Inches Falls in Clovis and Surrounding Country.

Harry Springfield Stabbed.

Harry Springfield, proprietor of the fountain in Mears' Pharmacy and a pool hall on South Main street, was cut in the arm and back with a pocket knife in the hands of "Shorty" Garner, Tuesday night in an affray in Springfield's establishment. Garner is said to have become boisterous and in the process of taking possession of the place, Springfield interposed an objection, with the results above mentioned. The wounds are not considered serious.

H. F. Patchin, of Albuquerque was among the Clovis visitors who attended the Elks ball last Thursday.

One of the best, if not the best rain in the history of Clovis and the surrounding territory began falling Sunday evening and kept it up at intervals both day and night and is still raining and snowing. It was a grand, and glorious rain and the ground is thoroughly soaked. In all, about four inches of moisture fell and as it was for the most part, slow and steady, except that at one time Sunday night the water poured over the sinewy of the downtown business district. Farmers and stockmen are jubilant as it assures early grass and puts the ground in splendid shape for early cultivation and planting.

From all reports, the rain was practically general in this section, extending as far east as Amarillo, as far west as Albuquerque and as far South as Carlsbad.

Band Entertainment, Good.

We have yet to see the first person who attended the band entertainment at the Lyceum Monday night, who does not praise it highly, and those who failed to go certainly missed a musical treat. It was surprising to many who had no idea that they could render such a splendid program. Few realized that Clovis possessed such an aggregation of talented and trained musicians and it was only by reason of the inclemency of the weather that the opera house was not crowded. One of the rare musical treats was a saxophone solo by Mrs. Roy Strouville. This, and the national airs, which were completely mastered, brought forth much applause.

While the receipts, which were to be expended in the purchase of uniforms amounted to only $23.00 the boys feel that there is some consolation in learning that all were well pleased with the entertainment.

Mr. Johnson, who is a talented musician and a good band leader deserves much credit for the success of the Clovis band.

If the business men will support it, he is planning on giving public open air concerts, semi-weekly during the summer months. This is a matter that should have the endorsement and financial support of every citizen of Clovis.

The contract has been signed between the representatives of the SOUTHERN CARNIVAL COMPANY and the chamber of commerce, for a week's entertainment in Clovis from July 7 to 13 inclusive. They have 15 shows and carry 400 people.

$5,000.00 A Year For County Printing

Five thousand dollars a year is approximately what it costs the people of Curry county for county printing in the Journal when the NEWS or any other county paper except the Journal will do it for less than half that amount—a saving of over $2500.00 a year to the tax payers.

The Journal has just rendered a bill for $1006.95 for printing the last tax lists, which together with a former bill of $3180.31, makes a total of $4187.26 in a year, besides this a bill for $67.00 was presented for publishing the January proceedings of the board of county commissioners and the April proceedings will cost a like amount. These figures do not include printing stationery, blanks, etc., which will bring the grand total up to about $5000.00 a year.—Not a bad office.

What 'chur goin' to do about it?

Dairying Soon to be Important Industry.

The Albuquerque Herald interviewed our worthy citizen, Chas. A. Scheurich last week during his visit to Albuquerque, and among the many other good things he said: The people of Clovis and Curry county are investing in milch cows, and the future for Clovis is very bright. Things are moving along nicely in Clovis at present said Mr. Scheurich, "and we have every reason to believe that conditions will be even better in the near future. The people of Clovis and Curry county generally are taking a great interest in the successful operation of the Clovis Creamery. Many people are buying milch cows and going into the dairying business, and dairying soon promises to be one of our most important industries. The Clovis Chamber of Commerce, with President Oldham and Secretary Fleming at the head of the organization, is doing successful work, encouraging especially the building of silos in all sections of the county. Two or three public spirited citizens have volunteered to advance money to the farmers with which to build silos, no interest to be paid for two years. The Lubbock branch of the Santa Fe railroad is building toward Clovis at a rate of 3000 feet of finished track each day. The line will give Clovis direct rail communication with Galveston.

The Santa Fe will soon begin work on a $40,000 railroad hospital, and an extension to the railroad blacksmith shop now contemplated. Taking it all in all things are favorable in our town, and the citizens are much encouraged by recent developments."

Mr. Scheurich is much interested in the state fair, and will do everything possible to make it an institution of great value to the entire state.

Phil Duckworth, brother of our townsman, W. H. Duckworth, proprietor of the Southwestern Drug Company, arrived last week and has accepted a position in the store.

C. E. Ocon, a railroad contractor and constructor from Omaha and Mr. Fry, a railroad promoter, were in the city on business matters Tuesday and Wednesday.

THOSE RHEUMATIC TWINGES

Much of the rheumatic pain that comes in damp, changing weather is the work of uric acid crystals.

John H. Matthews, 111 East First St., The Dalles, Ore., says: "My back aches so I could hardly stoop or straighten. The kidney secretions became profuse, causing me to urinate many times a night and the passages were very painful. My kidneys became so disordered that I thought I was done for. Doan's Kidney Pills, however, went right to the seat of the trouble and for over three years my cure has been permanent."

Marquess of Sligo in Indian Mutiny.
Lord Altamont, who through the death of his aged father, the other day, has become marquess of Sligo, was through the Indian mutiny. His father, who was in the Indian civil service, was stationed at Bankipur when the mutiny broke out.

Lord Sligo's wife and infant son, seven months old, the new marquess, were sent for safety to a place which was surrounded by rebels for a fortnight. The child, however, was safely taken through the enemy lines by a faithful Indian nurse, who dyed his skin as a ruse to pass him off as her own son. A long time passed before the boy was restored to his anxious parents, who meantime had to go through a further siege at Mougher. The new marquess recently celebrated his silver wedding. On the actual anniversary day he had to be in Scotland, but he sent his wife a telegram with the characteristic message, "Twenty-five years without regret."

FINE DESIGNS IN LACE

REALLY PRETTY BLOUSES ARE SHOWN THIS SEASON.

What is Known as "All-over Shadow" Effect is Employed, and the Garments Are Marvels of Loveliness.

One well-known house is specializing in simple blouses of all-over shadow lace. Just below the bust line, underneath the lace, a wide ribbon surrounds the bodice. Some of the blouses have ribbon of a shade to harmonize with the skirt with which it is to be worn and others have gay colored ribbon, or pale pink, blue or lavender. There is a turn-down collar of black chiffon. The sleeves reach a little below the elbow and are finished with a turn-back cuff of black chiffon. An attractive model of all-over shadow lace had a blouse of fine cream shadow lace with trimmings of rose pink velvet and an ornament of Bulgarian embroidery. The flat turn-down collar is of velvet and a touch of velvet appears at the lower part of the elbow sleeve. Finishing the lower part of the collar or revers is an ornament of Bulgarian embroidery underneath which falls a jabot of soft cream shadow lace. A frill of the shadow lace also edges the sleeves. There is a vest or gimp of cream net.

Bulgarian embroidery plays an important part in the trimming of the lingerie blouse this spring and wonderful color schemes are obtained by these embroideries. One blouse was of cream colored voile trimmed with Bulgarian embroidery. The sailor collar, revers and deep shaped cuffs were trimmed with the colored embroidery. The fronts opened over a vest of fine cream net trimmed with a row of colored glass buttons.

Another blouse was of fine batiste of simple design, with large, flat turn-down collar embroidered about the edges with beautifully colored Bulgarian embroidery. The front of the blouse and cuffs were trimmed with the colored glass buttons.

One important firm makes blouses of taffeta for tailored wear, to match any suit. The blouse has a turn-down collar of creamy batiste, embroidered and trimmed about the edge with a narrow frill of lace. The long sleeves are also trimmed with the lingerie, cuffs lace trimmed.

Tailored lingerie blouses for street and outing wear are on sale now by the thousand. Many of these have the Directoire collar of the turn-down kind and finished at the front with a tie or frill.

A smart blouse for sporting wear is shown by one firm, which makes a specialty of tailored blouses. This model is of basket weave leather mixture. There is a Robespierre collar buttoned to the blouse at the corners with small jet buttons. The blouse is fastened at the front with small square jet buttons and jet buttons trim the cuffs. There is a four-in-hand tie of dark tuchala red.

NEW IDEAS IN VANITY BOXES

Article Has Become Practically Indispensable, and Many Quaint Designs Are Offered.

The vanity box has become so much a part of a woman's outfit that the manufacturers are discovering many odd ways for her to carry it.

To take one's powder puff and lip rouge from one's handbag has become commonplace; now a woman can tuck these in her bracelet. One of the new kind has flexible links of gold wire, with the vanity box on top in the shape of an oval medallion with a handsome monogram.

Or she can wear it round her neck as a sautoir. Fascinating vanity pendants are shown of all styles and prices, from tiny ones of French jewelry to diamond studded boxes no bigger than a child's locket. Among the most popular of the vanity cases for the neck are those of colored Russian enamel on a linked chain to match.

Again, one may carry a vanity box on the end of the parasol, or as the head of a big hatpin, disguised as a charm for her chapeleine, or even set in one of the big buttons that ornament her corsage draperies. One girl, who wore a watch on the back of one riding glove, had set in the other a small vanity case ready for instant use when she dismounted. Another girl has a similar case in the end of her crop.

The new opera bags include a vanity box and those that do not may be supplied with them by small pockets sewed to the interior of them.

Linen Economy.

For the woman who has no maid or who has a small apartment and does her own laundry work, a great deal of labor may be saved by using paper napkins instead of linen ones, when there are no guests, present. The laundering of napkins takes quite a little time and care and one might just as well have that time for a bit of rest or reading. Paper towels, too, have been made quite practical and especially where there are children will also be found a great labor saving device.

When Sir John Carr was at Glasgow, in the year 1807, he was asked by the magistrate to give his advice concerning the inscription to be placed on Nelson's monument, then just completed. The knight recommended this brief record: "Glasgow to Nelson."

HEAD FULL OF DANDRUFF

1802 Reynolds & 34th St., Savannah, Ga.—"My head began to get sore and all around the edges got white with the dandruff until I was quite scared. I thought all my hair would drop out. It came out by handfuls, and my head itched so I nearly scratched the skin off. It was full of dandruff which showed plainly in my hair. I also had trouble with my hand. It peeled every time I put it in water, and it was so badly disfigured that everybody noticed it and asked me what it was. It was red, and burned awfully. "My mother tried several things but they were unsuccessful, and it seemed as if nothing did it any good until I started to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment. It had lasted about four weeks, but then it started getting well and my hair stopped falling completely. Now it is cured. My hair is now nice and thick and is growing to a nice length. I also used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment for my hand and completely cured it." (Signed) Miss Hattie M. Jones, Nov. 8, 1911.

Willow Switches Given Away.

The small boy whose father has time to apply the switch should beware with a little more than his usual caution. The United States government is giving away willow switches. The department of agriculture has an experiment farm at Arlington, Va., and some parts of it were found to be too wet for raising ordinary crops. Therefore the experts set willows out in the wet places, and there has been so smart a growth that the government wants to get rid of the willow switches. It offers to give them away under the guise of willow cuttings to make baskets or bottom chairs, but no smart boy will ever be deceived by that kind of talk. He may be safe only in the assurance of the government that only one hundred of the cuttings will be given to one person.—Worcester Telegram.

Peculiar Street Names.

FRIENDS HELP.

St. Paul Park Incident.

"After drinking coffee for breakfast I always felt languid and dull, having no ambition to get to my morning duties. Then in about an hour or so a weak, nervous derangement of the heart and stomach would come over me with such force I would frequently have to lie down."

Tea is just as harmful, because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.

"At other times I had severe headaches; stomach finally became affected and digestion so impaired that I had serious chronic dyspepsia a constipation. A lady, for many years State President of the W. C. T. U., told me she had been greatly benefited by quitting coffee and Postum; she was troubled for with asthma. She said it crossed to quit coffee when she could have as del article as Postum.

"Another lady who had been bled with chronic dyspepsia found immediate relief on cessation and using Postum. Still a friend told me that Postum a Godsend, her heart trouble had been relieved after leaving off coffee and taking on Postum.

"So many such cases came to notice that I concluded coffee was a cause of my trouble and I quit at took up Postum. I am more than pleased to say that my days of trouble have disappeared. I am well and happy."

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDY ON MAKING FRIENDS WITH MAMMON.

Genesis 23:1-15—April 20.
"Be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you."—Ephesians 4:32, R. V.

IN a previous lesson we saw that Jacob left his earthly inheritance to Esau, claiming only the great Abrahamic Promise. That Promise was in respect to the future, and was purely of faith. All Jacob's course in life was governed by that Promise. If the Seed of Blessing was to come through him, then he must have children. Hence he married and reared a goodly family, regarding them as identified with himself in the Promise. His accumulation of flocks and herds was along the same line.

"Jacob's Flock."

About twenty years after Jacob had left home, he returned, under the Lord's guidance, with his flocks, herds and servants, to the land of his father. Naturally, he felt a timidity respecting Esau, and prayed to the Lord upon the subject, reminding Him of the Promise, in which he trusted. Then he sent word to Esau that he was coming. Next he prepared a gift of considerable value for those times—sheep, goats, camels, cattle and asses.

This gift represented long years of toil on Jacob's part. These earthly things, however, Jacob valued as nothing compared with the great Abrahamic Covenant. He could give this goodly portion of earthly mammon to purchase Esau's good will, although he was under no obligations to his brother. He had purchased the first-born's portion, which included the major portion of Isaac's worldly riches. Jacob had left these in Esau's hands. The latter might suspect that Jacob was coming to claim his inheritance.

Had Jacob laid no claim to the estate, Esau would have judged him according to his own standards, and mistrusted that at an opportune moment Jacob would attack him. Thus a feud would have been established between the two families. This would have interfered with Jacob's hopes in connection with the Covenant.

Jacob insisted upon Esau's acceptance of the present. It would stand as a pledge of good faith between them. Esau would all the more willingly see Jacob's prosperity; for he realized that he had gotten the better of his brother, first by getting the patrimony, and secondly, by receiving so rich a present. Evidently Jacob's course was wise. He still had plenty, and God could give him more. His chief concern would be the Abrahamic Promise, the fulfillment of which lay beyond the present life.

The Lesson of Generosity.

One lesson which we as Christians may draw from Jacob's course is that of generosity toward the world—those who have no interest in Heavenly promises. As Jacob was willing to set aside all earthly rights and privileges in favor of the Abrahamic Promise, so the Spiritual Heirs should do likewise.

As Jacob left his father's house, leaving all to his brother without contention, trusting only to the Heavenly Promise, so must we Spiritual Israelites forsake all earthly hopes, to obtain joint heirship with Christ in the Messianic Kingdom. As Jacob gladly gave presents to Esau for the sake of peace in carrying out God's arrangements under this Promise, so we as Christians should willingly give to our partners in life, our neighbors, friends and brethren, the larger share of earth's good things, if thereby we may forward the Lord's Cause in connection with the Abrahamic Promise, in which we trust.

Mankind have their hearts set upon earthly good things—they know nothing higher. Christians, on the contrary, appreciate Heavenly things, esteeming earthly things as unworthy of comparison. We, like St. Paul, esteem all earthly things but loss and dross that we may win Christ—that we may win joint heirship with Jesus in the great blessing of God by becoming members of the Spiritual Seed of Abraham, that we may participate in the glorious work of blessing all the families of the earth.

Finally, Our Golden Text.

Our Golden Text seems at first not closely related to the lesson. Nevertheless, there is a relationship. It is this: Whoever cultivates the spirit of generosity and benevolence toward others in the interests of the Lord's Cause will thereby make character. Generosity in dealing with our families and with the world will gradually make us more generous with all —especially with the Lord's family, in which our text refers.

The Church of Christ, as he prepared for Divine service, in association with the Redeemer in His Messianic Reign. The lessons in this School are the graces of the Spirit. To whatever extent we attain these graces, to that extent we shall be prepared for a place in the Kingdom.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDY ON HATED WITHOUT A CAUSE.

Genesis 37—April 27.
"Love each other."—1 Corinthians 13:1.

THE story of Joseph and his brethren, beautiful in its simplicity, is deeply instructive. One lesson it teaches is the wisdom of a parent in showing too great preference for one child, and thus cultivating amongst the others a spirit of envy. Another lesson is the unwisdom of telling even our dreams to unsympathetic ears; as when Joseph told his dreams to his brethren.

Joseph was not to be blamed for artlessly telling his dreams. Evidently this was the very thing which the Lord intended. The Lord foreknew the jealousy of Joseph's brethren, and the growth of envy in their minds; and He gave opportunity for it. He had already mapped out Joseph's subsequent experiences, which the envy of his brethren merely helped to accomplish.

"Joseph Sold by His Brethren."

The most important feature of today's Study is that which recognizes Joseph as a type, or prophetic picture of Christ. Joseph was on an errand of mercy to his brethren when their envy sold him into slavery. His brethren hated him without a cause—merely because he was good, because their father loved him, and because God had foreshadowed his coming exaltation. They were envious to the point of cruelty.

"They Hated Him Without a Cause." But God's Providence blessed Joseph, and through much tribulation finally brought him to a position next in influence and power to the Egyptian Pharaoh himself. Later, the famine drove Joseph's brethren to Egypt to buy wheat. Thus was fulfilled his dream that his brethren would bow down to him.

Later on, when Jacob's entire family came to live in Goshen, they all did obeisance to Joseph, as the representative of the Egyptian government, thus fulfilling the second dream. But, until the time came for Joseph's exaltation to power, his experiences looked as if the Lord had less love for him than for any other member of Jacob's family.

"Which Things Are an Allegory."

Like Joseph, our Lord Jesus was also hated without cause. (Psalm 69:4.) The brethren of Jesus were the Jews, who crucified Him. No cause of death was found in Him. It was on account of envy that the Jews called for His crucifixion. His works were good, and theirs were evil; He taught the way of the Lord more perfectly than did they; He declared that some day they and all others would recognize Him as the Messiah. Therefore they hated Him.

Jesus applied this statement to Himself, saying, "They hated Me without a cause." (John 15:25.) In this same connection He plainly forewarned His followers that they must expect to be similarly hated unjustly. Other Scriptures assure us that in God's great Plan, not only Jesus is to be exalted to the Throne as the world's great Messiah, but with Him will be a company of brethren, sharers of the same glory, honor and immortality. These brethren, in God's great Purpose, are required to pass through similar experiences to those of their Elder Brother, Jesus. Their experiences, therefore, are illustrated also in Joseph's experiences.

The Philosophy of the Facts.

We have considered the facts—that Jesus and all of His followers, according to Divine intention, have suffered shame and contempt. We perceive that, in the case of Jesus and the early Church, the persecutions came from their brethren according to the flesh—the Jews. But all down the Gospel Age, the persecutions of the Church, the brethren of Jesus, not Jews, but Christians. As the Jewish religionists in Jesus' day persecuted their more righteous brethren, so nominal Christians have been the chief persecutors of the Lord's faithful followers. See Psalm 69:4-21.

"Christians Persecuted by Their Brethren."

This persecution has come upon faithful souls of nearly every denomination. Sad to say, this persecution comes from unfaithful souls of nearly every denomination. In nearly every case, the persecution has been made that the persecuting was done for the glory of God. See Isaiah 66:5. Already the world in general, including the Jews, realize that a great mistake was made in persecuting Jesus even unto death. To some extent similar transgressions against His faithful followers have been recognized. Yet the same envious disposition leads to persecution, even in our day.

Why has God ordained that Christ and His faithful followers should thus suffer? In Jesus' case, the Father used these trying experiences to demonstrate His Son's love, loyalty and obedience, as preliminary to our Lord's exaltation to great honor and glory. In the case of the elect Church, it is even more proper that, being gathered from amongst a fallen race, they should be tested to the very last—unto death.

SYNOPSIS.

At the beginning of great automobiles race the mechanic of the Mercury, Stanton's machine, drops dead. Strange youth, Jesse Floyd, volunteers, and is accepted. In the race during the twenty-four hour race Stanton meets a stranger, Miss Carlisle, who introduces herself. The Mercury wins race. Stanton receives flowers from Miss Carlisle, which he ignores. Stanton meets Miss Carlisle on a train.

"Neither are you," he countered. "Nor it wouldn't be of any importance if we were, but we are not. I'm not asking you why you are working with your hands instead of your head, and I suppose you are not asking me 'Who cares?'"

"No one," dryly agreed Stanton. "But I can tell you that I am doing this to make money, and make it quick, and I would much prefer breaking my neck to living in the rack of poverty. They are calling our train; you had better come."

"I'm supposed to keep in touch with Mr. Green," Floyd observed, gathering up his magazine with cheerful nonchalance. "He is worrying about me most of the time, for fear I'll lose my nerve and desert."

Which was not precisely what was worrying the assistant manager of the Mercury company, and perhaps Stanton of the rough temper knew it.

"I fancy your nerve will hold out, if your patience does," was his reply. "Patience is supposed to be a woman's art," doubted Floyd. "But I'll try to acquire it."

Stanton laughed briefly. "I wouldn't give much for your chance of success, in that case. If I ever find a woman who will ride with me as you do, I will marry her."

"Oh, no, you will not," contradicted the other, searching his pockets for a missing glove. "You will marry a fluffy Ruffles who will faint if you exceed the eight-mile-an-hour speed limit. And then you will quit racing and be spoiled for the Mercury Company, and all its rival manufacturers will chant for joy: 'A young man married is a young man married.'"

It was so long since any one had cared to talk nonsense to Stanton, not to mention airily teasing him, that he caught his breath in sheer astonishment. And then a tingling, human warmth and sense of comradeship succeeded. It was as if he had been living in a lonely, silent room, when unexpectedly some one opened the door and entered.

"I'm too busy," he retorted only, but his tone conveyed no rebuke.

They walked on down the room and out into the train shed. They were almost at the train itself, when Floyd stopped.

"Some one is calling you," he signified.

Stanton turned, and found a panting, black-gowned young woman behind him.

"My mistress bade me ask you to wait, sir," she apologized.

"Your mistress?"

She stepped aside, and he saw a tall, fair-haired girl, gowned with finished richness in a motor costume of pale-tan silk, who advanced with leisurely grace toward them.

"Miss Carlisle, sir," supplemented the maid.

"There is no need for you to go," Stanton checked, as Floyd moved to continue on his way. "Stay here."

He was obeyed without comment. The maid respectfully withdrew a few paces, when her mistress came up.

"What a place to meet a man of gasolene!" greeted Valerie Carlisle, in her low, assured tones. "Or are you also in distress, Mr. Stanton, and forced to promiscuous train travel?"

Her manner was that of one meeting an ordinary acquaintance, she held out her hand, in its miniature tan gauntlet, with perfect ease. No one could have guessed how unconventional and slight had been their introduction.

"I am going to Massachusetts," Stanton answered as composedly.

"To Massachusetts? But so are we! At least, we had everything arranged to motor out in our country place, until twenty minutes ago our chauffeur was taken violently ill. Now I suppose we must go by train—" she broke the sentence, her large brown eyes sweeping Floyd with a deliberate question and scrutiny.

"Miss Carlisle, Mr. Floyd, whom you saw beside me for many hours at the Beach motordrome," Stanton made the presentation.

Her face cleared swiftly, he could have said it was relief which shot across her expression.

"Your mechanic? Is it possible? You also are going to Lowell, Mr. Floyd?"

"Yes, since my next work is there," Floyd replied, unsimiling and laconic. It was evident he and Miss Carlisle disliked each other at sight.

She turned from him indifferently. "Mr. Stanton, I am going to make you a selfish invitation. Our place is about seventy-five miles from New York; will you not try our new motor car and give me the honor of being driven there by you? You could go on to Lowell with us to-morrow morning, or, if you insisted, finish the journey by train after dinner."

Amazed, Stanton looked at her. Once again he mentally asked himself what she could want of him.

"Thank you; I have arranged to take this train," he declined.

"Decidedly?"

"Decidedly, Miss Carlisle."

She bent her head, patting her small tan shoe on the platform. She was even more handsome than his night glimpse of her had shown, with an ivory-tinted, cultivated beauty whose one defect was coldness.

"Of course, I can not urge you," she slowly rejoined. "But stroll back to the depot with me, pray; I had something to say."

"My train," he began.

"Is my train also, since you will not take me in the motor-car. We have time enough; I inquired of the conductor, a moment ago."

Floyd bowed and stepped aboard the train, leaving the two to walk back together, followed by the maid.

"I wanted to ask you of the race," Miss Carlisle said, when they were quite at the end of the long platform. The speech remained unfinished.

There was a shouted order, the cough of the locomotive mingled with the ring and jangle of tightening couplings, and the Lowell express pulled out of the shed. Stanton wheeled with position and wealth, her composed worldliness, and ridiculed himself.

"Since I have made you miss your train, and missed my own, I can only repeat my former suggestion," she added, as he did not speak. "Why should you not come with my father and me in our car? It is only a three or four hour trip, and you will be so much nearer Lowell, at least. I am sorry our chauffeur is ill, so I am forced to ask you to drive. Of course, if you fear tiring yourself for a race day after tomorrow—"

Stanton started to speak, then abruptly shrugged his shoulders. After all, why not?

"Thank you," he returned. "I scarcely think a seventy-five mile run will incapacitate me."

"You will come?" Her amber eyes gleamed vividly. "You are too good. Let us find my father and the car. It is at least a car worthy of you—a better than the Mercury, I confess to thinking."

"A foreign machine?"

"No, an Atalanta Six. Martha, find papa in the station and ask him to come out to the car."

They emerged by a side exit into the noisy, dirty, sunny New York street.

"Is it not well designed, well swung?" she challenged. "It is fast on the race track—you know that. Is it not handsome?"

She spoke eagerly, with more animation than he had yet seen in her. Stanton ran a careless glance over the big, tan-colored automobile standing by the curb.

"It is a good car," he agreed conservatively; privately he considered it both too high and too heavy for racing work.

"Only that? You say only that? But wait, you have not driven it. When papa comes we can start."

Mr. Carlisle was coming; a spare, nervous gentleman who wore glasses set on a Roman nose, from which they slipped monotonously. He and Stanton had once met at the Mercury office, where one was arranging for a tire contract, and the other was signing an agreement to drive for the season. They recognized each other now, while Miss Carlisle concisely outlined the situation.

"A most astonishing affair," commented her father. "Very kind of you, Mr. Stanton, indeed. These railroad men are careless. Valerie—"

Miss Carlisle declined the invitation to enter the trolley.

"I shall ride beside Mr. Stanton," she announced. "I wish to see expert driving at close range, for once."

"Ah!" queried Stanton; suddenly the conviction that she had done this purposely flared up anew, and with it his anger. She would have a race

They made the next ten miles a ten minutes, having a fair road. Then rough hills and villages somewhat lowered their pace. It was a dizzying rush through a gale of wind, a birdlike cleaving of the summer air, accompanied by the weird howl of the electric horn upon which Stanton kept a finger much of the time, a vision of scattering wagons.

There was a curious circumstance. Valerie Carlisle literally cowered in her seat, pale, shivering, usually with her eyes shut. Yet she, the imperious demander of her own way, uttered no remonstrance, although faintly crying out once or twice when they slid by some obvious danger of cliff or road. Stanton saw, from the corner of his eye, and speculated as he drove.

"Do you think this is safe?" Mr. Carlisle found an opportunity to urge.

"I think so, if nothing breaks," Stanton called back, twisting the car around a load of hay.

They reached their destination in two hours and ten minutes. When they entered the village limits and the speed fell to fifteen miles an hour, Mr. Carlisle slowly revived, and regained his breath and his glasses. His daughter released her grasp of the seat, raised a shaking hand to touch veils and bonnet, then passed a handkerchief across her dry lips and looked up at the man beside her.

"How do you like the car?" she asked.

Stanton surveyed her, almost surprised into compunction.

"It hasn't the Mercury's pull, to be perfectly frank," he answered. "It is a trifle heavy and less lively. But it is a fine machine, and of course you do not want to race with it."

"Of course I do not want to race with it," she slowly assented, and averted her face from him, watching the streets.

AWAKENED TRAIN OF THOUGHT

Little Incident That Would Have Made Almost Any Man Superstitious.

Seeking to dispel the pangs of loneliness occasioned by the absence of his wife, who had been away for several days visiting her parents in another city, a fashionable and well-known resident of the East side invited a number of his men friends to his home one night last week to play cards and drink glasses.

Being fond of music the host engaged a four-piece orchestra and while his guests exchanged deals and raised the cut glasses to their lips he found more pleasure in reclining in a favorite leather cushioned chair and listening to the music.

It was nearing the time for departure when one of the merry-makers proposed that each guest drink a toast to the host and that he respond. When all had followed the suggestion they turned toward the host. "Tell us what you are thinking of your wife," one suggested as the party giver hesitated.

Raising his glass to a level with his lips he was about to respond. "I was thinking and wondering—"

Just at that moment the orchestra began its rendition of "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now."

The guests never heard the response, but if they had lingered outside and peered through the library window they would have seen him writing a letter which was later enclosed in an envelope bearing a special delivery stamp. The contents of the message have not been made public, but the wife came home two days later.—Kansas City Journal.

Chinese Workers in Cuba.

John Chinaman is ubiquitous in Havana. The census of 1899 shows a Chinese population of 2,751, and here as elsewhere they are industrious members of the community. Chinamen are seen carrying burdens swung from balanced shoulder poles after the manner of their native country. On the outskirts of the city and in the suburbs are extensive Chinese truck farms. The market garden industry is largely in their hands. The Chinese quarter is in Zanja and Agulla streets. The Chinese theater is in Zanja street. The Chinese in Cuba are reminders of the coolie trade which brought here hundreds of thousands to virtual slavery. They were imported under a contract to serve eight years at $4 a month, and the planters paid $400 for them.—Havana Post.

Calls for Persistence.

"There are no cut-and-dried rules for making advertising successful. Each man has to work out in a large measure, his own salvation. There is, however, one sure way to make it pay, and that is by persistence and common sense. There are no substitutes for these elements in advertising or anything else for that matter."—Jed Scarborough.

Catron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettle Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side."

The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good. I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.

At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without its tiring me, and am doing my work."

If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. He Drove With a Wise Obedience to Traffic Regulations.

an ejaculation, but halted without attempting unless pursuit.

"How very unfortunate!" murmured Miss Carlisle, putting aside her tan silk veil. "How very stupid of the conductor!"

Stanton turned from the departing train to the tranquilly regretful girl, his straight dark brows knitting. For the instant he could have been certain that she had done this intentionally and by a pre-arranged plan. But at once reason reclaimed him; he recalled her breeding, her father's high ing driver for her chauffeur? Very well. He swung into the seat.

Until they were out of the city, he drove with a wise obedience to traffic regulations. But when the country line was reached, Stanton stopped the car, donned a small pair of goggles from his overcoat pocket, and passed his hat back to Mr. Carlisle's care.

"I am sorry I had no time to get into motor clothes," he observed, a little too pleasantly. "Still we will manage."

BE IMITATED

New Water is Applied, Air Blasting Sun Will Take Up Much Moisture.

It is the irrigator's business to imitate natural conditions as closely as possible. At the very beginning he is handicapped by the conditions that make irrigation necessary. No matter how he applies his water, the dry air and the blazing sun of the mid region will through rapid evaporation deprive him of a large part of the moisture. In other words, it requires more irrigation water than rain water to moisten the same area of soil to the same depth and degree of saturation. Even after he has succeeded in getting the water into the soil, the average irrigator does not know where it goes or what becomes of it.

As long as irrigation water was plentiful and the irrigated area small, loss of moisture through wasteful methods failed to attract attention. With small regard to water economy, giving no thought to the damage inflicted upon both land and crop through excessive moisture, the farmers after leveling their fields flooded them, allowing the water to seek its way without much guidance or attempt at proper distribution. The check or basin method under which the area to be irrigated is divided by ridges into rectangular basins of equal size brought about better distribution, but it did not reduce evaporation losses, and it interfered with the use of farm implements. Under this method enormous evaporation losses were caused by the moistening of the entire surface and early cultivation was made impossible. Of late years the most progressive irrigators have adopted the furrow method wherever possible, especially in orchards and vineyards.

Heat and wind movement increase evaporation. A reduction of the temperature by seven degrees will, according to investigations, decrease the rate of evaporation from water surfaces one-tenth of an inch a day.

RECORD OF WORK WELL DONE

Anti-Tuberculosis Campaign Fruitful of Results for the Good of All Mankind.

Some comparisons showing the progress of the anti-tuberculosis campaign in the last eight years and the present needs of this movement are made by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis in a brief report of its work recently issued. During the eight years of its work, the national association has assisted in the organization of over 800 state and local anti-tuberculosis societies located in almost every state and territory of the Union. Over 500 hospitals and sanatoria have been established, with more than 30,000 beds for consumptives. About 400 dispensaries, with more than 1,500 physicians in attendance and at least 150 open air schools for tuberculous and anemic children, have also been provided. Laws dealing with tuberculosis have been passed in states and ordinances on this subject have been adopted in over 100 cities and towns. An active education against tuberculosis has been carried on in every state.

PIMPLES CAME IN BLOTCHES

Morrison, Tenn.—For one year I suffered from a very severe attack of acne or pimples, accompanied by eczema. It first showed itself by the formation of small red, rather hard pimples which were not only disfiguring, but were painful. They also appeared on my neck and chest. Their itching was often so intense as to cause insomnia, and they very often caused pain and burning. I tried several so-called "cure cure" remedies, but they did little or no good. Several months ago I heard of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and wrote for a sample.

"I found them so soothing that I at once purchased a twenty-five cent cake of Cuticura Soap, and a fifty cent box of Cuticura Ointment. After using them for about a month, all of the itching and the pimples had entirely disappeared." (Signed) John Finger, Dec. 30, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

Counter-Thrust. "A very good retort!" said Senator Lodge in an argument in this city over the immigration bill. "A very good retort indeed! It reminds me of Weeks."

"Weeks and his wife were quarreling. Weeks, with a hard, scornful laugh, 'you acted like a fish out of water.'"

"Weeks sighed. 'But a very cleverly landed fish,' he said, in a musing voice."

Lamentable Ignorance. Mrs. Kaller—Cook's are such ignorant things, nowadays. Mrs. Justwed—Aren't they? They can't do the simplest things. I asked mine to make some sweetbreads the other day and she said she couldn't—McCall's Magazine.

Her Ambition. "Does that stenographer want to marry you?" "No; only wants to be a sister to me."

IN WARFARE OF FACTIONS

Snapshot of Quiet Domestic Scene When Rivals Fought for the Control of Mexico.

There was a dramatic silence. "We need butter for supper," said the wife and mother firmly. "I don't see how we can get along without it. I'll send Johnnie to the grocer's. It's just across the street, you know. He's little and can run fast."

"No," said the husband and father firmly. "I will go."

But the wife flung herself on his breast as he took down his hat. "No, no, John," she cried; "you can't be spared. I will go."

He caught her by the arms. "No," he quickly said. "What would I do without you? Hark!"

"I can open a tumbler of jelly," said the wife and mother.

"Gimme jelly," cried the child.

So they sat down and ate their butterless supper.

And all this happened because they lived in the City of Mexico, and the rival factions were using the streets for gun practice.

Profound Criticism. Kin Hubbard, the Indiana humorist—one of them, that is to say—once was assigned to cover a performance of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Hubbard had his brain-child, old "Abe Martin," report the play. This was the critique: "Uncle Tom's Cabin" played down 't Melodeon hall last night. Th' dogs was good, but they had poor support."—Everybody's Magazine.

Queer Ironing. A writer in the Wide World magazine says that the most curious sight he saw at Cairo was men ironing clothes with their feet! The men were employed in the native tailoring establishments.

Except for the long handle, the irons were shaped like the ordinary flat-iron, only larger. A solid block of wood rested on the top of the iron, and on this the men placed one foot, guiding the iron in the desired direction by means of the handle. For the sake of convenience, ironing boards were raised only a few inches from the ground, and, however strange the method may seem to us, the work was done very well and very expeditiously.

Explaining the Needle.

A typesetter in a printing house became very adroit in explaining the large number of misprints for which he was responsible. Even when he changed his work and became a waiter in a restaurant, says Das Echo, his skill did not forsake him.

One day he had served a guest with a plate of soup, and was turning away, when he was called back sharply.

"This is an outrage!" cried the indignant diner. "I find a needle in my soup! What does this mean?"

"Just a misprint, sir," explained the former typesetter. "It should have been a noodle."—Youth's Companion.

Fleming Makes

Reply to Mabry.

The Clovis Journal in last weeks issue devoted a half column or more to a lot of sarcastic, semi-funny remarks regarding William F. Fleming, secretary of the Clovis Chamber of Commerce and attempted to justify their unwarranted personal attack on Mr. Fleming for the reason that he objected to being called "Doc," a nom de plume for which there is neither cause or justification.

Mr. Fleming's answer to Mabry's stinging criticism is as follows:

Clovis, N. M. Apr. 15, '13
Mr. T. J. Mabry,
Clovis, N. M.

Sir:—
Your unnecessarily long letter received. If this letter was intended as reply to the one I wrote you under date of April 10th, it was a useless waste of time on your part, as my letter did not require a reply.

I suppose I should feel highly honored to receive such voluminous correspondence from one in your position and walk in life, but I do not. You may think I fancy the inferior grade of sarcasm you have used in parts of your letter. But I do not. It is easily traced to its origin without the signature, and has the aroma of denatured English, and the earmarks of a school boy.

It is not within your sphere, Mr. Mabry, to be the judge of whether I take myself too seriously or not.

The doubt with which you seem to think my name will be used in your paper is most gratifying to me.

WM. F. FLEMING.

Mr. H. L. Bainer, agricultural demonstrator for the Santa Fe was a Clovis visitor Friday and addressed the Chamber of Commerce Friday night. He stated that he wanted twelve or fifteen volunteer farmers having land near Clovis, to cultivate from ten to twenty acres each and that they would furnish the seed for planting the crop, which ofcourse would go to the farmer.

Mr. Bainer advocates the planting of a new dwarf milo maize and kaffir, and other forage crops especially adapted to this climate which he says will mature from ten days to three weeks earlier than the crops now generally planted. He will furnish literature directing the planting and cultivation of the crops and proposes to visit each farm at least three times during the growing season, to offer such suggestions as might be valuable to the farmer in the care and cultivation of his crops. It is now up to the volunteers.
