REPUBLICANS IN CATRON CO. FAR FROM BEING DEAD

In view of the Democratic land slide in New Mexico and several other states, Catron County has reason to feel proud of its showing.

Hinkle, former cowpuncher, will be our next governor. He says that he will cut expenses and stop waste. We hope that that is not an issue just to get in on and that Hinkle accomplishes just what he claims he will do in that connection.

The county ticket came thru with several candidates in some of the most important offices. Miss Deatron Campbell was re-elected to the office of school superintendent by a safe majority.

A. T. Chavez, county clerk, has a majority of about 50 votes. S. J. Kidder was elected by a good majority over his opponent for the office of county commissioner from the third district.

Billy Bunton came thru with one of the largest majorities given any candidate on the county ticket.

T. C. Turk, Democratic candidate for the state senate, carried Catron County by a large majority, but lost to his opponent, C. T. Brown, in Socorro County. Brown is elected by a safe majority.

Abb Alexander, Democratic candidate for sheriff, defeated E. J. Baca by a large majority.

Emil Kiehne was elected county commissioner from the second district by a large majority over his Democratic opponent Trujillo.

J. C. Scott won over Blachford, Republican candidate for assessor.

The precinct of Bursum paid its namesake a high compliment by voting one of the largest Republican majorities in the entire county.

Catron County has reason for feeling encouraged in this election and the voters show by their action that they are not easily stampeded.

It is now all over so let us, every one, get behind the successful candidates and aid them in filling their office in the best possible manner.

GLENWOOD

The weather is quite cold here at present and most of our farmers have their apples in the cellar; hay in the barn or stack and are preparing for a big hunt. Some are reported having killed bear already.

Mrs. Alice Gamble is recovering from an injury received from a fall some weeks ago.

The infant of Mr. and Mrs. Cleve Hickson is recovering from pneumonia.

Leo, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross has been quite ill this week.

Daddy Wyatt met with a serious accident while driving a big car. They were rounding a curve, the car upset and Mr. Mitchell, who was an occupant, had his nose nearly severed.

Mrs. Ed. Hudson was badly burned this week by hot grease splashing on her ankle.

The election is over; let's all settle down to business once more.

Rev. Dr. Marquis delivered good sermons last Saturday night, Sunday morning and evening, to attentive audiences. He is always welcome.

C. E. Tipton has had a road gang working roads lately, and they need it. We also need good mail route and county seat roads. Think it over.

The Pleasanton school house has been doing some needed repairs recently. A social dance was given recently by the young folks.

A dance at Alma was a very pleasing feature, which was shared by young people from Glenwood.

Quite a few people from the county seat were visitors in this section recently, and

FREE 19 YEARS, MISSOURI FARMER GOES TO JAIL

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 9.—Jesse Sanderson, Caruthersville, Mo. farmer, is on his way back to the Louisiana state penitentiary at Baton Rouge to complete the serving of a 19 year sentence after enjoying his escape from prison in 1903.

Sanderson was turned over to the authorities by his daughter, who, officers say, was angered when her father drove away a young man who was paying attention to her.

Sanderson was convicted in 1901, but two years later, escaped, went to Caruthersville, married, and has raised a family.

The safe of the Reserve State Bank has been taken from the debris and opened. The contents are found to be intact. Some of the books were badly scorched and the note box, while it held together was in somewhat of a serious condition, externally, from the fire.

The inner vault containing currency and silver was opened Friday morning and the money found to be without injury.

Temporary quarters for the bank and post office have been established across the street from the court house.

among them we noticed, Mr. Grant Milligan, Mr. and Mrs. Abb Alexander, Mr. A. Kiehne, W. J. Jones, Bob Blachford and others.

Hallowe'en was observed in grand style at Glenwood and there were lots of "spooks," and a "weinie" roast was enjoyed by all.

SPRINGVILLE, ARIZONA

The Apache Tavern changed hands this week, W. V. Belding, of Holbrook, secured a lease and will take charge on Wednesday the 8th. The Tavern is one of the best hotels in this part of the country and is a very popular place for the travelers. Mr. Belding comes highly recommended as a hotel man. He has leases on the Commercial at Holbrook and the Hotel Apache at Cooley. Ira Hall, of Gallup, who was formerly employed by Mr. Belding in Gallup will manage the Apache Tavern for Mr. Belding. Mr. and Mrs. Hall came in Thursday and are now at home at the Apache Tavern. Mr. J. E. Thele, who has conducted the place the past two years will leave Wednesday for Long Beach, California to join his family who has been there the past three months.

Fire destroyed the beautiful two story home of Mrs. Neelice Thompson the first of the week. Mrs. Thompson had been away all night with a sick friend and her two nephews made a fire in the range in the morning and went back to bed. Neighbors soon saw the building on fire and awakened the boys who got out with only scant clothing. Everything was a total loss as she carried no insurance.

E. C. Maxwell and daughters returned from Luna Saturday where they furnished music for a dance Friday evening. A large number were present and had a very enjoyable time.

Miss Lucie Becker gave a party to her many friends last Friday evening. A large number were present and had a very enjoyable time.

Rev. J. M. Humphrey of the Presbyterian church will give a series of lectures at three o'clock every Sunday afternoon this month, everybody welcome.

November 5th, "Creation to the Flood,"
November 12th, "From the Flood to the call of Abraham,"
November 19, "The Call of Abraham to Captivity,"
November 26, "From Captivity to the Second Coming," December 3rd, "Second Coming to the Millennium,"
December 10th, "From Millennium to the White Throne Judgment."

Miss Mary Flemming died at the home of her niece, Mrs. H. H. Boyer, on Beaver Creek, Friday morning, November 2nd after a lingering illness due to old age. She was about 65 years old and had made her home with Mrs. Boyer the past two years.

The Round Valley High School football team went to Holbrook, Saturday to play with the Holbrook High, and were defeated by a score of 60 to 0.

Neal Phelps left Sunday for Los Angeles to re-enter school there. Ray Brinkley went to Kingman to spend the winter. They were taken to Holbrook by Thos. Phelps.

Mrs. G. C. West, who has taught school at Greer the past month, was compelled to resign owing to ill health, and left Friday for her home in Denver, Colorado.

Lyman Raef, a former mechanic in the Becker Garage, returned this week from Ft. Worth, Tex., to visit friends.

A big Republican Rally and dance was held in Eagar Friday night, and Saturday evening in Springville. All the candidates were present and a rousing big time was had.

STUDEBAKER AND FORD COME TOGETHER ON A BAD MOUNTAIN ROAD

In the mountains near the R. O. ranch in the vicinity of Alma a Studebaker car and a Ford met head on and two people were severely injured. Bill Evans had his nose severed almost from his face, the bridge being broken. Bill Tate suffered from a badly battered cheek bone, the wound endangering the sight of the left eye. Both cars were badly injured, the Ford being completely demolished.

Bill Tate told the editor of the Advocate that he believed the Republicans to be responsible for the accident, but that he recovered sufficiently to vote the Democratic ticket last Tuesday

HAY BARN AT SOCORRO BURNS. FOUR BURNED TO DEATH. LOSS $30,000

Fire Destroyed Hay Barn and Storage House Belonging to Chambon Estate, Friday.

The place had been used over a period of years for storage purposes and contained about 700 tons of hay. There were a number of wagons, several automobiles and a truck in the building all of which was totally destroyed entailing a loss of about $32,000, which was partly covered by insurance.

Four people are known to have perished in the flames; three of the bodies have been recovered, they are: Young Henry Chambon, Julius Campredon, Andrus Crespin and Cornelius Crespin, son of Andrus. The son of Henry Dreyfus is missing and is thought to be in the ruins. Paul Frassiniet and three tourists were injured.

It is reported that Mrs. Crespin, mother and wife of Cornelius and Andrus Crespin died of heart failure on receiving the news of the disaster.

The fire started about 12:30 p. m. from the yard used by the fire had been burning for some time on the inside and when the place was opened and permitted the air to get in it caused an explosion and spread the fire rapidly.

MOGOLLON

Mrs. Harry Booth, who has been visiting friends and relatives in the east for three months, has recently returned.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Lipsey are in Mogollon for the winter. They have been spending the summer on their homestead on the Mesa.

Mr. C. A. Botsford returned Tuesday from a fishing and hunting trip of several weeks on Willow Creek.

The first snow of the season fell on Saturday, October 28.

Work on the road over the mountain has been completed. This stretch of the road is now one of the best between Mogollon and Silver City.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Tanner have recently come to Mogollon to make their home here. Mr. Tanner is employed by the Mogollon Mines Company.

Miss Eleanor Holland, of El Paso, is visiting her brother, J. P. Holland.

OBREGON SUSPENDS BUSINESS RELATIONS

Mexico City, Mexico, Nov. 9.—Commercial relations between the Mexican government and all persons or groups of persons residing in New York state were under suspension until further notice as a result of instructions sent to the department of the interior last night by President Obregon.

The president also had the various Mexican state governments instructed to refrain from commercial intercourse with New York firms.

Formal orders for re-opening the New York consulate had not been dispatched to Mexico City late last night. It was explained that the delay was due merely to the absence of instructions from the embassy at Washington.

FIRE DESTROYS HALL AT FORT BAYARD, N. M.

Fort Bayard, N. M., Oct. 31.—Fire practically destroyed the women's building at the government hospital here early today.

Scores of nurses, maids and other women employees of the institution escaped in their night clothes, losing practically all their effects in the building.

A dozen maids jumped from windows to the ground, 18 to 20 feet, to escape the flames. None were hurt.

WAR GAS MAY BE MADE MUCH MORE DEADLY

Paris, France, Nov. 9.—Gen. Verraux draws attention to future horrors of chemical warfare as described by Maj. Lefebure's book on the subject in an article in Le Progress Civique, saying:

"Since the atrocities of the last war threaten to be increased, on account of the progress of science, is it not advisable to inform people on the subject, so that they may abandon the idea of settling conflicts in this way, unless they want to completely annihilate the human race?"

"At the end of 1918, 50 percent of the shells fired were filled with gas and poisonous compositions, and this proportion was about to be increased. Next time the belligerents on both sides will use nothing else.

"The danger is particularly great because all chemical productions, having their use in peace time (industrial or pharmaceutical use), no peace conference, no protocol of the league of nations, not even a treaty can prevent them from being manufactured.

"And as the most simple modification easily changes them into weapons of war, it would be foolish to expect an unscrupulous enemy not to make use of them.

"Unfortunately experience has taught us that humane conventions are only of use in peace time. The law of belligerents has always been that the end justifies the means. We may be able to suppress war, but it is impossible to make it more humane or less cruel.

"Let us consider then some of the parts that chemistry could play on the battlefield, as long as we cannot prevent that there being such things as battlefields.

"We cannot prevent Germany from making indigo, yet the ingredients necessary for its manufacture are the same which are used for making the famous mustard gas. In future, instead of clouds of poison gas, more or less harmful, we must expect jets of imperceptible powder poured on the ground and forming an invisible danger.

"Germany began gas warfare, because of the supremacy of her chemical industry. We must beware, then, of the measures that she employed, and that she, or others, might start again."

At the close of the book, certain attention is drawn to scientific possibilities of toxic attack and defence.

"Among others, for instance that of introducing a composition into the shells which would do away with the gas smell and which would make it necessary for the soldiers to continually wear masks, otherwise they would be asphyxiated without warning.

"And masks are very uncomfortable and cause a loss of about 25 percent of physical vigor.

"Suggestions have been made for mixing chloroform with the poison gas in order to make the soldiers who inhale it, motionless. Incendiary properties of certain bodies will undoubtedly also be developed.

"It is possible today by chemical means, to transform a whole territory into a natural obstacle, having the same value as strongly defended ground. The Germans, in March, 1918, created defensive flanks to their attacks, in this way.

"It is even thought that in time, gas will do away with the trenches and that a poisonous zone may be substituted for barbed wire.

"Air plants will cover the towns in enemy territory with poisonous vapor, so that there will be no rear and no civilians.

"Even tanks would be without effect, as they will be surrounded with noxious fumes.

"If we add to this, electric

TEXAS LOBO WOLVES KILLED BY TRAPPERS

The last pack of lobo wolves in Texas has been destroyed.

Within 30 days a trapper of the United States predatory animal control department in Texas captured five loboes which evaded trappers in the Van Horn mountains for years.

L. B. Taylor, a ranchman of the district, estimated the damage done to stock at $1,000 a year for each wolf. The actual cost of trapping the wolves was less than $150.

Besides these wolves, the trapper caught 15 coyotes which have been killing young calves on the range.

During the past six years two other packs of loboes have been destroyed in Texas, according to C. R. Landon, director of predatory animal control. One pack of 15 ranged 15 miles south of Rankin on the Pecos river and the second pack of 14 covered a territory 35 miles south of Rankin.

A mountain lion which had killed a great amount of stock on the Baker and White ranches near Rankin was shot. Three others were killed near where the Pecos empties into the Rio Grande. Stockmen estimated the loss from these lions at $2,000.

"Next in importance to the destruction of the larger predatory animals comes the coyote," said Mr. Landon. "During six years more than 16,000 coyotes have been killed to protect herds and flocks in Texas. These animals are often cunning and defy the most experienced trappers.

"One coyote had eluded hunters and trappers for two years, killing many sheep. When a predatory animal control man finally succeeded in trapping him the coyote gnawed his foot off. Dogs chased him over a six foot 'wolf proof' fence and caught him after a chase of several miles.

"At present the work is handicapped for lack of funds men being available to take care of only one third the demands of the stockmen of the state."

BOOTLEGGERS SCHEME AVOIDS BOOZE WASTE

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 9.—Much good liquor has been lost on its way from British Columbia to Puget Sound coves and creeks, because revenue cutters gave chase and the cargo was thrown overboard. Rum smugglers have solved this problem, a reporter learns.

Rock salt has this much of the rock about it—that it is heavy. The rum smugglers now put their liquor into sacks with enough cork to make the whole float. And so that it will sink when cast overboard, they add a big chunk of rock salt. In an hour, the sack reappears on the surface, and when he has a chance, the smuggler comes back and picks it up.

shocks, radio-active bombs, deadly bacteria, we must indeed shudder at the idea of another war.

"The conflict would no more be limited to two powers than it was last time. More nations would join in it than ever, and their methods of destruction would be such as to engender a veritable annihilation of the human race.

"There would be neither front nor rear, it would be impossible to breathe the air, the electrified earth would tremble in its depths, whole cities would disappear instantaneously, and neither old people nor children would be sheltered from these deadly fumes.

"We must not despair, then, that the evil and its excess will one day bring about salutary reaction and that the bare idea of future horrors will finally make war impossible."

SCARVES IN FAVOR

Charming Accessory Is Easy to Make at Home.

Just Matter of Choosing Right Materials and Putting Together in the Right Way.

Do you possess enough scarves? They are in particular favor just now, and if you haven't all you want, by all means go to work and make some more. For making them isn't a difficult thing to do. And it isn't an expensive thing to do, either. It is just a matter of choosing the right materials and putting them together in the right way.

Of course, the simplest sort of scarf for evening is just the strip of tulle. This need not be finished in any way. It comes in different widths. The one a yard and a half wide is a good one to choose. Get three-quarters of a yard for a scarf. Three-quarters is the width, of course, and the yard and a half is the length.

You can put a big tassel on each end of a length of tulle to make a little more elaborate scarf. Silver and gilt tassels come at all sorts of prices—three or four dollars for the big ones, 50 cents for the smaller ones, and as little as 25 cents for the very little ones.

If you want something more elaborate still you can buy a strip of velvet-brocaded chiffon and hem all its edges, or edge them, shawl-wise, with fringe. Then there are those tied-and-dyed scarves. To make them get a length of crepe de chine or other thin silk fabric, and knot the ends or else tie them with a strip of white rag. Then immerse the scarf in some dye—orange or scarlet, gray or blue. Use a cream or white or ecru fabric for the foundation. Then when the scarf is dyed there will be an irregular band at the ends where it was tied or bound of the original color.

GOWN FOR YOUNG MATRON

from the shoulder this charming dress of crepe drapes across the figure to the waistline, full in the back and caught at the side with large metal medallions. Tiny metal ornaments hang from the fish-tail sleeves and the overdrap of the long skirt with its uneven hem.

HAPPENINGS in the BIG CITIES

She Loves, But Alas, She Cannot Read

NEW YORK.—For ten days, until they found and dragged him away, Francesco Tata, whose home is in Detroit, sat on a bench in a big hall at Ellis island looking into the black eyes of comely Antonia Martino, who loved him when he was a boy in Naples and who, as his proxy wife, arrived on board the steamship Guglielmo Peirce to join him. Now the chances are Francesco never will see her again.

good old method, he was threatened with arrest for perjury. Francesco was frightened at that, and disappeared. He thought he had been arrested for perjury, and for several hours he milled about the halls. When night came and the guards hustled all the men into one hall, Francesco went along, too. The immigration officials forgot all about him.

The next day Francesco found Antonia. They picked out a bench and there they sat and talked. And every night she was herded into the women's hall and he into the men's. In the meantime the police of Detroit, assisted by Italian organizations and consuls, began a search for Francesco. Finally they found him sitting on the bench with Antonia. They told him to leave.

Emmett Says the Dalton Gang Was Loco

CHICAGO.—Thirty years ago five men rode into Coffeyville, Kan. It was just a coincidence that a party of United States marshals, looking for the dreaded Dalton gang, had just ridden in. The five dismounted and proceeded to rob—not one bank, but two! A battle ensued and the famous Dalton gang, Bob and Gratton Dalton and Powers and Broadwell, were exterminated—all but Emmett. He lived.

A large man, with a drooping hat, draped himself over a hotel desk in Chicago and scrawled on the register "Emmett Dalton, Los Angeles." Then he sunk into a lounging chair and quilled the large hat over his face. "Ah'm a sad man," he drawled. "Ah'm on mah way to see President Harding and Ah think maybe Ah'll tell him a whole lot.

for a horn of milk. Every time I hangs up this ole hat it costs me a ransom." Mr. Dalton is president of a picture corporation, and he directs the making of western movies. Since his release from prison in 1907, when he was pardoned after serving 14 1/2 years of a life sentence, he has "gone straight." Much of his time is devoted to lecturing on the folly of a criminal career. On the trip with Mr. Dalton is his wife, Mrs. Julia Dalton. She was his childhood sweetheart of Tulsa, Okla., and waited through all the years of his imprisonment to marry him when he was released.

Listen With All Your Cauliflower Ears

CHARLOTTE, MICH.—If there is some enterprising young prize fighter anxious to make a little money on the side in the crowd, let him step forward. Included in the usual assortment of mail addressed to the sporting editor, of his favorite daily paper the other morning was a touching little appeal from a Charlotte woman who is seeking a "reliable prize fighter" to clear up a bit of domestic difficulty. Her letter follows in part:

can obtain the services of a reliable prize fighter for a little outside work. "My husband, who up until the advent of prohibition, was about as model a spouse as can be imagined, has lately come under the influence of a man whose intentions, I fear, are not the best. This man, I have reason to believe, is a bootlegger, or even worse, and he insists on taking my husband away from home.

"Now, my husband is neither strong armed nor strong willed, and while I think he would like to rid of this fellow, he is afraid to break away. I believe that some muscular gentleman of the pugilistic profession could effect a separation of the two. I would be glad to pay the usual fee attached to such proceedings. Yours very truly, MRS. . . .

An American Woman Without a Country

DETROIT, MICH.—Mrs. Virginia L. Roth, 130 West Grand boulevard, has made the startling discovery that she is a woman without a country. By birth she is an American. By her marriage to Dr. Edward T. Roth she became a German subject. Yet neither country will claim her as a citizen and both refuse to grant her a passport.

As a result Mrs. Roth filed a petition for her first naturalization papers in order to become a citizen of the country in which she was born. Recently Doctor Roth, a German by birth, received his second papers, making him an American citizen. The couple then applied for passports as Americans to Germany, for which they had planned to sail on October 4. It was then Mrs. Roth learned of her plight.

A native of Alabama, Mrs. Roth was an American until her marriage in 1920 to Doctor Roth, who was at the time a German subject. Under the old law Mrs. Roth then lost her American citizenship and became a German. Although her husband has become an American citizen, this does not alter the citizenship of Mrs. Roth. She continues to be what she was before her husband changed his nationality—a German citizen even though only by marriage.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

A Trying Period Through Which Every Woman Must Pass

Practical Suggestions Given by the Women Whose Letters Follow

Phila., Pa.—"When I was going through the Change of Life I was weak, nervous, dizzy and had headaches. I was troubled in this way for two years and was hardly able to do my work. My friends advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am very sorry that I did not take it sooner. But I have got good results from it and am now able to do my housework most of the time. I recommend your medicine to those who have similar troubles. I do not like publicity, but if it will help other women I will be glad for you to use my letter."—Mrs. FANNIE ROSENBERG, 882 N. Holly St., Phila., Pa.

The critical time of a woman's life usually comes between the years of 45 and 50, and is often beset with annoying symptoms such as nervousness, irritability, melancholia. Heat flashes or waves of heat appear to pass over the body, cause the face to be very red and often bring on headache, dizziness and a sense of suffocation.

Another annoying symptom which comes at this time is an inability to recall names, dates or other small facts. This is liable to make a woman lose confidence in herself. She becomes nervous, avoids meeting strangers and dreads to go out alone.

Detroit, Michigan.—"During the Change of Life I had a lot of stomach trouble and was bothered a great deal with hot flashes. Sometimes I was not able to do any work at all. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your little books and took it with very good results. I keep house and am able now to do all my own work. I recommend your medicine and am willing for you to publish my testimonial."—Mrs. J. S. LIVERSON, 2051 Junction Avenue, Detroit, Mich.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is especially adapted to help women at this time. It exercises a restorative influence, tones and strengthens the system, and assists nature in the long weeks and months covering this period. Let it help carry you through this time of life. It is a splendid medicine for the middle-aged woman. It is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs and contains no harmful drugs or narcotics.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Allments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

He who smokes last smokes best

Wherein our correspondent takes a long shot at Zanesville, O.

When we printed a letter from a smoker who professed a preference for the early morning smoke, apparently we started something. Almost the next mail brought along a batch of letters, among which the following is a fair sample:

Dear Sirs: Will you allow me to take issue with your A. K. K. from Zanesville who insists that the best pipe of the day is the one smoked right after breakfast? Of course, I have no intimate knowledge of local conditions down in Southern Ohio, but up here the majority of regular pipe smokers have a decided leaning towards the last pipe of the evening. Take a night when you are sitting in front of the fire after the neighbors have gone. Your wife suggests it is bedtime, and while you admit it, you have a craving for one last smoke. She goes on upstairs and you promise to follow directly. But instead you take out your pipe and light up. You smoke slowly and peacefully, sipping out at intervals that you'll be there in a minute. Only you don't go until the last ash has died in the bowl of your pipe. That's my idea of the best smoke of the day. Or suppose you've been out to a stiff, formal party where all they gave you were cigars and cigarettes. You get home about 11 P. M., take off your glad rags and jump into something cool and comfortable. Then you find your old pipe, but up for the blue can of Edgeworth and light up for a real smoke. Yes, sir, for every smoker A. K. K. can produce who likes his after-breakfast pipe best, I'll guarantee to name a dozen men who prefer the last smoke of the evening. And most of us are Edgeworth smokers, too. Yours very sincerely, (Signed) T. S. Flint, New York City.

Yes, as we suggested above, when we gave space to an expression of opinion about which is the best pipe of the day, we started something. But we are glad to open our columns to friendly discussions about pipes and smoking in general. So if you have any particular notions, fads or fancies, send them along. We are taking a neutral standpoint ourselves, not even acting as referees in the debate. And if you aren't an Edgeworth smoker, be sure and tell us about it. For we want to send you free samples, generous helpings both of Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready-Rubbed. Edgeworth has made friends all over the world. Some smokers may not care for Edgeworth, but those who do, we believe, settle down and never smoke any other tobacco the rest of their lives. Edgeworth is sold in various sizes to suit the needs and means of all purchasers. Both Edgeworth Plug Slice and Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed are packed in small, pocket-size packages, in handsome tin humidors, and also in various handy in-between sizes. For the free samples address Larus & Brother Company, 44 South 21st Street, Richmond, Va. If you will also add the name of the dealer to whom you will go if you should like Edgeworth, we would appreciate that courtesy on your part. To Retail Tobacco Merchants: If your jobber cannot supply you with Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will gladly send you prepaid by parcel post a one- or two-dozen carton of any size of Edgeworth Plug Slice or Ready-Rubbed for the same price you would pay the jobber.

LOOSE AND LONGER GOWN

Here is the afternoon gown with the loose effect and compromised length that attracted so much attention at the recent annual fall style show of the Fashion Art League of America, held in Chicago.

NEW SHORT LEATHER JACKETS

Highly-Glazed Trimmings in Red and Blue Are Used Upon Neutral Backgrounds.

Jackets that serve for outdoor wear are evolved from kid or leather. One attractive model is developed from gray leather and trimmed with red, the red taking the form of a narrow piping around the standing collar, the cuffs, the pockets and the front closing.

Another jacket, made for a prominent French actress for wear at a premiere, was made of bilistered kid, very soft and supple, the bilistered effect being emphasized by embroidery. Accompanying this jacket was a white dress, the skirt made of cloth and the waist of georgette crepe. The sleeves of the dress were embroidered in a Roman motif as were the small pockets on the skirt.

Among novelties being used as trimmings on fall leather jackets are highly glazed leathers in red, blue and other bright hues. These vivid colors are particularly effective upon backgrounds of neutral colorings.

Fur Coat Styles.

The new fur coats are distinctly longer. Many shown are full length, coming to a point not far above the ankle. Many of the capes are of the "ripple" sort with wide armholes. The chin-chin collar billows up over the hat in back, and in front hides the tip of the nose.

Rabbit Fur.

Rabbit fur is being used most effectively on frocks and coats and gives that very soft, fluffy effect that is so desirable this year. It is beautiful with velvet, and may be dyed the most fascinating shades.

FURS THAT MATCH WINTER OUTFIT

Peltry Promises to Be More Fashionable This Season; Cheaper Materials in Demand.

Furs bid fair to be more fashionable than ever this winter and it is not necessarily the costly pelts that will claim Dame Fashion's favor, according to a fashion authority in the New York Tribune. Even the humblest of animals, not excepting the alley cats, have been called upon to give up their hides to satisfy the demand.

Owing to the use of cheap furs, there are many dyed effects. One of the chic things will be to use a fur that exactly matches in color the fabric of the garment which it adorns; thus cat, rabbit, hare and squirrel furs are being dyed in beige, gray and brown tones to match materials. Caracul, one of the more expensive furs, is also being dyed in these fabric tones.

In addition to these smart, so-called inexpensive furs, which are frankly what they are, there are many imitations of mink, chinchilla, seal and beaver. There are the Japanese mink, Columbian mink and marmot, all of which approach real mink in appearance. There are kolinsky and the blended marten, which imitate sable. There are chinchilla rat, wisatcha, the hybrid animal from Bolivia; the Australian opossum and the petit gris, all trying to counterfeit the costly and rare chinchilla of the Andes.

Then there is always the Hudson seal, which now is more popular than the real Alaskan and practically as expensive, with its train of counterfeits—electric seal, dyed rabbit and

The Harem Hat.

Though autumn is here there is no waning today of a style which came into being originally as a result of warm weather—the harem hat. This is the mushroom hat of wide brim from which droops a six-inch double fold of chiffon extending almost to the tip of the nose. Such a hat was seen recently, faced and covered with pink mauve chiffon and gave a delightfully rosy tint to the upper half of the face.

Gloves.

The gauntlet glove is still in evidence. The gauntlet is often quite flaring, and into it may be inserted a gore in a contrasting shade of kid or fabric. A rather wide strap around the wrist, snapping below the palm of the hand, is a new feature. In fiber gloves, the cuffs frequently are embroidered and sometimes turned back to show a silk lining.

Red Trimmings.

Red is an ever-blooming perennial—sartorially speaking. It is seldom scheduled for overwhelming popularity, but there is never a season during which it doesn't put in an appearance. Its chief use this season is to line the wide sleeves or loose panels that continue to be worn, or to touch up a dark gown with a dash of embroidery

Frog Carries Young in Pouch.
Lions symbolize Africa; tigers, Asia; and the kangaroos, Australia, but South America's most characteristic creature is the frog, says A. Kingsley Noble in the Mentor Magazine. There are no important mammals in South America, but there are more kinds of frogs there than anywhere else in the world. Of these there is no more interesting one than the marsupial frog, which carries its young in a pouch on its back. Noble spent many days with a Harvard museum of comparative zoology expedition studying South American frogs.

REAL COURAGE

"To be feared of a thing and yet do it, is what makes the prettiest kind of a man."—Robert Louis Stevenson.

IF YOU have read "Kidnaped" you remember the quotation. It was spoken by Alan Breck, after the boy, David, had stood for a minute terrified, on the brink of a roaring torrent, and then, still sick with the fear of it, leaped across.

To Alan Breck, the leap meant little. It required no courage for him to make it, for he knew very little fear. But for the boy, who did the thing he feared as he feared death, it was a real act of heroism.

The only real courage consists in doing the thing we are afraid to do. The hulking prize-fighter of the John Sullivans type, who has as much imagination as a grizzly bear, is not brave. He is sure he is going to win. It takes no courage to go into a winning fight. The bully is never brave. In fact he is always a coward. Feeling sure that his superior size will carry him through, he picks quarrels as a pleasant method of passing his time.

Put this same bully into the ring with a large hungry tiger, face him with a man who looks as if he enjoys shooting bullets as much as the bully enjoys thrashing his physical inferiors, and all the courage oozes out of the bully.

You will never know whether you are brave or not till you find yourself in a position where you are afraid to do something that ought to be done.

If you do it, you have courage. If you quit you have not.

Never mistake a physical willingness to take a chance, to attempt some dangerous thing, for the kind of courage that counts.

It is not a brave but very foolish man who walks a tight rope over Niagara falls. It is a brave man, who not wanting to die, and knowing that an operation may send him out of the world, cheerfully goes to the table, to take the one chance that may mean his continued support of his wife or his dependents.

Often the timid school boy, who fears to quarrel, and tries his best to keep his peace with his fellows, gets the name of coward. But when this same boy has to fight for what he thinks is his honor, or to save a little boy from a bully, he becomes a very dangerous fighter.

Real courage is not daunted by pain. The boy or the man who fights when he is afraid to, stops being afraid of anything, pain or a black eye, or punishment. He fights because he has courage, and he usually wins.

There is more real courage in this world than you fancy. It is behind all great achievement. If you have it, you are fortunate. But don't be sure, either that you have or that you haven't it till you have done or refused to do something you were afraid to do. (Copyright by John Blake.)

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

THE ROAD TO FAME

HOW often in your dreams have you passed over this hard-worn, densely packed road, reached the goal and stood there in pride listening to the enthusiastic cheer of the admiring throngs around you!

In your youthful days, when new visions, like beautiful flowers, were born over night; when hope had not yet become familiar with dejection; when to picture an achievement was to realize its full accomplishment, you soared to the hilltops on the sure, swift wings of an eagle, commanding the world to kneel at your exalted presence and do your bidding.

You put forth your hand and nations obeyed.

You lifted up your voice and thousands cheered.

You girded on your armor and armies followed your fearless leadership without questioning your authority or doubting your ability.

Every youth has had such dreams. Every boy has felt himself a king and every girl has been his queen!

The dream of honor, glory and fame is the dream of every human being possessed of high spirit and lofty aim.

Mother's Cook Book

There is an old refrain which runs: "Ask me no questions, I'll tell you no lies." I am inclined to think that it is full of social philosophy. Most of us probably have put up our hardest questions or queries on occasions when questions have been asked us, that never should have been asked.—Katherine Fullerton Gerould.

WHAT TO EAT

WITH leftover chicken there are any number of good dishes that may be prepared with little work.

Deviled Chicken.

Make a sauce of salt, pepper, dry mustard, grated lemon peel, a dash of cayenne, a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and a few drops of tabasco. Add a lump of butter the size of an egg when the sauce begins to boil. When very hot add cubes of cold cooked chicken. Veal, pork or beef may be used in the same way.

Fried Chicken.

Cut up the chicken and pound each piece flat with a potato masher or mallet. Season, dredge with flour and fry in butter or drippings.

Chicken a la Maryland.

Cut up a tender chicken, season with salt and pepper, dip in egg and crumbs and arrange the pieces close together in a buttered baking dish. Dot each Escalloped Chicken.

Use any kind of cold cooked chicken, freed from skin, fat and bone. Make a cream sauce. Put a layer of the sauce in a baking dish, then a layer of chicken, cut fine, then a layer of crumbs, then sauce, and repeat until the dish is full, leaving a layer of buttered crumbs on the top. Bake in a moderate oven until well browned, adding a little milk and water occasionally if it seems too dry.

Chicken Goulash.

Cut into dice two medium-sized raw potatoes. Into a hot frying pan pour two tablespoonfuls of olive oil and add the diced potatoes. Stir to keep from burning and cook five minutes. Add a dash of paprika, a cupful of boiling water, a crushed bean of garlic, a cupful of cold cooked chicken, chopped, salt and a handful of mushrooms. Cover and cook until the potatoes are done.

KIDDIES SIX

By Will M. Maupin

HELLO, POP!

HIS photograph! Our joy and pride—
The picture of our boy who died!
I seem to hear, 'midst tears that drop

Upon its face, his loving call
Come ringing down the darkened hall
To give me greeting: "Hello, Pop!"

It seems but yesterday he died—
But yesterday we stood beside
His bed and watched his eyelids drop

To sleep and wake in endless day—
But yesterday I heard him say
With dying accents: "Good-by, Pop!"

Last night I dreamed he stood again
With face pressed to the window pane
And watched to see my motor stop;
That when he heard me at the door
He quickly toddled 'cross the floor,
And met me, shouting: "Hello, Pop!"

Sometimes, when daylight fades to gloom
And ghostly shadows fill the room
I feel again the swelling joy;
For, from the shadows around about,
I hear once more his joyful shout
In boyish tones: "I'm papa's boy!"

When, after death's cold, chilly hands
Have loosed the last of earthly bands
And caused life's weary load to drop,
I'll feel it is supremest joy
To meet, at heaven's gate, my boy
And hear his welcome: "Hello, Pop!"

1923 SUPERIOR Chevrolet Sedan

In 1922 Chevrolet led the world in sales of quality closed cars chiefly because of the Sedan. This new Fisher Body Sedan is completely eclipsing its predecessor because:

QUALITY has been still further improved by more artistic design and added improvements.

ECONOMY has been still further increased by engineering refinements and greatly broadened production and distribution facilities.

SERVICE is now offered on a flat rate basis by 10,000 dealers and service stations.

PRICE remains the same, in spite of added equipment and more expensive construction, which have greatly increased value.

Some distinctive features of the new line are: streamline body design with high hood and crowned, paneled fenders; vacuum feed and rear gasoline tank on all models; drum type head lamps with legal lenses. Curtains open with doors of open models.

Closed models have Fisher Bodies with plate glass Ternstedt regulated windows, straight side cord tires, sun visor, windshield wiper and dash light. The Sedanette is equipped with auto trunk on rear.

Western Canada

Wonderful Stock Raising Country

Vast stretches of undeveloped fertile agricultural land of the highest productiveness await the settler in Western Canada. The land possesses the same character of soil as that which has produced the high quality of cereals that have carried off the world's premier honors so many times in the past ten years.

Native Grasses are Rich and Abundant
Cattle fattens upon them without any grain being fed. Limited capital on high-priced lands is not a success, neither can the tenant burdened with high rents hope to succeed. The place to overcome these is in Western Canada—where land is cheap where a home may be made at low cost, and where dairying, mixed farming and stock raising give an assured profit.

Land may be purchased from the Railway Companies or from responsible land companies or from private owners. Free homesteads of 160 acres each are to be had in the more remote districts.

Kennedy, her husband, and Mary Alleen Cunningham Morrison and John M. Morrison, her husband.

James M. Lemos, former United States commissioner at Sentinel, Ariz., was taken into custody at Indianapolis, Ind., in an indictment charging conspiracy in an alleged "soldier land fraud," in which ex-servicemen and disabled soldiers were alleged to have lost approximately $2,500,000, according to word received at Phoenix by federal officials.

Nearly 30 years ago through causes unknown, two of the bonds issued by Maricopa county, Arizona, for the building of a railroad from Maricopa to Phoenix disappeared and have never turned up since, according to Raymond S. Eckhart, state treasurer, and Charles W. Fairfield, state auditor, who, with Attorney C. B. Wilson, of Flagstaff, representing four counties in the county bond case, are now engaged in making preparation for the reimbursement of the counties for the bonds in accordance with the provisions of the auditing act. The missing bonds were part of an issue of $200,000 put forth by Maricopa county nearly 40 years ago, and are numbers 149 and 150 of the issue. Each bond was for $1,000 and was made payable to the bearer.

Athletics at the University of Arizona have been placed under the jurisdiction of a college board of control of seven members, who have segregated the various activities so that they may be supervised and handled on a more coordinated scale, according to announcement at the university. Two men and a girl were arrested recently at Winslow, Ariz., and were held for Denver police on a charge of stealing an automobile belonging to Capt. T. J. Dillon, of Fitzsimons hospital, according to Captain of Detectives Washington Rinker of Denver.

OUTLINES VIEWS ON PEACE PACT

WASHINGTON AGAIN DECLINES TO PARTICIPATE IN CONFERENCE.

EXPLAIN U.S. ATTITUDE

WILL SEND ONLY OBSERVERS TO THE LAUSANNE MEETING.

Washington.—The American government, in notes delivered to the British, French and Italian embassies at Washington, formally declined to participate in the Near East peace conference scheduled to be held in Lausanne, Switzerland, this month.

Later, the state department made public this government's position on the conference as outlined in the "aide memoire" which was transmitted to the three governments concerned through the American embassies at London, Paris and Rome.

Reference to the "aide memoire" was made in the formal reply to the allied notes inviting participation, but which were not received by the state department until after the "aide memoire" carrying instructions regarding the American view, had been dispatched to the American representatives in the three foreign capitals.

The formal replies, like the formal invitations, were directly worded and explained that the United States would send only observers to the Lausanne meeting, and added that that conference was primarily a peace conference to end a war in which the United States was not a belligerent.

The text of the "aide memoire" upon which the formal replies were based as fully setting forth the American attitude, follows:

"The conference proposed for the purpose of drawing up a treaty of peace with Turkey will have primarily to deal with the problems resulting from the state of belligerency between the allied powers, Turkey and Greece. The United States was neither at war with Turkey nor a party to the armistice of 1918 and does not desire to participate in the final peace negotiations, or to assume responsibility for the political and territorial adjustments which may be effected.

"For the purpose of clarity certain subjects of particular American concern may be briefly summarized.

"1. The maintenance of capitulations which may be essential to the appropriate safeguarding of non-Moslem interests.

"2. The protection under proper guarantees of philanthropic, educational and religious institutions.

"3. Appropriate undertakings in regard to the freedom of opportunity without discrimination, or special privilege, for commercial enterprise.

"4. Indemnity for losses suffered by Americans in Turkey as a result of arbitrary and illegal acts.

"5. Suitable provisions for the protection of minorities.

"6. Assurances touching the freedom of the straits.

"7. Reasonable opportunity for archaeological research and study."

Tornado Sweeps Missouri Town.

Joplin, Mo.—One person is dead, two are in a hospital, and several are missing in a tornado which struck in two parts of Webb City, several miles northwest of Joplin, a few days ago. One body was taken to the morgue and two injured to the Jane Chitt hospital at Webb City. Search is being made for several others thought dead.

Italy Is Reborn, Cry Veterans.

Rome.—The triumphant entry of Fascist troops into Rome was the apotheosis of Italy's bloodless revolution. Old Romans who witnessed the entry of soldiers of the king of Italy into the capital of his newly welded kingdom on Sept. 20, 1870, wept for joy and vowed that Oct. 31, 1922, will forever mark a great epoch in Italy's national life. For in 1870, they said, Italy was born; today she has been saved from Bolshevism.

Court Bans Bible From Schools.

San Francisco.—Under strict interpretation of the laws of California, the St. James version of the Bible was held "sectarian" in a decision handed down by the District court of appeals, reversing a decision of the Fresno Superior Court, before which the claim had been advanced that it was not sectarian, but "the book of all Christians." The decision, in effect, bans the Bible from the public schools of the state.

Shipping Board Is Sued.

Chicago.—Suit for $1,000,000 damages was filed in the United States District Court against the Shipping Board and Munson Steamship line by Capt. B. T. Haegensen, formerly employed by the Munson line. In the bill of complaint Captain Haegensen charged that he had been blacklisted by the Munson line, and the Shipping Board. The blacklist, the bill alleges, followed a report he made of irregularities involving Shipping Board employes.

STORAGE CELLAR MOST ESSENTIAL

Growers of Fruits and Vegetables Lose Money Every Year by Selling Crops Early.

SELLS ON FLOODED MARKET

Produce Can Be Kept in Concrete Room for Long Period Without Less Due to Decay or Sprouting—Materials Needed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Fruit and vegetable growers are deprived of millions of dollars each year because they are forced to sell their products as soon as harvested. Products sold on a flooded market mean low prices and sometimes a loss, but this is what the producer must expect when he sells during an over-production period. Unless he has storage facilities in which to hold his vegetables or fruit until the prices rise, he must sell or lose out entirely.

The rise in prices during the storage period is very strongly marked. For instance, a table showing the eight-year average price for potatoes in the United States indicates that in March, April and May they were 38 cents a bushel more than in November and December.

Benefits of Cellar.

A good storage cellar also makes it possible to keep vegetables and fruit longer for home consumption. Vegetables that must be stored in the ordinary cellar soon decay and in the spring when the temperature rises vegetables that have not decayed will sprout, which decreases their food value and makes them unfit for market. Fruits and vegetables can be stored in concrete storage cellars for a long period without any loss or depreciation due to decay or sprouting.

It is best to build the storage cellar on a north slope and have the entrance facing north. Double doors enclosing a small vestibule are desirable, as they permit filling and emptying the cellar with the admission of a minimum of warm air.

Storage cellar walls made of dense concrete will keep out the excess moisture of the earth while water held in sumps at the base of the intake ventilators will give air entering the storage cellar the proper amount of moisture.

Reinforce the Roof.

The roof must be reinforced lengthwise with one-half inch steel bars placed two feet apart, center to center, running the full length of the structure.

Exterior of Concrete Cellar.

structure, five-eighths square bars five inches from center to center should be placed crosswise. These steel bars should be embedded in the concrete 1 1/2 inches from the bottom of the roof slab. The walls of the storage cellar should be of a 1:2 1/2:4 concrete mixture. This means one sack of cement to 2 1/2 cubic feet of clean, screened sand to 4 cubic feet of pebbles or crushed rock, which should also be clean, hard and varying in size from 3/4 to 1 1/2 inches. Use only enough water to make the concrete a jelly-like mass.

For a storage cellar 20 feet long, 12 feet wide and 7 feet, 6 inches high, the following materials will be required:

- 1 1/2 cubic yards of sand.
2 1/2 cubic yards of pebbles or broken stone.
20 sacks of cement.
120 feet of 1/2 inch steel bars.
720 feet of 3/4 inch steel bars.

CHAPPED TEATS DURING FALL

Cold Weather Is Blamed for Annoyance—Also Caused by Milking With Wet Hands.

Sore teats often cause annoyance during the fall season. This trouble may be caused by cold weather, by milking with wet hands or other local irritation. When a cow is so affected she does not stand quietly for milking on account of the pain.

The trouble is usually remedied without much trouble. The application of vaseline for a few times on the first appearance of the trouble will usually check and cure it. If severe, the teats should be thoroughly washed and softened with warm water, after which glycerin or tannin which may be had at any drug store may be applied with advantage. One application followed by the use of vaseline at each milking for a few days will usually entirely cure the trouble.

MUCH PROGRESS MADE FOR PUREBRED SIRES

Movement Having Noticeable Effect in Many Sections.

Farmers Are Discarding Scrub and Grade Animals and Using Registered Bulls Instead—Letter From Virginia Agent.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) There is every reason to believe that the replacement of scrub and grade sires by purebreds is on the increase. Reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture from county agents in various parts of the country show that the "Better Sires—Better Stock" movement is having a noticeable effect. A recent statement by M. G. Lewis, county agent of Rockbridge county, Virginia, is typical of a large number. "The purebred bull movement," says Mr. Lewis, "is progressing rapidly. Since January 1, 16 farmers have disposed of grade or scrub bulls and are using registered bulls instead. On the other hand, there are no less than 50 men in the county who still persist in holding out against the progress and development of the live stock interests of the county by keeping inferior grade or scrub bulls. I have a list of 56 owners of such bulls. Some of these men have grades that are fairly good individuals, while others have scrubs that are the worst kind of a disgrace to the community and to the county.

"The cost of a good registered bull is so small now that it is a mystery why any farmer will keep anything else. Many records have been kept during the last few years to prove out the actual value of a pure-bred bull in dollars and cents."

Some of these actual figures were obtained recently by the Department of Agriculture through an inquiry sent out to more than 500 farmers throughout the United States. These men gave it as their opinion that in all kinds of farm stock purebreds have an earning power more than 40 per cent better than common stock. It is noteworthy that in the case of dairy cattle, whose productive power can be easily measured, purebreds were considered to be 47.8 per cent better than common cows. The lowest percentage given for any kind of stock was 36.8 per cent.

For Heavy Yields

Selecting, curing, and testing seed corn will do more toward producing a better and bigger corn crop than anything else. By careful selection the farmer improves his corn and is able to produce larger, heavier and better ears. By properly curing seed corn he insures himself against seed of low vitality; and by a germination test he avoids sterile ears and plants only seed that will give the most profitable returns.—R. A. Moore, Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

FOUR BIG BUILDING FACTORS

Important That Ventilating System Carries Away Excess Moisture—Sunlight Is Good.

There are four factors to be considered in the erection of new farm buildings or the repair of old ones.

1. A good ventilating system is most essential. The fresh air intake, together with a foul air outlet, does away with all excess moisture and keeps the interior of the building in the best condition. Have a trap door or window near the floor on the windward side in order to maintain air current on the floor.

2. Sunlight is one of the greatest natural disinfectants. All buildings, new or old, should have plenty of window space, and should be so arranged as to admit the sunlight.

3. Cleanliness is another point upon which to place much stress. Windows and walls should be so constructed as to permit frequent and easy cleaning.

4. Convenience is another important factor. Feed bins, silos, harness rooms, separator rooms and all other rooms and compartments should be planned to save steps, thus accomplishing a maximum amount of work with a minimum amount of labor.

GIRL SAILOR QUILTS THE SEA

Nineteen-Year-Old Lass Spent Sixteen Years of Her Life on the Ocean.

SAILS WITH FATHER

Helen Lowell Had Many Adventures When, Garbed as a Boy, She Sailed Before the Mast—Now at Home With Mother.

Los Angeles.—Sixteen years out of her nineteen, Helen Lowell, now of this city, passed on board a sailing vessel. Her address was simply the Minnie E. Cain, plying between Puget Sound, Wash., and Australia and the South Sea Islands. For 16 years Helen never knew a white woman. For the greater part of that time she was utterly unconscious of her sex.

Helen Joan was the youngest of eight children. Her father, captain of the Minnie E. Cain, met with reverses just before Helen's birth that left his family in a precarious financial situation. When three months old, Helen was carried on board the Minnie E. Cain in a blanket, the sails were set, and the vessel drifted off on the journey that was to last for 16 years so far as Helen was concerned.

Taught by Father.

The boat carried lumber and cotton stuffs, and the only fresh food in the hold consisted of potatoes and onions. So the captain fed his baby daughter powdered milk. Helen grew and developed into a charming young girl. Her father taught her to swim, also he was her teacher in Latin, navigation, and many other subjects which are not usually taken up by the average young girl.

"Every question of philosophy, psychology, and morality which presents itself to a growing girl was answered by my father by a reference to a book and verse from the Bible," Helen said. Her father gave her no toys, no pretty dresses. He was rigidly unrelenting about "feminine fables."

Dressed as a Boy.

Helen wore a rough shirt and overalls, never had a pair of shoes, and her curls blew free to the wind. She leaped about the decks of her father's vessel and dove into the waves. She was never molested by any of the rough, polyglot crew, who stood in great awe of the captain. When the Minnie E. Cain landed in port there was no place for Helen to go but to the haunts of the seafarers along the wharves. So for safety her father never permitted her to go on shore.

It is only since she has been living in Los Angeles with Mrs. Lowell for the last few months, that Helen has come to know the glory of having a mother. And while the adventure of her early life is thrilling, and she has trouble sometimes in adjusting herself to feminine attire and the conventionalities of which she has never heard, yet the joy of the companionship with her mother makes up for all the adventures which she has now recounted.

Child Fatally Gored by Large Boar.

Bradford, Ill.—The twenty-three-month-old son of Everett Foster was fatally gored by a large boar on his father's farm when he and several other small children wandered into the hog pen. Mrs. Foster drove the hog away, but not until the child had received fatal injuries. She was summoned by the baby's screams.

CLAY AND DURAND.

SYNOPSIS—A foreword tells this: Motoring through Arizona a party of easterners, father and daughter and a male companion stop to witness a cattle round up. The girl leaves the car and is attacked by a wild steer. A masterpiece of riding on the part of one of the cowboys saves her life. Then the story begins: Clay Lindsay, ranger-riding on an Arizona ranch, announces his intention to visit the "big town," New York. On the train Clay becomes interested in a young woman, Kitty Mason, on her way to New York to become a motion-picture actress. She is marked as fair prey by a fellow traveler, Jerry Durand, gang politician and prize fighter. Clay provokes a quarrel and throws Durand from the train. On his first day in New York Clay is splashed with water by a janitor. That individual the "ranger" fights, and leaves him to a fire hydrant. A young woman who sees the occurrence invites Clay into her house and hides him from the police. Clay's "rescue" introduces himself as Beatrice Whitford. Lindsay meets her father, Colin Whitford. He meets Kitty Mason by accident. She has been disappointed in her stage aspirations. Clay visits her. Kitty is insulted by a customer. Clay punches the annoyance. Outside, he is attacked by Jerry Durand and a companion and beaten senseless. Clay's acquaintance with Beatrice Whitford begins. He "saves" her from the Arizona ranch. Johnnie Green comes to the "big town." The two take an apartment together. Word comes that Kitty Mason is in trouble. Clay goes to the scene and is helped by Annie Millikan. He comes on a party of "sunmen," obviously waiting for his appearance. Clay "gets the drop" on the thugs. Some lock in a room and escape. With a theater party, which includes the Whitfords, Clay meets Kitty Mason, friendless and penniless. He leaves the party to take the girl to the apartment. Beatrice resents Lindsay's interest in Kitty. The two men part in anger. Hurt and indignant, Beatrice practically proposes marriage to an old admirer, Clarence Bromfield, wealthy man-about-town. Their engagement is announced. Durand's gang kidnap Kitty. Clay appeals to Annie Millikan, who tells him where the girl is likely to be found.

CHAPTER XII—Continued.

Johnnie's case was not so hopeless as he imagined it.

Over their good-night smoke Clay gave a warning. "Keep your eyes open, Johnnie. I was trailed to the house today by one of the fellows with Durand the night I called on him. It spells trouble. I reckon the 'Paches are going to leave the reservation again."

"Say, Clay, ain't you gettin' homesick for the whinny of a rawhide? What's the matter with us hittin' the dust for good old Tucson? I'd sure like to chase cowboys again."

"You can go, Johnnie. I'm not ready yet—quite. And when I go it won't be because of any rattlesnake in the grass."

"Whadyou mean I can go? If this Jerry Durand's trying to get you I'll be there followin' yore dust, old scout."

"There's more than one way to skin a cat. Maybe the fellow means to strike at us through you or Kitty. I've a mind to put you both on a train for the B-Ina-Box ranch."

"You can put the IT girl on a train. You can't put me on none less'n you go too," answered his shadow, stoutly.

"Then see you don't get drawn into any quarrels while you and Kitty are away from the house. Stick to the lighted streets. I think I'll speak to her about not lettin' any strange man talk to her. I think she had better not go out unless one of us is with her."

"Suits me. And don't you take any chances, old timer. That goes double, I'm the cautious guy in this outfit, not you."

Within twenty-four hours Clay heard some one pounding wildly on the outer door of the apartment and the voice of the cautious guy imploring haste.

"Lemme in, Clay. Hurry! Hurry!" he shouted.

Lindsay was at the door in four strides, but he did not need to see the stricken woe of his friend's face to guess what had occurred. For Johnnie and Kitty had started together to see a picture play two hours earlier.

"They done took Kitty—in an auto," he gasped. "Right before my eyes. Claimed a lady had fainted."

"Who took her?"

"I dunno. Some men. Turned the trick slick, me never liftin' a hand. Ain't I a heluva man?"

"Hold yore hawsses, son. Don't get excited. Begin at the beginnin' and tell me all about it," Clay told him, quietly.

"We was comin' home an' I took Kitty into that Red Star drug store for to get her some ice cream. Well, right after that I heard a man say how the lady had fainted—"

"What lady?"

"The lady in the machine."

"Were you in the drug store?"

"No. We'd jes' come out when this bare automobile drew up an' a man jumped out hollerin' the lady had fainted and would I bring a glass of water from the drug store. 'Course I got a thermos me and Kitty she moved to the car to be'n if she could. When I got back to the walk with the water the man was hopplin' back into the car. It was already movin'. He slammed the door shut and it went up the street like greased lightning."

"Get the number?"

"No, I—I plumb forgot to look."

Clay slipped a revolver under his belt. He slid into a street coat. Then he got police headquarters on the wire and notified the office of what had taken place.

It had come on to rain and beneath the street lights the asphalt shone like a river. The storm had driven most people indoors, but as the westerner drew near the drug store Clay saw with relief a taxicab draw up outside. Its driver, crouched in his seat behind the waterproof apron as far back as possible from the rain, promptly accepted Lindsay as a fare.

"Back in a minute," Clay told him, and passed into the drug store.

The abduction was still being discussed. He pushed home questions as to identification. One of the men in the drug store had caught a flash of the car number. He was sure the first four figures were 3067. The fifth he did not remember. The car was dark blue and it looked like a taxi. This information Clay got the owner of the store to forward to the police.

He did not wait to give it personally, but joined Johnnie in the cab. The address he gave to the driver with the enterprising pull down over his head was that of a certain place of amusement known as Heath's Palace of Wonders. A woman he wanted to consult was wont to sit behind a window there at the receipt of customs.

Miss Annie Millikan's pert smile beamed through the window at Clay when he stepped up.

"Hello, Mr. Flat-Worker," she sang out. "How many?"

Clay explained that his business was serious. "I've got to see you alone—now," he added.

"If you gotta you gotta." The girl called an usher, who found a second usher to take her place.

Annie walked down the street a few steps beside Clay.

"What's the big idea in callin' me from me job in the rush hours?" she asked.

Clay told his story.

"Some of Jerry's strong-arm work," she commented.

"Must be. Can you help me?"

Annie looked straight at him, a humorous little quirk to her mouth. "Say, what're you askin' me to do—throw down my steady?"

Annie was pretty, and inevitably she had lovers. One of these was "Slim" Jim Collins, confidential follower of Jerry Durand. He was a crook and she knew it. But some quality in him—his good looks, perhaps, or his game-ness—fascinated her in spite of herself. She avoided him, even while she found herself pleased to go to Coney with an escort so well dressed and so gently confident. Another of her admirers was a policeman, Tim Muldoon by name, the same one that had rescued Clay from the savagery of Durand outside the Sea Siren. Tim she liked. But for all his Irish ardor he an' I might not," she said cautiously, looking at him from under a broad hat-brim. "Say, what's the lay-out? Are you framin' Jim for up the river?"

"I'm tryin' to save Kitty."

"'Cause she's your girl. Where do I come in at? What's there in it for me to go rappin' me friend?" demanded Annie sharply.

"She's not my girl," explained Clay. Then, with that sure instinct that sometimes guided him, he added, "The young lady I'm in love with has just become engaged to another man."

Miss Millikan looked at him, frankly incredulous. "For the love o' Mike, where's her eyes? Don't she know a real man when she sees one? I'll say she don't."

A flush beat into Annie's cheeks. She went off swiftly at a tangent. "Wouldn't it give a fellow a jar? This guy Jim Collins slips it to me confidential that he's off the crooked stuff. Nuthin' doin' a-tall in gorilla work. He kids me that he's quit goin' out on the spud and porchlimbin' don't look good to him no more. A four-room flat, a little wife, an' the straight road for 'Slim' Jim. I fall for it, though I'd orter be hep to men. An' he dates me up tonight for the chauffeurs' ball."

"But you didn't go?"

"No; he sidesteps it this aft with a fairy tale about drivin' a rich old dame out to Yonkers. All the time he was figurin' on pinchin' this girl for Jerry. He's a rotten crook."

"What color is 'Slim' Jim's car?"

"A dirty blue. Why?"

"That was the car."

Annie lifted her hands in a little gesture of despair. "I'm dand sick of this game. What's there in it? I live straight and eat in a beanyery. No lobster palaces in mine. Look at me cheap duds. And Tim gives me the over like I was a street cat. What sort of a chance did I ever have, with toughs and gunmen for me friends?"

"You've got yore chance now, Annie. Tim will hop off that fence he's on and light a runnin' straight for you if he thinks you've ditched 'Slim' Jim. You don't owe Jerry Durand anything, anyhow. Where would he have Kitty taken? You can give a guess."

She had made her decision before she spoke. "Gimme paper and a pencil."

On Clay's notebook she scrawled hurriedly an address.

"Jim'd croak me if he knew I'd given this," she said, looking straight at the cattleman.

"He'll never know—and I'll never forget R. Annie."

Clay left her and turned to the driver. From the slip of paper in his hand he read aloud an address.

As Clay slammed the door shut and the car moved forward he had an impression of something gone wrong, of a cog in his plans slipped somewhere. For Annie, standing in the rain under a sputtering misty street light, showed a face stricken with fear.

Her dilated eyes were fixed on the driver of the taxicab.

CHAPTER XIII.

Two Men in a Locked Room.

Some sixth sense of safety—one that comes to many men who live in the outdoors on the untamed frontier—warned Clay that all was not well. The machine had swung to the right and was facing from the wind instead of into it. Clay was not very well acquainted with New York, but he did know this was not the direction in which he wanted to go.

Lindsay opened the door and swung out on the running board. "We're goin' wrong. Stop the car!" he ordered.

The man at the wheel did not turn. He speeded up.

His fare wasted no time in remonstrances. A moment, and the chauffeur threw on the brake sharply. His reason was a good one. The blue nose of a revolver was jammed hard against his ribs. He had looked round once to find out what it was prodding him. That was enough to convince him he had better stop.

Under the brake the back wheels skidded and brought up against the curb. Clay, hanging on by one hand, was flung hard to the sidewalk. The cab teetered, regained its equilibrium, gathered impetus with a snort, and leaped forward again.

Then came a click of the lock. The sound of the street rain ceased. Clay knew that the door had been closed and that he was shut in with two desperate criminals.

What have they done with Kitty? Why was she not with them? He asked himself that question even as he slipped back into a room that opened to the left.

He groped his way through the darkness, for he dared not flash his light to guide him. His fingers found the edge of a desk. Round that he circled toward a closet he remembered having noted. His arm brushed the closet door. Next moment he was inside and had closed it softly behind him.

And none too soon. For into the room came the gunmen almost on his heels.

"Jerry'll raise h—l," a heavy voice was saying as they entered the room. "And that ain't all. We'll land in stir if we don't look out. We just ducked a bad fall. The bulls pretty near had us that time we poked our nose out from the park at Seventy-second street."

Some one pressed a button and the room leaped to light. Through the open crack of the closed door Clay recognized Gorilla Dave. The second of the gunmen was out of range of his vision.

From the sound of creaking furniture Clay judged that the unseen man had sat down heavily. "It was that blowout queered us. And say—how came the bulls so hot on our trail? Who rapped to 'em?"

"Must 'a' been that boob wit' the goll. He got busy quick. Well, Jerry, won't have to save the cops this time. We made our getaway all right," said Dave.

"Say, where's Joey?"

"Pulled a sneak likely. What's it matter? Listen! What's that?"

Some one was coming up the stairs. The men in the room moved cautiously to the door. The hall light was switched on.

"Lo, Jerry." Gorilla Dave called softly.

He closed the room door and the sound of the voices was shut off instantly.

The uninvited guest dared not step out of the closet to listen, for at any instant the men might re-enter. He crouched in his hiding place, the thirty-eight in his hand.

The minutes dragged interminably. More than once Clay almost made up his mind to steal out to learn what the men were doing. But his judgment told him he must avoid a brush with so many if possible.

The door opened again.

"Now beat it and do as I say if you know what's good for you," a bullying voice was ordering.

The owner of the voice came in and slammed the door behind him. He sat down at the desk, his back to the closet. Through the chink Clay saw that the man was Jerry Durand.

From his vest pocket he took a fat black cigar, struck a match and lit it. He slumped down in the swivel chair. It took no time to divine that his mind was busy working out a problem.

Clay stepped softly from his place of refuge, but not so noiselessly that the gangman did not detect his presence. Jerry swung round in the chair and leaped up with catlike activity. He stood without moving, poised on the balls of his feet, his deep-set eyes narrowed to shining slits. It was in his thought to hurl himself headlong on the man holding steadily the menacing revolver.

"Don't you! I've got the dead wood on you," said the Arizona, a trenchant saltiness in his speech. "I'll shoot you down sure as h—l's hot."

Durand's face wore an ugly look of impotent malice, but his throat was dry as a lime kiln. He could not estimate the danger that confronted him nor what lay back of the man's presence.

"What you doin' here?" he demanded. "Makin' my party call," retorted Clay easily.

Jerry cursed him with a low, savage stream of profanity. The gangman enraged was not a sight pleasing to see.

"I reckon heaven, h—l, and high water couldn't keep you from cussin' now. Relieve yore mind proper, Mr. Durand. Then we'll talk business," murmured Clay in the low, easy drawl that never suggested weakness.

The ex-prize-fighter's flow of language dried up. He fell silent and stood swallowing his furious rage. It had come home to him that this narrow-flanked young fellow with the close-gripped jaw and the cool, steady eyes was entirely unmoved by his threats.

"Quite through effervescing?" asked Clay contemptuously.

The gang leader made no answer. He chose to nurse his venom silently.

"Where's Kitty Mason?"

"Still no answer."

"I asked you what you've done with Kitty Mason?"

"That's my business."

"By G—d, you'll tell, or I'll tear it out of you!"

Clay backed to the door, found the key, transferred it to the inner side of the lock, turned it, and put it in his pocket.

The cornered gangman took a chance. He ducked for the shelter of the desk, tore open a drawer and snatched out an automatic.

"Love o' Gawd, D-don't Shoot!" He Chattered. "I Ain't Nobody but the Caretaker."

Simultaneously the cowpuncher pressed the button beside the door and plunged the room in darkness. He side-stepped swiftly and without noise.

A flash of lightning split the blackness.

Clay dropped to his knees and crawled away. Another bolt, with its accompanying roar, flamed out.

Still the westerner did not fire in answer, though he knew just where the target for his bullet was. A plan had come to him. In the blackness of that room one might empty his revolver and not score a hit. To wait was to take a chance of being potted, but he did not want the death of even such a ruffian as Durand on his soul.

The crash of the automatic and the rattle of glass filled the room. Jerry, blazing away at some fancied sound, had shattered the window.

Followed a long silence. Durand was resolved to wait until his enemy grew restless and betrayed himself.

The delay became a test of moral stamina. The contest was not one of grit, but of that unfaded nerve which is so much the result of perfect physical fitness. Clay's years of clean life on the desert counted heavily now. He was master of himself, though his mouth was dry as a whisper and there were goose quills on his flesh.

But Durand, used to the fetid atmosphere of barrooms and to the soft living of the great city, found his nerve beginning to crack under the strain. What kind of a man was his enemy to lie there in the black silence and not once give sign of where he was, in spite of crashing bullets? Was it possible that he could have killed the fellow at the first shot? The comfort of this thought whispered hope in the ear of the ex-prize-fighter.

A chair crashed wildly. Durand fired again and yet again, his nerves giving way to a panic that carried him to swift action. He could not have stood another moment without screaming.

There came the faint sound of a hand groping on the wall, and immediately after a flood of light filled the room.

Clay stood by the door. His revolver covered the crouching gang leader. His eyes were hard and pitiless.

"Try another shot," he advised ironically.

Jerry did. A harmless click was all the result he got. He knew now that the cowman had tempted him to waste his last shots at a bit of furniture flung across the room.

"You'll tell me what you did with Kitty Mason," said Clay in his low, persuasive voice, just as though there had been no intermission of flying bullets since he had mentioned the girl before.

"You can't kill me, when I haven't a loaded gun," Durand answered between dry lips.

The other man nodded an admission of that point. "That's an advantage you've got of me. You could kill me if I didn't have a gun, because you're a yellow wolf. But I can't kill you. That's right. But I can beat h—l out of you, and I'm sure goin' to do it."

"Talk's cheap, when you've got a loaded six-gun in your fist," jeered Jerry.

With a flirt of his hand Clay tossed the revolver to the top of a bookcase, out of easy reach of a man standing on the floor. He ripped open the buttons of his overcoat and slipped out of it, then moved forward with elastic step.

"It's you or me now, Jerry Durand."

The prize-fighter gave a snort of derisive triumph. "You d—n fool! I'll eat you alive."

"Mebbeso. I reckon my system can assimilate any whalim' you're liable to hand me. Go to it."

Durand had the heavy shoulders and swelling muscles that come from years of training for the ring. Like most pugilists out of active service he had taken on flesh. But the extra weight was not fat, for Jerry kept always in good condition. He held his leadership partly at least because of his physical prowess. No tough in New York would willingly have met him in a rough-and-tumble fight.

The younger man was more slightly built. He was a Hermes rather than a Hercules. His muscles flowed. They did not bulge. But when he moved it was with the litheness of a panther. The long lines of shoulder and loin had the flow of tigerish grace. The clear eyes in the brown face told of a soul indomitable in a perfectly synchronized body.

Durand lashed out with a swinging left, all the weight of his body behind the blow. Clay stepped back, shot a hard straight right to the cheek and ducked the counter. Jerry rushed him, flailing at his foe blow on blow, intending to wear him out by sheer hard hammering. He butted with his head and knee, used every foul trick he had learned in his rotten trade of prize-fighting. Active as a wild cat, the Arizona side-stepped, scored a left on the eye, ducked again and fought back the furious attack.

The gangman came out of the rally winded, perplexed and disturbed. His cheek was bleeding, one eye was in distress, and he had hardly touched his agile opponent.

"Had enough? I'll ask you once more where Kitty Mason is."

University of Colorado Receives $612,000 Check.
 Denver.—The savings fund of the general hospital and medical school of the University of Colorado is $612,000 richer by virtue of a check for that amount received by Clark G. Mitchell, of the Bankers Trust Company, regent of the university, from the Rockefeller Foundation of New York City. Six hundred thousand dollars of this sum is a part of $700,000 promised from the Rockefeller Foundation as a gift for medical and hospital needs of Colorado.

The $12,000 is a part of a donation of $50,000 promised by the foundation to tide over the medical school at Boulder, following failure of the legislature to appropriate the necessary funds. A condition was attached to the promise of donation by the board of education of the foundation to the effect that a like sum be raised among the people of Colorado, which was done, under the leadership of Dr. George Norlin, president of the University of Colorado.

Having been assured by Mr. Mitchell that the $800,000 would be contributed, the Rockefeller Foundation forthwith sent a check for that amount. The remaining $100,000 of the promised sum will be received in a short time, said Mr. Mitchell.

Casket Cloth Used For Gowns.
 New York.—Casket cloth was used for women's gowns and men's evening clothes in 1919 during the shortage of broadcloth, according to testimony given at the trial of a suit for $21,744, brought by N. Becker and Company against Arnstedt & Co., Inc. The plaintiff alleged that this sum was lost through the failure of the defendant to complete deliveries of 400 pounds of casket cloth and that he was forced to buy goods in the open market at a higher price. The jury returned a verdict for $10,000.

Legacy Left To Mexico City.
 El Paso.—A legacy of $4,320,475 has been left the Private Beneficent Society of Mexico City by Mrs. Isabel Pesado de Mier, who died recently in Paris, France. The society was notified by a Probate court of Paris of the bequest, which is to be used in public charity work.

American Consul Tomas Orozco Jr. of El Paso said Mrs. Pesado de Mier owned much property in Mexico.

Recently the university started a campaign against scalpers refusing to accept pasteboards sold by brokers.

Afghan Border Scene of Raids

Anachronistic Struggle Between Bandit Hillmen and Peaceful Plainsmen Persists.

TRIBES ARE WILDEST OF WILD

India's Northwest Borderland is a Racial Crazy Quilt—Mountaineers Never Completely Subdued by Afghan or Briton.

Washington, D. C.—Dispatches from India, detailing the havoc wrought by raids along the Afghan border, may indicate to those who have traveled in the East merely that India's "annual frontier war" is on. But, as pointed out in a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society dealing with the northwest Indian frontier, troubles in the East might easily mean a great deal more this year.

"With the Near East, central Asia and India seething with unrest," says the bulletin, "any mud-walled Afghan village, with its battlemented towers might become another Serajevo."

Hillman vs. Plainsman. "From Armenia to Waziristan, where ever-wild mountains, destitute of crops, frown down on rich valleys and wide, fertile plains, there persists the anachronistic struggle between the freedom-loving bandoleros of the mountain fastnesses and the peace-loving plainsman. Steadfast stand the frontiers which separate the regions where law and order are a help from those where they are a hindrance.

"The tribes which inhabit the jumble of land between the Indus and the Afghan boundary are a wild lot. Malaria has left its mark on many, but the fittest have survived. Climate and famine, knife and jezail have disposed of the weaklings. Neither Afghan nor Briton has ever been able completely to subdue the freedom-loving mountaineers who inhabit this rabbit-hutch of warlike clans which have been used pro and con according to where the best fighting was promised and the best pay offered.

"These are the independent tribes, each with its own William Tell. And if their independence is noticeable from beyond the breastworks of their beloved hills, their local independence is just as marked. For every man who has fallen before the invader many another has fallen in the interminable inter-tribal blood-feuds.

"One might call the region the land of Pushto and postin, for Pushto is the language which binds most of the tribes together even more closely than their Mohammedan religion.

"The Pathans claim descent from the lost tribes of Israel, who were carried captive into Media by Nebuchadnezzar. That makes them close relatives of the Durand Afghans, whose dynasty still rules Afghanistan. But there are Pathans and Pathans, and locally at least they are called by other names.

"Ghizal Makes Fine Figure. "The man who wins deepest admiration is the Ghizal, upon whose caravans the frontier trade depends. Once their dynasty ruled Persia. Now they weave the shuttle of trade back and forth between central Asia and the Indian plains, bringing the rich rugs of Bokhara and Persian pussycats past the stern walls of Fort Jamrud to the Kabul bazaar in Peshawar. Tricky as a gipsy in horse-trading, full of contempt for the Hindu and of fellow feeling for the Sikh, warriors by courage, robbers by nature, traders by profession, the Ghizals are a many lot whose early forbears of Turkish origin lived in the central Asian lands whence they bring down the dried fruits of Murgah and the Zerfashan. Tramping along with his heavy-necked camels, his powerful chest bared to sun and wind, the Ghizal is a fine figure of a man, one who, dropped among the flat-faced peoples of the South, could well be thought a god.

"Call an Afghan 'Wazir' and he will show gratitude. Call him 'Wazir' and he may kill without warning, for the Waziris, the largest of Panthan tribes, are considered as dregs of the earth by their fellow Afghans. Their women are free and often unfaithful, their men hot-headed and vain. Their environment has given them fine bodies, but their souls are unredeemed. Nowhere is there a better example of a region where every prospect pleases, and only man is vile.

"Manhood is the first requisite of him who hopes to join an Afghan tribe. He must win his spurs before he is given a wife and his share in the tribal lands.

"Behind the coat of dirt which is the right of every tribesman except on durbar days both men and women are more than ordinarily good looking. In most tribes the women are jealous-

Spend Millions to Aid Veterans

Red Cross Has Used $10,000,000 in Assisting Disabled Ex-Service Men and Families.

ANNUAL REPORT ON ACTIVITIES

Contraction of Post-War Work in Foreign Fields and Expansion in Domestic Activities of Peace Feature of Last Year's Work.

Washington.—Contraction of post-war work in foreign fields, expansion in the domestic activities of peace, and sustained interest of the members of chapters in local service programs, are featured in the annual report of the American Red Cross for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1922, just made public.

Membership statistics show approximately 4,000,000 enrolled on July 1 last, and 3,300 active chapters in the United States and in its insular possessions and foreign territory. The peak of war time had 3,785 chapters.

When a year ago emphasis was laid on the fact that the Red Cross was spending some $10,000,000 to help the disabled ex-service man or his family, the general opinion seemed to be that the high mark for this service had been reached. Yet for the fiscal year just begun a budget of $9,090,892.90, or $995,590 more than was spent last year for soldier service, was set apart by national headquarters. Adding to this budget the funds which will be disbursed by the chapters throughout the country, it is estimated that the aggregate for the current year will fall not far short of another $10,000,000. These funds are devoted to a wide variety of ministrations to the disabled veterans which the government is not authorized by law to render and for which no funds are provided by congress. On June 1 last 27,487 disabled ex-service men were receiving treatment under the government, and authorities declare that the number will reach 28,000 by January 1, 1923.

Help for Veterans.
 In addition to individual service to veterans under treatment the Red Cross claims and information service handled 71,290 claims of all kinds in the year just closed. The chapters reported 1,935,079 instances of service to veterans and their dependents, at a cost estimated to exceed $5,340,000, and 64,174 allotment checks which the Post Office department reported undeliverable were delivered to their rightful owners by the Red Cross.

Although the service which the American Red Cross was called upon ly guarded and the reward for adultery is death to the woman and the loss of his right foot to her paramour.

"Warrior, freebooter, marauder, thief, the true Afghan will not keep a shop or learn a trade. The hills are his brothers, his knife his bosom friend, his matchlock his protector. He may lend himself to this faction or that, to empire or democracy, to progress or destruction. But above every other interest is his desire for independence.

FATHER OF BLOCK SIGNALING

Name of William Robinson Written Large in the History of Railway Transportation.

An automatic electric system of railroad signaling was put into successful operation for the first time 50 years ago. It was the invention of William Robinson, and the trial to which he submitted his signalling appliances was made early in September, 1872, at the town of Kinross, on the old Philadelphia & Erie railway in northern Pennsylvania.

Mr. Robinson is very generally referred to as "the father of automatic block signaling." His invention is recognized as the forerunner and at the same time the basis of "practically every automatic electric block signaling system in use on railroads today."

This tribute to his work appeared in a recent report of the interstate commerce commission: "Perhaps no single invention in the history of the development of railway transportation has contributed more toward safety and dispatch in that field than the closed track circuit."

OLD RAGS USED IN ROOFING

Discarded Odds and Ends Play an Important Part in the Nation's Housing Supply.

Old rags play an important part in the nation's housing supply, as most of the roofs on modern homes are partly made from them. In the form of roll roofings and prepared shingles, old rags cover more American homes than all other types combined. In the preparation of asphalt materials for roofing purposes thousands of tons of rags are made use of every year, Thrift states.

After the housewife has thrown away her accumulation of odds and ends or sold them to the leather-lunged junk man who roams the streets of all American cities and towns with his jingling bell, they pass through many hands before eventually reaching the factory, where they are sorted and reduced to a pulp. This is made into a raw, coarse fabric of long fiber and great durability. Into every pore and opening of this cloth hot asphalt is pressed and the material is then covered on both sides with asphalt and crushed slate. The product of the process is a very durable, water-proof solid material which is used to cover most American houses.

SOCIETY MEN WEAR CORSETS

Fad Spreading in England, and Said to Be by No Means Confined to Fops.

The corset-wearing habit among men is coming into vogue again, says an investigator in England.

"A leading London corsetiere who supplies most society men, puts down a good customer's bill at $750 per annum. Let no one imagine that it is only fops who wear them. The majority of wearers are military men, who, I learn, require a greater amount of padding than civilians. Others are ordinary well-dressed men, given to many sports, and by no means effeminate.

"A man's figure has to be gradually coaxed into shape, and it is put first of all into a soft silk corset with scarcely any bones, until he attains by degrees to the full glory of the perfect figure.

"This process usually takes three months, and five special makes of corsets are employed in the development, or perhaps it would be more accurate to say the 'repression,' of the figure."

WOMEN WILL FILL PULPITS

New South Wales Synod May License Church Deaconesses in Anglican Church.

Sydney, N. S. W.—The prospect of woman preachers occupying pulpits in many New South Wales churches has arisen as the result of a proposal which is to come before the next Anglican provincial synod, that women be permitted to conduct services under certain conditions.

The proposed ordinance suggests that the archbishop or bishop of a diocese may issue a license to a deaconess to perform any of the following duties: To prepare candidates for baptism and confirmation; in church, in the absence of the pastor, to read morning and evening prayer and the litany, except such portions as are assigned to the priest only, and to instruct and to exhort the congregation and to conduct services for women and children.

DATIL

Mr. and Mrs. Steve Garst went to Magdalena Friday and Mr. Garst returned to Datil Monday. Mr. Garst made a trip to Greens Gap in the middle of the week and was back home for the week end.

Sunday some of the Datil people went to Box H Ranch for a picnic. The day was simply fine, and every one had a wonderful time eating out of doors and climbing the rocks. Mr. Delmeter and Mrs. Reynolds tried their hardest to bring in a bob cat, but they only got rabbits. After playing games and visiting the picnicers watched the branding of the cattle for a short time at the Drag A ranch. The cattle gathered and being held at the Drag A ranch was a sight that has not been seen in this country for a long, long time--cattle as far as the eye could see and the big corral filled. They branded in the shute.

Theodore Gatlin and outfit arrived at the Drag A ranch Saturday with some 1200 head of cattle. The ranch is swarming with men and is the busiest place we have seen in so long it was mighty interesting. Some of the cattle are "spring" poor but will make it if they are not held up too long.

A bunch of cattle from Salt Lake district passed Datil Monday morning early on the way to market.

Heek Whitley is again working for the Drag A outfit and several new men not known by the correspondent.

Bob Seitz was down for his mail Saturday and got the long looked for fancy shirt and its a beauty. Bob and Ira run to colors and they make a very bright spot on the landscape.

Not long ago an amusing incident occurred at Datil. It seemed that the Lodge bought quite a bunch of hogs and the neighbors were worried to death with them as they ran loose.

The management said they would "speak gently" to the hogs and see if they would remain in the pen, but it seems that said hogs didn't understand ENGLISH--being Spanish hogs--and they persisted in rooting up things and doing a lot of damage. So some several villagers captured the "deaf" little hogs and at supper time put them in the lobby of the lodge. The management didn't think the joke very funny, but no damage was done and it served as a very good hint that hogs needed to be penned.

We read the Catron County Stockman with great amusement last week, and had only just finished reading about Major Gile and how he can fly, and how "Uncle Ramon" may not be able to fly 7000 ft. high, but he can always be depended upon to walk straight on his big long soberly legs, and about this time Reserve wanted us on the phone, and we went to answer the call, and as we came out we spied he Major, who we had read about as being ill and having to be put to bed in the lobby of the Lodge dancing the light fantastic in his big fur coat with a lady. We were overly glad to know that the Major was up and around.

Mr. and Mrs. Kiser were in Monday on business, and waited for the mail. They report much deeper snow in Pumpkin Center than here.

Mr. and Mrs. Drumm and Brooks Bryan have gone to Arizona for the winter. They may go on to California if they do not find what they want. Mr. Bryan is very expert in mining.

Louis Conrad, of Salt Lake, was in but went on to Magdalena.

Jas. Graham was a visitor Saturday night and stopped for dinner at Baldwins Sunday. Major Gile was a passenger.

Two herds from out West are passing at this time, and its going to seem very strange to have so many cattle leaving the country.

The water froze up at the Lodge Sunday night and Monday all the tourists had to get water from the upper well.

Alice Lawrence and Carol Cady went on a moonlight ride with Russell Pullen and Landon Peters. They went to Swingle canyon and enjoyed the ride very much.

Lorraine Cleveland is going to Albuquerque Saturday to remain for sometime. Mrs. Cleveland and other daughters will meet her in Albuquerque and all go back to Berkeley together for the holidays.

Billy Swingle was in Sunday. Mr. Swingle is shipping with everyone else.

Walter Martin and the McPhauls passed Saturday but are holding out on the plains until cars come.

$1,441,486 A YEAR'S DISASTER RELIEF COST

Red Cross Aided 145,000 Victims in United States--Losses Total $30,000,000.

Seventy-two disasters, with hundreds reported killed and injured, and more than 145,000 either homeless or requiring assistance, called for emergency relief measures and the expenditure of $1,441,486.36 by the American Red Cross during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, according to a statement based on the forthcoming annual report of the Red Cross. The greatest toll of life was taken by hurricane and tornado, while the overflowing of rivers, the breaking of dams and torrential rains drove the greatest number of people from their homes. The property loss was estimated at more than $30,000,000.

The year's disasters reported included twenty-six floods, nineteen tornadoes, fifteen fires, four epidemics, two theatre collapses, two shipwrecks (one an airship), and a bridge collapse, mine explosion, railway collision, and a drought. Of the floods in the United States that at San Antonio, Texas, caused the greatest property loss, $6,000,000 and the high mark of fatalities, 100, while the flood in the vicinity of Vicksburg and Natchez, Miss., forced 31,000 persons from their homes.

A National Calamity In the Red Cross disaster relief records there will probably remain for many years one calamity which touched nearly every state with a sense of horror and of loss. This was the distressing collapse of the roof of the Knickerbocker Theatre in Washington, D. C., resulting in ninety-six deaths and 125 persons injured. Situated in the center of the beautiful Northwest residential section, this motion picture theatre was patronized by many persons of prominence both in the official and civil life of the National Capital, whose family and personal connections radiated out over the entire country. The horror was intensified by a terrific snowstorm which, though it retarded, did not block Red Cross relief.

Airship Crash Finds Aid at Hand The crash and destruction of the U. S. Army's large airship Roma in Virginia last February with the loss of 34 officers and men and 11 injured was the first disaster of its kind to call for Red Cross relief in this country. The suddenness of the accident tested the preparedness of the organization and of the Chapter at Hampton, Va., but the response was immediate and relief furnished the survivors, also funds for the expenses of relatives of the dead, who came from long distances to claim their own.

In the year's overseas record for aid rendered by the Red Cross are two fires in the Philippines, one in Manila, which destroyed 1,000 homes, with a loss of $1,500,000 and 5,000 persons made homeless, the other at Tonlo, which drove 3,000 from their dwellings. In medical relief that was quick and effective the smallpox epidemic in San Domingo, which had a total of 22,000 cases with 225 deaths in a single day, tested the readiness of the Red Cross for action, and the same can be said of the San Domingo hurricane, which killed 152 persons and reduced the homes of 182 persons to wreckage. A flood in San Salvador, with a death toll of 50 and 2,000 refugees, was also effectively handled by the local Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Relief Machinery Perfected The year has seen the further perfection of disaster relief administrative measures in every field of American Red Cross activity, and that the work may be carried on to still greater accomplishments the American Red Cross is appealing for widespread renewal of membership during the annual Roll Call, to be conducted this year from Armistice Day (November 11) to, and including, Thanksgiving Day (November 30).

Red Cross Roll Call Heard World Around

The Annual Roll Call of the American Red Cross for registration of the membership for 1923 will begin on Armistice Day, November 11, and close on Thanksgiving Day, November 30. The ground work for this stupendous task of re-enrolling the membership throughout the world has been laid in a plan for the first complete and comprehensive system of registration of the Red Cross membership in all its 5,300 active Chapters at home and abroad.

An important feature of the round-the-world Roll Call campaign will be a universal effort to re-enlist the service of war-time Red Cross workers in the peace program by their participation in the Roll Call. In this way the vast army of volunteers will once more affiliate with the work of the Red Cross in its manifold phases. Cooperation also has been assured by Government and private maritime interests in a deep-sea Roll Call that is designed to reach every member or potential member in every part of the world who may be en voyage or temporarily in any port.

Thousands of Chapters will adopt the home canvass plan of enrollment which originated in Pittsburgh, where last year it resulted in a membership increase of 50 per cent. All records in this year's campaign will be kept on standard size cards to be filed by each Chapter for future use.
