UNM News Minute #398 – June 25, 2007

1. DAVID HENKEL, director of the planning program in the UNM School of Architecture and Planning, recently completed a three-week studio in the communities of Columbus, N.M. and Palomas, Chihuahua, Mexico. Henkel and his six graduate students from UNM Community and Regional Planning spent time in the field working to understand the strengths and weaknesses of both communities as well as the complex interaction of their economies.
