CONFLICT OVER LAS VEGAS PROJECT

Grant Board Files on All Available Waters

ENTERPRISE COST $750,000

Four Big Dams and Canals to Be Many Miles Long Planned.

A water rights conflict has been precipitated by the filing in the office of Territorial Engineer Vernon L. Sullivan, by the trustees of the Las Vegas grant of an application for all of the flow of the Gallinas, Sapello, Arroyo Pecos, Sanguijela and tributaries. Two months ago, Attorney A. A. Jones made application for part of the flow of these streams for a private irrigation project. The U. S. reclamation service filed on these identical waters on January 23, 1906, for the Las Vegas project, but in abandoning that project, relinquished its rights to the Las Vegas grant board, which also claims the waters under the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo.

The trustees of the grant board are Jefferson Maynolds, Eugenio Romero, Frederick H. Pierce, Jose Felix Esquivel, Elisha V. Long. The project is to cost $750,000 and the flow to be conserved is estimated at 115 second feet. The capacity of the storage reservoirs is to be 43,681 acre feet while the entire storage per year is to be 80,000 acre feet. The project is identical with that of the reclamation service. The Sapello is tributary to the Mora and the other streams are tributary to the Pecos. The dams and headgates are to be of steel, cement, concrete and timber. The following will be the dams:

Sanguijela dam will store 27,581 acre feet and will be the largest reservoir. The dam will be 69 feet high, will be 800 feet long at the bottom and 1480 feet long at the top.

The Sapello dam will store 4850 acre feet, will be 35 feet high, 2500 feet long at the top and 1500 feet at the bottom.

The Las Vegas dam will store 8250 acre feet. It will be 75 feet high, 500 feet long at the top and 200 feet at the bottom.

The trout Springs dam will store 3,000 acre feet and will be 75 feet high, 650 feet long at top and 250 feet at bottom.

The principal canals and ditches will be:

Gallinas inlet canal, 12,500 feet long.

Sapello inlet canal, 9 miles long.

East outlet canal, 20 miles long.

Pecos canal, 1-1-4 miles long.

West outlet canal, 27,000 feet long.

Romeroville canal, 12 miles long.

East High canal, 30 miles long.

Sapello outlet and ditch, 6-1-2 miles long.

GENERAL WOOD DEFENDS NATIONAL GUARD.

Amount of Sickness During Maneuvers in Massachusetts Was Remarkably Small.

New York, Oct. 8.—The critics of the joint maneuvers of the regular army and the national guard who have been predicting that the Boston campaign of the past summer will be the last of such joint operations because the hardships and suffering of the militiamen were all out of proportion to the lessons learned, were answered today by Major General Leonard Wood, commanding the department of the east. General Wood said:

"The statement purporting to come from some one connected with the war department relating to the hardship and suffering of the men engaged in the maneuvers in Massachusetts has no foundation in fact. The amount of sickness was extraordinarily small."

"The report of General William A. Pew, commanding the Blue division, which has just reached me, says:

"The health of the men during the week under unusually severe weather conditions was excellent. In the entire division there were under 100 cases treated, and those were mostly minor injuries, sore feet and the like."

"The report of Major J. B. McCook, chief surgeon of the Connecticut brigade of the army of the Red, which has also just reached me, says in regard to the health of the men:

"There is almost no sickness and few accidents, and what we had as a rule amounted to nothing."

"It is not true to say that the hardships were all out of proportion to the lessons learned. In the first place, there were no hardships. No complaint has come from the men or officers. There were possibly five per cent of the militiamen dissatisfied with the maneuvers and they were the proportion which would prefer life in a camp."

"On the other hand, the lessons learned were invaluable. One of them is that ye haven't enough regulars or militiamen ready for mobilization to defend a city against such an attack as was made against Boston. The other is that it builds up the spirit of co-operation between the regular army and the national guard."

LAS VEGAS STRUCK BY SNOW STORM.

Trouble in Negro Church Over Minister Marrying a Divorcee—Leaves for Durango.

Special to the New Mexican. East Las Vegas, N. M., Oct. 8.—The predicted cold wave struck Las Vegas and northeastern New Mexico today. The first snow of the season began falling this morning and this afternoon had assumed the proportions of small blizzard.

Violated Church Laws.

Because he violated the laws of his church in marrying a divorcee, Rev. P. D. Yochum, for several years pastor of the A. M. E. church in this city, was suspended at the recent annual conference of this church held at Boulder, Colo. Yochum lost the pastorate of the church here as a result. The affair has stirred up no end of trouble in the local negro church circles, the congregation being about equally divided in the fight. The deposed clergyman returned here yesterday from the conference, hastily packed up his belongings and left presumably for Durango, Colo., where he hopes to get a charge after securing a pardon from the presiding bishop. Yochum is regarded as one of the ablest negro ministers in the south-west.

It is presumed that his promotion to the position of deputy supervisor of the Apache is but temporary pending still higher promotion.

MAE HAYNER MUST ANSWER BIGAMY CHARGE.

Her First Husband Claims Her—Denver Woman Marries California Druggist and Disappears.

San Rafael, Cal., Oct. 8.—Deputy Sheriff George Agnew was notified today that Mae Hayner, who is wanted here for trial on a charge of bigamy is in jail in Oakland, Ca. She will be brought here at once. The complaint was issued at the instigation of William R. Hayner, a Denver furniture dealer, who alleges that he is the woman's legal husband.

It is charged that she came here last June, declared she was a widow and married Edmund Thiele, an Oakland druggist. Later, it is said, she obtained $1,400 from Thiele on the ground that she wished to visit her mother in Denver, and disappeared. Thiele traced her to Seattle by registered letter, finally found her in Portland and later caused her arrest in Oakland. According to Hayner, he married Mrs. Hayner in Jefferson county, Iowa, 20 years ago, and they have a son aged 9, and a daughter 17 years old.

Coffey alleges that Judge Dunne refused to certify a transcript of the charge he had made to the jury in the bribery case and thereby delayed Coffey's appeal. He asks for a writ of mandate to compel the certification of the transcript.

BATTLE IS ON AGAINST BLACK LEG

Incurable Disease Will be Eradicated If Possible

FOREST RANGERS ASSIST

Instructions Telling How to Combat The Trouble Being Circulated

The fight against black leg, the dread disease which is causing so much havoc among cattle in various parts of New Mexico, is on in real earnest. The cattle sanitary board of New Mexico is doing all in its power to send out information regarding the disease and the manner in which it should be fought. Inspectors of the board are making trips to the places where cattle are found to be infected and are aiding the owners in stamping it out.

Territorial Cattle Inspector E. E. Van Horn has just returned from the Pecos reserve where he found the Closson, Arnold and other herds of cattle to be infected with black leg. He killed quite a number of the animals and destroyed their carcasses by burning. As soon as he receives a shipment of vaccine from the department at Washington he will return to the range and vaccinate all cattle. Forest rangers have been sent instructions from the forest bureau telling them to inform all cattle men regarding the danger of the disease and assist in stamping it out.

Black leg is incurable and the only recourse which the cattle men have is to vaccinate the cattle uninfected and thus prevent the disease from spreading. Once an animal becomes infected with the germ the latter multiplies into the millions. Once it is found that an animal is affected the only safe method to prevent the disease from spreading is to kill the animal and burn the carcass, hide and all, on the spot where killed.

The disease this year has become so prevalent owing to the richness of the range, the rich feeding causing the cattle to get overly fat, thus inviting the black leg germ. The following information regarding black leg will be found of great value to cattle owners. It is taken from a circular bulletin, issued by the secretary of the Cattle Growers' Association of New Mexico.

What is Black Leg?

Black leg is disease affecting young cattle, not over 2 per cent being found in animals over three years of age, and fully 80 per cent from eight to twelve months old. Under eight months, the cases are very rare. The disease is in practically all cases, absolutely fatal.

The symptoms are few, the animal showing little sign of sickness until it is far developed. On the ranges a lameness in the forefeet and legs is generally the first symptom noticed. The animal will probably be dead in twenty-four hours. It is easy to tell an animal that has died of black leg for, owing to the immense amount of gas found in the body, both before and after death, the body is distended to a remarkable degree, the legs being widely distended, and sinking out from the body very differently from a death by any other disease.

On pressing the skin on the forehead, sharp cracking sound will be heard, due to the pressure of gas underneath the skin, while if a knife is driven into it a dark frothy liquid will flow very slowly.

What Causes Black Leg.

A small member of the bacilli family. These bacilli are in the soil, left there by the death of some black leg animal. How long they will live in the soil is not known, but it is certainly for many years.

The disease is not contagious, that is, carried by contact from one animal to another, but is infectious which means that one single animal in a thousand may have it and not another animal die from it.

The gentleman who gives his discovery to the world quotes the fact that in Texas of two herds on opposite sides of a wire fence, one lost many animals by the disease, while the other lost none. Easily explainable by the fact that one pasture was infected with black leg while the other was not.

How Do Cattle Get Black Leg.

Only in one way—through the skin and into the blood. A calf lies down in a spot infected with the bacilli of black leg left there possibly years ago by some animal that died of the disease. A cut made by wire, or a gore from a horn offers a place for the disease to enter the system. The dirt affected with the minute bacilli gets

MORE APPLICANTS WANTED FOR CENSUS CLERKSHIPS.

Examinations Will Be Held All Over the United States on October 23—Positions Temporarily.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—The U. S. civil service commission announces that a very small proportion of the applications thus far filed for the examination to be held on October 23rd next for positions in the census bureau, are from the residents of the more distant states.

As the census act provides for the apportionment of appointments among the states and territories in accordance with the law of apportionment, the commissioner calls attention to the fact that present indications are that these distant states will probably fail to receive their full share of the appointments, unless more residents of such states apply for the examinations.

It is expected that about three thousand appointments will be made from the examination which is scheduled to be held on October 23rd, 1909, in all the states and territories. These appointments will be for terms of six months to two years, and will average about one year in length. The entrance salary will be $600 per annum, and promotion to at least $900 per annum will be reasonably rapid for those who render satisfactory service.

The Swine or the Flower?

Ah me! I saw a huge and loathsome sty,
Wherein a drove of wallowing swine were barred,

Whose banquet shocked the nostril and the eye;

Then spoke a voice, "Behold the source of lard!"

I fled, and saw a field that seemed at first
One glistening mass of roses pure and white,

With dewy buds 'mid dark green foliage nursed;

And, as I lingered o'er the lovely sight,
The summer breeze, that cooled that Southern scene,

Whispered, "Behold the source of COTTLENE!"

DANGER IN DELAY.

Kidney Diseases Are Too Dangerous for Santa Fe People to Neglect.
The great danger of kidney troubles is that they get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health is gradually undermined. Backache, headache, nervousness, lameness, soreness, diabetes and Bright's disease, follow in merciless succession. Don't neglect your kidneys. Cure the kidneys with the certain and safe remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills, which has cured people right here in Santa Fe.

Albino Ortega, College Street, Santa Fe, N. M., says: "I am very grateful for the benefit I have received from Doan's Kidney Pills. For several years I had trouble from my back and kidneys. It was hard for me to do work on account of pains across my loins and quick movement aggravated my trouble. My rest was disturbed by a too frequent desire to the kidney secretions and the passages were scanty and painful. Public statements given by local people who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with benefit, induced me to try them. I found relief right away and by the time I had used one box my back was free from pain. My kidneys are now in a normal condition and I feel decidedly better in every respect. I have great faith in the curative powers of Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Why Colds Are Dangerous.

Because you have contracted ordinary colds and recovered from them without treatment of any kind, do not for a moment imagine that colds are not dangerous. Everyone knows that pneumonia and chronic catarrh have their origin in a common cold. Consumption is not caused by a cold but the cold prepares the system for the reception and development of the germs that would not otherwise have found lodgment. It is the same with all infectious diseases. Diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles and whooping cough are much more likely to be contracted when the child has a cold. You will see from this that more real danger lurks in a cold than in any other of the common ailments. The easiest and quickest way to cure a cold is to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The many remarkable cures effected by this preparation have made it a staple article of trade over a large part of the world. For sale by all druggists.

TEACHERS WANTED FOR CENSUS ENUMERATORS.

Director Durand Hopes for Greater Accuracy Than in the Past as Well as Economy.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—U. S. Census Director E. Dana Durand hopes to save several hundred thousand dollars in taking the census of agriculture and also to increase the accuracy of the statistics.

The director stated today that at the census of 1900 the agricultural data were handled by means of punched cards. For each farm a large number of cards had to be punched, as the number of facts recorded regarding a farm was far greater than the number of facts required regarding an individual in the population census.

Director Durand said the statistics of population and of agriculture are collected by a different force from that employed in gathering the statistics of manufactures. The population and agricultural data are secured by enumerators of whom there will be about 65,000 at the present census, they in turn being appointed by the supervisors, of whom there are about 330. The difficulty of securing competent and faithful enumerators is very great. The length of service is very short, 15 days in the cities and 30 days in the country districts. The period is too short to justify a man who has a good job in quitting it, while on the other hand it is too long in most cases to enable such men to get leave from their regular work to take the census. Moreover the pay is small, averaging perhaps three dollars per day in the country districts and a trifle more in the cities, practically the pay of ordinary mechanics. Not only, therefore, are most of those who seek to be enumerators men who are able to command regular employment and who are looking for odd jobs.

Consideration has been given by the census authorities from time to time to the plan pursued in Germany and some other European countries, by which the census is taken chiefly or wholly by men serving without pay, who either volunteer their service from patriotic motives or who are required to act. He doubts whether conditions in this country are ripe for such a scheme. At any rate, nothing of this sort can be done at the present census. It may, however, be hoped that to some slight extent, and possibly to a considerable extent, men can be induced to accept the position of enumerator from interest in the work rather than for the compensation involved. He hopes that a considerable number of the colleges and universities of the country may see fit to give leave of absence to their students for the short time required to do this work of enumeration. The college student is a very useful enumerator in some cases, but it is exceedingly desirable that enumerators should actually live in the districts where they work, and there are multitudes of districts where no college students reside or where students are in institutions hundreds of thousands of miles from their homes. Another class who can render good service as enumerators are school teachers, but, with the enumeration taking place in April and May instead of June as formerly, few school teachers can be spared from their duties to take the census.

INTERESTING LAND CONTEST IN ARIZONA.

Homesteader's Claims Attacked By Prospectors Who Located Mines on Land.

Douglas, Ariz., Oct. 8.—A lengthy hearing in a case which promises to dissolve a matter of long dispute in the vicinity of Portal has been under way in the office of United States commissioner, Albert James. C. F. McCord of Portal, brought suit to quiet title to a homestead on which he settled near Portal more than two years ago.

McCord lived on the homestead for 14 months, and then made application to commute, but continued to reside on the property. In the meantime the Epley brothers and others had located mining claims on the same property, and after various tangles, McCord requested the government to make an investigation, and to decide for all time whether the ground was mineral property or agricultural land, to be settled according to the homestead set or the mining laws.

A great number of witnesses came down from Portal, Paradise, Clifton and other parts of the Territory, to give their testimony in the case. Inspector Quinn, representing the government, and special agent of the land office, A. F. Cheever were on hand, the latter conducting the case for the United States.

The point to be decided is whether the land in dispute is to be considered as more valuable for mineral ground or for agricultural purposes, and the decision will have an important bearing upon many other similar cases pending throughout the territory. Attorney F. S. Hildreth, formerly the recorder in the land office, appeared for McCord. The government had on hand special surveyor S. W. Gillah, Arthur Zachau, head of the forest service in the Chiricahua range, and Forester Stuart.

The testimony in the case is very voluminous.

JUDGE IRA A. ABBOTT IS KEPT VERY BUSY.

Many Matters of Interest and Importance in Second Judicial District.

Albuquerque, N. M., Oct. 8.—The taking of evidence in the suit of Carrie M. Childers, executrix of the estate of William B. Childers, vs. Frank A. Hubbell, in which it is sought to be due, occupatoinemfwyptoxN recover $5,870, for attorney's fees alleged to be due, occupied all of yesterday in the district court and at the close of the session the plaintiff had not concluded its testimony. Attorney General Frank W. Clancy was on the stand for a part of the afternoon, testifying as to the value of some of the services performed by the late attorney for Mr. Hubbell. During the morning session the evidence of Thomas K. D. Madison, who was Mr. Childers' confidential clerk, was admitted. It is probable that the evidence for the plaintiff will be concluded today.

The defense will have among its witnesses, Eslavio Vigil, Seferino Crollott, and J. J. Sheridan, who were associated with the defendant in the political offices and other matters leading up to the lawsuits which were conducted by Mr. Childers and for which the defense will seek to show that the late attorney agreed to accept a stipulated sum, believed to be $1,200. It is likely that the taking of testimony will occupy all of today and probably Saturday.

The court yesterday declared forfeited the bond of William Ewell, alias Harry Bethune who was indicted for forgery. Frank McKee and H. S. Pickard were sureties on the bond. It is understood the bond of $250 was protected.

In the matter of the petition of Thomas S. Hubbell as guardian of Thomas S. Hubbell, Jr., the matter was dismissed. Jury was waived in the case of Peter Jackson vs. Perfecto Armijo et al., and the case will be taken up after the petit jury is dismissed.

The following new suits were filed: Jaffa Grocery Company vs. Swastika Mining Company and A. P. Hunter, suit on account $251.63.

John Collins and J. C. Baldrige, administrators of the estate of Walker Allen vs. Anna Allen et al. Suit to adjust the estate.

Isidro Sandoval vs. Huning and Connell of Los Lunas, suit on contract.

"THE BLOW THAT KILLED FATHER."

Army Officers Are Asked to Reimburse Uncle Sam for Salary Overpaid.

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 8.—What is described as "the blow that killed father" has been received by a goodly number of army officers at Fort Sam Houston. Incidentally they are very much interested in a certain person styling himself "auditor" of the United States.

That worthy official, it appears, has discovered a new wrinkle calculated to reduce the national deficit. A few days ago he sent letters to a good many officers telling them that they were indebted to the United States government for considerable sums. This is how this state of affairs was brought about. During the Spanish, Cuban, Porto Rican and Philippine campaigns many officers of the lower rank had to perform the duties of their superiors and naturally drew their salaries. After sweet peace had been returned and the officers were once more attending to their proper duties these salary allowances, as they are termed technically, continued to come and thinking that Uncle Sam was handing out the few extra simoleons as a compensation for services rendered the officers were glad enough to pocket them.

They now want to know why it took the "auditor" from seven to eleven years to discover that the increase in pay was not entirely constitutional. But that may not count for much. The tone of the communications received by the unfortunates is somewhat pre-emptory and the time given in which to reimburse Uncle Sam is short. The "open" accounts are from $600 to $2,000 short and the auditor says that he wants a certified check, or other kind of remittance, within periods ranging from 30 to 60 days. Since payday comes but once a month and then stingily, and since it is somewhat expensive to wear shoulder straps, bars, stripes and eagles, there is considerable anxiety at Fort Sam Houston. It is hoped, however, that pa' or father-in-law will rush to the rescue.

PIONEER OF TRINIDAD FOUND DEAD IN BED.

Trinidad, Colo., Oct. 8.—Daniel Duruy, 81 years old, a pioneer of this section, was found dead in his bed at his home on the outskirts of this city. The discovery was made by John Robinson, a young man who had been caring for Duruy for the past few weeks. Until recently Duruy lived alone and conducted a small ranch. Physicians state that death was due to congestion of the lungs.

"While in the army in 1863 I was taken with chronic diarrhoea," says George M. Felton of South Gibson, Pa. "I have since tried many remedies but without any permanent relief until Mr. A. W. Miles of this place persuaded me to try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy one bottle of which stopped it at once." For sale by all druggists.

WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE.

Dr. Charles E. Page, a Boston physician, wants to make an operation for appendicitis a crime, and while he undoubtedly goes to the other extreme of the practitioner who would cut and slash for every ailment, yet, his words are worthy of some attention. He is reported as saying:

"I have been following the records of appendicitis operations ever since the craze for this form of surgery started," says Dr. Page, "and I confidently believe that the day is coming when the people will realize that the cutting of the appendix is a criminal operation."

"As for the widely proclaimed benefits and saving of life by operations to cut the appendix, it seems hardly necessary to cite the long list of deaths following the operation. Only recently we have had the striking instances of Clyde Fitch, the playwright, and Governor Johnson of Minnesota. The surgeons cut off Governor Johnson's appendix a year or so ago; they operated on him a second time, and on their third operation he fell a victim of mistaken modern theories."

On the other hand, there is also a tendency to rely less and less on drugs. The propaganda of osteopathy and Christian Science may have had considerable to do with this. Says an exchange:

"Dr. Ross, Superintendent of the Buffalo General hospital, addressing the American Hospital Association, made it clear that drugging is on the decline. Fifteen years ago, he said, the annual cost of medicines for each patient in the Massachusetts General hospital was about $2.50 whereas last year it was only 91 cents. In his own institution the decline has been almost equally marked. 'It is difficult to predict what the future of medicine in hospitals is going to be,' said Dr. Ross. 'Undoubtedly drugs will continue to be used, but other agencies or some agency still unknown to us will have a place. There will perhaps be doctors to preach and pray, doctors to prescribe the correct methods for the use of the mind, specialists on fresh air and exercise and doctors to prescribe drugs and operate.' In other words, instead of following beaten paths, the profession of healing will be open-minded to the best methods from any source which upon fair test prove of advantage to the patient. This is to be expected of intelligent men willing to live and learn."

SLAUGHTER OF THE INNOCENTS.

Outside of a certain amount of schooling, this community does not do much for the welfare and health of its children. It is true, that parents are supposed to do what is needed in that respect, but take any street in town and visit every house in which there are children and it will be found that in many homes there is either lamentable lack of knowledge or such poverty and negligence, that it is a wonder that any children survive the hardships and the neglect to which they are exposed. Says the Delinquent in its November issue which reaches one million homes:

"One-third of the babies born in the United States die before they reach the age of five years. This fact puts upon every adult the responsibility of doing something to prevent such a frightful loss of life to the nation. There is work for every one. The first step is to inform ourselves about conditions in our own community. Get the answer to the following questions:

"How many babies were born in your town last year?"

"How many died under one year of age? Of what did they die?"

"What are the agencies at work in your town to prevent infant deaths? Hospitals, infant milk-depots, charitable associations, women's clubs, church societies? What does each do?"

"What health rights have you in your community? Clean streets? Clean air? Clean milk? Freedom from smoke, garbage, dust and noise nuisance?"

"How does your town educate mothers?"

"Does the school hold parent-teacher meetings? How much time is devoted to infant hygiene?"

"Does your health department distribute pamphlets to mothers on 'How to Keep the Baby Well'? Does it send them in the hands of a teacher-nurse?"

"How many visiting nurses have you in your town? How many educate mothers in the care of babies? How many teach women how to take care of themselves?"

"What appropriation was made in your city budget for 1909 for the education of mothers and the care of babies?"

"What effort was made by citizens to secure such an appropriation?"

"What is the possibility of calling a conference in your town, of mothers, women's clubs, social workers, health officers, school superintendents, physicians and nurses?"

PERMANENCY OF ARTESIAN WELLS.

From time to time reports come from the lower Pecos valley that the artesian wells of that section are failing. Instances are given and have occurred that certain wells have gone dry and there have been evidences of fluctuation in the flow of practically all the wells, but thus far, the artesian reservoir has proven inexhaustible. It is no doubt continually replenished from the run-off of a vast watershed. Although from the Manzano mountains south there is a vast mountain system with a number of high ranges, yet, there is not a single large river between those mountains and the Pecos. It is evident that the water seeps into the soil and is caught by the immense basin which feeds the artesian wells. As long as the rains and the snows continue to fall, that long the basin will be inexhaustible, although drought may occasionally affect it or the time may come when the great number of wells will influence the flow of some of them. Says the Roswell Register-Tribune:

"The most important news item of the fall so far, so far as the Pecos valley is concerned (and that interests us more than all of the rest of the world), comes from Artesian Well Inspector Byron O. Beall, who has just finished his third quarterly test of the 500 odd artesian wells in Chaves county. Mr. Beall reports that the general average of all the wells shows a strong increase of flow, and that in those few cases in which individual wells have slowed down it has been in every case traceable to local causes such as defective casing, the close proximity of other wells, etc. The general physical condition of the wells was never better. In all probability these conditions will be matched by that of the supervisor of the south district, or Eddy county, and taken together the statements of the inspectors are about the most complete refutation of the call of the knackers that could be imagined. After a while it would seem that the artesian flow of the valley will become recognized as stable and permanent, when year after year the reports of competent inspectors to this effect are filed."

There is less argument in comparing the gross territorial expenditures of the Territory when it had 175,000 people under Governor Thornton's administration, with the expenditures today when it has three times as many people, as there would be in comparing the municipal expenditures of Democratic Roswell with those of Republican Santa Fe. Although Roswell has fewer inhabitants than Santa Fe, its municipal expenditures are almost three times as great as those of Santa Fe. In other words, it costs the individual in Democratic Roswell three times as much for municipal taxes as it does the individual resident of Republican Santa Fe. But that is not due to Roswell being Democratic or Santa Fe being Republican. The same state of affairs would prevail if Roswell were Republican and Santa Fe Democratic. As a matter of course, the expenditures of the United States are greater today than they were in 1895, and this holds good with the states whether it be in the Democratic south or in the Republican New England states, just as it holds good for municipalities and county government everywhere.

Democratic and Republican newspapers throughout New Mexico seem to agree pretty well on the saloon question. Says the Democratic Roswell Record:

"The dar of the saloon in New Mexico is fast coming to an end. Various things are responsible for this. The blindness of the liquor men in trying to buck the law is one; another is their evident determination to remain in politics for the purpose of using it to their personal advantage in connection with their business and the other reason, and the greatest, is the character of the business itself."

The Democratic Tribune-Citizen of Albuquerque, yesterday printed a striking temperance picture on its first page. This is well, for it will keep the question from being made a political and party issue.

A MODERN SCHOOL HOUSE FOR EVERY DISTRICT.

"Valencia county needs better school houses," says the Belen Tribune in an editorial in which it mourns the lack of modern school buildings in the county. It says: "Good, neat school buildings with pleasant surroundings and furnished with up-to-date school furniture is what every school district in the country should have, and there is no reason that can be advanced by any one why they should not exist and be maintained as such." This holds true not only in Valencia county but in every other county of the Territory. In the past owing to faulty assessment, the $200 exemption law and the actual poverty and sparsity of population in many districts, nothing more than the ordinary adobe school house, in many instances built by the parents themselves, could be afforded, but today, the superintendent of public instruction will furnish any school district with plans for a modern, neat school building that will cost no more to build than did the old badly ventilated, unsanitary adobe school. In addition the territorial school lands are yielding revenue for the country schools, better assessment methods have given many districts a better income and there is in some counties a forest reserve income that can be in part devoted to public school purposes. Thanks to the splendid financial management of the Republican administrations of the Territory, the credit of New Mexico and its school districts is well above par and many, in fact, most school districts can now bond themselves to the amount necessary to put up a good building for the public schools.

The Belen Tribune says that twenty-five years ago, there was at least ten times the acreage in grapes that there is today. The output of the Mission grapes in those days was far in excess of what it is today and vineyards were a source of great revenue, not only in Valencia, but also in Bernalillo and Dona Ana counties. The land is well adapted, the water plentiful and the climate favorable to grape growing and the Tribune wonders why there has been a decline. It urges that the grape industry should be revived and the present acreage increased a hundred-fold and more, and suggests to achieve that end that a Fruit Growers' Association be formed. The idea is a good one, for such an association by finding a market for the product can help to make the industry profitable, for presumably, it was abandoned because it did not pay. If grape growing had returned commensurate revenue for the labor and trouble involved, it certainly would not have been abandoned. But conditions are different today. With better railroad facilities, more extensive markets and systematic marketing, there should be no trouble to make grape growing pay in the Rio Grande valley.

The New Mexican is pleased to learn that an effort is to be made, this time coming from the Commercial Club, to unite the two business organizations of the city into one strong body that will seriously consider the erection of a Commercial Club building and that will work untidely to bring Santa Fe to the front. By united action, it is possible to have a fair next year, to establish an annual Chautauqua and to do other things which will mean increased prosperity and growth. There ought to be ample common ground on which all business men and property owners can unite and there should be enough spirit of fairness to enable them to dwell together in harmony in an organization which eschews politics, factionalism and personal wrangling and devotes itself altogether to the common good. In a city like Santa Fe with many transient office holders, with many strangers at all times within its gates attractive club rooms, and if possible a modern club building, are great necessities and they can be provided if the people of the community get together.

The grand jury at Albuquerque did well in indicting thirteen fathers who failed to send their children to school. In many counties including Santa Fe, the county superintendents are actively enforcing the compulsory education law, but strange to say, right here in Santa Fe, where the legislature sat that passed the law, in Santa Fe which is an educational center with colleges, academies, government, mission, parochial and public schools, any number of children between seven and fourteen years may be seen on the streets during school time. The city evidently needs a truant officer who will not permit children to be robbed of the only heritage that most of them will be ever given by their parents, that is, a common school education.

It is of especial importance that the law requiring the registration of births and deaths is enforced during the census period. The statistics thus provided are of much consequence not only as mere statistics but as forming the basis for the enactment of health rules and regulations and for future estimates of growth in population. New Mexico has an excellent law which provides for a penalty for its non-observance, yet, in many counties, neither births nor deaths are reported to the probate clerk as they should be. It is a matter into which the district attorneys should look carefully and give their aid in bringing New Mexico into line with progressive commonwealths where birth and death statistics are carefully kept.

MOVE STARTED TO HAVE LOCAL Y. M. C. A.

Considerable Talk is Afloat Relative to the Establishing of a Branch at Santa Fe.

A number of local parties have been recently considering the advisability of having a local branch of the Young Men's Christian Association and it all probability the near future will see a definite movement in shape for the purpose of accomplishing that end. In most cities of reasonable size such an institution has been established and has proven of great benefit to the town especially to the young men. It is believed here by those who seek to accomplish the establishment of a local branch, that it will be possible to erect a new building, providing a modern gymnasium, a plunge or swimming pool, reading rooms and other attractive features.

PRIMA DONNAS SINGING AGAINST EACH OTHER.

Great Musical Treat for Theatre Goers in Windy City on Coming Sunday—Chicago, Oct. 9.

Two great prima donnas singing against each other in recital the same afternoon—that is the unique prospect now adding to the gaiety of a war of impresarios in Chicago and dividing the windy city's concert-goers into rival camps. Next Sunday afternoon Mme. Galski will deliver her purest and highest notes before a rapt audience at Orchestra Hall, at the same time that Mme. Sembrich is stirring to enthusiasm another audience at the Auditorium. A surprising feature of the situation is the fact that the tours of both singers are under the managerial direction of London Charlton, who thus, through a series of peculiar circumstances, finds himself furnishing artistic ammunition to hostile managerial batteries.

For years Mme. Galski and Mme. Sembrich have been friendly colleagues at the Metropolitan, and they are likely to continue friends even though they chance to be the chosen weapons of opposition factions. There is every prospect, moreover, that both artists will be the gainer, because of the additional interest that the controversy has engendered.

The Chicago musical war is an effort to wrest from F. Wicht Neumann what has been a virtual monopoly of the local recital management for many years. Early in the summer before sailing for Europe, Mme. Galski chose October 10th for her recital date, electing to place her appearance in the hands of F. J. Wessels, manager of the Chicago Orchestra. Mme. Sembrich selected October 24th and Mr. Neumann as manager. While abroad recently, Mr. Neumann, on the strength of a Charity Concert booked on October 24th, induced Mme. Sembrich to give up that date and appear on the 10th. Thus he would punish Mme. Galski for desertion from his colors and warn Mr. Wessels to keep off the Neumann managerial preserves. Neumann returned to announce his coup with much exuberance, and the war was on in earnest. Both prima donnas have large followings in Chicago and if, as seems likely, both do capacity business, the issue will be drawn and no blood shed. Another chapter in the conflict will occur three weeks later when George Hamilton, tenor, will sing at the Grand opera house, under the theatre management, in opposition to Dr. Wuelner who appears at Orchestra Hall under Mr. Neumann.

THOUGHT OF MOTHER FIRST AND LAST.

Dying Railroad Worker Begs That She and His Sister Be Not Called to See His Agony.

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 8.—With his body terribly mangled and death only a few minutes off, Carlos Wueste, twenty years of age, a car repairer in the yards of the Southern Pacific railroad, begged those around him not to call him mother and keep the news of his death from her until the following day. Though his agony was great all the young man thought of was his mother and sister whose main support he had been for some time.

Young Wueste was working under a car when a yard engine was coupled to the string of which it formed one. He was dragged for over fifty yards and when found his right arm and both legs had been severed from his body.

S.S.S. MAKES A LASTING CURE

Not only its proven ability to cure, but its absolute safety as a remedy, has made S. S. S. the most extensively used of all medicines in the treatment of Contagious Blood Poison. Unlike the strong mineral mixtures, which temporarily remove the outward symptoms and shut the disease up in the system, there to carry on its destructive work on the delicate and vital organs, S. S. S. strikes directly at the root, and by purifying the blood of every trace of the virus, completely and permanently cures the trouble. S. S. S. is Nature's blood purifier, harmless in its action and certain in its good results. It is made from a combination of roots and herbs, each of which has a definite and specific action in purifying the blood. Years spent in selecting and proportioning the different ingredients, but when S. S. S. was perfected it soon demonstrated its superiority over all other blood medicines, and now, after 40 years, it is still the one and only certain cure for Contagious Blood Poison. While driving out the poison from the circulation S. S. S. builds up and strengthens the system by its fine vegetable tonic effects. If you are suffering with Contagious Blood Poison S. S. S. is your most certain reliance, and because of its freedom from mercury, potash or any other mineral, it is absolutely safe for every one. ### WHEN THE CLOCK HANDS TURN BACK

Taken From The Daily New Mexican of October 8th, 1889.

Ada St. John through her attorney, N. B. Laughlin, today filed in the district court an application for a divorce from John P. St. John, Jr., son of Kansas' ex-governor. The grounds given are habitual drunkenness and failure to support.

The new Masonic hall was dedicated last night. Dr. Harroun, past grand master, officiated and organized a specific lodge for the occasion comprising the following members: J. P. McGorty, deputy grand master; G. W. Knaebel, senior grand warden; George Wyllys, junior grand warden; Marcus Eldred, grand treasurer; Henry M. Davis, grand secretary; Sol Spiegleberg, grand senior deacon; H. Lindheim, junior grand deacon; John Gray and S. Spitz, grand stewards; B. Kahn, grand tyler.

J. M. Akers leaves tonight for Arkansas Hot Springs, where he will take the baths to benefit his health.

Section Foreman Gavin and wife, on the Santa Fe Southern, mounted a handcar last night for the purpose of taking a moonlight ride and also take in a wake at Santa Cruz. The passenger train was due to come south and they knew it. A collision occurred at a bend near Santa Clara and Mrs. Gavin was badly jammed. The handcar was wrecked and the pilot of the engine broken.

Mrs. Charles H. of Las Vegas, is visiting the family of Sol Spiegleberg. Arthur Bischoff and wife are home again after a two months' visit in the east.

IMPORTANT RAILROAD DAMAGE SUIT RULING.

Company Has Privilege to Be Sued at Place of Its Home Office—Decision By Judge Maxey.

El Paso, Tex., Oct. 8.—Judge T. J. Maxey in the federal court here today ruled that the employers' liability act of 1908 was a federal question, carrying with it the privileging of the defendant company to be sued at its home office.

The ruling affects all other railroad damage suits brought direct in the federal court, the decision being that the railroads under this act cannot be sued except at their home office, regardless of where the accident occurred or where the plaintiff resides.

It does not affect, however, suits in the federal court which have been removed from the state courts, the defendants in such actions by their removal, acknowledging the jurisdiction of the federal court.

The ruling was made in the case of Count vs. the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company and plaintiff took a non-suit without prejudice.

To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, rheumatism and disorders of the kidneys. If troubled with indigestion, revise your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach Tablets and you will soon be all right again. ## ROCKEFELLER GOBBLES UP GUAYULE RUBBER TRADE.

Hope That Trust Would Be Broken
By New Discovery Appears to Be Unfounded.

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 8.—Although the guayule rubber industry of Mexico is less than four years old it is practically in the hands of a trust of which John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is the head. His own concern, the Continental Rubber Company, controls the situation by holding 2,000,000 acres of the best guayule lands in the state of Zacatecas as well as other large stretches near by. A factory at Grunidora puts the concern in a very advantageous position. All that is now needed to make this trust supreme in the republic would be, it is rumored consolidation with the Madero interests, which control practically the balance of the land on which the guayule plant could be profitable grown.

From present indications it would not seem that rubber will for a long time pass out of the control of the trust. It was hoped that the excellent quality of rubber derived from the guayule plant would enter into serious competition with that of the rubber tree and cause the rubber trust of the United States to relax its grip on the market. Since young Rockefeller is closely allied with the men commonly referred to as the rubber trust the discovery that the guayule plant makes excellent rubber is not likely to be of great benefit to the public.

SECURING STATISTICS ON PRIVATE IRRIGATION PROJECTS.

Colonel Ralph E. Twitchell and Delegate W. H. Andrews Wrote
Census Director.

Albuquerque, N. M., Oct. 8.—A plan to have the census bureau include in its next annual census a complete report of all data connected with the construction of private irrigation enterprises in the United States, was launched here yesterday by Ralph E. Twitchell, first vice president of the National Irrigation Congress. It is said that the census blanks as now formed carry no provision for taking of statistics on the private irrigation enterprises of the country which within the past five years have assumed stupendous importance. This is particularly true in New Mexico which now has more individual irrigation projects pending than any other state in the Union.

The co-operation of Delegate W. H. Andrews has been secured and letters have already been written to the census bureau asking that the irrigation statistics be included. The result will probably be a complete statistical report of all private irrigation works in the United States, under way or proposed, in 1910.

The following indictments have been reported by the territorial grand jury at Raton: Jose Galvan, on two charges of stealing horses from Frederick Whitney of Cimarron, bond of $2,500 in each case; Herculano S. Chaves for striking a woman, he being accused of carrying Mrs. Emma Baca into the hills near Dawson on his shoulders and maltreating her; Jose Inez Gallegos who pleaded guilty to stealing horses from Gavino Berna; Apolinario Hidalgo of Union county on two charges of larceny of horses from Whitney and Polace of Cimarron; Jose S. Cordova of larceny of cattle from the White Livestock Company and Matthew Keenan; Eduardo Martinez, larceny of stock from T. F. McAuliffe; Charles Carlos Morales Wood for assault on Jacobo Tafaya of East Raton; Juan Maestas, two counts for larceny of horses from Polace and Whitney of Cimarron; and Clarence Hamilton for larceny of horses from Folsom.

IMPORTANT DECISION BY SEC. RETARY OF INTERIOR.

Helena, Mont., Oct. 8.—While declaring that it was within his jurisdiction, Secretary of the Interior Ballinger has written the state land board upholding the contention of the forestry service as to its right to sections 16 and 36 in all townships when included within forest reserves despite the fact that the enabling act grants them to the state for school purposes.

The secretary says that in his opinion the government under a prior law, reserves to itself such sections where in a government reserve is involved, but he believed that the state has the right to make lieu sections where its property is taken in such cases.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential. Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local. Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional. The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.

The "Night Cure," as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, cases nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—asa general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

ANOTHER RAILROAD FOR STATE OF TEXAS.

Contract Signed for Line From San Antonio to the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 8.—A contract signed by J. F. Edwards of St. Louis, Mo., and the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce insures the building of a railroad towards the lower Rio Grande valley. Work on the line will commence within 40 days. After the first sixty miles have been completed the builder of the road will get a bonus from the citizens of San Antonio, amounting to $66,000. The new road will have its general offices in this city and will also maintain its own freight station. Passenger traffic will be handled from one of the depots now established.

Earlier in the week the Chamber of Commerce contracted with J. P. Nelson for the building of a road to Fredericksburg. Work on this line has already commenced. The bonus provided for it amounted to $55,000.

NINE SALOONS IN DENVER COMPELLED TO CLOSE UP.

Denver, Colo., Oct. 8.—Because of a ruling handed down Monday by the supreme court, concerning with a former ruling that wet precincts could not exist in wards which had gone "dry," nine saloons and three drug stores have been forced out of the liquor business. Rather than lose their licenses altogether, the saloon men will attempt to have them transferred to other locations in "wet" wards. The drug stores, however, were forced to relinquish their licenses permitting them to sell bottled liquor goods.

COLORADO FOLLOWS NEW MEXICO'S EXAMPLE.

Installs Automatic Gauges to Measure
Flow of Its Streams—Many Irrigation Projects.

Denver, Colo., Oct. 8.—State Engineer Charles W. Comstock has purchased three automatic river gauges, which are to be installed in the Arkansas river to measure the flow of water at Pueblo, Salida, and above La Junta.

The instruments make a written record of the flow of the stream continuously for a week, on the principle of the automatic recording thermometer. The cards are replaced every week, and sent to the office of the state engineer. Here they are to be compiled into tables for reference by engineers and others who are interested in the water supply of Colorado.

The state engineer has already installed one machine on the Arkansas and another on the Platte at the foot of the Sixteenth street, both of which are doing satisfactory work.

By placing these instruments in all the streams of the state, and keeping the records for a period of years, it will be possible to tell accurately the amount of water which is carried off by the streams. Engineers desiring to locate irrigation projects by comparing the gauge records with the water rights taken up will be able to tell how much is left for them to file on. The machine can be installed for about $85, and the only expense thereafter is a salary of $5 a month to the person who changes the records every week.

Five preliminary maps for irrigation systems projected in the southeastern part of Pueblo county, Las Animas and Otero counties, have been filed. The combined systems will cost thousands of dollars and will irrigate 50,000 acres of land.

Floyd B. Martin and Floyd Hildreth of Mercer, Colo., filed two of the plans for what will be known as the Iron Ridge system. This will consist of two reservoirs and seven ditches. It is planned to irrigate 2,000 acres of land and each ditch will cost from $200 to $500 and the reservoirs several thousand dollars each.

The Omer Canal and Reservoir Company of Fowler filed plans for the Omer supply ditch, which is designed to irrigate 40,000 acres of land in Las Animas, Pueblo and Otero counties. The ditch will cost $15,000 and will have a carrying capacity of 655 cubic feet per second.

R. B. and F. E. Pittenger of Mercer filed a plan of the Canon Springs reservoir which will cost $8,000. The amount of land to be irrigated is not stated.

J. C. Hedgecock and Edward Lee of Fowler filed plans for the Blue Ridge valley reservoirs Nos. 1 and 2 and five ditches. In the statement it is said that the surveys have not been completed, but that each reservoir will have a capacity of 2,000 acre feet, which would mean 3,000 to 4,000 acres to be placed under cultivation.

SEALED PROPOSALS.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Board of County Commissioners of Santa Fe County, at the office of the Probate Clerk up to noon the ninth day of October, 1909, for the heating, plumbing and electric wiring of the court house now under construction. Plans and specifications can be seen at the office of the probate clerk, or I. H. & W. M. Rapp & Co., architects, also at the building. Separate proposals will be received on each. Address all bids to George W. Armijo, probate clerk.

NINTA VALJUGUI

By Conrad L. Schopp

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"I think she is the most beautiful woman that I have ever seen," I said to Stephen Northfield, in a burst of enthusiasm, amid the volume of hand-clapping that followed the last note of Ninta Valjugui's solo.

"Umph," grunted Norneid, as he shrugged his shoulders. He was the only person that I could see, in the whole of that packed house, that was not clapping.

"I have never heard her equal," I continued.

"Umph, do you think so? Maybe you have not heard or seen many?" he suggested.

"Nonsense, man! Has she not had New York at her feet, completely captivated, for the past two seasons?" I argued. For I was an ardent admirer of the bewitching Mexican soubrette who had astonished the musical world with her unprecedented rise to fame. Newspapers exploited her, hardly a week passing without her picture appearing in some edition; artists vied with one another in the attempt to induce her to pose for them; musicians raved over her. In three years from some insignificant Mexican bar-room stage she had risen to be the sensation of Broadway. A star that blinded the eyes of those who saw, a voice that drove into ecstasies those who heard; such was Ninta Valjugui. I felt disappointed with Stephen for his lack of enthusiasm. I thought that it showed an uneducated taste.

The applause increased like near-thunder as she left the wings and acknowledged it with many bows and smiles; smiles that displayed her even teeth of ivory whiteness.

We left the theater, which was pouring its charge of humanity out upon two streets under the glare of a score of arc lights, and sought a near-by cafe.

For some time we sat in silence sipping our "Yvette." The charm of Valjugui was still upon me. I sat thus, in delightful contemplation, with half-closed eyes, rehearsing inwardly what I had heard and seen. I awoke from this dreamy state to hear Norneid saying:

"I can go to Mexico and buy you her equal for $20." This sacrilegious rudeness aroused me to make retort, which I did, with more or less warmth.

"Why don't you do it; fame and fortune await you if you can?"

"Umph, unsophisticated man!" he said, disdainfully, shrugging his shoulders (I hated that action). "I lived in Mexico for three years, you know, and had ample time to study them. Does the reason suit you?" he asked.

"No, it does not," I answered, curtly. "Be more explicit."

"Well," he continued, "I remember the case of one of those little Mexican bar-room singers; it will serve as a good example and make clear my meaning." Selecting a cigarette, he lit it, and commenced the narrative.

"I had taken up my residence in a delightful country place just outside of the City of Mexico.

"I had a small library of the authors that I liked, a good piano and a gem of a valet, a queer mixture of Japanese and Mexican, but a handsome, attractive and intelligent man. Thus, you see, I was surrounded by the things that I appreciate and care for. A few friends was all that was necessary to complete my happy circle, and these I soon formed.

"Among those that I formed was a young American, similarly situated to myself. I had become very much attached to him, and it is of him and his experience with one of those singers that I am about to tell you.

"During the day we would lie in the shade of the trees and read our favorite authors; he, Victor Hugo; I, Maupassant. As the day wore on we would retreat, from this innocent diversion, before the heat, and nap until the cooler afternoon. Upon awakening we would bathe, and then for an hour we would play; he, upon the flute; I, upon the piano; we were both fair musicians in an amateur way. As the sun sank and night came on, he would take his leave, after arranging for the night's amusement.

"Sometimes it was a visit to one of our aristocratic neighbors. Upon such occasions we were always called upon to provide the entertainment with our music. And our efforts were rewarded with iced drinks and perfumed cigarettes served by the black-eyed senoritas.

"Sometimes it was a party at the opera, after which we would visit one of the gorgeous, gilded and enameled cafes, and sit down to a luncheon of indescribable, spicy dishes, and eat to the strains of a native band. Mexico is indeed the land of music, women and flowers. All is beautiful and delightful in that Paradise.

"Then, sometimes our recreations would be less harmless. We would partially disguise and enter the lower quarters of the city. Entering some obscure retreat, we would sit at one of the tables and watch the masses amuse themselves, while sipping our drinks and listening to the song of some much beroused maiden singing to the twanging of a few mandolins and guitars played by musicians flamboyantly dressed in reds, greens and yellows. The songs would be loudly applauded by the patrons. Now and then some half-drunken youth would climb upon the raised platform, upon which the singer stood, and attempt to kiss her, only to be rewarded with a box on the ears for his staggering endeavors. This always pleased the crowd, who would jeer the escaping malefactor and shout 'bravos' to the girl.

"Upon one of the occasions of such an exploit we were seated at a table listening to the songs of the singer—she was more beautiful than any we had yet seen—when a drunken rascal leaped upon the stage in the midst of a song, and, before the girl escaped him, he seized her in his powerful arms and kissed her. As was customary, the crowd was pleased by this added attraction, and lent voice to its approval. But the girl must have thought otherwise, for she became as rigid as ice, her lips trembled, and her eyes burned like living coals. 'Turn me loose, senor,' she said, tremulously. He kissed her again and held her at arm's length. Again she commanded him to release her, but he only laughed at her anger. A silence of expectancy had fallen upon the crowd, for this gave promise of something out of the ordinary. The musicians had stopped playing and watched the pair as intently as the rest of the audience. Her eyes were darting gleams of deadliest hatred at him, which he was too drunk to appreciate. Suddenly she spat full in his face. Hardly had she done so, when he crushed her to him and sank his dirty yellow teeth into her bare shoulder. As he tossed back his head and laughed at her agony, a stream of blood flowed down her chest and dyed the covering of her bosom a dark color.

"The crowd gasped; not so my friend—they were Mexicans, he was American. In a few bounds he was at the foot of the stage. He leaped upon it and dealt the brute a blow on the side of the head that sent him spinning half way across the stage. The girl, almost in a faint, sank to the floor. With a smothered curse, the Mexican recovered himself, and, drawing a gleaming machete, lunged at the intruder, who met him with his bare hands.

"In a trice they were locked in a deadly embrace. With opened mouths the crowd surged forward and looked on. The girl, her eyes filled with terror, sat where she had fallen and watched them, fascinated by the death struggle. It was the hand of the Mexican which held the knife, which was bad; but it was the hand of the American which held the wrist of that hand, which was good. For a few moments—they seemed ages—the point of the murderer's weapon was within an inch of the American's throat. If his already perspiring hand should slip and give but a fraction, it would mean the end. Gradually, though, the hand which held the knife was turned. Now it was turned completely around, and its point was nearing the other's throat. Fear of the most frightful sort, instead of hatred, was now stamped upon the face of the Mexican. The tables were turned; he was no longer the aggressor. Now he was fighting to save his own life, not to take another's. He made a superhuman effort to break the iron grip that held him. The knife blade receded somewhat, but it was a dying effort. His strength had fled with that last attempt. His resistance gave way. With a scream, that was cut short, he sank to the floor. The blade had passed through his throat. For a moment no one stirred; then pandemonium broke loose. In the confusion that followed we escaped from the crowd with the girl, who hurriedly guided us through a dark gangway which opened out upon a back street.

"One afternoon, about three weeks after our misadventure, a woman presented herself at Stephen's home (I forgot to mention that he bore that name, also). It was the singer girl of the bar-room. How she discovered where he lived remained an unsolved mystery. She came to thank him. And he, taking a kindly interest in her, drew from her her life's story. She felt that she had talent and had aspirations to become a singer of note. The wretched life that she was forced to live nauseated her. She had nothing in common, except misery, with those among whom she was forced to live; they nothing in common with her. If she but had the chance, she knew that she would succeed, but the stern necessity of winning daily bread forced her to waste her talents instead of cultivating them.

"Her tale moved him deeply and awakened his sympathy, so it was arranged that she had better quarters in a different section of the city. She no longer had to sing for a living; he removed that necessity. She was placed in the hands of the best instructors in the city. Her advancement was immediate and rapid. In less than a year she was metamorphosed into a cultured, refined, intelligent woman. On certain afternoons she would visit him and receive instruction in English. Their relations of benefactor and protégé and teacher and pupil soon changed to firm friendship. She delighted and bewitched him with her new born elegance and innate coquetry. When she was by him his happiness was complete, his desires satisfied. When she was away he was dissatisfied and lonesome, and would count the days until she would visit him again.

"Finally one day they were married quietly. For a year he lived as in a dream, basking in the warmth of her passionate love.

"About this time it became necessary that he should take a trip—he had taken them before—into the interior to look after some mining interests. The trip usually took seven or eight days, and was exceedingly rough and fatiguing. For this reason it was decided that he leave his wife at home, much as he was loath to leave her. So, after an affectionate leave taking, he departed, leaving his valet to care for the house, as he was accustomed to do in such cases.

"When a third of the distance to the mines had been covered, it was found that the bridge over a small river had been washed away, making it impossible to move forward for at least two weeks. Rather than wait the time there, he retraced his journey to spend the time waiting at home.

"Arriving there, late the third night after leaving, he entered the front door quietly. He made as little noise as possible, wishing to bathe and refresh himself before apprising his wife of his early return. He went to the back part of the house, where the valet's room was situated, in order to have him prepare his bath. He was somewhat surprised to find the room empty, but thinking that the man had made use of the opportunity and had taken a night off, he decided to tend to his own wants. He entered his den and struck a light—so far he had not done so except in the valet's room. He was dumfounded at what he saw. The room was dismantled, stripped bare of everything except the furniture and heavier, larger curios. His heart stopped beating, a cold sweat broke out and stood in great beads upon his forehead. The thought rushed madly through his mind, had the friends of the man he had murdered discovered him and wreaked vengeance upon him in his absence? His wife! He sickened and grew faint at the thought of what fate had overtaken her! He shook himself, trying to shake off the fear that clutched at his heart.

"No, no, it cannot be that," he said to himself. "It is only a rearranging of the furniture which I have come upon."

"Reassured slightly by this meager hope, he stepped into the next room. His reassurance fled from him as the waters of Erie flow over Niagara. It was stripped even bare than the first. In a frenzy of fear he hurried up the stairs. As he reached the landing, he stopped as if transfixed.

"A silvery peal of laughter issued over the transom of his wife's bedroom, followed by the deeper laugh of a man. It was his wife and his valet.

"With a cry, he sprang across the hall and burst open the door. He reeled for a moment at the sight that he beheld. His beautiful, innocent wife was sitting on the lap of his trusted valet, clinking glasses with him. She shrieked and fled from the room; the man, drawing a revolver, fired point blank at the awful countenance figure within the doorway. The bullet stopped the onward rush for a moment, but only for a moment; it had not struck a vital part. With the inarticulate roar of a wounded animal, which came from the depths of his outraged being, he sprang upon his valet. Together they struggled and swayed about the room, knocking down the chairs and overturning the table. Suddenly Stephen wrenched the revolver from the hand of the other man and pulled the trigger. The shot entered the valet's chest, and he sank to his knees on the floor, with outstretched hands imploring mercy. The master neither heard nor saw; he was no longer a man, but a brute, seeking the life of another.

"Pulling the trigger again and again,—until the hammer clicked against the already used shells, he buried the hot lead in the body upon the floor. Reeling, as if drunk, in the thick, stifling smoke, he cast the useless weapon from his hand. Everything turned black before his eyes, the reaction had set in, and he collapsed on the floor, beside the corpse of his own making.

"They found them thus the next morning. One dead, the other delirious and extremely weak from the loss of blood from a wound in the forearm, where the bullet had splintered the bone and plowed its way for six inches. The woman had disappeared, with everything of value, as completely as if the earth had opened up and received her into its caverns.

"In three months the man was well after a month of delicious moanings, pleadings and swearings. He was exonerated by the jury. In a month, after winding up his business affairs, he returned to the United States, bearing on his left forearm a large pink scar. He was a young man, but his hair was now sprinkled with gray.

"Such was the case of one of those little Mexican singers. There are a hundred similar tragedies evolving about those same little Mexican singers to-day."

"How horrible," I cried, shudderingly, to Norneid at the completion of the ghastly tale. "But what has that to do with the queenly Ninta Valjugui?"

"What has that to do with Ninta Valjugui?" he repeated, sadly. A melancholy look came over his face, and he continued, in a voice full of pathos: "Nothing—only the career of the little Mexican singer is part of the career of Ninta Valjugui. How many more poor souls have courted death at her hands she only knows. Heaven help those that fall beneath the charm of that beautiful vampire."

"What," I cried, astounded. I could not believe my ears. "That murderer, you have told me of is Ninta Valjugui? O, now I realize your feelings towards her; your abhorrence of her! Your friend, poor fellow, he has my sympathy. Poor fellow, poor, miserable man! Tell me, who was your friend, her husband?"

"For answer he drew back the sleeve of his left arm. Beneath the rays of the overhanging lamp a large scar showed hideously pink. I now noticed for the first time that Stephen Norneid's hair was tinged with gray.

The light should be replaced.

As a consequence, Miss Blanche Strasser of the latter place now has a position under Uncle Sam at the school.

BATTLE IS ON AGAINST BLACK LEG.

In the wound and so into the blood, and the animal is infected. Or it gets it through licking the ground for salt or alkali, the animal having a cut or sore on either the tongue or inside the mouth. This leads many cattle men, posted on the disease, to feed salt only in boxes or troughs.

The Oklahoma experimental station has done some very excellent work in black leg investigation and their bulletin on the subject is extremely interesting.

Two calves were placed side by side and fed vaccine matter without ill effects. Then a slight cut was made in one's tongue and both fed vaccine again. The one died and the other did not. Then earth mixed with the vaccine matter was rubbed all over their hides without effect, but when a small cut was made in the animals' hides and the rubbing repeated, both died.

If our experimental station would do some work along these lines they would find a fine field. I should like to see them bury three animals that died with the disease and after a year dig down and take some of soil and rub it in a wound on a yearling and note the results and keep this up for several years to determine just how long the bacilli will live, and lose none of his death-dealing powers.

This experiment has been tried with anthrax, a disease very closely akin to black leg and the bacilli were found to be alive and deadly ten years after the animal was buried.

Popular Theories.

One man, when black leg breaks out in his herd, gets after them with a whip and a horse and runs them for two hours.

Another immediately moves them to a new pasture.

A third rowles them in the shoulder with a rag soaked in garlic.

In each case, when no more die, they claim their system a success.

All authorities are perfectly agreed that an animal infected with black leg bacilli, except where purposely inoculated as a preventive, never or seldom recovers.

The disease is extremely prevalent in France and Switzerland, and it was three French veterinarians who, in 1883, discovered that by inoculation, animals could be made immune and later on Kitt a German scientist perfected their plan.

How to Prevent Black Leg.

There is but one way and that is very simple and easy. Vaccinate them against it the same as you vaccinate yourself against smallpox.

This is done by crowding the animals into a small chute, ten or a dozen at a time and by means of a small hypodermic syringe injecting into each one a dose sufficient to give it a mild case of black leg.

This is easily and quickly done, the writer having vaccinated 400 yearlings in a day with three men's aid. They can, of course, be thrown and doctored, but the chute is so much easier and quicker that it should always be used.

Having filled your chute as closely as you can crowd them, get right astride of the chute over the animals and lean down and take up the loose skin just back of the shoulder or in front on the shoulder blade with your left hand. Force the small needle into and through the skin, insert the needle into the syringe and force down the piston of the syringe to the stop, which allows one dose to enter the wound.

Work backwards over them until all are doctored, hob their tails for a tally mark and get another bunch in and repeat the process. Have a man within reach with the bottle of fluid matter so you can quickly refill the syringe which holds five doses.

How to Get Vaccine Matter.

You can buy either of the patent remedies, named above, but your Uncle Sam will furnish any one who applies for it all you need, free gratis.

All you have to do is to sit down and write a letter to the Hon. Secretary of Agriculture at Washington and ask to be furnished with so many doses of black leg vaccine. (Order about 20 per cent more doses than you want, too, for you are bound to spill some of it.) Send this letter to Delegate W. H. Andrews and request him to forward it to Washington with his approval. He will cheerfully do so and, in two weeks you will get a little tin box from Washington containing a lot of neat little envelopes, plainly stamped, and a set of printed instructions telling you just how to use it. Meantime you should have got your druggist to order you a hypodermic syringe for black leg use; order half a dozen extra needles, too, while you are at it, for they have a happy faculty of dropping out of your clumsy fingers into the corral dust and are lost forever.

This outfit won't cost you over $5, and should not cost but $3.50, and any man with intelligence enough to read English and brand a calf can make the medicine and use the syringe.

When to Vaccinate.

The time to vaccinate is when your calves are over eight months of age. However, most of us wait till we begin to find them dead on the ranges and then we "run for the doctor."

If you will do this (and we all do), better have your outfit all ready to use at any rate, for the vaccine matter will keep a long time and not lose its strength—a year at any rate—and then when you do want it, you have it right at hand ready to use and stop any more from dying.

However, if it is a regular thing on your range you will make big money doing it regularly, at least once a year; but you won't—none of us do.

The purpose of this bulletin is not to quarrel with the learned druggist, who so kindly gave his new remedy to the cattle men, but to prevent the cattle owners in the territory from being misled by his statements.

His remedy is an excellent thing to feed cattle in the spring any how. The salt they all need, the sulphur is excellent for their system, the copras and stalt-petre will clean out the worms that affect cattle and horses at that time of the year and I believe the presence of the sulphur tends to make the carticks drop off, which in itself, is a most excellent thing. But cure, or even prevent black leg? Never! according to the best authorities in the world.

And any way, as I've said, is nothing new after all, having been used yearly on ranges and ranches for six years past to my own knowledge, here in New Mexico.

SEND OUT TIMELY WARNING OF FROST.

The local weather bureau is sending out warnings of a killing frost which is expected to arrive by morning. A big drop in temperature is predicted and in all likelihood the frost will be a very severe one doing much damage. Everybody who has plants or trees which they wish to protect are cautioned to take measures at once to guard against the frost.
