Let Him Cough Up

Everybody wants to see better country roads around here, and those who live off of the community should do their share toward its upkeep, either through local taxation or by voluntary contribution.

Our local business men have dug down into their pockets every year for taxes, and then they have dug down again and again for all sorts of laudable objects in the way of contributions to this, that and whatnot, and they will probably continue to dig as long as they remain in business.

Like the good old Jersey cow, they have been "milked" so long and so often and for such varied purposes that "digging" has become almost second nature to them.

But there is one man who is ROLLING IN WEALTH that has been gathered in from the rural districts, and that man has yet to make his first dig. At any rate, no one appears to have ever heard of him contributing a single penny for the alleviation of local conditions.

He is the MAIL ORDER MAN, and it is high time for HIM to dig.

Many of you have been sending him your money for these many years, depleting the financial condition of your home community in order that he and his may ride in expensive automobiles and wear rich furs, laces and diamonds.

He counts his wealth by the millions, all contributed by his dear "friends" from the country districts. A few hundreds to him would be but a drop in the bucket, yet it would mean much to you if expended in improving the roads that you must travel in earning your daily bread.

Now suppose each one of you good people who have been handing your hard earned money over the mail order man in the past just write him a letter and tell him your roads are sadly in need of repairs. Just tell him that when the rains come the mud is deep, and traffic is difficult, and it is hard for you to earn the golden dollars that go to swell the great wealth he can never spend.

Tell him that you have been his friend in the past. Now ask him to prove his mettle by becoming your friend in the present, with a few hundreds for better roads.

Ask him to "dig," and dig deeply. If he is your friend—if he cares a rap for you—HE WILL DIG. But if he thinks only of what he can squeeze out of you, HE WON'T DIG.

Write him today, and see if he digs.

But in the meantime, just remember that responsible merchants are advertising in this paper this week, and other weeks, and that they will duplicate the goods sold by the digless mail order man QUALITY FOR

Are You a Porcupine?

If you meet your neighbor and he asks you if you are a porcupine, say "yes."

The Loyal Order of Porcupines is a new movement just inaugurated in California by the Hon. Lyman J. Gage, former secretary of the treasury. There is no mystery, no initiation fee, and no ceremony, and yet it has caught the public fancy and is growing by leaps and bounds and is spreading all over the country, wherever people live who are loyal to our country and its flag.

The porcupine is the only animal that never bites any one and yet is never bitten. Its myriad quills are its protection, and all other animals give it a wide berth.

Mr. Gage would have the United States in the position of the porcupine. He would have it surrounded and girded by quills of defense that no foreign nation would care to invade our peaceful shores.

He would not have a great standing army, nor would he have us bristle with the curse of aggressive militarism; but he would have every loyal citizen possess the rudiments of military knowledge, that when the time comes we may be in a position to hurl the invader into the seas and give adequate protection to our homes and our wealth.

Like the porcupine, we are a peace loving people, and ask only to be left alone to pursue our honorable course to the end.

Are you a porcupine? Say "yes!"

Premium Book.

The Premium Book of the New Mexico State Fair is now off the press, containing 180 pages. All those who are interested in the fair, should write to the State Fair office at Albuquerque for a copy or should call at this newspaper office next week, when a shipment of the books will be received for general distribution. The Premium Book carries $10,000 in prizes or 40 per cent more than any other premium list ever issued by the New Mexico State Fair. The fair management feels assured that the exhibit in every department is going to be larger and better than ever before in the past. Exhibitors from all over the country have signified their intention to show at the fair and the stock show will be one of the big departments.

AS THE EDITOR SEES IT

It just does our heart good to see the reports of the great crops with which this country is being blessed this year—the greatest in the history of the world. Our people from every point of the compass have been passing through a period of depression which in almost any other country would have resulted in a panic, but the American people have just gritted their teeth and forged to the front with redoubled energy and determination. The spirit of "I Will" just seems to have been planted in every breast, with the happy result that prosperity on a par with our record breaking crops will soon be our heritage. It gives us a mighty good feel, and we pass it on to you.

"Relief for the railroads" has won the day and the interstate commerce commission has granted some of them an increase in rates. Now come along with a little "relief for the editors" and we'll admit that you have some gizzard after all.

To become a modern woman is the easiest thing in the world. Just garb yourself in a yard or two of nothing and smear on another layer of paint and you will pass muster in the highest of society.

Albuquerque Editors Summoned to Appear.

J. A. Garcia H. B. Henning and M. L. Fox, of Albuquerque, have been summoned to appear in Santa Fe on Tuesday morning before the commission of three lawyers, Francis C. Wilson, Summers Burkhart and Stephen B. Davis, Jr., appointed by District Judge William H. Pope to inquire into the conduct of the law firm of Marron & Wood, of Albuquerque, in the Garcia case.

Mr. Henning is the editor of the Albuquerque Evening Herald and Mr. Fox is the editor of the Albuquerque Morning Journal.

Dobson Counsel for General Salazar

Col E. W. Dobson, of Albuquerque, has been retained to defend General Jose Ynez Salazar against the charge of perjury under which he is to be tried. Salazar escaped from the Albuquerque jail shortly before he was to face the perjury charge growing out of his alleged participation in the battle at Ojinaga.

Don't make the mistake of telling your wife her wrinkles are the dimples of second childhood. You'll add insult to injury, and injury to insult, and scramble 'em both up into a general mess all around.

Just as an experiment, suppose you give a happy smile and a cheerful greeting to every person you meet tomorrow, and by night you will not need corroborating evidence of your own identity.

A writer tells us that "some men are so anxious to be driven to drink that they phone for a taxi." Wrong again, old sport; they don't even wait for the taxi.

"Look in the glass if you want to see a man who never told a lie," said the editor to a bunch of his friends recently, and every one looked—at his shoes.

An efficacious method of preventing your wife from going through your pockets is to give her a nickel occasionally.

Really, brother, don't you think that dollar you perchance owe us on subscription would be nearer home if it were in our pocket instead of yours?

Cloudcroft Loses Diamonds

Alamogordo, N. M., Aug. 23.—The sheriff's office has received word from Cloudcroft to the effect that a lady up there lost about $400 worth of diamonds about the 11th or 12th and thinks that they were stolen. She asks the officers to watch the pawn shops of Alamogordo, and has doubtless notified the El Paso officers to do likewise.

Mrs. Brown Struck And Killed by Train.

Mrs. W. T. Brown, wife of the superintendent of the Valmora sanitarium at Watrous, N. M., was struck by a Santa Fe train and instantly killed Sunday night near the sanitarium, 25 miles north of Las Vegas, Mrs. Brown was walking on the track in company with other women and did not hear the train approaching. Her companions were unhurt.

"By the time a man is 50 he knows he will never be 'rich,'" says an exchange. True, possibly; but if every fellow who owes us a dollar would whack up we'd be a heap nearer the goal.

GOSSIP.

One of the most fatal and dangerous elements in human society is gossip. Some attempt to excuse gossip and say that scandal is the malicious element while gossip is harmless. But, when we take in the whole subject, we find that gossip and scandal are inseparable.

The one the counterpart of the other.

The one the life of the other. As closely allied as man and wife. Without the one the other cannot be diffused, without the other the first is not only harmless but useless and cannot live. They constitute a hideous monstrous pair for the accomplishment of evil.

Like the assassin of the night they attack the innocent and the weak. They were born twin sisters in the dark and filthy alley. Deserted, and disowned, by their parents, carased, and fondled, under cover of darkness. Kicked, cuffed and scoffed at in public. Yet they grow and thrive like the cedars in Lebanon, even in Belen, they have an eternal abiding resting place.

Rustler Gang In The Toils.

Las Vegas, N. M., Aug. 23.—Through the work of Chairman Fidel Ortiz, of the county commissioners, and Deputy Sheriff Felipe Lopez, the capture has been made of what is believed to be the worst gang of livestock thieves that ever operated in San Miguel county. Mateo Padilla and Carlos Pino have confessed that they stole a calf from Ortiz recently and have been mixed up in other cattle stealing affairs, and Manuel Martinez has signified a willingness to plead guilty to a similar charge. Margarito Britado, who is in jail for offenses committed in Albuquerque and who also is wanted in Las Vegas; and Dionicio Padilla, who is in jail here and who is wanted in Albuquerque, are suspected of being accomplices of Martinez, Padilla and Pino.

Passengers traveling in chair coaches on the Missouri Pacific-Iron Mountain may now have a light lunch served to them in their seats without the necessity of going into the dining car. This is a recent innovation and according to officers of the road, is proving popular. A waiter from the dining car passes through the train during meal hours to take orders. This service is in effect on all trains that have dining cars, buffet or parlor-cars.—Railway Age Gazette.

Of course we will appreciate all of the good things you will say for us when we are dead, but we are a patient animal and in no hurry to start your eulogy.

Labor Day Proclamation

Labor in one form or another is the force that moves all the affairs of man. The real labor is the prime factor of our civilization. By labor is produced all that sustains the life of the nations. It tills the soil, maintains our industries and makes transportation convenient and effective.

It is but fair and just that we set aside one day on which we may exalt and magnify the importance of the foundation in production of all things that fructify and expand the earth's usefulness to man.

Now, therefore, in accordance with the law of our land and the custom of our people, I, William C. McDonald, Governor of the State of New Mexico, do hereby proclaim Monday the 6th day of September, 1915, as Labor Day and heartily recommend that it be observed by all the people of New Mexico as a legal holiday; that the state offices be closed and the ordinary business of the day be suspended, in order that all may do honor to the great body of our people who labor in the fields, the factories, the forests, the mines, in the shops and on the railroads, and in all the varied industries of the State.

Done at the Executive Office, this, the 19th day of August, 1915.

Witness my hand and the great seal of the State of New Mexico.

Contracts Received.

Secretary Wiley of the Fair Commission, a few days ago received contracts for the one big and only free act shown at the San Francisco Exposition during the past summer. The People who saw this act at the big exposition declare it one of the best along the amusement lines. However, that is just one of the big features lined up, and the fair association is lining up a great many like this, for the amusement seekers.

Speaking of the war in Europe—but we're all tired of speaking of it, and of hearing, and reading, and of everything in connection with the odoriferous exhibition of scrambled humanity.

There's a bully good minstrel show coming on Sept. 4. Read the ad—it's a Lallapallulia! Come and have a good time.

Belen is to be congratulated by having in its midst Dr. M. C. Traw, a dentist. He will make his future residence in this city, and will open his dental parlors, where he will be glad to repair your teeth.

CHAPTER I.

Old Cadman Green knew everybody in town. Those whom he did not know were not, in his opinion, worth knowing; and his friends agreed with him before his face. Behind his back they voted him an amusing old bore. But it was the thing to think as Cadman Green thought, for he had the tradition of distinction, acquired through bluff and brass, perhaps, but held tenaciously and acknowledged.

Green was maintaining his reputation in the same way as that in which he had acquired it.

"You see that woman in the carriage?" he inquired. "Second Mrs. Perevalde. Artist's model before Perevalde married her, and had a little scandal all her own in the home town. Well, she's—hello!"

This time Cadman Green contended himself with a whistle, and, as he whistled, most of his friends whistled too.

"William Wright with his pretty stenographer!" said the old man.

The person in question, seated in his automobile beside a decidedly pretty young woman, passed under the club windows, and the car, after speeding a short way farther, turned off in the direction of a respectable but modest suburb.

"What do you think of that?" demanded Green. "Wright and a lady friend, and seeing her home through the town in broad daylight! And I live underneath him!"

He burst into a chuckle and slapped his fat leg, while the others exchanged smiles and nods.

"Their servant told our girl that Mrs. Wright is internally jealous of her husband," continued Green. "I wonder—I wonder what she would say if she could see that!"

He glanced about him. He had kept up his reputation among his peers. Now the news must be spread. It was too good to retain. Green did not wish Wright any harm, but he felt that the joke was on him, and he wanted Mrs. Green to agree with him.

By the time he reached the apartment house he was bursting with the news. Dinner was ready, and he held it only through the soup, indulging in the joys of anticipation until he could bear them no longer.

"I saw an interesting sight today," he said, with an affectation of casualness.

"What was that, Cadman?" inquired his wife.

"Only our friend upstairs, Willie Wright, speeding through the town in his new auto, with his pretty stenographer. Right under our club windows, Lizzie, and then off toward Dotsboro. You don't happen to know if the woman lives in Dotsboro, do you?"

"For goodness sake, Cadman, how should I know? Do you suppose I have time to inquire the residence of Mr. Wright's stenographer?"

"Well, I guess it's Dotsboro all right," said Cadman Green.

The maid, who was waiting for him to take his arms off the table before setting down the roast listened with an air of judicial impassivity. The Greens knew that their girl was a model of discretion, and did not hesitate to discuss anything in front of her. And, until the meal was ended, Margaret maintained her own reputation.

When the Greens were ensconced in their living room Margaret gathered the pile of dishes near the kitchen sink and shut all the connecting doors.

Then she called up the dumbwaiter: "Mae! Is that you, Mae?"

"Hello, Margaret! Say, I'm mighty tired tonight. They're only just getting ready to sit down to dinner. Mr. Wright was late, as usual. I'm about tired of this job. I think I'll move next month."

"I guess I could tell somebody where Wright spent the afternoon, if I cared to. Say, listen, Mae!"

"I can't, Margaret. She's calling me."

"Just a minute. Listen! Wright was joy-riding through the town with his stenographer in his auto, as loving as you please, with half the town watching him. Took her home afterward. Mr. Green was just telling the old woman about it."

"You don't say! Say, this is no place for a respectable girl. I'm going to move on, for sure. Oh, goodness! There she is calling again!"

Mrs. Wright had called peremptorily to hide the shock of the news. She had stood with her hand upon the jamb of the door during the entire conversation. She had seen Daisy Dean, her husband's stenographer, two or three times, and she had noticed with disapproval the little affection of the girl always to have a bunch of daisies upon her desk. Once or twice her husband had come home wearing one of the flowers in his buttonhole. He had come home with one that night.

Wright, who loved his wife sincerely, had not failed to note the little sign of jealousy against the girl who was his business confidant. On that account he had said nothing about the reason for his automobile drive with her that day. Perhaps he would have been wiser had he done so. But the meal passed almost in silence, and he attributed his wife's moroseness to her plea of a nervous headache.

CHAPTER II.

"As I live, Daisy Dean getting out of a car at her door with a man!"

"Look now he's helping her! Who is he? What will Austin Clark say when he hears?"

"Robert, this thing has got to be stopped right away!"

Miss Susan Miturn looked at her younger brother with all her habitual determination. The prim old maid disliked Daisy intensely. First, because she was stylishly dressed; second, because she was pretty; thirdly, because she knew of her brother's hopeless passion for her.

"I can't stop it," muttered Robert, snrilly.

"You can, too. I'm going to make it my business to see that Austin Clark hears about it. What right has an engaged girl to go joy-riding with a middle-aged man? He's married, too, as like as not. Those married ones are usually the worst ever!"

Daisy, having been assisted to her house, entered and watched her employer from the window as he drove away. Her foot still pained her a good deal. It had been wrenched in the door of the elevator as she was leaving the office and Mr. Wright had consolingly driven her home.

He had told her not to come to the office for several days. In fact, he planned to employ a public stenographer. But when he began his dictation the next morning he suddenly realized that he could not risk the possibility of public "ty in his correspondence at such a critical hour. In the end he dismissed the girl and called up Daisy.
