BRYAN BOLTS THE TICKET.

William J. Bryan has declared that he cannot support James C. Dahlgren, the democratic nominee for governor of Nebraska. He announces his determination in the following manner:

"I am just leaving for Missouri and shall be absent practically all of the time for about a month campaigning in Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Indiana and Illinois. After that I shall be at liberty to speak for Mr. Hitchcock, the democratic candidate for congress, and for the democratic state ticket in Nebraska.

"In speaking for the state ticket, however, I shall not be able to present any arguments in favor of the election of Mr. Dahlgren. His position on the liquor question makes that impossible. I regret this exceedingly, for he has been a political and personal friend for twenty years, and it would give me great pleasure to speak for him if I could endorse the policy for which he stands, but he has chosen to make the liquor question the issue and make his appeal on that issue.

"He is making his appeal on non-partisan lines, with the liquor question as the sole issue. His courage is to be commended. It is an honest way of making a campaign, although it compels him to separate himself from friends who do not agree with him and to rely for speech-making upon those democrats and republicans who take his view of the subject."

The gubernatorial candidate defiantly answers the challenge thus:

"Mr. Bryan and I have been co-workers and friends, politically and personally, for twenty years, and during that time I have never wavered at any point along the line when his enemies assailed him, nor when he was a candidate for office.

"Mr. Bryan and his friends try to make it appear that this is a brewery fight. The primary election just held in Nebraska has demonstrated that the people of our state, without regard to vocation, farmers, merchants and workingmen alike, have rallied to my support and gave me the nomination regardless of politics because they are opposed to sumptuary laws.

"I regret exceedingly that Mr. Bryan and myself must part company for a short time at least. When the votes are counted, November 8, Mr. Bryan, the county optionists and all of the people who are trying to force sumptuary laws on the citizens of this state, will find out that they have got hold of the wrong end of a hot poker, because we will give them the biggest trimming which has been given in this or any other state in several decades."

Millions of Acres Given New State.

A total of 13,159,794 acres of land has been granted New Mexico by congress, including past grants, and those made in the enabling act, the latter, however, to become effective only when statehood is achieved.

In 1898 sections 16 and 36 were granted for common school purposes, amounting to 4,244,480 acres.

For territorial institutions, at the same time, a grant of 1,345, 814 acres were made.

The enabling act grants to the common schools sections 2 and 32, or a total of 4,219,520 acres; and under the same act the various territorial institutions are granted 1,349,980 acres.

In addition to these immense grants an extra 1,000,000 acres were thrown in for good measure, the last grant to be used in paying off the railroad bonded indebtedness of Grant and Santa Fe counties.

White Convicted—Second Degree.

Charles W. White was convicted at Alamogordo last Saturday on the charge of killing Pedro Aguilar at Tularosa some months ago, the jury returning a second degree verdict. There is talk of an appeal to the territorial supreme court. White is well known in this county, having lived here many years before going to Otero county, and has a brother, J. N. White, who is one of our highly respected citizens.

ROAD and FARM IMPROVEMENT

GOOD PLANS FOR CORNCRIB

May Be Used for Other Grain as Needed and is Not Expensive—Gives Fullest Protection.

In detailing plans for a crib to hold 1,200 bushels of corn, D. P. Barry, writing in Rural New Yorker, says:

Such a building must contain 3,000 cubic feet of space and support a weight of 42 tons. The desideratum in a corncrib is ventilation. A building to contain 3,000 cubic feet of space should be 12 feet wide, 24 feet long and 10 feet between joists. The foundation should be piers of concrete, and pyramidal, 1 by 2 feet on the top, five feet apart on the sides, three feet apart on ends. The center wall should be continuous, and may be of rough stone laid up roughly in mortar. Good foundations should be sought for. Stones with sharp angles weighing five to six pounds may be used in the piers; there should be an inch of matrix outside all stones. Put the forms together with screws and inch lumber planed. Lubricate the forms with soft soap before filling; loosen screws to remove. Sills should be 6 by 6 inches, joists 2 by 8 inches, 12 feet 8 inches; studding 4 by 4 inches by 11 feet; plates and rafters 2 by 4 inches; plates should be doubled. Place the joists on top of sills and set studding well toed to sills, 18-inch on centers, and thoroughly spike joists to studding. See Fig. 472, A. The upper tie joists may be 1 by 6 inches, well nailed under plate to studding. All material thus far preferably hemlock. Pieces same width as joists should be nicely nailed on studding between joists on sill to prevent rats getting on sill from inside, Fig. 472. The floor should be of 14 gauge perforated iron, or lay one-half inch mesh wire on the joists and lay floor over this. The perforated sheets would furnish ventilation. On inside of studding nail one-quarter inch mesh wire cloth, 11 to 12 gauge, with light wire staples, from floor to plate all over the inside except at openings.

Between the studding cut in strips all around and to the top, one-half by 5/8 inch, beveled on edges to a meter. These strips should be set at an angle of 45 degrees and may be three inches apart. Use window blinds for model. Cut gains one-quarter by one-half inch in sides of studding. See Fig. 472, B. Put strips in place and toe with sixpenny nails. Strips and studding should be surfaced, and may be set up in pairs and painted before being nailed in place. It will be impossible to drive rain over these. Put a shelf high enough from the bottom so two widths of one-half inch mesh wire screen will reach it; put shelf all around at same angle as ventilator slats. Rats cannot climb over it. Put openings above shelf for shoveling in the corn. Doors may be placed on sides or ends; rat-proof by using wire cloth or perforated sheets.

This building may be used for other grain by simply lining with building paper as may be needed. This is not an expensive structure, but will give the fullest protection.

LADDER THAT WILL COLLAPSE

As Arranged by Illinois Man Steps Fold Up and Permit Sides to Be Drawn Together.

There are several forms of collapsible ladders, but that shown in the illustration seems to be the most ingenious yet. It was invented by an Illinois man. The sides of the ladder, or the stiles, have recesses along their inner edges in which the steps fit and into which they can be folded. The steps themselves are hinged in the center with the form of hinge that opens only one way. When the ladder is in use and the steps are flattened out they are quite as safe as if they were of a solid piece. When the stiles are pressed together the steps break and fold into two parts, each part fitting into the recess along the side of the stiles and giving the ladder the appearance of a couple of planks laid side by side. The back supports of this ladder and the side pieces connecting them with the stiles are also jointed and can be folded into a very small compass. Though this apparatus is perfectly safe it takes up no more room when collapsed than a four-inch plank of the same length.

Ladder Will Collapse.

TUBERCULOSIS IN THE PRISON

Per Cent. of Sufferers is Enormous and There Seems but One Remedy.

From several investigations that have been made by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, it is estimated that on an average about fifteen per cent. of the prison population of the country is afflicted with tuberculosis. On this basis, out of the 80,000 prisoners housed in the penal institutions of the United States at any given time, not less than 12,000 are infected with this disease. If the Philippine Islands and other insular possessions were taken into consideration the number would be much larger. Some of the prisons of Pennsylvania, Kansas and Ohio show such shocking conditions with reference to tuberculosis that many wardens admit that these places of detention are death traps. Similar conditions could be found in almost every state, and in the majority of cases the only sure remedy is the destruction of the old buildings and the erection of new ones.

TOO MUCH ECONOMY

GOOD HABIT CAN BE CARRIED TO EXTREMES.

Housewife Will Do Well to Guard Against Penuriousness, in Which There Can Be No Possible Saving.

The housewife who is so conscientiously and rigidly economical that she is always bounded and surrounded by reversible silk skirts that should be thrown in the rag bag, or frazzled centerpieces that could be cut up into dollies, or lawn scraps that might be turned into handkerchiefs, should take a whole day off and learn that "every excess is a defect" and "extremes weaken."

Sometimes such painful and tedious economies are necessary. Often they are not. Once in a while they are ridiculous. At times it happens that they even cause misery. Perhaps you remember with what pangs of wounded pride you went to school in the metamorphosed dress of your elder sister. Perhaps you read about the girl who came back from boarding school and straightway rejected her young country lover because his economical mother had put tucks in his trousers to provide against his rapid growth. Anyhow, there are two kinds of economies and the kind that will monopolize your time from sunrise to moonrise and keep you humping forward threading needles or flashing crochet hooks, and maybe make somebody sour at that, especially when that willing old second-hand man offers to relieve you of all the non-essential dry goods, woodware and ironware for cash, it is for you to watch out that the goblins of regret and disgust don't get you.

Foolish Habit to Acquire.

Unless it is a case of "have to" the tendency always to create something new out of something old is not so commendable in modern housekeeping as some might think, and for the following reasons:

In the first place most of us claim that modern dry goods has not the durability it was known to have 50 years ago. Therefore it doesn't always pay to make over something old, since much of the wear is gone. Then there is always some doubt as to the fit or presentability of a made-over thing, and the market for all kinds of discards, including furniture as well as clothes, being always open, it is generally easy to dispose of things that are in the way.

Besides, the housewife who wishes to be classed as "up to date" must grant herself sufficient leisure to neutralize the domestic strain with social or intellectual felicities, so a few of those laborious economies must be cut out.

Here are some samples of erring economies that increase the burden of daily housework: A mother with four children and an excellent income unraveled a knitted sweater that was a little tattered on one shoulder and sagged on one side and crocheted two pairs of house slippers of the ravelings.

This used up all of her afternoon leisure for two weeks. By darning carefully and stretching this sweater a little, which would have taken her only a few minutes, she could easily have disposed of it.

Washing Crepe de Chine.

Washing crepe de chine is no more difficult than to wash a frock of colored muslin. If tepid water and good soap are used with care it will come from the laundry as triumphantly as a piece of white linen. Do not let it lie in the water longer than is absolutely necessary, rinse thoroughly, and when half dry press on the wrong side with a medium hot iron. If of a delicate color the garment must be dried in a shady place after pressing.

JNO. A. HALEY, - - - EDITOR

This is decidedly an "off year" for the republicans—they're being pried off the official positions.

C. J. Roberts has been appointed an associate justice of the territorial supreme court, and will preside over the 4th district. The territorial bench now has its full quota of members.

The Empire State republicans still occupy the center of the stage. The Colonel continues to hurl anathemas at his enemies—the Old Guard—while they respond with "curses not loud but deep."

Senator Eugene Hale of Maine announced, some months ago, his retirement from the United States senate next March. His constituents accepted his statement and made it impossible for him to reconsider.

The political pendulum has swung back. So far the state of Wyoming is the only bailiwick in which the republicans have expressed entire faith in the administration and republican policies. From Maine to California the "Old Guard" has been made to taste the dregs of bitter defeat.

If our constitution makers desire an example, they may take a squint at the election results in a few states, and reach the conclusion that old rules are not acceptable. We do not refer to democratic victories; we mean the changes in the republican party itself. Old ideas are giving way to new ones.

The constitutional convention should give us a constitution in "harmony with the spirit and needs of the times," as Colonel Roosevelt says. If it does not, those of us who do not like it can vote against it; and if it is adopted, willy-nilly, those of us who still do not like it will have the privilege of going elsewhere. This is not a rash vow, merely a statement of fact.

Another of "Uncle" Joe's confederates will be unable to assist in the organization of the next house. James A. Tawney, for eighteen years a member of congress from Minnesota, was defeated for renomination by an insurgent. Next to the Speaker, Tawney was the most powerful member of the house. He was once the "whip," and is now the chairman of the committee on finance.

Constitution building is not a partisan matter. The election of delegates was for the purpose of drafting a constitution for the government of the people, not for the benefit of any party. Of course, there are honest differences between delegates, and there can be no objection to such differences, but when the record of a delegate, as some of them have been, is bad, we have a right to question his honest intentions. Any delegate who is unwilling to give a patient hearing to the people is unfit to sit in the convention. He may not agree with the demand, but if something better is not presented he should heed the demand.

With all, or nearly all, the republican states turning insurgent or democratic, the democrats, for a short time, had the laugh on the republicans. But the democratic bolt in Nebraska and the row in Tennessee offer some consolation to the party that has lost so much territory. There seems little cause for the revolt in Nebraska, but in Tennessee the democrats can scarcely be blamed for leading an insurrection, and Pattersonism should be downed if every office in the state from constable to governor has to be given to the republicans.

HOW'S THIS FOR LOGIC?

The New Mexican does not believe that Arizona will be deprived of statehood because of its democratic predilections and vagaries. If its constitutional convention is careful enough to adopt a constitution that squares with the constitution of the United States, President Taft and the republican congress are broad-minded enough to let the neighboring commonwealth in, especially since New Mexico has proved its adherence to the republican faith and will adopt a safe and sane constitution. However, if New Mexico, too, should have gone off on a tangent, then the outlook for statehood would have been gloomy indeed. It is difficult to separate the fate of the two commonwealths. In fact, even though there should be a move to exclude Arizona, the democratic senators would filibuster to prevent congress from disapproving the Arizona constitution, and in that case, under the enabling act, Arizona would come in on March 4, unless its constitution was so evidently unconstitutional that President Taft would have to refuse to issue a proclamation for its admission.—Santa Fe New Mexican.

And by the same token, what will happen to New Mexico's "safe and sane" constitution if the democrats go to filibustering and the insurgents to insurging?

New Mexico's Area and Resources.

New Mexico is a large country, its area being 123,580 square miles. Only three states exceed her in size. They are Texas, with an area of 265,780 square miles; California, 158,360, and Montana 146,080. The altitude of the territory varies from 4,000 to 13,500 feet. Its population, when the census is given out, will probably show 300,000 people.

The mineral resources of the territory, in some respects, are larger than any state. The largest coal field in the United States is located within its confines, and the field is practically undeveloped. It has large and rich deposits of gold, silver, copper and lead; is high in the list in stock growing, with agricultural possibilities unknown.

LEE—CURRENT.

William Lee and Miss Sarah Current were married at the home of the bride's parents in White Oaks, on the 17th inst., in presence of a large number of friends, Justice Jules Kelt performing the ceremony. Supper was spread, following the ceremony, and the throng lightened the burdened tables.

After the guests had departed, a charivari party was formed and the home of the bride invaded. The young couple anticipated this; secured a vehicle and drove to the country for the night. Next morning they returned and the charivari party were still on the lookout. The girls took the bride, the boys the groom, and, contrary to the usual custom at such gatherings, the groom was the gainer. His captors took him to a store, purchased everything the newly wedded couple needed with which to begin house-keeping.

Opposed to Corporation Influence.

The News is not alone in its fight against a corporation-controlled constitutional convention, nor are the opponents confined to democratic newspapers. The Albuquerque Morning Journal is leading a fight on Charles A. Spiess, because of his corporation tendencies, and the Las Vegas Optic is defending him, but the Optic is of little service, as it practically admits the charges. In attempting to answer the Journal's charges, the Optic says:

"We admit that our candidate for president of the constitutional convention, Mr. Charles A. Spiess, is what is commonly known as a corporation attorney. That statement means that the corporations employ Mr. Spiess because of his ability as a lawyer. Does this fact, coupled with the fact that Mr. Spiess aspires to a high position in the constitutional convention, mean that if he is elected to the presidency he will make the constitution a pro-corporation instrument? We think not."

The Journal comes back after this fashion:

"Mr. Spiess' whole training has been with the corporations, and not with the people; and habit is second nature. He looks through the same glasses as do the corporations and sees as they do. His cunning may be traced to numerous legislative enactments, a subject that we hope it will not be necessary to take up in order to ward off the dangers that Mr. Spiess' selection will precipitate."

"Take, for instance, his course of action in behalf of his clients, the Santa Fe county bondholders, before the senate committee in the last session of congress, as commented on in these columns in yesterday's issue. The chairman of the committee asked Mr. Spiess if he would be satisfied if that provision (the provision suggested by Mr. Spiess) were put in the bill regardless of the appropriation of three million acres of land. Mr. Spiess replied that he would rather have it that way. That is, that he would rather have his suggestion in the bill than have the three million acres of land for the payment of all territorial and county indebtedness."

"In order that the suggestion made by Mr. Spiess will be fully understood, we quote from the report of the hearing before the committee on territories, United States senate, as follows:

"What I am primarily interested in in representing these bondholders is that a way be provided by congress whereby these bondholders may collect their indebtedness. I know of no better way than simply inserting at page 5 of this bill these words which I have written in a copy that I have, these words to follow the words 'New Mexico' in the sixth line of that page—'and the debts of the counties thereof'—so that this section will read: 'Third—That the debts and liabilities of said territory of New Mexico and the debts of the counties thereof, which shall be valid and subsisting at the time of the passing of this act, shall be assumed and paid by the proposed state.'

"At the same time, but further on in the hearing, Mr. Spiess made the following statement quoted from the authority just referred to:

"If the gentlemen of this committee do not think the state should be compelled to assume the indebtedness of all the counties, they can rightfully and equitably direct the state to assume the railroad-aid indebtedness, at least. Then, if the gentlemen think it would cast a hardship upon some other part of the state, reduce this three million-acre land grant which we have and make it four hundred thousand acres to pay that. That is a very small thing."

Has the anxiety displayed by Mr. Spiess in behalf of his clients before the senate committee abated? Why the necessity of such anxiety—what was the wisdom in throwing aside three million acres of land in order to get certain specifically worded provisions in the enabling act? What is the nature of the contract existing between Mr. Spiess and his clients, the holders of the Santa Fe county railroad bonds, or with the Colers, as agents for these bondholders? Is Mr. Spiess interested in the bonds of any county of the territory, and if so, what is the nature of his interests? All these questions occur to us and if fully answered by Mr. Spiess, or others, who are in a position to make answers, the situation may be considerably cleared.

"Why this over zealous desire of Mr. Spiess to become the presiding officer of the constitutional convention."

Territorial Game Law.

3. Wild turkey from November 1 to December 31.
4. Prairie chicken from September 1 to November 30, commencing with the year 1915.
5. Doves from August 1 to October 31.
6. It is unlawful to kill, capture, ensnare or in any manner injure or destroy, or have in possession any antelope, pheasant, bob-white quail or wild pigeon until the year 1914.

8. The hunter's kill for any day is limited to two turkeys, six grouse, twenty ducks and thirty other birds, and no person shall kill, take or have in his possession in any one open season more than one deer, with horns, nor have in possession at any one time more than four turkeys, six grouse, thirty ducks or other birds.

This course of study sets a high standard of excellence and compares favorably with the published courses of study of the older states and communities. Every effort will be made to keep the classification up to the standard of the "New Mexico Course of Study."

Mrs. Wallace Gumm will be in charge of the primary work. Mrs. Nora Massie, Miss Jane Brockway and Miss Pearl Taylor are other teachers who have been employed for grade work.

HIGH SCHOOL DEPT.

The High School Department provides for a course of study extending over a period of four years. Not more than the first two years of the course will be attempted this year, but it is the intention of the board to increase the teaching force in this department whenever the situation demands it, and pupils entering the first year of high school work this year may feel assured that the opportunity will be given to complete the four years course.

The work of this department is especially planned to meet the needs of those students whose school days will not extend beyond the High School, but at the same time preparation for college or normal school has not been neglected. Every effort will be made to make the work such that students who complete the four years course will find no difficulty in securing full recognition for their work on entering the collegiate department of the University or other territorial schools.

The requirement for admission to the High School will ordinarily be the essential completion of the New Mexico Common School Course of Study as shown by the Diploma issued by the Territorial Board of Education, or by an examination in the subjects of the course, and pupils will not be advanced from year to year of the course except upon essential completion of the work of the year preceding that which the pupil desires to enter.

A tuition fee of $3.00 per year will be required of all students above the eighth grade.

Carrizozo is well located at the foot of the White Mountains, and is supplied with water from the famed Bonito, a water that tests 98 per cent. pure. Parents desiring to send their children to school here will be able to obtain board and room at rates as cheap as ordinarily obtain in railroad towns in New Mexico.

Most normal schools and colleges require 15 high school credits as the condition for admitting students to their collegiate departments. A credit is given for the satisfactory completion of a high school subject studied for a school year of not less than 36 weeks, with five recitation periods of not less than 45 minutes each per week. A half credit is given for a study similarly extending over a period of 18 weeks. The high school outlined below provides for credits and half credits sufficient in number to give the equivalent of four full credits each year or 16 credits for the entire course.

In no case will promotions be made upon the mere lapse of time involved, but pupils must show that a full year's work in standard high school studies has been completed.

Nuggets from Nogal.

Andrew Hale called on Mesa friends on last Sunday.

The first frost of the season was noticed on the Mesa Monday morning.

Miss Cora Kelly, teacher of the Mesa school, visited friends in this place Sunday.

Walter J. Keller, the hustling and accommodating nursery sales man was in town this week taking orders.

George Killin of Bonito has embarked in the poultry business, and is now a full-fledged chicken fancier.

Who says there is no gold in the Nogal district? Plenty of it, and it only takes a little money and improved machinery to get it out.

George Braune and family of Bonito intend to leave for El Paso in the near future. George intends to engage in business in that city.

Picking and crating apples and pears for the markets is now in full blast around Angus and Ruidoso—very fine fruit considering the dry summer.

George Bowers of Saxony, Germany, is helping H. Ed. Keller put up his large crop of hay. It beats the band how the Dutch will flock together.

It is no more Mr. E. C. Pfingsten, but Squire E. C. Pfingsten. Get a hustle on, young men—the first couple desiring to enter the matrimonial ring will be hitched up free of charge by the above-named Squire.

Will Sexton has the largest and finest cabbage crop on the Mesa, besides an A No. 1 crop of general garden truck. Will has almost solved the problem of successful farming in this county—by first developing water for irrigation.

Laurie Bourne Dies.

Laurie, the 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bourne, died at Duran Tuesday, the 20th, and was buried there the day following. Typhoid fever was the cause of death.

A large number of relatives from this county attended the funeral, among whom were: Mr. and Mrs. Jno. H. Skinner and son, Roy; Edward, Fred and Albert Pfingsten, Mrs. Pfingsten and daughter, Miss Agnes, Wm. S. Bourne and George Dillard.

This estimable family had just moved to Duran from this county, and Lincoln was the birthplace of the subject of this article. Mr. Bourne bought out the Duran Telephone company, had moved his family there and his son was assisting in the operation and extension of the line. Laurie, just on the verge of manhood, was beginning to manifest an interest in his father's business, and was, naturally, encouraged by his father; and thus early gave promise of a successful business career. Death has closed the door of hope, gloom pervades the household and the parents are left the memories of a vanished hand and a familiar voice that is stilled.

"There is a Reaper whose name is Death,
And, with his sickle keen,
He reaps the bearded grain at a breath,
And the flowers that grow between."

I could not lie in bed over half an hour. My side was numb, sight affected, and a tingling sensation covered my body. It actually seemed as if I would go crazy. LEG A MASS OF HUMOR

"About seven years ago a small abrasion appeared on my right leg just above my ankle. It irritated me so that I began to scratch it, and it began to spread until my leg from my ankle to the knee was one solid scale like a scab. The irritation was always worse at night and would not allow me to sleep, or my wife either, and it was completely undermining our health. I lost fifty pounds in weight and was almost out of my mind with pain and chagrin as no matter where the irritation came, at work, on the street or in the presence of company, I would have to scratch it until I had the blood running down into my shoe. I simply cannot describe my suffering during those seven years. The pain, mortification, loss of sleep, both to myself and wife is simply indescribable on paper and one has to experience it to know what it is.

"I tried all kinds of doctors and remedies but I might as well have thrown my money down a sewer. They would dry up for a little while and fill me with hope only to break out again just as bad if not worse. I had given up hope of ever being cured when I was induced by my wife to give the Cuticura Remedies a trial. After taking the Cuticura Remedies for a little while I began to see a change, and after taking a dozen bottles of Cuticura Resolvent in conjunction with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, the trouble had entirely disappeared and my leg was as fine as the day I was born. Now after a lapse of six months with no signs of a recurrence I feel perfectly safe in extending to you my heartfelt thanks for the good the Cuticura Remedies have done for me. I shall always recommend them to my friends. W. H. White, 312 E. Cabot St., Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 4 and Apr. 13, 1909."

A woman may or may not try to avoid muddy crossings; it all depends upon her understandings.

BEWARE OF THE GASOLINE

At All Times Extreme Watchfulness Is Necessary With This Necessary Fluid.

"Take warning!" is a motto that should be pasted in large letters on every bottle and can of gasoline that is kept in the house.

This cleansing fluid is as useful as it is dangerous under careless handling. Here are a few precautions which observed will reduce danger to a minimum:

Keep it outdoors when not in use, as in many cases fire insurance is lost if it can be proved that gasoline was on the premises.

Be careful how you clean gloves on the arm. Dreadful accidents have happened in this way.

Never keep the gasoline can near the coal oil can. They look too much alike.

A woman went to light a lamp and discovered that it flamed in a curious way; indeed, shot up almost to the ceiling. It was discovered later that the maid had filled the lamp with oil until one can was exhausted, then had taken the gasoline can, which looked exactly like it. A slightly smaller proportion of the oil and great would have been the tragedy.

Do not close a house for the summer with gasoline or coal oil in it, though you may think it is securely put away.

A hot iron and blotting paper will remove grease from wall paper.

Use strong coffee and a few drops of ammonia to clean black coats.

One tablespoonful of water or milk should be allowed for each egg in an omelet.

Rice will absorb three times its measure of water and a larger quantity of milk or stock.

Allow from four to six eggs to each quart of milk in making custard to be turned from the mold.

When making net starch add a tablespoonful of sugar. This will retain the stiffness longer than usual.

The ordinary French dressing (three tablespoons oil, one and one-half tablespoons vinegar, one-quarter level teaspoon salt, one-eighth level teaspoon pepper) will moisten one pint of salad.

The creaking of a door can be stopped by rubbing the hinge with a little soap or lard. If the door sticks, soap rubbed on the place where it binds will allow it to shut easily.

Chamois gloves should be washed on the hands with mild soap and water. Then take off and rinse in water that is lukewarm and has a tablespoonful of olive oil well mixed before putting in the gloves. Dry in the shade.

For Simple Living.

Fancy cake is not possible without butter and eggs in abundance, but it is not necessary to the health of a family or the table of a good housekeeper. There are substitutes, like fruit—plain or cooked—gingerbread and cookies. It is not fashionable to eat too much or too often, so those whose pride suffers in the lopping-off process may solve it with that knowledge. But women of fashion do go to market and select food, keeping in touch with the novelties as they appear, and taking advantage of an overstock whenever it is to be found. They eat as a matter of course, while plain folk make feeding a prominent feature of life. Quality, rather than quantity, counts with them, for they have learned that food governs health in a great measure. They have also been taught that greediness of appetite is distinctly vulgar.

The new grandstand at the Inter-State Fair and Exposition grounds, Denver. —It is 100 feet longer than the one that burned recently, and seats several thousand more people.

Governor Shafroth struck a key-note when he said: "That it is high time for the states west of the Missouri river to join hands and show to the world what they have done and what they expect to do on to reveal to the world, the great possibilities of the future; that there is no better channel through which this might be accomplished than a Fair and Exposition devoted to the interests of these states."

On September 3rd such an exposition will open in Denver and continue until September 17th. The association which has heretofore confined its efforts to Colorado and a few adjacent states until it has extended its scope to every state west of the Great Lakes.

The management has spent a quarter of a million dollars in preparing the buildings and grounds for this year's event. To begin with the enterprise will have an informal dedication, as a national affair in the visit of Theodore Roosevelt as the guest of the Denver Press Club at a Cowboy dinner to be given under the shade of the trees near the Exposition buildings. This will occur on August 29th. Five days later the Fair will open.

The premium list aggregating $50,000, has just been sent out embracing the various departments, agricultural, horticultural, stock cattle, dairy cattle, horses, sheep, hogs, poultry, art, manufactures, etc.

In addition to these exhibits will be an extensive Horse Show.

ANNA GOULD AT LAST WINS HIGH ESTATE

ANNA GOULD, former Countess de Castellane, Princess de Sagan, finally has achieved the aim of years of social battle. She is now the Duchess of Talleyrand, and as such she at last becomes one of the foremost leaders of Parisian society.

Prince de Sagan is the hereditary Duke of Talleyrand. When his father died recently De Sagan became the fifth duke of that name. As the mere Prince de Sagan he was looked upon as an outsider by the highest society of the French capital. But as the Duke of Talleyrand he occupies an honored place second to none, and his duchess, the former Anna Gould, triumphantly enters into a position which for years her millions and efforts have failed to achieve.

The Gould millions wouldn't do it. Count Boni de Castellane's titles wouldn't do it. The royal title of the thoroughly discredited Prince de Sagan wouldn't do it. But the old, aristocratic name, Duchess of Talleyrand, opened the door.

Social Ostracism Apparent Fate.

It has been a long siege and a hard one. Up to the present time it has appeared that it was going to be a losing one for Anna. Social ostracism has stared her in the face and out of countenance. Her original marriage, with Count Boni, proved a disappointment. No royal doors swung open to the Countess de Castellane, not even when the name was backed with good American dollars. The count had his own circle, but, alas and alack! it wasn't the circle that Anna Gould had figured on entering when she became his wife. The best society of France did not receive her with acclaim, and Anna was disappointed and hurt.

Boni Popular in Some Quarters.

"Boni?" said a certain duchess of a noble French family. "His influence among the ladies of the ballet is unquestionable; he can go anywhere there. Also he is extremely popular among the jewelers and other tradesmen of the Rue de la Paix; he owes them all money. But could he come to my house? No, no; one really must draw the line somewhere, is it not so?"

It was a cruel blow to Anna, a surprise to the Americans "in the know." That dollars can buy their way into any society in this country was one of the Gould maxims; and that title, no matter how much disgraced, no matter in what bad odor, would secure entrance to the homes of continental aristocracy was another accepted opinion, especially when the titles were backed by a fortune such as belonged to Anna Gould. The Countess de Castellane came to Paris with Boni at her side, her father's millions behind her, and—so she thought—the conquest of the French capital at her feet. It was a second invasion, but it did not meet with the success that attended that of the Germans in '71. The rue aristocracy, proud and haughty with the hauteur that comes from centuries of the best blood of France, took one look at Anna through its lorgnettes, and said:

"How truly unfortunate that she should have married that odious and utterly discredited Boni. With a proper husband she would be eminently acceptable, and—who knows?—might in time become a craze."

Count at Least Scores Success.

The count, being long accustomed to being snubbed by the society leaders of his country, and having recognized and accepted the position on the fringe of the half world that society had allotted to him, accepted this treatment as a matter of course, used the Gould millions to rehabilitate the Castellane castles and villas, paid some of his most pressing creditors, and started in to enjoy that part of Parisian life which was open to him and where he knew that he belonged.

With his credit reestablished, his standing with restaurateurs, wine agents, jewelers, and other tradesmen once more assured, he began to cut a dash in the society to which he was accustomed. The women of the theater welcomed him with open arms. He was a brilliant success. He had reconquered his part of Paris.

But his part was not the part that his countess desired to enter. While Boni was flinging her money away in riotous entertainments for his latest favorites the countess remained at home, angry because the highest society had not stretched forth the hand of welcome. Boni, as happy as only a Parisian can be with the money sufficient to make him popular in the capital, could not understand. Thus came the first parting of the ways. Anna grew wroth. She intimated to Boni that it was high time he began to use his influence to secure for them a fixed position in high society. It is rumored that she even intimated that it might be hard for him to continue to spend money unless he adopted such a course.

Boni's Efforts of Little Effect.

Like the polite and obliging Frenchman that he was, Boni responded to the demands of his wife with a vim. He went to his most influential friends, he demanded in the name of De Castellane and the Gould millions that they assist him in securing entrance for his countess among the best people. They likewise responded with great willingness. A few minor duchesses were influenced to give balls and receptions in honor of the American heiress. Anna herself gave gorgeous affairs. It was a strenuous siege. The Gould money flowed like water, but its flow was not sufficient to wipe away the barrier that society had erected against the assaults of Boni. Anna gave up the fight, and soon after rumors of differences between herself and the count began to be known.

The eventual result of these differences the world knows. Disappointed in Boni as a man and as a titled being, the countess began to devote herself to their two children. Boni, quite content with such an arrangement, went elsewhere. The pretense of a home was kept up; but Boni and Anna had ceased to be man and wife. At the same time the countess gave up for the time being her siege of Paris and lived a quiet, uneventful existence until the De Sagan affair.

This was the second stage in the new siege of Paris. The Prince de Sagan, being Boni's own cousin, was one of the persons who strove to assist Anna in breaking through the barrier of reserve that hedges around French aristocracy. He was one of those who heeded Boni's appeal and used such influence as he had to force from his friends invitations to the new countess. And it was his hearty efforts along this line, his sympathy for the countess struggling for recognition under the handicap of Boni's reputation, that first won him the regard of Anna.

"After all," said he, "what is social eminence but to be a shining mark for the misfortunes that attend the mighty? Were it not better, more conducive to happiness, for two souls between whom exists a mutual bond to make their own happiness without troubling about society. Two hearts that understand one another, alone in a villa in the country, away from such sordid self-seeking as exists in this city—ah! such is the ideal existence."

Little by little the countess began to think that way, too. At the same time it is said that she never overlooked the fact that the Prince de Sagan, even if he was in debt up to his ears, was in infinitely better standing than poor Boni de Castellane. There were at least a few of the high houses in Paris open to the prince; they were all shut to Boni. Again, it was said that De Sagan, while no angel, was a better man than Boni. He was esteemed and respected by many worthy people. Would it not be possible, with the De Sagan holdings and titles rehabilitated by her money, once more to lay siege to Paris—and win?

Why not? It had only been Boni's reputation that had kept her from attaining her heart's desire—social leadership in the capital. Behind him her money had been useless. But with De Sagan, how different it might be.

The subsequent courtship of the prince, his flight with Boni, Anna's flight to America, the prince's following, the strenuous objections of Anna's brother, and the sudden marriage of the Prince and Anna while the scandal of the affair was at white heat, all are well known to every newspaper reader in the world. The couple went to Italy to spend their honeymoon. After a stay they returned to Paris. And then came shock No. 2 for Anna, now Princess de Sagan.

Society Open in Its Disapproval.

To her amazement the social leaders of Paris had been shocked at her affair with De Sagan. The aristocrats, considered the most lenient in the world in matters matrimonial, did not approve of the divorce and remarriage under the circumstances. They went further than before; they made no effort to hide the fact that for their actions the Prince and Princess de Sagan had been sent to social Coventry.

The birth of a child to the pair did little to soften the attitude of the haughty toward them. They still were outcasts from the highest walks of Paris.

Then the prince's father, the Duke of Talleyrand, died. The prince inherited the title. The inheritance brought nothing else with it, for the old duke long had been in hopeless debt and had existed on a pitiful allowance of $5,000 a year. But the title—ah, that was the thing. It opened doors that nothing else could force.

"The Duke and Duchess of Talleyrand," announced the footmen, and society's portals opened and they walked right in. For the title Duchess of Talleyrand is one of the proudest in all Europe, and she who bears it must be acknowledged a social queen, no matter what has gone before. The title was first given to the great Talleyrand, and since his time all its bearers have been persona grata even with the proverbial crowned heads of Europe.

So Anna Gould has triumphed at last. What Jay Gould's millions could not do, what the successive titles of countess and princess could not do, the death of an old man, and the subsequent inheritance of a title by his son, has accomplished. The siege of Paris becomes a victory, and Anna today is one of the foremost leaders of Parisian society.

"Hail, the Duchess of Talleyrand!"

Headed Her Off.

Many a man who stops to think twice fails to act once.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets first put up 40 years ago. They regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated tiny granules.

Men are always betting that their sins will not find them out.

More Likely.

It is said that the Nicaraguans would rather fight than eat.

But don't jump at the conclusion that this is an indication of great courage.

It may mean poor cooking.

Advice.

"Doctor," cried little Bingle, over his telephone, "my wife has lost her voice. What the dickens shall I do?" "Why," said the doctor, gravely, "if I were you I'd remember the fact when Thanksgiving day comes around, and act accordingly."

Whereupon the doctor chuckled as he charged Bingle two dollars for professional services.—Harper's Weekly.

A New Version.

Lawyers have a peculiar system of abbreviation, such words as trustees, executors being cut down to trees, exors, and admors. This practise led to an amusing slip on the part of a solicitor who, somewhat late in life, abandoned his profession and entered the church. A few Sundays after his ordination he startled his congregation while reading the lesson by delivering one of the passages as follows: "I see men as trustees walking."

One Side Enough.

Senator William Alden Smith tells of an Irish justice of the peace out in Michigan. In a trial the evidence was all in and the plaintiff's attorney had made a long and very eloquent argument, when the lawyer acting for the defense arose.

"What are you doing?" asked the justice, as the lawyer began.

"Going to present our side of the case."

"I don't want to hear both sides argued. It has tendency to confuse the court."—Washingtonian.

Some Missouri Statistics.

It is not often that the bigness of other states interests us, but the following speech delivered by a Missourian at a banquet we feel sure will amuse, if it does not interest, our readers:

"If all the wheat raised in Missouri were one grain, the only place to plant it would be the Grand Canyon, Arizona, the only hole in the earth big enough to contain it. If all the corn raised in Missouri were one ear, the only way to shell it would be by steam pump pullers, extracting a grain at a time from the cob. If all the cattle in Missouri were one cow, she could browse the tender herbage of the tropics, switch icicles off the north pole with her tail and supply enough milk to fill a canal reaching from Kansas City to the gulf on which to ship the boatloads of her cheese and butter. If all the chickens in Missouri were one rooster, he could straddle the Rocky mountains like a great colossus and crow until he shook the rings off the planet Saturn. If all the hogs raised in Missouri were one hog, he could plant his hind feet in the soil of Cuba, his fore feet in the Isthmus of Panama and with one root of his huge snout dig a sea level canal from ocean to ocean. If all the mules raised in Missouri were one mule, he could plant one foot in the soil of Texas, the other amid the forests of Maine and with his hind feet kick the face off the man in the moon."

Lincoln Locals.

Sheriff Charles A. Stevens had another attack of appendicitis on last Thursday afternoon, which proved to be the severest attack he has experienced. On Saturday morning Drs. Keiler, Smith and another physician came down from Fort Stanton, and, together with Dr. Laws, in the office of Dr. Watson, placed Mr. Stevens upon the operating table, and in one hour had performed, what bids fair to be, a most successful operation. The operation was performed without placing the patient under the influence of chloroform or ether. At this writing the patient is resting well and the doctor says he has no fever.

Lincoln is now enjoying the amusements furnished by Rawson's "Dog and Pony Show," which is passing through the town enroute to Roswell.

Mr. and Mrs. Hutson, of El Paso, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Stevens for a few days.

Lincoln and vicinity enjoyed two or three fine showers during the last ten days.
