Uruguayan President Julio Maria Sanguinetti and Algerian counterpart Chadli Benjedid issued a joint communique Oct. 13 expressing their concern over the magnitude of the foreign debt problem. The document highlights the increasingly negative effects of the current international economic situation on underdeveloped countries. The two presidents also expressed dismay over the unstable world financial situation, and agreed to propose an international meeting on the subject. The statement was drafted by a joint commission which also elaborated cooperation agreements in the areas of trade, technology and culture. Shortly after the communique was issued, the Algerian delegation left for Brazil, the last leg of their Latin American tour. Prior to arriving in Uruguay, Benjadid and company visited Argentina.
