CARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FEBRUARY 11, 1910.

NUMBER 1

The Spelling Bee.

A large crowd gathered at the schoolhouse last Friday night, the occasion being an old-fashioned spelling bee. The proposition was for the school to spell against the town. The school children lined up against one side of the wall and the townspeople on the other.

The battle royal began; and Johnson, Webster, and Worcester were not in it with the character of orthography that was dealt out on that occasion. The county school superintendent went down on the third word and has been "dreaming" ever since. John Boyd, although once a sheep man, put too much wood in ewe. Doc Pine, with a gentle, pleasant disposition, was an advocate of the simplified spelling and could not be induced to use silent letters. Frank Sager, though not a stockman, had browsed around in the bank for a score of years, yet wanted to substitute a vowel. P. G. Peters did likewise on a similar word. Matt Smith did quite well until he got among the animals and failed to spell correctly the richest animal in the world—the rhinoceros.

The ladies kept the school children guessing, however, and maintained a keen interest for many hours. Finally the weight of numbers told and the victory was awarded to the school, and in the ultimate result, Miss Edna Baird was conceded the prize. These contests will not only develop good spellers, but will be beneficial to all school work and we trust that we may have the pleasure of another contest soon.

William Frost.

A friend has furnished us the following short biography of Wm. Frost, an announcement of whose death appeared last week:

Born October 27, 1836, in the kingdom of Prussia; died February 2, 1910, at Jicarilla, New Mexico, death the result of old age and general debility. Came to the United States in 1862, joined the army and served the remaining years of the civil war. Came to Fort Union, New Mexico, in 1872, and to Fort Stanton, this county, in 1876, and from that date until his death was a resident of Lincoln county. The remains were interred in the White Oaks cemetery Saturday.

Old Citizen Loses Arm.

The Roswell Register-Tribune has the following to say concerning an accident to one of our prominent citizens who lives at Picacho:

"Uncle Johnnie Burns, one of the best known cattlemen in this section of the country, is now at St. Mary's Hospital in this city, and his left arm was amputated a few days ago. Mr. Burns is interested with the Bloom Cattle company in this territory, and has for years owned an interest in their cattle holdings. He has been the head man at the Diamond A ranch, and no cattleman in the whole country is better known than he. About three weeks ago, he was cutting up sugar beets to feed to the cattle with a machine that they have for the purpose, and his left hand was caught in the machine. He came to the city at once, and stayed several days at the home of James Sutherland, where he had the hand treated. Blood poison set in, and the fingers were amputated. This did not check the ravenous disease, and it was found necessary to amputate the arm just above the elbow. This was done, and he is now much better, in fact the poison is checked. His many friends all over the territory will be sorry to learn of the accident, but will be glad to hear that the disease was kept from spreading further. Mr. Burns has no family and has been at the above ranch for a number of years."

Good Roads Delegates Appointed.

A good roads meeting to select delegates to represent this precinct at the county meeting at Lincoln on the 13th, was called Saturday night. W. C. McDonald, the only member of the committee present, previously appointed at Lincoln, called the meeting to order, and was chosen chairman and W. J. Doering was selected for secretary. The chair was authorized to appoint a list of delegates, and announced the appointment of the following: F. S. Randles, Geo. W. Barrett, W. M. Reilly, L. R. Wade, W. J. Doering, Max Guebara, Tom Johnson, W. T. Thorndore, Ed R. Kelly, Lee B. Chase, Jno. A. Haley, A. J. Rolland, J. F. Kimbell, Geo. L. Ulrick, C. H. Brown, H. S. Campbell, W. E. Winfield, N. M. Scoggin, Frank Gray, W. C. Miller.

MORGAN IS BALKED

Finds One Thing His Millions Can't Purchase.

Wants the Famous Reggia Castle at Mantua, But the Italian Government Refuses His Offer of $5,000,000.

New York.—J. Pierpont Morgan, multi-millionaire banker can buy insurance companies if he wants them, but he has found one thing on the globe that his great fortune will not bring to him.

Morgan's greatest artistic yearning was to buy the Reggia at Mantua, formerly known as the Corte Reale, one of the most famous royal residences in Europe.

Mr. Morgan offered $5,000,000 for this magnificent and ancient structure, it is reported—a fabulous fortune in Italy. But the Italian government holds that the Reggia is one of the kingdom's monuments and relics and so it was impossible to accept the American's offer. Of course this huge work of art could not be taken out of the country, but its sale would have violated in a sense the law which forbids the sale of antiquities to foreigners.

The Reggia, which dates from 1302, contains 600 rooms and has an extensive frontage on the lower lake at Mantua. It has filled a large space in Italian history. During the epoch of the Gonzagas it was the center of culture, the arts and sciences, and there the most renowned artists, scholars and scientists found hospitality and financial aid if they needed it.

Miss Anne Morgan, the financier's daughter, who has toured Italy often, studying all periods and schools of Italian art, strongly urged her father to buy the Reggia, and was greatly impressed with the place where Isabella d'Este, the most gifted woman of the Italian renaissance, held her famous court.

J. Pierpont Morgan.

The original splendor of the palace is best preserved in the apartments of Isabella d'Este, which were decorated by Giulio Romano, Raphael's greatest pupil. The frescoes on the ceilings of these apartments were done by Andrea Mantegna. A hundred and fifty years later Rubens visited the Mantua court and contributed to the decorations of the palace.

Countess Morosini, a beautiful noblewoman of Venice who has much influence at court, interested herself to further Mr. Morgan's purpose to buy the Reggia.

The people of Mantua are deeply disappointed that Mr. Morgan did not gain ownership of the Reggia. It was his intention to restore it to all its former glories, but the public and tourists would have had access to it still.

CARPENTER FEDERAL JUDGE

Chicagoan Sacrifices $4,000 a Year to Accept Place Offered by President Taft.

Chicago.—Judge George A. Carpenter, chief justice of the circuit court of Cook county, has been selected by President Taft as the successor of the late Judge Solomon H. Bethea of the United States district bench in Chicago.

Judge Carpenter was chosen from among a score of candidates. He was not seeking the office, and the president, who knows him personally, is said to have made the selection after hearing from personal friends of the jurist.

In accepting a place upon the federal bench Judge Carpenter is making a personal sacrifice and told friends that it would require a revision of his mode of living. As a federal judge he will receive $4,000 a year less salary. The yearly pay for a circuit judge in Cook county is $10,000, and upon the federal bench Judge Carpenter will receive $6,000 a year. The appointment carries a life tenure of office.

Judge Carpenter was first elected to the Circuit bench in 1906, to the seat made vacant by the death of the late Judge Tuley. He was re-elected last June for a six-year term. He lives in the Twenty-first ward and politically has been friendly to Mayor Busse. Senator Cullom is said to have acquiesced in the naming of Judge Carpenter, although reports have it that Cullom favored as a first choice Charles B. Morrison, former United States district attorney in Chicago.

Exporting Hydraulic Power.

The government of Denmark proposes to carry out with the aid of its engineers the following plan: Upon the southern shore of the Sund is found the old city of Helsingborg, not far from which the Lagu rushes down from an elevated plateau over a stretch of about thirty kilometers. A fall of 100 meters is situated not more than two kilometers from the mouth of the Lagu. It is at this point and for the purpose of using this important natural motive force that it has been decided to establish a hydro electric plant, transmitting its current to Helsingborg (first relay). The submarine cables traversing the Sund permit the distribution of the electric energy produced in Sweden over the territory of Denmark. The island of Seland, in which is found the Danish capital, will be the first to benefit by this installation, which will be very easily carried out, for between Helsingborg (Sweden) and Helsingor (Denmark) the arm of the sea is very narrow, not more than five kilometers wide; due to this circumstance the work necessary for the establishment of the submarine cables does not present any insurmountable difficulties.

SLIGHTLY AMBIGUOUS.

"Doctor, this is the worst attack I've ever had."

"Never mind, it will be your last."

SKIN HUMOR 25 YEARS

"Cuticura did wonders for me. For twenty-five years I suffered agony from a terrible humor, completely covering my head, neck and shoulders, so even to my wife, I became an object of dread. At large expense I consulted the most able doctors far and near. Their treatment was of no avail, nor was that of the Hospital, during six months' efforts. I suffered on and concluded there was no help for me this side of the grave. Then I heard of some one who had been cured by Cuticura Remedies and thought that a trial could do no harm. In a surprisingly short time I was completely cured. S. P. Keyes, 147 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Oct. 12, '09."

Face Covered with Pimples

"I congratulate Cuticura upon my speedy recovery from pimples which covered my face. I used Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent for ten days and my face cleared and I am perfectly well. I had tried doctors for several months but got no results. Wm. J. Sadler, 1614 Susquehanna Ave., Philadelphia, May 1, 1909."

An Artistic Rebuke.

A well-known Jerseyman was traveling in a non-smoking compartment of a train going north. As soon as the train was well on its way, the only other occupant, without asking permission of his fellow traveler, coolly lit a cigarette. The reverend gentleman was relieved, as he wanted to smoke himself, but had been afraid lest his companion might object. But the opportunity was too good to be lost. Drawing out his pipe he leaned forward, and, with an ingratiating smile, blandly inquired: "Would you object if I were to smoke?"

Then They Came to Blows.

"What started the fight between Lobster and Shrimp?"

"Why, Shrimp called Lobster a 'meanly little shrimp,' and he called Shrimp a 'lobster.'"

Habitual Constipation

May be permanently overcome by proper personal efforts with the assistance of the one truly beneficial laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs & Elixir of Senna, which enables one to form regular habits daily so that assistance to nature may be gradually dispensed with when no longer needed, as the best of remedies when required are to assist nature, and not to supplant the natural functions, which must depend ultimately upon proper nourishment, proper efforts, and right living generally. Crowned King of Belgium.

Brussels.—Prince Albert, son of the late Prince Philippe, Count of Flanders, was crowned King of the Belgians Thursday, assuming the title of Albert I. With his Queen, Elizabeth, and their sons, Princes Leopold and Charles, the new King rode in state from Laeken to the Parliament, acclaimed by thousands along the gayly decorated streets. The oath of office was administered before a joint session of the Houses of Parliament and the feeble attempt of the Socialists to sound a discordant note was drowned by the cheers for the King's loyal supporters.

Cheered and praised like the suffragette jail martyrs in England, seven striking girl shirtwaist makers in New York City, who had served terms of five days each on Blackwell's Island for disorderly conduct during the strike, were decorated with bronze medals in the presence of 3,000 enthusiastic followers who gathered at an East side hall. The medals were given by the Women's Trade Union League. Three Vassar girls took part in the ceremony.

The Australian government is offering a prize of $25,000 to be supplemented by a similar amount publicly subscribed for the invention of a flying machine which can be put to practical military use. The competition is restricted to residents of Australia and models and designs are to be ready by the end of March, 1910.

J. J. Aragon, who is member of the Board of Regents of the Territorial Blind Asylum, left Monday for Alamogordo, to attend a meeting of said board.

The clipping from the New Mexican, published in this issue, on the apportionment of delegates to the proposed constitution convention, is a gem of the purest ray serene. The argument of the New Mexican is that the people of eastern and south-eastern New Mexico have too much intelligence to be permitted to incorporate their ideas in a constitution. On the other hand, the residents of the Rio Grande valley are recommended for this important service; for they are conservative, and as a proof of their conservatism, they are just where their fathers left them three centuries ago. They are like the Bourbons of France, "They have neither learned nor forgotten anything." Oh yes, if conservatism is what you want, and that is only another way of saying stand still, the New Mexican's proposition is a first-class one and tells the whole story.

Obeded Orders.

Patrick Diskin, a carpenter, who recently went to New York from the west, is in a hospital because he got on the outside end of a log when he sawed it off. He sawed off the log, standing on the outer end, six stories above ground. He had directions to saw off the log, which was projecting from the window at the height stated. He got out on the end of the beam and carefully sawed it in two between himself and the window. He and the log fell together to the pavement, yet, strange to say, the sawyer was not seriously hurt. When asked why he had done such a thing, Diskin replied with some heat, "Shure, them was me orders," which indicates in the answer that the principal must be a son of Erin.

Lots of things are going on in congress, but there is nothing doing, with all that, that will bring comfort to our friends of the east end. Judicial action is to decide the thing and not legislation, which will afford little consolation to the opponents of county seat removal.

Intelligence, energy and thrift are things to be condemned, according to the New Mexican. It says that it would not do for southwestern New Mexico to have too much voice in the making of a constitution. The moss-grown ideas along the Rio Grande are to be preferred, so it argues.

The number of applicants who took the examination here Saturday for census enumerator was for less than was expected. Quite a number had been furnished blanks, but only four took the examination. They were: Juan Blea, Francis Canning, E. H. B. Chew and Joaquin Serrano. The examination began at 2:00 and closed at 6:00 p. m.

Morrill Bros., who have the contract to build the telephone line through this section, were in town yesterday, purchasing supplies. They are putting up the poles and stringing the wire between Oscura and this place. Their camp is at Polly, from which point they are working both ways. The line is complete from Socorro to Oscura, and the present work will close the line between here and Roswell. Large and tall poles are being set and six wires will be strung.

The parcels post proposition is meeting with strong opposition. The measure has its good and bad features. Some insist that it would be beneficial to many in a small way, but that it would destroy thousands of small business concerns throughout the country, and have the effect of concentrating the business of the country at great centers. We are not prepared to say what the effect would be but are free to say that if it would have the effect of stifling individual effort it should not become a law.

EMBERS

By LEIGH GORDON GILTNER

(Copyright, 1929, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

He gazed at her with eager intentness. Outwardly she was little changed. Time and suffering had carved sharp lines about his lips and eyes and touched his temples with gray; while the woman's opulent beauty seemed but to have flowered into fuller perfection. Her face was unfurrowed; her eyes as lustrous as when they had last met his—but something had gone out of them.

"Ione," he said, "I came as soon as I decently might—to ask you to forgive me and help me bridge over these six wasted years."

"Forgive you," she interrupted, "why Will, I've wanted always to own myself in the wrong and to ask you to forgive me!"

He made a movement toward her, but something—or the lack of something—in her eyes restrained him.

"The fault was wholly mine," she went on quietly. "It was such a little thing—but I often think life's greatest tragedies grow out of trifles. A word from me would have sufficed—but my foolish woman's pride would not let me speak. If I had been—less uncertain—but it was at a time when everything was still indefinite. I was not sure of you—or even of myself. Yet I think you must have guessed that I cared; and I used to fancy—you did love me, Will?"

"Love you! In the years I've spent away from you I've sounded the depths of despair. I don't quite understand what kept me from being a brute to her; some inherited instinct of decency perhaps—my forbears were gentlemen, I'm told—though I had only myself to blame. She was an accident of Fate. It might have been any one else. I was mad enough for anything."

She drew a long, deep breath.

"It would have spared me something if I could have made myself believe that, Will, but I couldn't. I kept telling myself that you did not love me, that you never had and that my foolish vanity made me fancy it. When I heard of your marriage—"

"Don't speak of it, dear. I was desperate—half mad, I think. I thought you had been playing with me, that you had planned it all to show your power—ah, what a fool, what a miserable, blind fool I was! And then to drag that innocent girl into my misery—it was brutally unfair to her. But I don't remember that I thought of her. Suffering makes men selfish and I was wild with rage and pain. I married her with some mad idea of proving that your vaunted powers had failed—ah, Ione, if I alone could have suffered for my folly! I tried not to act the cad, Ione. Upon my honor I did my best. I tried with all my strength to keep the truth from her, but I think she guessed almost from the first."

"Poor child," Ione said softly, "Poor child!"

"Ione," he said wistfully, "have you no pity for me? It is the erring always who need pity—not the innocent."

She turned her eyes upon him.

"Will," she said slowly, "it would once have been balm to my hurt to know that you needed pity—but I'm past all that now. I used to feel that I could have given you up to her almost resignedly, if I had been sure that your heart was mine. But the time came when I conquered that feeling and tried to hope that you loved her. I think mine was not wholly a selfish love, Will. All through those first awful days after I conquered my bitterness, I kept saying to myself over and over, 'He loves her; he is happy. That should be enough for me'. But it wasn't, Will. I'm very human and after a little I grew hungry for the sight of you, for your voice, your smile—why Will, I could willingly have been a servant in your house—her servant—only to be near you!"

"Ione," he cried passionately, "Ione"—but she stayed him with a glance.

"What I lived through that first year and the years that followed you will not care to hear. It is not a pleasant story. But always the fiercest flame will burn itself out in time—the pain spent itself. Peace came to me—the calm of the lotus-eater. At first, a chance word, the casual mention of your name, brought it all back to me and made me wretched for days. But it is not so now. The flame has burned itself to ashes."

The man's face was drawn and miserable.

"I might have known, I might have feared this," he said dully, "I deserved nothing less."

She did not seem to hear.

"Will," she went on, "I used to tell God that if he would let me feel for a day—for an hour—that you loved me I could bear anything that came after. It seemed to me that if I might feel the touch of your lips on mine for one long moment, I should ask nothing more of Fate."

His eyes yearned upon her.

"And, now," he whispered tensely "now?"

"Now I think it would rather bore me," she answered quietly.

He caught his breath sharply. For six years he had lived for the moment when he and this woman should meet again—and now . . . He rose and strode across to the window where he stood an instant struggling for control. Then he came and stood looking down at her, his eyes dark with pain and passion.

"Dear," he said, "surely I've been punished enough. Don't torture me. Don't say it's too late."

She lifted her eyes to his. There was compassion in them—nothing more.

"Dear," he said pleadingly, "dearest!"—but she made no sign. Then suddenly he bent and caught her to him with crushing force, pressing fierce kisses on lips and brow and cheek. She did not resist. She lay passive in his embrace, utterly motionless and unresponsive. His lips grew chill; his clasp loosened. She faced him calmly—her cheek faintly flushed—but for the rest quite unmoved.

"It's hopeless, dear," she said quietly. "A faint flutter of the pulses—purely physical—nothing more."

He laid his face down upon his arms.

"God!" he said miserably, "I couldn't have lived through those awful years if I'd dreamed of this! She might have pitied him, but that she no longer allowed herself the luxury of emotions."

"Strange, isn't it," she said musingly, "that the things we most care for in this world come to us after we have ceased to care? Five years ago I would have given my life for an hour like this and now—"

"Don't!" he cried sharply, "I can't bear it!"

"I'm sorry, dear," she said gently. He did not lift his head. There was a little silence in the room.

"Will," she went on after a little, "there is something more. I—I am to be married soon to a man I've known for years. I gave him my promise soon after the death of your wife."

"You knew?" he queried sharply.

"You knew that I was free, yet you did not wait, you gave me no chance—"

"It would not have mattered. There was no chance."

"Then you love him—this other man?"

"If I did I should not marry him. I have exhausted emotion, Will. I don't live any longer—I only exist. My one prayer is that I may never love again. I have suffered enough. If I found I was beginning to care for Archie I should ask for my freedom at once."

He listened quietly—a hurt, dumb wonder growing in his eyes.

"As it is," she pursued evenly "I like, admire and respect him thoroughly. He's a fine fellow, our tastes are congenial and we're the best of comrades. I think he loves me in his way infinitely better than I can ever love him—but he will not be the loser by that. I can be far more charming to him as matters stand than if I worshipped him. A woman loses her power over a man the moment he knows she loves him. Till then he's her slave; thereafter her master. If I loved Archie I should be unnatural and constrained, striving always to be not myself but whatever I fancied he'd wish me to be; a word or look from him could make me miserable; if he glanced at another woman I should suffer; the fear of losing his love would constantly torture me—in short I should be thoroughly wretched. Whereas I think I shall be quite comfortable and content. Actors say they produce their emotional effects when their own emotions are controlled. So I shall play my pretty wifely role all the better because my heart is not involved. And I shall be happy enough—as happiness goes in this world."

"And I?" He queried bitterly.

"You also, Will. You'll marry some one else in time and probably be happier than with me. I've often thought, Will, that if I'd married you, I might have made you very uncomfortable. A great devotion frequently has that effect upon its object, I've observed. I should have wearied you with my affection and worried you with exactions; we should both have suffered and probably ended by boring each other. Even if our love had proved strong enough to survive the friction of daily life, we should in the end, after months of discord and discomfort, with occasional rapturous intervals, only have arrived at the point where Archie and I are beginning—a good comfortable camaraderie, which, after all, is the safest matrimonial basis. Good-by, dear Will. It hurts now, perhaps; but believe me, the pain will pass."

"Will," she cried impulsively, "you're so physically perfect that I wonder it doesn't touch me. I remember how I used to gloat upon the beauty of your face—the type is pure Greek. Could isn't it that I can consider it quite impersonally now, as I should a work of art?"

He threw out his arms in a sudden, desperate gesture.

"Forgive me, dear," she said gently, "I know its bitter—but it will not last."

Moved by a sudden impulse she drew the tall head down and kissed his brow. He did not try to speak, but the look on his face stirred her hard-won calm. His eyes made a last wistful, dumb appeal; then he touched her hand with his lips and went away. When the outer door had closed upon him, Ione drew a long breath.

"A moment more," she said, "and I might have yielded. But it is better as it is. I've suffered enough."

Notes of Women.

A French book on the evolution of the Englishwoman finds the woman's club—which in England is a real club, not a body which holds monthly meetings—an excellent institution for both married and single. For the married woman it is her "own place," where her husband cannot worry her, while for the unmarried it is a place where she need never be dull and where she can properly entertain friends of both sexes.

MUCH CARE NEEDED

CLEANLINESS IN KITCHEN IS IMPERATIVE.

Remembrance That "Food and Fingers Are Carriers of Contagion," Will Help Along a Much Desired Improvement.

There may sometimes be observed in the cooked dish a loss of flavor, not a bad taste, but a lack of what is appetizing. It would be interesting to know in how many cases this comes from a lack of cleanliness in utensils and methods.

Personal cleanliness is of course essential in the kitchen, and every good housekeeper endeavors to maintain a high standard in such matters. Some food manufacturers make special efforts to secure cleanliness and hygienic surroundings, and the good example they set should be generally followed.

"Food and fingers are carriers of contagion." The proper way of washing the hands, if seriously taught and seriously practiced, in the market and in the kitchen, would go far to remove the source not only of infection but of such additions to the food as are disgusting to think of. In this matter some food manufacturers are cleaner in their methods than are our kitchens. In one large bakery, where information was collected, the rule is in force that every employee shall wash his hands on returning to the room after leaving it for any purpose whatever.

The running tap, like the shower bath, offers a great improvement over old methods of washing. Few will have patience to fill and refill the hand basin until the hands are bathed at last in clean water, but this result is easily accomplished under the tap. The nail brush and nail cleaner must have their place in the kitchen, and their use must be insisted on before bread or cake is mixed and after work at all soiling in character.

Every one will admit that there is need for exercising great care in coughing and sneezing wherever such necessary acts may be annoying to others. When one recalls that experiment has shown that a fine spray of saliva may be thrown in all directions for a distance of four or five feet by a violent sneeze or cough, and that often the cause of the cough or sneeze is something which can be thus communicated to others, it is evident that there is abundant reason for caution. Particularly is this essential wherever food is prepared, exposed or served.

Olive Oil for Furniture.
By pouring a little olive oil over a soft linen cloth and gently rubbing over the surface of mahogany furniture the white covering caused by dampness, also all dust, is removed and leaves the furniture as clear as a mirror, and saves having it polished. For easy boot cleaning brush the boots free from dust, then with a bit of rag rub a little glycerin well into the leather. Let nearly dry, then rub with a soft brush. If rubbed after wearing with a velvet-covered pad or duster they will retain their polish for days, and the glycerin helps to keep the leather a good color and to make it soft and comfortable to wear.

Cream of Corn Soup.
This is another dish for one of the cold evenings that sometimes come in August. Cut and scrape the corn from six ears of corn. Boil the cobs in a quart of water for 30 minutes, remove the cobs, add the corn to the water, and simmer on the back of the stove until it is very tender. Put it through a vegetable presser. There should be about a pint of liquid left, and it should be thick and creamy. Add this to a quart of scalded milk—if you can afford a little cream so much the better—and season liberally with salt, pepper and butter. Serve very hot.

WOULD BE THERE.

"Hey, janitor, come quick. Here's a man fell down de coal hole!"
"All right, sonny, I'll look into it!"

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury.

Mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescription from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists. Price, 75c. per bottle. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Ready with Explanation.

A rector of Eltham once gave out the words: "Who art thou?" and, as he paused for a moment, an officer in uniform, who had just entered the church, suddenly halted, and taking the question as personal, promptly replied: "Sir, I am the recruiting officer of the Sixteenth Foot, and, having my wife and daughter with me, should be glad to make the acquaintance of the clergy and gentry of the neighborhood."

Worms

"Cascarets are certainly fine. I gave a friend one when the doctor was treating him for cancer of the stomach. The next morning he passed four pieces of a tape worm. He then got a box and in three days he passed a tape worm 45 feet long. It was Mr. Matt Freck, of Millersburg, Dauphin Co., Pa. I am quite a worker for Cascarets. I use them myself and find them beneficial for most any disease caused by impure blood."

Sunday Excursion to the Crater.

A party made an excursion to the crater of the Mal Pais, about eight miles northwest of Carrizozo, last Sunday. This excursion differed from that of Dr. Cook's climb up Mount McKinley to the extent that the party left their names in a can there, and brought back evidence sufficient to prove the accomplishment of the feat. Should a question arise, however, as to the genuineness of the feat, the party is prepared to submit notes and other data of the trip to that scientific body, whose headquarters are at Copenhagen, and that such data when called for will not be "Cooked."

Those in the party were: Mrs. Gallantin, Misses Elsie Mountz, Nettie Lee, Allie Johnson, and Messrs. Ed Kelly, A. H. Valkenaar and Lemon. When the party reached the foot of the Mal Pais and before making the ascent to the crater, they stopped and partook of a delightful lunch of fried chicken, hot coffee and many of the good things that the foresight of the ladies enabled them to supply. After lunch, the rough trail leading to the crater was followed, and upon their arrival there, exploration of the extinct volcano began. Monuments were established and slips of paper containing the names of each member of the party were placed in a can and cached for the information of any and all persons who might question the ascent. As the shades of night began to fall, the excursionists turned their faces homeward, arriving in time for a late supper—tired, but satisfied with the day's experience. Gran Quivera is the next objective point of the party, and they desire to explore the ruins of that buried city.
