THE NATURAL RESOURCES JOURNAL
The University of New Mexico School of Law
Albert E. Utton, Editor-in-Chief

The NATURAL RESOURCES JOURNAL published two symposia and two varied content issues during 1982-83, with a total of 1,208 printed pages. The July 1982 issue was a symposium on The Taxation of Natural Resources, with Albert M. Church of the UNM Department of Economics as coordinating editor.

October 1982's issue was a bilingual publication, with each article written in either English or Spanish and an abstract following in the opposite language. Many Mexican scholars and government officials contributed to that issue which was entitled "Anticipating Transboundary Resource Needs and Issues in the U.S.-Mexico Border Region to the Year 2000."

The January and April 1983 issues included articles on, amongst other topics, climatic change and fisheries management, economic benefits of preserving visibility in the national parklands, the environmental aftermath of the war in Viet Nam, practicably irrigable acreage, and oil and gas royalty recovery policy on federal and Indian lands. UNM faculty published during the year were, from the Department of Economics, Albert M. Church, H. Stuart Burness, and Ronald G. Cummings; and from the School of Law, Charles DuMars, Fred Ragsdale, Jr., and Albert E. Utton.

[Student] Lead Articles Editors were Thomas C. Bird and Susan

Tixier for the July 1982 issue, and Kim Anne Griffith and Susan R. Weckesser for October 1982 and January and April 1983. Processing Editors for July 1982 were Sandra M. Kemrer and Terrence R. Kamm; for October 1982 and January and April 1983, Joanne E. Angel and Anne B. Thomas. Note & Comment Editors were Jane C. Cohen and Michele Guttman, July 1982, and Karen Ann Griffith and Gary K. King, October 1982 and January and April 1983.
