CARLSBAD DEVELOPING

Carlsbad Project Enters on First Year of Real Activity With Assurance of Success

Carlsbad, N. M., Nov. 6, 1909.—"Keep your eye on Carlsbad" is the suggestive slogan which appears on the business card of a well known Carlsbad farmer. This particular farmer is a land owner, a real estate man, a booster. He is also long headed and far sighted and he has a small fortune right around the corner which nothing on earth save an earthquake or sudden death can take away from him; for he happens to own land under the Carlsbad Project of the National Reclamation service. This is pretty strong talk; for irrigation projects are not always successful; there are such things as water shortages and other difficulties. Carlsbad has known all of these bad things. Under the old private irrigation system, disaster followed disaster in rapid succession and it is small wonder that there are a few, a very few, of the old, old timers who still shake their heads and look for the worst to happen.

But Carlsbad is one of the districts of the west where the worst is over. It has happened. The chapter of disaster is closed and the new era has opened. It is, in fact, wide open and one can fairly hear the humming of the new machinery of the period of progress. The season just closed has demonstrated once and for all the complete adequacy and the ultimate success of the Carlsbad Project. The water supply is ample. The system is working smoothly; acre after acre of rich land is being brought under cultivation. Orchard after orchard is being planted. Deal after deal shows a constant and rapid upward trend of land prices. The fact is that Carlsbad and the Carlsbad district have the goods, absolutely guaranteed and ready to deliver and delivery is being made and during the coming year is going to be made in constantly increasing quantity.

C. H. McLanthen, who is president of the Pecos Valley Water Users' association, and also president of the Commercial Club, Francis G. Tracey, A. M. Hove, secretary of the Water Users' association, C. M. Richards, Dr. E. E. Doepf, F. L. Dearborn, C. R. Price—there are a couple of dozen other men, too numerous to mention, but always on the job in this town which used to be sleepy but isn't any more. They are live, energetic boosters. Not boosters who talk alone, but the kind of men who get out and do things. They are getting results. Carlsbad is wide awake and the outlook for this town, one of the oldest in the Pecos valley, is as bright and possibly a little brighter than it has ever been, even in the halcyon days when it was the home of the only modern irrigation project in the west.

Not satisfied with having put the Carlsbad project of 20,000 acres into the front rank of prosperity the Carlsbad boosters are marching right along and now propose that the government shall extend the project. The proposal is a very reasonable one. There is plenty of water, the government has already expended a large amount of money there and with the expenditure of a comparatively small additional amount, will be able to greatly extend the acreage, reclaiming land which as it now appears cannot be reclaimed in any other way. Therefore, since it should be done the Carlsbad people have started out to get it done and they have a very good prospect for success. Secretary of the Interior Ballinger has notified the Water Users' association that he is sufficiently interested to look into the thing personally. He is coming to Carlsbad as the last stop in his southwestern trip to go over the situation thoroughly. The very best things are hoped for from this trip, of the Secretary. The extension of the project will mean a great deal for Carlsbad. But even should the proposed extension be turned down flat the prosperity of this town is absolutely assured.

There is no richer land on earth than that under the Carlsbad Project, the products of the land prove. Land that will produce prize peaches and prize cotton in the same field is pretty fair land to own. This is being proven by the keen desire of people now coming into the southwestern country to own the land. The past year has seen a number of important sales and others of even greater magnitude are pending. It is very easy now to foresee the time when every acre of land under the Carlsbad Project will be in cultivation, when it will be producing every variety of fruit known to the temperate zone, save only the citrus fruits, when it will be giving great yields of alfalfa and grain and cotton. For a town that has been called a dead one the prospect is pretty bright. It has been rumored that Carlsbad is to have a new railroad line crossing southern New Mexico to a connection with the Santa Fe at Rincon. A new railroad would help, but Carlsbad does not really need it as many other New Mexico districts do, for the stuff raised here is of such high grade that it is in eager demand in every market and will sell at a profit in spite of freight rate.

There is a spirit of optimism abroad in Carlsbad that is contagious. Your correspondent talked with more than thirty of the business men, bankers, professional men, real estate men, merchants. Each and every one at some time during the conversation said "Watch Carlsbad grow," or "Keep your eye on Carlsbad." These men are just ordinary, successful American business men, with ordinary brains. They have a sure thing and know it and that is about the sum total of the proposition. The hotels, which are exceptionally good for a town of the population, are well filled all the time. During the recent term of court here it was difficult to obtain a room, although the Schlitz hotel is one of the largest in New Mexico and the same management operates another one, almost as large. Land buyers and prospectors are coming in every day, looking over the country, examining the project and in a very large majority of cases, becoming permanently interested. It is one of the most encouraging prospects in New Mexico, this rosy outlook before Carlsbad.

The town itself is a pleasant place to live. Although there is considerable new building going on and in immediate prospect, the town has the air of settled conditions; it has perhaps more of the eastern farming town look than any other place in New Mexico. The streets are wide and shaded by giant trees; the stores are large, well stocked and attractive. All lines of business are represented and from the way they talk, every man in town is making money, from the professional men to the barbers. One eminent professional man told me about a farm he owns under the project. He bought it for a song. He seems to think the land is worth more than a hat full of diamonds, and it probably is. A lawyer who has plenty of practice and a comfortable income, has one chief ambition and that is to own just a little more land under the project. That is the most attractive feature of conditions here. Every man in town has faith in the project. It is absolutely convincing in its combined influence. No man can stay in Carlsbad and meet the business men without wanting to get hold of a piece of land.

A trip through the lands under the project is even more convincing than what the people of Carlsbad have to say. There is the evidence of revival and advancement everywhere. New farm buildings are going up. Fields which have been dusty for years are green; barns are full, young orchards trim and well kept are appearing on every hand. It is cheering and more or less amazing to one familiar with this country a few years ago. Your correspondent visited the scene of the Carlsbad project several years ago, just at the time the government had concluded to take over the project. It was pitiful. The men who owned land had been reduced almost to despair. They had been fighting, some of them for years. They had apparently lost the very last round of the fight and there was nothing to do but quit. But with the pluck that is characteristic of the west, they held on; at least some of them did, and those who held on are the men who are to be envied today. Some of them tell you that they are "land poor," and five years ago they told it to you with tears in their eyes. Now they tell it with a twinkle and suggestive of a fat bank roll in progress.

A visit down here is a revelation to the average man from the eastern or central states, and even to those of us who live in Central New Mexico. Just now in the beginning of November, when we are getting our first hard frosts and it is mighty uncomfortable to get out of bed in the morning, the Carlsbad man gets up at sunrise in his shirt sleeves and if he happens to have one, takes a look at his flower garden. The difference in altitude has its influence and at this time of year it is a very pleasant one. The expert farmer who cares to do so, can, by proper rotation of crops keep his land busy here the year around. If he

A VISIT TO THE FARMS

A Brief Statement of What Is Actually Being Done by the Farmers Below Town.

The Current man visited the lower valley Tuesday going by the ditch road to Malaga and returning by the new road along the east side of and adjoining the railway right of way. Not having seen the country for some time the improvement and development of the country was noticed more than if the trip were a daily occurrence. The various farms all along are being developed fast, especially the places around Otis where Dr. Dieffendorf has some 200 acres of as fine alfalfa as the sun ever shines on, an eighty of which is now being farmed on by E. S. Sprong, the former proprietor of the Missouri Hotel. Mr. Force who came in late in the season from the east has raised a big crop on the forty south of the old Toome place west of Otis. He put in thirty-five acres in alfalfa and it is averaging a ton of heads to the acre and two tons of feed. He also purchased eleven stands of bees from which he sold 600 pounds of comb honey and three of the stands were work, making no honey except for winter. With a good flock of chickens and a cow the family has made a good living and can pay all water assessments, taxes, etc., and have money left from thirty-five acres in crop and arriving here as late as June 1st. The Holmes farm with about four miles of back hedge and probably 300 acres of fine alfalfa is undoubtedly one of the finest properties in the valley. Mr. J. C. Keith across the road has his place principally in alfalfa and milo maize this season, all of which looks fine.

Mr. McShane west of Loving

Conditions in Carlsbad are very pleasant. The town is well supplied with utilities by a public utilities company which controls the electric light and power plant, water works and telephone line, which now has connection not only with the Pecos valley towns but with the entire plains country. It will soon have connection with Albuquerque and the entire territory and the west. There are splendid schools, good churches, well supported, all of the more secret societies and fraternal orders are represented and the people are of the kind with whom it is good to live. The Carlsbad of today is an eye opener, full fledged boom, but a boom that cannot react because it will be founded on the solid foundation of irrigated land with a water supply that cannot fail.—Special correspondence Morning Journal.

who came here from Chicago last year, has the finest residence and best field of cotton in the lower valley. His cotton of which there are fifty acres is being picked at present by Mexicans and is making about a bale to the acre. There are many other fine places around Loving and about 1500 acres of newly seeded alfalfa.

The following Loving farmers have put in the acreage in figures after their names:

alone is 1,500 acres. Several of the farmers around Loving have fine wells of good water, among them Messrs. Ten Fletcher, W. E. Ball, W. H. Carter and others. The water is found in sand and gravel at a depth of from sixty to ninety feet and is of a quality that compares well with the water of Dark canyon wells. W. H. Carter has also built a very fine residence. The cotton gin at Loving will run from 150 to 200 bales that with the seed will net about $80 per bale. At Malaga the farming district is not forging ahead so much, but the town is doing well. Mr. C. Grapes and wife, having charge of the new hotel that is certainly the best institution of the town. Mr. and Mrs. Grapes are former employees of the famous Harvey system and it is only necessary to stop at the Malaga Hotel to be convinced that it is in the hands of people who know how to run a hotel. Mr. Epperson, the blacksmith, has a record for quick work done properly and has a fine shop built of native gypsum mure into rocks and it is durable as well as very pretty material. There is very much going on at Malaga for the town has a newspaper, the Malaga News run by the Malaga Land & Improvement Co., with Tom Sanford as editor. G. P. Jackson is the postmaster, station agent, notary, deputy sheriff and pretty near the whole thing, while the town has carpenters, a drayman, Mr. Kinchloe, formerly of Carlsbad and several stores. Returning the new road along the railway was traveled and found to be a great improvement. Great quantities of alfalfa are stacked all over the lower valley and from present outlook there will be plenty for winter and spring feed.

Mayor G. A. Richardson is in receipt of a communication stating that possibly Governor Judson Harmon of Ohio will be a visitor to the Pecos valley in the near future. Gov. Harmon is one of the most widely known men in political life in the United States, and he is talked of as a probable candidate for the Presidency on the Democratic ticket in 1912. He was elected to the chair of Governor of Ohio which is generally a republican state with a good majority. Should he decide to make the valley a visit, the date will be announced, and arrangements made to give him a reception at the club rooms. Roswell Record

Loving Items.

Cotton picking and ginning is in full swing. The gin management reports good returns from limited amount planted. The price now is over 15c. per pound.

Samuel Hughes reports a bumper crop of corn this year and leads the valley in having his plowing finished at this time. Special mention is due to his foreman, Mr. Ed. Ericks, who has brought new ideas into the valley.

Alfalfa has been planted extensively this fall and all farmers report good results.

Chas. Tucker, who went to college recently is quite taken up with the new surroundings and is progressing fine.

The entire population of Loving turned out on Thursday the 4th inst. to say good bye to Mr. Geo. Sievwright who was returning to his home in Chicago after a year's stay at Mr. McShane's home near Loving. Mr. Sievwright was exceedingly popular with the young people of Loving and surrounding country. George is so impressed with the future of the Valley that he will dispose of his vast interests in and around Chicago and return and invest in fruit and other paying propositions. He is certainly making Loving his permanent home. We all wish him every success that is due him.

The Smith family are disposing of their valuable stock of farming implements, household furniture, horses and cattle at sacrificing prices, previous to their leaving for California, their future home. Any prospective buyer would do well to get in on these bargains.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Knowles have written several letters to their Loving friends. They are now located in a fine new home in Victoria, B. C. Santa Barbara. Sorry to lose Mr. and Mrs. K., but are delighted to hear from them without exception, and much interested in their welfare.

Mr. Mageritzke was in Carlsbad Saturday on cotton gin business. He carries a broad smile these days cotton is still going up.

Joe McShane is breaking a valuable young colt. He has been observed making fast time to school. Joe, you must be careful not to exceed the speed limit.

The churches frequently mentioned and much needed are now in course of construction. Bro. Ferguson is an eloquent champion in favor of church buildings.

Carlsbad, N. M., Friday, Nov. 12, 1909

Original Current established November 15, 1902. New Mexico State established May 12, 1905. The two papers consolidated October 11, 1907.

Office: Paper of Lddy County.
Official Paper of the City of Carlsbad

There has been considerable speculation as to the probable successor of Governor George Curry though none of the speculations have even hinted that he might succeed himself. It may be possible that after talking for a couple of months that another can be settled upon and that George will consent to hold on for another year. Can Taft find a man who will be all things to all men in New Mexico, another as good as Curry? If Taft is looking for a republican who will destroy the party in New Mexico, let him take an Andrews man, or even an adherent of the honest element of the party. No man among the republicans can unite the party if Curry cannot. Curry is fair and just. His efforts to exploit and advertise New Mexico have borne more and better fruit than those of any other. He has tried to equalize tax burdens but the territorial board of equalization has not assisted him and he is therefore powerless. His advice has been taken by many who have profit out of it. He believes that the poor man and man of small means should not pay taxes on a greater valuation than the big mercantile houses, the railways or the big coal mines and other large investments. It is not George Curry's fault that taxes are high but instead the fault of the system that has been working for years, even before he became governor.

That the freighters, stockmen and farmers of the Plains should be interested in the new road across the sands to their homes goes without saying. The road to Midland is a continuous stretch of sand and bad road, while to reach the Pecos at any other point than Carlsbad will necessitate much more expense than the present road will cost. The people of Carlsbad as usual, are doing their duty in the matter and will raise about $1,500.

The Carlsbad papers are taking the report of the recent grand jury very much to heart, and are hanging out some hot ones to the brethren. They are mild and gentle about it, the Current merely stating that the fellow who wrote the report is a liar and the truth is not in him, and a few little things like that. The paper also publishes a digest of Justice Cunningham's record, and claims to show that less than 3% of the $500,000 fines recorded there in the discussed period were whisky cases. It credits to whisky the plain drinks, and a few farcical and such like, but fails to summarize those other cases in which the fuss was caused by too much joy water. The omission is somewhat of a fatal one, to a person who understands the cause of most cases coming up in the justice courts. There is no question but that the noted report was hardly fair, but it is best to be fair in lambasting its authors, and for which no blame can be laid upon the Carlsbadites. —Roswell Register-Tribune.

Will the R. T. please specify and state what cases were brought up by too much joy water?

Or, does it just make a break and say without knowing that on account of pre-natal influence that all crime can be traced back to "joy water." In other words the parties to an adultery charge or a fraudulent check charge had some great grandparent who was a drunkard and hence the liquor evil was to blame for all the charges.

"TENDERFOOT BILL."

Roswell, N. M., Nov. 6.—"I am a newspaper man and would rather work on a newspaper than be president of the United States," was the vigorous statement made here tonight by Will Robinson, better known as "Tenderfoot Bill," in regard to a tender of the governorship of New Mexico to succeed George Curry, which he admits has been virtually made him.

"Have you been offered the position of governor?" was asked Mr. Robinson, who is editor of the Register-Tribune, by the Morning Journal correspondent tonight.

"Yes," answered Mr. Robinson, "I received a letter today from an official well up in the interior department which is virtually a tender of the office. I can give you no further details at this time, but expect to know more about it tomorrow. I can say right now, however, that I will not accept the offer, for I realize that I am incompetent to fill the position and besides I am a newspaper man and would rather work on a newspaper than be president of the United States."

Mr. Robinson is one of the oldest newspaper men in the Southwest and is widely known as an author, chiefly through his southwestern sketches, "Impressions of a Tenderfoot," "real unorthodox sketches of human interest," published in the Register-Tribune and many other newspapers. —Special to Morning Journal.

When the editors of New Mexico read the above they will go home and tell their wives that it is better to be the wife of an editor than to be mistress of the White House. At least that is what one editor did, besides this spurning of the office of governor will do wonders to make a lot of editors feel like as if they were appreciated in this world and will make them hustle for local and incidentally for cash to buy that new fall hat and tailor made suit. There is no telling how much good the refusal of the office of governor by the leading writer of the Pecos Valley will do for it has already done much to convince a skeptical public that the editor is a much more important man than the governor.

WHY BRIDGE IS DELAYED.

The following letter from the railway people explains to some extent why work on the Carlsbad bridge is not moving along as it should.

Amarillo, Texas, Nov. 8, '09.
Mr. A. C. Heard,
Chm. Board of Com'rs.,
Carlsbad, New Mexico.

Dear Sir:

I have to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 3rd, instant from Midland, Texas. Owing to other engagements our engineer, Mr. W. O. Dury Howe, will not be able to reach Carlsbad until the 18th, instant, upon which date he will be glad to meet you and go over the bridge matter. He has already made some preliminary examination of the ground which leads us to believe that the bridge as planned will force the river to cut around the west end of the bridge, and also to overflow our station grounds in case of extreme high water.

However, he will go over the matter with you on the above date.

Yours very truly,
C. W. Kouns,
Vice-Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

As is well known the low banks are on the opposite side of the river from the railway, and with a bridge sixteen feet high and ample arches there is no danger whatever from high water any more than if no bridge spanned the stream, which danger exists and always will exist until the bank at the points where the railway almost touches the river bank are ripped up with concrete. When the railway engineer is inspecting the location there should also be another competent engineer on hand to represent the county so that the matter may be investigated from both the side of the people and the railway. The river at this point is about 500 feet wide and has ample room for almost any flood.

ROAD TO THE PLAINS.

A determined effort was made this week to secure a first-class wagon and auto county road to Knowles, Monument and Lovington from Carlsbad. It was learned that the people of the country would assist with donations of work by men and teams and that the county would use all the resources at its command in Road District No. 1 to put the road through agreeing to furnish two teams and three men until the road was completed, provided the people of Carlsbad would furnish a like amount. Saturday evening a meeting of citizens was held with the directors of the Commercial Club to take whatever action was deemed best in regard to the road. Vice President C. H. McLanathan of the Commercial Club presided at the meeting and the plan to build the road was explained by W. H. Mullane, which was as stated. After some discussion the meeting endorsed a plan to pay at end of each month a sum equivalent to the amount expended by Road District No. 1 and on motion the president appointed a committee composed of W. H. Mullane, R. M. Thorne and W. G. Woerner to solicit subscriptions in Carlsbad for the building of the road and to examine same and report at end of each month, it being the sense of the meeting that the amount of work done at end of each month be reported and passed upon and if not sufficient that the work be stopped. Mr. Beale, the road overseer for Road District No. 1, estimated that with four teams and seven men he could complete the road across the big sand in five months with the aid of road tax work and donations promised from the country. Monday morning the committee got busy and succeeded so well that the amount necessary to build the road is already assured and will be paid out at end of each month and if work is satisfactory it will continue until finished. This is the first real effort that has ever been made to construct a road to the Plains and it is a good one, provided that the people of the plains come through with the promised donations of team work during the coming few months.
