CANNOT DO WITHOUT BORAX.

Truth in Statement That It Possesses More Household Virtues Than Any Other One Article.

No one known article within our reach possesses the virtue of borax for general use in the household. As an antiseptic and disinfectant it stands pre-eminent.

As a washing powder it is excellent. For the dining-room and kitchen it is equally effective.

Added to dishwater it brightens the china and glassware and cleans the silver.

Coffee pots and teapots in which borax water is boiled two or three times a week are purified and entirely freed from musty taste or color.

As a simple household remedy for the many ailments of the family, borax is unrivaled.

If the eyes are weak or inflamed, a daily washing with a solution of borax will strengthen and cure them.

For sore throat a small quantity of powdered borax dissolved in the mouth and swallowed is effective.

A cold in the head may be relieved by sniffing powdered borax.

The bites of insects, as well as summer rashes, will cease to give pain if bathed in borax water, which is quite efficacious in curing burns, scalds and wounds.

The Home.

Oxalic acid and water, in the proportion of one to twenty, may be used to remove perspiration stains.

Do not rub fabrics roughly between the hands when cleaning them. It is sufficient to rub the cleaning fluid on gently with a fresh cloth.

If the spoon with which the cereal is served is first plunged into a cream pitcher the cereal slips from it easily, without sticking.

When books become badly soiled on the edges, if not gilt-edged, close the book tightly, then erase the marks with an ink eraser. This will cut off all the rough edges, all soiled marks and leave the book clean.

To remove an ink stain from a colored waist put the stained portion in sweet milk and let it stand until the milk sours. Hang the waist up and let the milk dry, brush it off and wash in the usual manner. This will remove ink when buttermilk has failed.

All rolled cereals cook in less time than the whole grain. Cereals should be cooked at least an hour. A little salt adds greatly to the flavor of cooked grain. Cold cereals, such as the various flakes, are much improved with strawberries and their natural juice. Cereals with a few chopped English walnuts are relished by many persons. The taste of all cereals is improved by rich cream and sugar, also rich fruit syrups.

Corn Pudding.

Score down the center of each row of grains of 12 ears of corn and with dull knife press out the pulp. Canned corn may be used when green corn is not available. Separate four eggs, beat the yolks; add half a pint of milk; pour this slowly into half a pint of flour. When perfectly smooth strain the mixture into the corn, add a level teaspoonful of salt, a salt-spoonful of pepper and fold carefully the well-beaten whites. Pour the mixture in a shallow, greased baking pan and bake in a moderate oven for 30 minutes. Serve at once.

Sugar Gingerbread.

Use one cupful of butter, two of powdered sugar. Beat to a cream, add one egg, five cupfuls of flour, five tablespoonfuls of sweet milk, one large half-teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a little hot water, one tablespoonful of rose water, one-half of a nutmeg grated and one teaspoonful of cinnamon. Roll thin and bake on tin sheets. Mix granulated sugar and a little cinnamon and sprinkle over the whole, then use a crinkled roller.

Cuticura's Efficacy Clearly Proven.

"When about two and a half years old my daughter broke out on her hips and the upper parts of her legs with a very irritating and painful eruption. It began in October; the first I noticed was a little red surface and a constant desire on her part to scratch her limbs. She could not sleep and the eruptions got sore, and yellow water came out of them. I had two doctors treat her, but she grew worse under their treatment. Then I bought the Cuticura Remedies and only used them two weeks when she was entirely well. This was in February. She has never had another rough place on her skin, and she is now fourteen years old. Mrs. R. R. Whitaker, Winchester, Tenn., Sept. 22, 1908."

Law of Attraction.

The attractions of men to women and women to men are full of the most perplexing inconsistencies and contradictions imaginable. It is, for instance, a physical law that magnetism is not simple attraction of one thing for another, but the difference of two opposing forces of attraction and repulsion, of which the former is the greater. The same law holds in relation to the attraction of men and women for each other, in which, as a rule, the masculine is the superior force.—T. P.'s Weekly, London.

MT. ROSE

OBSERVATORY

FORECASTING STATION IN NEVADA

SNOW CORNICE ON THOMAS' CANYON

METHOD OF TRAVEL IN WINTER

The origin of the present automatic weather observatory on Mt. Rose is coincident with the placing of maximum and minimum thermometers there June 29, 1905, to obtain further data on summit temperatures in winter in the Sierra Nevada. The impulse thereto was given by the enthusiasm of Prof. McAuley, who had foreseen the value of high mountain weather stations to the general service, but whose endeavors had met a temporary check in the failure of Mr. Bonnett to reach the summit of Mount Whitney with a minimum thermometer on account of early storms in the autumn of 1904.

The observatory is in shape and furnishings the counterpart of a ship's cabin, and is made of tongue and groove lumber, with a covering of Malthoid roofing and tar, and fitted with plate glass observation windows.

The building is held in place by being set in a nest excavated in the solid rock and wedged there firmly by smaller rock and slate driven stoutly between the wall of the building and the faces of the excavation.

A precipitation tank, 30 inches in diameter and 4 feet high was built at Reno and carried to the summit on the backs of reliable horses. This tank was sunk in the rock to protect it from freezing.

A mercurial barometer and case belonging to the Nevada agricultural experiment station was installed in the observatory just before winter closed in and has been of great value as a standard with which to compare the barograph.

The general outfitting of the observatory was accomplished largely by gifts and loans. A collection of works on meteorology and climatology was furnished by the weather bureau and the experiment station. An 8x10 camera with extensible bellows was loaned by the department of entomology and a 3 1/2 x 4 1/4 folding kodak equipped with Goetz lens by the writer. An Al-Vista (panoramic) camera was later furnished by the experiment station to supplement the others. The bedding was procured by withdrawing the sleeping bags and blankets used to such advantage the previous winter at Contact Pass.

Despite the lack of long range instruments, observations have been continued by means of bi-weekly or monthly visits throughout the year. On one occasion, March 28-29, 1907, the party, consisting of Prof. Branden and the writer, failed to reach the summit after a prolonged struggle with soft snow, in which the Canadian snow-shoes broke beneath the strain. This failure occurred almost exactly on the anniversary of the failure of the two consecutive attempts the year before.

The most valuable results of these observations is a climatological record extending over two years. This record, though necessarily fragmentary on account of the inadequacy of the instruments, still represents the general characteristics of the temperature at the summit of Mt. Rose. So far as possible, the tables will be arranged by months and seasons.

Continued observations on Mt. Rose and two reconnaissance trips in co-operation with Dr. Kennedy along the northern end of the Carson range from Verdi to Lake Tahoe, and over Mt. Pluto, have led to some practical conclusions on the relation of timber to the conservation of snow. Further trips are in contemplation to verify the conclusions already reached and copious notes and illustrative photographs have been made for a bulletin on the subject.

One phase of the timber and snow problem that has evidently received little attention, so far as could be determined from available publications, and one of great importance to the arid mountain states will be briefly outlined here.

The chief concern of the arid belt is to obtain natural reservoirs of moisture of the greatest possible capacity in order to keep the flow of the streams as constant as possible. Artificial reservoirs have been constructed at large cost chiefly by the government, but without the larger natural reservoirs—the lakes and the snow—behind them, their capacity would be quite insufficient to accomplish the irrigation planned.

Now to keep the reservoirs of snow long unmelted it is necessary to have as small a surface as possible exposed to the sun and the wind and particularly to keep the snow at a high altitude, where the nights are cold and the melting is retarded. The canyons, which serve as deep bins into which the snow is blown from the higher slopes, increase the depth of the snow and decrease its exposed surface. But the timber on the higher slopes—often the timber line—accomplishes far more, causing the drifting snow to bank, each tree or island of trees producing a mound of snow where the wind current loses its momentum. These hummocks often remain after the canyons' depths have released their snow. The ideal situation, however, for conserving the snow is on the lips of canyons fringed with timber. Then the sharp snow cornices fashioned by the wind are made deep and broad by the timber fringe, which breaks the violence of the wind and causes it to deposit its freight of snow most advantageously. Thus the bulk of the snow on the high mountains is preserved where it falls, in cold storage, so to speak, against the late summer.

Although the timber high on the slopes of mountains may, in general, be the last to be destroyed, yet the increasing demands for timber and the presence of a supply of water to flume this timber lay it open to attack. And the timber belt, almost even the timber line, on Mt. Rose was so attacked and greatly depleted in the days of the Comstock boom, as evidenced by the whitening stumps and abandoned saws above the altitude of 9,000 feet. None too early has the government protected the high mountains around Lake Tahoe and the Ruby mountains, the natural sources of the streams of northern Nevada. The protection of smaller areas on other high ranges of the state have now secured to the streams flowing from them the perpetuity of their present flow. The government should also extend its protection to the lesser branches of the Truckee river and especially to Hunter creek, the partial source of Reno's future water supply.—J. E. Church, Jr., Ph. D.

ECHO.

Tell me, 'midst the heather lying,
Puffing at a cheap Manila,
What it is that sets me sighing
For the hand of rich Priscilla?
Echo: "Siller!"

Though she's homely, don't suppose I
With that fact am unacquainted;
Though her face is wondrous rosy,
Echo, say it isn't painted!
Echo: "Ain't it!"

But she scorns me; her extensive
Wealth she very highly prizes,
Is there nothing inexpensive
That a lady's love entices?
Echo: "Yes!"

Echo, if you had my chances
At a ball would you be bolder?
What would you do when she dances
With her hand upon your shoulder?
Echo: "Hold her!"

Yes, you're right, no girl shall show to Me, the last of the O'Grady's,
Such contempt, so she may go to
(What's the word to use to ladies?)
Echo: ———

MAKING A GARDEN.

I got some packages of seeds and planted them in rows.
The land was freed
From clod and weed
And watered with a hose.

And where I planted early peas, I take my solemn vow,
That early peas
Wave in the breeze
And gayly blossom now.

I hate to balk the humorists, but I am forced to say
That beans have grown
Where beans were sown
It sometimes works that way.

Sofa on Which Dickens Died.

The sofa on which Dickens died at Gadshill has just been presented to the Dickens museum at Portsmouth. He was at work on "Edwin Drood" on the evening before his death, when he came in fatigued and after a few words to his sister-in-law, Miss Hogarth, fell to the floor, never to speak again. The couch is of rosewood and covered with green plush.

"What is the secret of your success?" we asked of the great physicalian.

"I acquired the art of concealing my ignorance," answered the wise M. D.

I dreamed I was a millionaire,
But, alas! when I awoke
I found myself, as usual,
Just broke, broke, broke.

THE OBJECT HE HAD IN VIEW

Farmer Had Not Much Expectation of Turkeys, But He Was Not Losing Anything.

A Rhode Island farmer set a bantam hen on 14 turkey eggs, and great was the scandal thereof throughout the neighborhood. Friends from far and near dropped in for to see and for to admire the freakish feat.

"Sa-ay, Silas," asked envious Hiram Haggars, "haow many turkeys d' yew cal'late ter git out'er them aigs?"

"Oh, shucks!" Silas answered. "I ain't cal'latin' t' git many turkeys. I jest admire t' see that pesky little critter a-spreadin' herself."—Harper's Weekly.

A Baseball Preacher.

It was just at the beginning of the baseball season when an Episcopal clergyman, who is an ardent and enthusiastic lover of the great American game, inadvertently remarked at the end of the portion of Scriptures which he read:

"Here endeth the first innings."
Then he woke up.

INO. A. HALEY, Editor.

The greatest railroad magnate the world ever knew—Edward H. Harriman—lies dead in his palatial mansion on the Hudson.

A great fuss is being raised throughout the country over the fact that Cook and Peary went to the north pole, placed their marks there and returned, all of which is of little interest to the people of this territory. The people of New Mexico are more interested in seeing all good citizens going to the poles on election days and placing a democratic mark there for good government.

President Taft will be in Albuquerque during the fair, and all who would like to see a real, live president may do so by attending the gathering in the Duke City during the week October 11-16. Reduced rates will be in effect on the railroads, and a few days spent in the territorial metropolis will harm no one; besides giving us all an opportunity to see a real, live one. Let's all go see the chief magistrate.

Our government has placed a ban on lotteries, denying them the privileges of the mail. This is considered gambling, because the question of money is involved, and is therefore immoral. Yet it does not hesitate to engage in a lottery itself when the prize is land, and notwithstanding the fact that the drawings hold much larger prizes, in the aggregate, than was ever handed over by the operators of the Louisiana Lottery, the biggest of its kind in the world.

The people of Lincoln county have an opportunity to let the outside world know something of the county's resources. The Resources Exposition at Albuquerque, October 11-16, will afford a splendid opportunity to make a showing of what we have. People from all parts of the country will be there, and many of them will be there for the purpose of seeing what the territory has and is. Lincoln county should be there with products from her ranches, farms, orchards and mines.

The north pole has been discovered—twice—so they say; Dr. Cook claiming the first honor and Lieutenant Peary the second. Both are Americans, and as that spot has been sought by all nations for centuries we may be pardoned for feeling and expressing a little pride. But now that this long-sought goal has been reached, what have we gained? The pole is still there, if it ever was, and we have been taught so long that it did exist that we will not question it; and yet the world glides on as before, and the only gain we see is the creation of two temporary heroes.

KILLED HIMSELF AT DENVER.

News reached here the first of the week, which has later been confirmed, that George J. Upchurch had shot and killed himself at the Brown Palace hotel, in Denver, on the 2nd day of this month. The rash act is supposed to have been the result of mental derangement.

Mr. Upchurch was for many years an employe of the V V Co., of this county, and for the past five years had been foreman for the company. He accumulated considerable money during the time he was with the company, and a short time before his death was negotiating for the purchase of the Jap Coe place on the Ruidoso, valued at $10000 to $12000.

The past year the deceased had traveled quite extensively, having visited Europe, Asia and touching points in Africa on his cruise through the Mediterranean. He was a man of about forty-five years of age and unmarried.

NOTICE.

It appearing that a certified copy of the order of this board, made on the 7th day of July 1909 calling an election to be held on the 17th day of August 1909, on the proposition to remove the county seat to Carrizozo in said county has been published for four consecutive weeks immediately prior to such election in the CARRIZOZO NEWS, a newspaper of general circulation published in said county, and by hand bills posted up at three of the most public places in each precinct at least four weeks prior to said election, held on the 17th day of August 1909.

And it further appearing that the returns of said election held in said Lincoln county, pursuant to said order aforesaid, on the 17th day of August 1909.

The Board, acting as a board of canvassers, duly proceeded to carefully examine the poll books and certificates of each precinct in said county, and continued in session for the purpose of such examination, canvass and ascertainment continuously.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can't help it, Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't tifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physica, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physica are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

Geo. A. Hunt and wife were in town yesterday from the eastern part of the county. Mr. Hunt has but recently returned from Wellington, Kansas, to which point he had made a shipment of sheep.

P. C. Baird has finished taking school census of this district for the board, and reports a list of 341 children of school age. This shows over a 10 per cent increase during the past year, which speaks well for the growth of the town and community, especially when it is remembered that during that period every other portion of the county was at a standstill.

The dog-killer was abroad in the land Monday night, and has a successful "kill" to his credit. A number of worthless curs and homeless mongrels will never again howl as a consequence; but like all tales, it has another side to it. One valuable dog, possibly more, got the deadly dose. Scotty's fine dog, "Old King," a standard greyhound, is numbered with the slain. The number killed is reported at 27.

W. L. Gumm brought to town yesterday what was probably the largest, as well as the finest, wagon load of plums and pears ever hauled over the hill. The fruit was grown on the Bonito Park Fruit Farm at Angus, and included such favorite varieties as the large English blue plum, the Lincoln plum, the blue damson, and the German prune, besides Bartlett and Angeles pears, for all of which there was a waiting market in Carrizozo.

A man named Jerry Lucey, a denizen of Oscuro, was arraigned in the justice court of this precinct Tuesday morning charged with assault to murder. The complaining witness was named Harvie, and showed no external marks of the melee. The evidence went to show that both men had been drinking in a saloon at Oscuro. The men got into an argument, fell out and Lucey, in order to clinch his end of the argument, struck Harvie with a chair knocking him down. The defendant was bound over in the sum of $500 to await the action of the grand jury. Failing to procure bonds he was taken to the county jail.

Are you going? I am, and going to take on a few of the great bargains at Ziegler Bros. store.

Take care of your stomach. Let Kodol digest all the food you eat, for that is what Kodol does. Every tablespoonful of Kodol digests 2 1/4 pounds of food. Try it today. It is guaranteed to relieve you or your money back. Sold at Paden's drug store and Rolland Bros.

D. M. Cox was down from Ancho yesterday on school matters. A new district has been created at Ancho, and a school building is under way.

S. T. Gray, a prominent citizen of Capitan, and well known throughout the county, suffered a paralytic stroke last week, and his life was despaired of for a time. We are glad to report that he is now much improved, and hopes soon to be able to attend to his accustomed duties.

Frank E. Theurer, county surveyor, returned this week from Corona, where he was engaged the past month. Besides running land lines for a number of claimants, he made a survey and plat of an addition to the Corona townsite. Our neighbor on the north is making preparations to spread. May she grow and prosper.

A letter was received this week from a sister of Chas. Payne, the man whose dead body was found a few miles from town recently, inquiring for particulars about her brother's death. From the tone of her letter the deceased came of good family, was respectably connected in Texas, being a lineal descendant of the American patriot, Tom Paine.

THE HAY FEVER PEOPLE.

There is a national hay fever association which meets up in New Hampshire in August. Of course it will discuss the causes of this aristocratic distress, and one of the causes that will be considered relates to the effect of various plants, says the Ohio State Journal. Among these are the golden rod, the ragweed and the Indian corn, all of which are accused of this grievous assault on the human race. This discussion is particularly interesting because each of these flowers has its sturdy advocates for the honor of being called the national flower, and against them all, the hay fever association is preparing to utter its most urgent protest. The hay fever people have no candidate for this honor, for they look with suspicion upon all flowers while the dogstar rages. Some affirmative action they will doubtless take, and that is in favor of putting on the free list all manufactured handkerchiefs, and all raw material used in their production. A long account which tells of these things and many more, says the association, will open with the singing of the anthem, "Blow, bugles, blow, set the wild echoes flying."

Careful observers in the great crop states agree with opinions that have been expressed as to the outlook for wheat. The general belief appears to be that, with no serious setback, the chances are favorable to a larger yield than last year. The estimate of the New York Journal of Commerce that the output is fairly certain to reach 635,000,000 bushels, and may go to 700,000,000 bushels, is much within bounds, according to such judges as the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, which, taking the latest report of conditions made to the department of agriculture, figures therefrom a possible crop of 705,000,000 bushels, against 664,000,000 in 1908. If these figures shall be verified after the harvesting has been completed they will mean that the 1909 wheat crop has been equaled but twice in the history of the country—in 1901, when the total was 748,460,000 bushels, and in 1906, when the aggregate was 735,260,000 bushels. The corn crop, the greatest of all, and which last year beat all records, is still to be heard from, and necessarily will encounter more risks than wheat, which matures earlier, but so far the outlook is promising.

A foreign historian, who has been visiting this country, and is naturally writing about it, says that the exposure of financial scandals in the United States is not to be taken as evidence of general corruption, but, on the contrary, as a moral upheaval. He says that the revelation of this corruption and the outbreak of public opinion, leading to a regeneration of conditions, would be impossible in Europe, where the corruption would be ignored, if not required to be exposed for political or grafting means. Consequently, what looks like a national scandal is really a credit to the underlying morality of the American people. To be so written about by a returned visitor is so unusual that this writer deserves a Carnegie medal.

New York is about to build a $1-story hotel that is to be the highest in the world, but, as most visitors to that town can painfully testify, in one important respect its hotels were already the highest.

Weiga of Temagami

By Cy Warman

(Copyright, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

Seventy miles or more north of Nipissing, beyond the "Highlands of Ontario," where the moose and the reindeer roam, where the summers are short and the twilights long, Lake Temagami lies imbedded beneath the northern sky. Upon the silent shore of this translucent lake, where the mirrored pictures of the forest-folk, walking upside down, can be seen from your canoe, dwelt Meniseno and his wife, Weiga, their daughter, and an only son.

In the unwritten law of the forest the northern Indians have and hold certain dimly defined rights to hunt and fish in favored sections and "silent places," and these rights they guard jealously.

One matchless morning in the berry-moon, in a sheltered nook where the summer sun slipped in under the shore-trees and gilded the ripples of a rivulet that romped in from the wilderness, spilling its laughter on the limpid lake, Weiga, daughter of Meniseno, was drying her hair. The crack of a twig caused her to turn her sharply head and glance over her shoulder along the lake. She was surprised to see a great moose coming towards her, walking slowly near the water-edge; and still more surprised to observe, two oar-lengths from the shore, a bark canoe occupied by a solitary Indian, also moving in her direction. Upon the back of the moose there was a small pack, which told her that he had been tamed. It was equally evident from his slow movements and backward glances that he was conveying the canoe.

When the little barque touched land near where Weiga sat she saw that its occupant was ill. In answer to his signal she stepped quickly down and drew the nose of the little craft upon the shore. The big moose stood by stamping his foot threateningly, but the man in the canoe called to him, and then he seemed assured that the woman would do him master no harm.

For a time they talked, the man in the canoe and the maiden on the mossy bank where the brook came down. He asked whose hunting-ground lay along this entrancing shore, and she said it was claimed by her father, Meniseno, an Ojibway.

"I am an Algonquin," said he. "Let us be friends. I want to make my lodge here by this beautiful stream, that I may drink and drink and drink, for my spirit is on fire and my throat aflame."

"Alas," sighed Weiga, "my father is very old and very jealous of his claim; I fear he will not let you live here."

"I do not ask to be allowed to live here," said he. "I only desire to die here, hearing the song of that cool stream—and," he added, devouring the maiden with his hungry eyes, "the music of your voice."

The Algonquin, without awaiting an invitation, signalled to Weiga. She drew near and held out a hand, which he grasped as he stepped ashore. With simple confidence he asked her to take him up on the bank and help him to find a camping-place near the stream. Again she held out her hand, and again he grasped it. But when he had gotten to his feet he did not release her hand, as he had done before, but held it and looked earnestly into the face of the Ojibway, owning a vague feeling of peace and happiness altogether new to him.

On the following day when Meniseno stumbled unexpectedly upon the Algonquin's lodge he was obviously offended. Knowing this would be so, Weiga had not apprised her father of the coming of the stranger, for if he was jealous of his hunting-ground, he was over-jealous of his handsome, industrious, and well-behaved daughter.

Meniseno coldly asked the Algonquin why he had come to disturb the peace of an old man, and told him plainly he would not be allowed to live where he had made his camp.

The Algonquin's answer was the same as he had given Weiga—he had come not to live, but to die. He had pitched his poor tent there so that when death, who was now very near, should come to him, he might not die utterly alone.

At first the old Indian seemed to accept this simple statement, but when, a few days later, he found his daughter caring for the young man, he flew into a great passion and ordered the Algonquin out of the country. By this time, however, the Indian was too ill to travel, and so he heeded not the angry old man, but lay back upon his bed of boughs.

Unto the sick man the maiden ministered mercifully, and as they grew to love each other her father's hatred grew.

When the lone lodger had held out longer than a man may last, lying helpless without food or drink, the old Indian, whose malady was madness, now, lay in wait until he saw Weiga enter the lodge, bearing food and water for the sick man.

From that day the Ojibway spoke not a word to Weiga—He was now gone mad with a sullen, murderous madness, born of jealousy.

One moonless night when his son was away, when his watchful wife and Weiga were sound asleep, the old Indian stole out to where the Algonquin had pitched his tent. Meniseno's awful malady had robbed him of none of the inherent caution for which the bush-tribes are famous. Without the crack of a twig, scarcely with the rustle of a leaf, he had approached to within ten yards of the tent, when suddenly from the rear a great moose appeared and stood at the door. The old Indian, mad as he was, was terror-stricken at this unexpected apparition. The thing served in a way to sober him, and he demanded of the moose what God it stood for.—Glitchie, the good, or Mitchie, the bad,—but there was no answer. Then it occurred to him that it was only a moose which could be easily frightened away. Unfastening his blanket, the Indian opened it and shook it in the face of the mute monarch of the woods. The moose's answer was the stamp of one great foot and a loud "whoof," that froze the Indian's blood, causing him to hurry back to his hogan.

But the Ojibway was not to be denied. Lifting the heavy hatchet he carried in his hand, he let drive at the forest of horns that frowned at the front of the moose. The wily bull lowered his head and the charges of the moose, whose advances the old Indian was now dodging with a strength and agility peculiar to madness, brought the Algonquin to the door of the hut.

At sight of the sick man the Ojibway threw caution to the wind and ran towards the door; but the monarch nosed him vigorously, sending him to his back ten feet away.

The sound of the battle that had called the sick man from his couch had also awakened Weiga, who was running through the forest with the speed of the wind.

By the time the Ojibway, still clinging to his hatchet, had gotten to his feet and faced the four-footed god on guard over the Algonquin, Weiga was immediately behind her enraged father. The young Indian, watching from the threshold, saw Weiga fling herself upon Meniseno, and saw the latter throw her off as easily as the great moose might toss a dog.

She staggered to her feet and started for the insane old man, who with lifted hatchet, made another desperate effort to reach the object of his wrath.

Forgetting his illness, and all un-mindful of the menacing weapon that was glistening in the starlight, the Algonquin darted beneath the nose of the moose, caught Weiga, and dragged her into his tent before the old man could realize it.

Outside the battle went on. The merciless hall of iron upon the antlers of the moose maddened him until he was fairly blind with rage. With a quick turn of his great head the moose caught the aged Indian, lifted him, and tossed him high up in the trees.

When the body crashed back to earth the old moose snorted new defiance, but the old Indian lay quite still. The splendid animal shook his aching head, stamped a front foot furiously, but his adversary had quit.

Softly the Algonquin called his champion, and the big beast turned slowly and approached the door, as a faithful dog might come to be petted and patted for good work.

They made a light—the man and the woman—and went out to gather up the broken thing she had called father. To their surprise he was still alive, and they bore him in and laid him upon the bed wherein he would have murdered the Algonquin. Soon he slumbered heavily.

When day arrived, and the old man awoke, his reason had returned. He had been mad, he said. He had attempted to take the life of a stranger, but Glitchie Manitou had come in the form of a moose and fought with him.

He tried to move his limbs, but they were broken. All the bitterness was gone; all the hatred of the Algonquin had passed away.

As the aged Indian grew weaker, the Algonquin grew strong.

Finally, one twilight, when the September sun was sinking, when the summer bloom was blighted, and the autumn leaves were drifting over the placid bosom of the limpid lake, the light of the aged Indian's life went out, leaving a lone woman rocking to and fro, his head in her lap.

By the banks of Lake Temagami, where the winds whisper in the moss-hung trees and the waters lisp on the silent shore, they laid the old man to rest.

For him the aged woman did not weep openly, nor cry aloud, but to his silent sleeping-place she stole when the moon was low, and o'er his cold clay she shed bitter tears. And there she may be seen to this day, watching by the little rock-walled resting-place of the old Ojibway, and, browsing about, is a big bull moose, and across the Temagami comes a little bark canoe, barely big enough for two, and it touches the shore where a crystal rill, romping out of the wilderness, spills its laughter on the limpid lake.

"THE GREAT SEAL"

Affixed Only to Papers Signed by the President.

History of Its Development Down to the Present Time—Franklin's Objection to the Eagle as the National Bird.

Washington.—Gaillard Hunt, chief of the division of manuscripts, has just completed a historical sketch of the Great Seal of the United States, the sketch telling of the various stages of development through which the seal went before the one now in use was finally adopted.

When the continental congress made the obverse of the great seal the national arms it intended that the device should pass into common use among the people, as the flag had done, and, like the flag, the arms at first met with general approval, which soon gave place to an acceptance of it as an emblem of the power and sovereignty of the United States, which placed it above criticism.

Not all the fathers of the republic, however, were pleased with the selection of the eagle as the national emblem. When the badge of the Order of the Society of the Cincinnati was made in France in 1784 it was objected to by some because the displayed eagle resembled a turkey.

"For my part," wrote Benjamin Franklin, January 26, 1784, to his daughter, "I wish the bald eagle had not been chosen as the representative of our country; he does not get his living honestly; you may have seen him perched on some dead tree, where, too lazy to fish for himself, he watches the labor of the fishing hawk, and, when that diligent bird has at length taken a fish and is bearing it to his nest for the support of his mate and young ones, the bald eagle pursues him and takes it from him. With all this injustice he is never in good

FINE OLD HISTORIC PITCHER.

Possession of a New Yorker and Bears Good Likeness of Early Hostelry on Lake George.

Boston.—Charles H. Sherman of Glens Falls, N. Y., is the fortunate possessor of a fine old english pitcher made many years ago, which is of especial interest just at this time owing to Champlain centennial.

The Lake George Pitcher.

The pitcher, which is in perfect condition, was produced at the Middlesboro pottery in Yorkshire, and bears a remarkably good likeness of the old Lake house, one of the most famous hostels of earlier days, on the edge of historic lake George.

Lake George is connected with lake Champlain, and is one of the most beautiful sheets of water in the United States. As seen on the pitcher, one not only obtains a view of the lake, but of Prospect mountain, which looms largely in the background.

The picture is done in various colors and it is further decorated in gold and white.

So far as known, it is the only specimen in existence, for at the time it was made only two were ordered by Mr. Tucker, the owner and manager of the Lake house. One of them was given to a friend by Mr. Tucker, immediately following its arrival from England, but to whom has never been discovered. The other Mr. Sherman obtained not long ago, from one of Mr. Tucker's relatives.

In its early days the Lake house could be reached only by means of the stage route from Glens Falls. The building was torn down nine years ago, and while there are other hotels on the lake, there is none on the Lake house site, which is not far from old fort George.

The ruins of fort Ticonderoga are on the waterway connecting the two lakes.

Also Worth Considering.

"What we need in this country most is to use our brains more," remarks the Abbeville News, and we consider it pretty good doctrine. Brawn and muscle do their part in the affairs of life, but some brains are needed to make a success of almost anything.—Montgomery Advertiser.

Tuberculosis Conference.

Under the auspices of the Swedish National League Against Tuberculosis, the International Tuberculosis conference held its annual meeting in Stockholm July 8 to 10. Among the American speakers on the program were Dr. Hermann M. Biggs of New York and Dr. John C. Wise, medical director of the United States navy, who was the official representative of this country. Two subjects of special interest discussed were: "Care of Tuberculous Families, Especially of Healthy Children," and "Tuberculosis and the Schools."

Well, Not Very Often.

The little daughter of a Republican candidate for a local office down in Philadelphia, when told that her father had received the nomination, looked serious for a moment, then her wee voice trembled a bit as she exclaimed:

"Oh, mamma! do they often die of it?"

Good Knowledge for Divers.

As part of the education of the English naval divers, the beginners are taught how to save themselves, should they become exhausted, by allowing their suits to fill with air and shooting rapidly upward to the surface, where they are dragged into the boat by the attendants.

SURPRISED HIM Doctor's Test of Food.

A doctor in Kansas experimented with his boy in a test of food and gives the particulars. He says:

"I naturally watch the effect of different foods on patients. My own little son, a lad of four, had been ill with pneumonia and during his convalescence did not seem to care for any kind of food.

"I knew something of Grape-Nuts and its rather fascinating flavor, and particularly of its nourishing and nerve-building powers, so I started the boy on Grape-Nuts and found from the first dish that he liked it.

"His mother gave it to him steadily and he began to improve at once. In less than a month he had gained about eight pounds and soon became so well and strong we had no further anxiety about him.

"An old patient of mine, 73 years old, came down with serious stomach trouble and before I was called had got so weak he could eat almost nothing, and was in a serious condition. He had tried almost every kind of food for the sick without avail.

"I immediately put him on Grape-Nuts with good, rich milk and just a little pinch of sugar. He exclaimed when I came next day 'Why doctor I never ate anything so good or that made me feel so much stronger.'

"I am pleased to say that he got well on Grape-Nuts, but he had to stick to it for two or three weeks, then he began to branch out a little with rice or an egg or two. He got entirely well in spite of his almost hopeless condition. He gained 22 pounds in two months which at his age is remarkable.

"I could quote a list of cases where Grape-Nuts has worked wonders."

"There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

The Fire Station.

A fire station house was erected this week to house the fire engine and chemicals. The work was done by volunteers, so the cost of construction was nothing. The building, with the exception of the frame, is built of iron sheeting. It is small, but sufficiently large for the engine, hose and chemical apparatus, and stands on Alamogordo avenue.

Those who contributed the labor were: Frank E. English, F. W. Brockway, Noel B. Whitmire, Chas. Brasseur, Ben. Humphrey, John G. Scoggin, Andrew Bond, E. S. Long and William Brown. E. M. Bunker will do the painting. S. A. Neid furnished the stone for the foundation. Many hands made light work and the job was finished in a day.

Supplies for the chemical apparatus have been placed in the building, and all is now ready in case a fire should occur.

The volunteer fire laddies, of whom S. W. Perry is chief, will take the engine out occasionally in the evenings for a practise run, until they become familiar with the work, and should a fire occur the chief expects to see each man at his post attending to his particular part, with as little confusion as possible.

Commissioners' Proceedings.

The board of county commissioners met at Lincoln on Friday, Sept. 3, 1909, at 1 o'clock p.m.

The board met in special session for the purpose of receiving and examining the assessment rolls for the year 1909.

Present—R. H. Taylor, chairman; C. W. Wingfield and R. A. Duran, members; Robt. Brady, deputy sheriff, and J. G. Riggle, probate clerk.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The assessment rolls for the year 1909 were examined and approved.

The board adjourned sine die.

The dignity of the justice court in this precinct was rudely shaken one day this week when a prisoner from Oscura who was arraigned for a hearing refused to plead on the ground that, contrary to the laws of the territory made and provided, he was being tried in a kangaroo court. The court not being favorably impressed by the shape of the prisoner's head, overlooked the contempt and sent him to the county jail to await the action of the grand jury on the original charge.

Good rains have fallen in various portions of the county the past week, but only showers have blessed this vicinity.
