According to the Oct. 4 issue of daily newspaper ULTIMAS NOTICIAS (Mexico City), the Mexican government will host a meeting of Latin American heads of state early in 1987 to map out a new development strategy for the region. A report by Mexico's ambassador to the United Nations indicated that the UN Latin American Group (GRULA) is considering along with Mexico, extending invitations to the presidents of the major capitalist industrialized nations. The summit will reportedly focus on continuing discussions of the Cartagena conference, and particularly on breaking the vicious circle of foreign debt and underdevelopment.
