UNM News Minute #414 – August 20, 2007

1. IN ORDER TO OPEN more lines of communication and bring more transparency to the operations of the University of New Mexico, UNM President David J. Schmidly has posted several key documents on his Web site for easy access and viewing. To view these documents, please visit President Schmidly's Web site at:

<http://www.unm.edu/president>.

2. A CAMPUS-WIDE emergency notification system, designed to send instant alerts via the Internet, e-mail and through text messages to all students, faculty and staff, is available for interested individuals. To sign up, simply click on the Emergency Notification System link on the UNM Home page at: <http://www.unm.edu/>, login using your NetID and follow the prompts. For more information contact Information Technology Services at, 277-1111. Questions can also be answered through FastInfo at: <http://fastinfo.unm.edu/>.

3. DON'T BE A VICTIM of cyber-crime! UNM protects the confidentiality, integrity and availability of information for computer security. Information Technology Services provides guidelines for protecting sensitive information stored or accessed on computers. Learn more about computer security at: <http://its.unm.edu/security> or visit the ITS booth near the Duck Pond during Welcome Back Days.

4. WELCOME BACK DAYS continues Tuesday with "Health and Wellness and ROTC Day." Enjoy free massages, a climbing wall, pinatas and watermelon! Booths from the Safety, Health, Wellness and Recreation departments will be at the Duck Pond, while ROTC booths will be located on the SUB Mall. Great live music and healthy food available from noon to 1 p.m.

7. BEGINNING THIS week a new Web site, <http://www4.unm.edu/unmlive/>, will feature free pod casts of UNM news, events, interviews, arts and more. Current features include an interview on the campus climate for women with Summer Little, Women's Resource Center, and poetry by Master's student and National Endowment for the Arts Literature Fellow Lisa Gill. The University Communication and Marketing department created UNMlive to reach increasingly multimedia-savvy audiences and to deliver free education and “edutainment” to on- and off-campus communities.
