NUMBER 10

TEXAS FULLEN CASE FINISHED

SETTLED IN EL PASO COURTS AND DISMISSED IN REG-ULAR ORDER.

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 10.—(Special to Morning News.)—L. O. Fullen, former district attorney for the fifth judicial district of New Mexico, and O. O. Askren, both of Roswell, N. M., were placed on trial in the county court of El Paso county, Thursday morning, on the charge of aggravated assault preferred by Mr. Fullen's former wife, Mrs. Dorothy Bowman Fullen.

The assault was alleged to have occurred on October 18, last, in the lobby of the Angelus hotel in this city, and grew out of the attempt of the defendant, Mr. Fullen, to take from Mrs. Fullen their four year old child, William Fullen. Mr. Fullen at the time had an order of the district court of Chaves county, New Mexico, giving to him the custody of said child; and at the time he was endeavoring to obtain possession of the child from the mother who had previously caused the child to be moved from the jurisdiction of the New Mexico court by a young woman, Emma Hawks, who was a resident of Roswell, and taken to El Paso, where the mother consequently came and took possession of the child.

The firm of Stanton and Weeks assisted P. R. Price, county attorney who had charge of the prosecution, and the defendants were represented by John L. Dyer and Judge Edwards.

Mrs. Fullen and one of her witnesses, Weldon Best, of Roswell, arrived at 8 a. m., from Los Angeles, where they had been sojourning since the difficulty in October, and immediately or soon thereafter, the cases against Fullen and Askren were called for trial, and the defendants announced that they would be tried jointly, and would waive a jury.

Mrs. Fullen testified as to the alleged assault in the lobby of the Angelus hotel, stating that was struck by both Mr. Fullen and Mr. Askren, and that the latter exhibited a pistol. On cross-examination she became hysterical, was reproved by the court and removed from the room until she could regain her poise.

Her testimony was flatly contradicted by Dr. A. P. Carpenter, B. P. Wilson, clerk of the hotel, Mr. Knoblauch, the proprietor and Mr. Askren, who was then called, but had only proceeded to detail the reasons for himself and Mr. Fullen being in El Paso, namely searching for the boy, when the case was halted at the instance of the state and a conference was asked. After a consultation of all the attorneys and the defendants, an agreement was made for the disposition of the assault case and the entering of a small judgment in the twelve thousand dollar damage suit instituted by Mrs. Fullen against Mr. Askren and pending in the district court. Mr. Fullen and Mr. Askren left for home immediately after the cases were disposed of.

Mr. Askren and Mr. Fullen returned from El Paso late yesterday afternoon, coming over from Vaughn on the mail car, and when seen by a representative of the News, and in response to inquiries about the El Paso cases, made the following statement:

"Before my arrival in El Paso I was a little apprehensive Mrs. Fullen with the Hawks girl, would be successful in framing up a story that might sound plausible, and one that might convince a court or jury, but after consulting with our attorneys in El Paso and ascertaining that Mr. Wilson and Mr. Knoblauch, clerk and manager of the hotel where the incident occurred in October, would testify as to what really happened and nothing more, such apprehensions were dispelled.

Mrs. Fullen was absolutely uncorroborated, and was contradicted by all the other eye witnesses.

"At the end of the state's case the prosecution realized that they had no chance for conviction, on account of Mrs. Fullen's demeanor, and endeavored to have Mr. Fullen plead guilty and accept a small fine and to dismiss the case against myself, which I refused to do and advised Mr. Fullen not to make such a plea for the reason there was absolutely no chance to convict him. After we had put on a part of our case the firm of Stanton and Weeks who represented Mrs. Fullen in the twelve thousand dollar damage suit against me, and who were also assisting the prosecution in the assault case, again made the proposition that if Mr. Fullen would accept a fine of $25.00, and that if I would pay Mrs. Fullen $150.00 to settle the damage suit, the case against myself would be dismissed and all of the cases finally disposed of. The damage case was pending in another court, which would necessitate another trip to El Paso by Mr. Fullen and myself, at heavy expense and loss of time and business in Roswell, and I prevailed upon Mr. Fullen to accept the proposition, which he did.

"My presumption is that the $150.00 was to provide expense money for Mrs. Fullen and Weldon Best to return to California, that being the intimation that was made to us. In connection with the presence of Mr. Best I can say that the sheriff's office in El Paso had information from California that he was heavily armed and in dangerous mood; that he was searched by the sheriff but at the time was found to be unarmed."

Mr. Fullen was also seen by a News reporter and made the following statement:

"On my arrival in El Paso I was informed by the county attorney that the two cases against Mr. Askren and myself charging assault would be dismissed, and they were. He further announced that unless Mrs. Fullen appeared, and there was some doubt at that time that she would, he would dismiss remaining cases. On trial there was no testimony that would in any way support the charges, but in order to close the cases in Texas and to avoid another trip to El Paso in connection with the damage case against Mr. Askren, I agreed to the proposition made us by the state, to wit: The entering of a fine of twenty-five dollars against myself, the dismissal of the case, and a reduction of the twelve thousand dollar damage suit to one hundred and fifty dollars. The money was paid and Mr. Askren and myself left for Roswell the same evening. This closes the Texas chapter of the divorce suit begun here last July, and whatever further proceedings are had will be in the courts of New Mexico."

A FINE SHOWING.

The Report of the Secretary of Commercial Club Gives Evidence of the Good Work of That Association During the Past Year.

Thursday afternoon at club rooms, occurred the annual meeting of the members of the Commercial club. The meeting was well attended, and the following officers were elected:

President, F. G. Tracy.
Vice-President, A. N. Pratt.
Treasurer, C. M. Richards.
Directors, R. M. Thorne, S. I. Roberts, and S. D. Stennis, Jr.

The report of the secretary Scott Etter, which is appended, discloses a healthy condition of affairs of Commercial club, and tells of what has been accomplished during the year. The club here is the oldest of any in the valley, and the good which has been accomplished during its existence is co-incidental with the advancement of the lower valley, for Commercial club has ever led in affairs which had to do with the advancement and prosperity of the town and surrounding country. The report of the secretary is as follows:

Carlsbad, N. M., Jan. 9, 1913.
To the President and Members of the Carlsbad Commercial Club:

As secretary of the Carlsbad Commercial club during the past year, I desire to submit for your consideration the following report:

When the present officers took charge of the Carlsbad Commercial club in the early part of 1912, they started with a balance in the bank of sixteen dollars and forty-five cents ($16.45).

At that time the Carlsbad Commercial club had seventy-six members in good standing.

During the past year as secretary of your club, I have collected from the membership dues the sum of two thousand and one hundred and one dollars and thirty-five cents, ($2011.35.) And during the same time there has been paid out two thousand and forty-two dollars and five cents, ($2042.05), which was paid out of moneys collected for dues.

In this connection I call your attention to the fact that during the preceding year there was collected by the secretary from dues sixteen hundred and two dollars, ($1602.00.) And there has been paid out by the secretary from the dues two thousand and nine dollars and ninety-five cents, ($2009.95). This is submitted to show the actual growth in the cash membership of the Carlsbad Commercial club.

It may be of interest to our members to know that of the moneys paid out we have paid the sum of four hundred and eighty dollars, ($480.00) to the Peoples Mercantile company for rent; that we have paid for music the sum of two hundred and forty ($240.00); and that we have paid to the Public Utilities company for lights and telephone one hundred and forty-nine dollars and twenty-five cents, ($149.45.)

Your attention is called to the fact that the present board of directors has installed new billiards and pool tables at a cash out lay to date of four hundred and twenty-seven dollars, thirty-five cents, ($427.35), and we still owe a note of seventy-five dollars on them.

We call your attention for comparison to the fact that the membership of this club in January, 1913, is ninety-one.

During the year we have paid out for secretary hire the same amount that has always been paid, three hundred dollars, ($300.00), and for janitor salary, two hundred and forty dollars, ($240.00.)

I call your attention to the fact that Carlsbad Commercial Club has this year been very active in public spirited matters. While they have not been before the public in an open way, it might be well to call your attention to some of the things which we have done. In relation to the sands road to the plains, early in the year this club through a committee, raised the sum of twelve hundred dollars, ($1200.00) which was placed with a like amount furnished by the state of New Mexico which was intended to complete this road to the plains. Later they found that six hundred dollars, ($600.00) more money was needed and another committee from this club raised three hundred dollars, ($300.00) of this fund making a total contribution to this road this year from the Carlsbad Commercial club, fifteen hundred dollars, ($1500.00.)

Early in the year the farmers under Carlsbad project raised a sum for advertising Carlsbad and the project of two thousand dollars ($2000) with the condition that the Commercial club contribute eight hundred dollars, ($800.00). The club, through a committee, raised and paid to this fund, three hundred dollars, ($300.00) in cash and in addition it assisted in interesting the real estate men of Carlsbad to the extent that they contributed from its membership fund one fourth of the cost of the benches which were placed in Court House Park, amounting to thirty-four dollars and twenty cents, ($34.20.)

From the foregoing I think that you will see that the club has been active during the entire year and in connection with the secretary's work I desire to inform you that every inquiry concerning Carlsbad or the surrounding country has received a personal answer from this office, together with literature descriptive of the city and country, all of which is respectfully submitted for your consideration.

Circular Letter to Directors.

Dear Sirs:—In order to get accurate information regarding the amount of public school money expended for the various purposes, and in order to secure a more careful business like expenditure of the same, I wish to call your attention to sections 7, 9, 12, Chapter 109, Laws 1903. Section 7 in part reads as follows: "And the clerks of said boards outside of incorporated cities and towns, are required to make to the County Superintendent from time to time as the superintendent may require, an itemized statement, under oath, of the cost of labor and material used and work done, where practicable, and apparatus required and used for conducting said building; the school directors of the latter class are further required to consult with and solicit the co-operation of the County Superintendent whenever it becomes necessary to purchase furniture, fixtures, etc."

Section 9 reads as follows: "School Directors serving in districts outside of incorporated towns and cities are hereby required to accompany all vouchers or warrants presented for the signature of the County Superintendent with an itemized statement of account, and the County Superintendent shall withhold his approval of all bills until such statements are provided."

I find that some directors purchase supplies, furniture, fixtures, etc., without carefully considering whether or not the financial condition of the district warrants such expenditure, and I must insist that the above provisions regarding the purchase of supplies and the presentation of itemized statements with warrants, be complied with. Please send all warrants, unless they be teachers warrants, direct to this office for approval before delivery to the person to whom issued.

Very truly yours,

ARTESIA MAN MAKES BIG TURKEY MONEY.

Gets Back From Delivering Large Flock to the El Paso Markets, Christmas.

Artesia, N. M., Jan. 11.—Dr. E. P. McCormack, who drove a flock of 500 turkeys from Artesia to El Paso, a distance of 200 miles, has returned with his man and team, well pleased with his venture, which proved profitable in spite of drawbacks. He left Artesia November 14, and was gone about seven weeks. On his trip to El Paso, he encountered snow at Hope and later ran out of feed, so that he went 20 miles out of his course to secure it. This delay brought him into El Paso a few days after Thanksgiving and he had to wait until Christmas to dispose of his entire stock. He experienced very little trouble in caring for the flock, only one going astray, and that was picked up later by a sheep herder. The turkeys arrived in the best of condition and retailed from 18 to 25 cents per pound live weight, which is from 8 to 15 cents per pound higher than they would sell for in Artesia. Many of the turkeys brought $5 apiece, the flock weighing over 8,000 pounds, he realized $1,000 more than if sold at Artesia. By going overland Dr. McCormack saved over $300 freight, besides $100 from shrinkage.—Roswell News.

JUDGE M'CLURE HANDED DOWN OPINIONS IN INJUNCTION CASES SOUTH.

Knowles loses her saloon; Malaga loses one, and Loving gets to keep her two booze stores.

This is the opinion of Judge John T. McClure handed down yesterday in the district court, although as yet the decree has not been signed.

The evidences in these cases were taken at the September term of court in Eddy county. The cases were on a relation of Frank W. Clancy, state attorney, vs:

Woerner, at Knowles.
Cochran, at Malaga.
H. D. Hill, at Loving.

Cochran & Montgomery at Loving. The attorney general acting for the state, enjoined each of these saloon men from running saloons in the different towns, claiming that they were being conducted in violation of section 4129 compiled laws of 1897. His complaint stated that neither Malaga, Loving nor Knowles had the required 100 inhabitants as required by law before a saloon can be located.

There were several questions involved in the case, the chief of which was what constitutes a village. For instance, at Malaga the town is platted, just on the edge of the village is a Mexican settlement, or village. The judge decided that under the legal definition of a village, this Mexican settlement should not be counted in making the number of inhabitants. If they had been counted, Knowles would have the necessary 100 inhabitants.

The opinion of the judge states that a permanent injunction will stand in the Malaga and Knowles cases. But the injunction is denied in the two Loving cases as it has been shown and proven that there is the necessary 100 people there.

GOVERNOR MAKES RECOMMENDATION FOR IMPROVEMENT IN LAWS OF STATE; WANTS ANTI GAMBLING LAW ENACTED.

Santa Fe N. M., Jan. 15.—A new system of taxation for the state whereby all property will be assessed at its "cash value," and a law to enforce such assessment alike against the large corporations and the small property owners, is the most important recommendation in Governor McDonald's message to the legislature today.

"Thus will it be possible," says the governor, "to increase the assessed valuation of property in the state from $73,000,000, the present figure to 700,000,000, and thereby reduce the state levy from thirteen mills to two mills."

The governor recommends liberal assistance for the public school system and increased appropriations where practicable for the higher state educational institutions. The consolidation of some of these institutions, he suggests as a means of increasing their efficiency and economy.

A liberal appropriation for the state mounted police, which he believes to be indispensable for the ferreting out of crime and the running down of criminals, is urged, as well as a local option liquor law and forbidding the operation of saloons in villages of less than 500 inhabitants.

Immediate ratification of the income tax amendment to the United States constitution is also urged, together with an inheritance tax law.

The subjects of gambling and prize fighting, the governor treats collectively, declaring that if the legislators will pass laws prohibiting prize fighting and gambling they will give the new state the best advertising it can possibly have.

The passage as its first law of a county salaries bill, for the payment of county officers who have served without pay since statehood, is especially recommended.

An amendment to the corrupt practices act, making it a felony to pay workers to influence voters at the polls, is recommended, as is also some provision to protect the right of the voter to secrecy in casting his ballot.

In closing his message the governor says:

"This is a progressive age. He who lags may be lost. The initiative and referendum are being demanded from one end of the country to the other. You should propose amendments to the constitution, including the referendum provision and providing for an initiative on a fair basis. The people of our state have decided that they will rule. There must eventually be controlling in the laws they desire."

THE FRENCH FAVEROLLES.

Our French artists do beat the Dutch turning out fashions that are extraordinarily risqué, picturesque and peculiar and among these is the Faverolle, a breed that is gaining ground in this country with those who want birds for beauty as well as utility, and Mr. Muffin Chops for both does not the bill.

The varieties of the breed comprise French Salmon, French Black and French Blue, English Salmon and English Bantam Faverolles.

Their origin is France, but the English rooster fanciers claim to have made some improvement and thus attach their trademark to two varieties. The distinctive characteristics of the breed are the whiskers, five toes, and feather leggings.

The whistling does not grow up over the eyes to obscure the vision as in some bearded breeds and is a distinct advantage in winter, as it protects against cold. The fifth toe is not so useless as with the Houdan and Dorking, but is useful for extra legs in garden destruction.

Faverolle chicks are hardy and mature rapidly, the pullets maturing early and making heavy winter layers.

The French and English are very enthusiastic over the Faverolle as a breed.

Don't cast your pearls before swine. This refers to pigheaded people.

Don't go joy riding during work hours nor leave to others work that you stir.

Don't take a vacation and let your flock in the hands of a know not. A dummy with the hens, no money from the pens.

Don't make many promises to a customer. The more some make the more they break.

Don't take much stock in the man who advertises himself as a great genius. He is a great ass, but he doesn't know it.

Don't mix poultry and politics, but it is not out of place to allow a few tough roosters to enter the ministry occasionally.

Don't glory in another's failure. The person who glories in the misfortunes of others should go way back and sit down with his parental gorillas in the savagery of uncivilization.

The Finest English Odes.

Among the many fine odes in the English language Macaulay characterized Dryden's "Alexander's Feast" as the noblest, and Dr. Richard Garnett agreed with him in thinking it the finest ode we have. The full title is "Alexander's Feast; or, The Power of Music—An Ode For St. Cecilia's Day." Spenser's "Epithalamium," Milton's

"Ode on the Nativity," Keats' "Ode to a Nightingale" and "On a Grecian Urn" and Shelley's "To a Skylark" are notable instances of this class of poetry, and to these must be added, though their form is irregular, Wordsworth's magnificent "Immortality" and Tennyson's "Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington."

Farwell and a Promise.

ISAAC PERRY was the first to propose the plan of substituting a forged will, but at the time neither of them contemplated the assassination of the old gentleman. It was not until it became known to them that Mr. Jenison intended to deed over a great part of his estate to David before his own death that they felt the necessity for hastening the end. The will was prepared in Perry's room at Richmond. The names of the witnesses belonged to men who were dead and could not repudiate the signatures. Then came the signing of the quitclaim deed which provided an opportunity to substitute the will, and which, as far as Isaac Perry was concerned, was a bona fide transaction. The little plot of ground was in truth a portion of his own compensation exacted in advance of the murder.

Perry was to have done the shooting. At the last minute his nerve failed him. Frank Jenison then coolly directed his henchman to stand guard while he committed the diabolical deed. To use his dying words, his father "was ready to die anyway, so it was a kindness to end life suddenly for him."

We know how David walked into the trap and how he crept out of it only to become an outlaw, hunted and exterminated. Perry went to Chicago, where he was to remain for a few months before coming back to receive his promised share of the money which Jenison was to realize on the sale of certain properties as soon as he was clearly established as heir to the estate.

Remorse began to gnaw at the heart of the murderer. He could not sleep without dreaming of his slain father, nor could he spend a waking hour that was free from thoughts of the innocent boy who would be hanged if the law laid its hands upon him.

Then, one day, there came a stranger who told him of Isaac Perry's treachery. The thing he feared had come to pass—Perry's defection. He made up his mind to kill this dreaded stranger and to follow that deed with another of the same sort which would deliver him of Isaac Perry. But the stranger disappeared. He did not come to claim his blood money. The terror which fell upon Frank Jenison was overpowering. He sent for Isaac Perry, hoping against hope that the stranger had lied and that with the negro's support he could defy him. Perry came to Richmond expecting to receive his promised reward in coin of the realm. The half-crazed white man accused him of treachery. The negro lawyer vehemently denied every allegation; but, becoming alarmed by the other's manner, fell into a panic of fear and was shot.

At the end of his confession Frank Jenison said:

"My soul is black. It is already charred by the fires of hell. I was a traitor to our beloved cause, although acquitted of the charge by fraud and deception. I killed my own father. I would have killed others. My nephew has long borne the stain of guilt that is going with me to a dishonored grave. I go with the brand of Cain on my soul. There will be no rest for me in the hereafter. I have not the courage to ask God to be merciful. But I believe in God. I have tried not to believe in Him. I have denied Him all my life. Today, for the first time in memory, I can say—and it is with my last breath—I can say that I thank God for one great act of mercy. He has permitted me to live long enough, with this bullet in me, to say to the world that my nephew, David Jenison, is as innocent as I am guilty."

"Well," said Grinnell, the clown, his voice solemn in contrast to the cheery smile he assumed, when it came time for all to go to the cook tent for dinner, "I desay we'll have to stop calling you Jack Snipe. What's more, David, you'll be going back to Virginia at once and settling down to be a genuine gentleman. Afore you think of going, my lad, let it be fully impressed in your heart that we all love you and we all wish you the greatest happiness in the world. You've been a very poor clown, but I desay 'tis more the fault of your bringing up than anything else."

"First of all, Joey," said David, his face aglow with the fervor that was crowding up from the depths of his grateful soul, "I want to say to you and to all of you, that if I live to be a thousand years old I shall never forget how good and how kind you have been to me. My home will always be yours, my friends, just as your home has been mine. Jenison hall will bid you welcome, come what may. You will find Joey Grinnell there. My home is his, when he chooses to forsake the ring and Ruby's too. God bless and reward all of you!"

"When are you going to leave us, David?" asked one of the women. David put his finger to his bruised spot on his cheek.

"My career as a clown in Van Slye's show ended when that blow was struck. You know quite well that I could not have stayed after that, even though other conditions were unchanged. I cannot eat of that man's bread; I cannot serve him. I have no trunk to pack, you know. Just that old satchel of Joey's, in which my linen is carried. So I am walking out of this tent now free in more ways than one. When I come again I shall pay my way at the main entrance. No, don't ask me to go to the cook tent! It is impossible. As for my plans I—"

He stopped, stilled by a sudden, overwhelming sense of desolation. All this meant that he would have to leave Christine! His days with the show were over. His heart revolted. There surged up the fierce impulse to cast away his patrimony, his name, his pride and honor. He would not desert her even for a day.

"As for my plans," he began once more, and again stopped.

Joey understood the struggle that was going on within him. "The old clown, in his own capricious life, had been called upon a hundred times to give up the things he loved, the associations he cherished."

"We'll talk 'em over later on, David," he said, putting his arm over the boy's shoulder. "Come along with me and Ruby. We'll go to a restaurant and 'ave a bite together. I—suppose you'll be saying goodbye to them striped tights and the spotted trunks."

"I should like to buy them, Joey," cried David eagerly.

"They are yours, my lad; take 'em. They belong to me. Now, let's get out of this. I don't think it's best for Brad to find you 'ere."

As they left the lot, David carrying all of his possessions in the unwieldy satchel, they were met by Colonel Grand.

"David," said he, falling in beside them, "have you sufficient funds to carry you back to old Virginia? If you need money I will gladly let you have it—as a loan."

They were surprised by the offer. David hated him. "No, Colonel Grand; I can't take your money, even as a loan. It will be easy for me to raise the amount."

The colonel gave him an ugly smile. "As you like," he said. He lifted his hat to Ruby and abruptly turned back. Far ahead were two figures, that they knew well. Mrs. Braddock and Christine were hurrying away from the grounds as if desirous of avoiding a meeting with the young man.

David urged his companions to a more rapid walk. They overtook the Braddocks at the corner of an avenue which led off to the residence section of the town.

"You have heard?" asked David, as they turned in response to his call. "You know what has happened?"

He could see that the girl had been crying. Mrs. Braddock's face was white and set.

"Yes," said the older woman. "And you are going home, David?" She spoke quietly.

"I—I don't know yet," he stammered. Christine's face had been averted. Now she looked at him.

"You—oh, David, you don't really think of staying with us?" she cried, her eyes glowing.

"You must not think of it, David," whispered her mother hastily. "Your place is at Jenison hall. You belong there. Lose no time, my dear boy, in returning to your home."

They had come to a little park adjoining a churchyard where there were benches. He led them to one of the seats farthest removed from the pavement. Joey and Ruby strolled into the churchyard.

"I suppose I shall have to go back," said David gloomily. "For a few days, at least. They will be expecting me. And the property is mine now—and all that. But Mrs. Braddock," he went on feverishly, "I am coming back. In a week, yes, or less than that. I am coming back to be with you—to help you. I can't stay away now, Mrs. Braddock. It would make me too unhappy. I must be near Christine. She's more to me now than anything else in all this world."

Mrs. Braddock smiled wanly. "You are very young," she said, "and very impulsive. Do you think it would be kind to Christine if you were to follow the show for no other reason than to be near her? She would be compromised, I think you will admit. Now you are an outsider. It is an unwritten law among us that an outsider is always an outsider. We are like gypsies. Even you, who have been one of us, can have no future standing in our tribe—for that is what we are. David, as individuals we will always greet you and give you the best of our love; collectively we cannot take you among us. That is over. You are!"

"But I may still be a performer," he cried insistently. He had taken Christine's hand in his, only to have it gently withdrawn by the girl.

"No, David," said Mary Braddock firmly. "It is out of the question. You are no longer a soldier of fortune. You are a Jenison of Jenison hall. We can't build a bridge for that."

"But I won't stand it," he exclaimed passionately. "I will come back."

"As a clown?" said she, smiling.

"I'll buy a part interest in the show," he said stubbornly.

"You are not of age," she reminded him. "The courts will name a guardian for you. I fancy?"

"But I love Christine," he protested. "You told me last night that you would put no obstacle in our way to—"

"I told you last night that I would put no obstacle in your way, David, if you came to me in five years and still say that you love her and would make her your wife."

"You think I'll forget her?" he cried angrily.

"Oh, David!" moaned Christine.

"You think I'll not care for her always?"

"Listen, David," said the mother patiently. "I can think of no greater joy that could come to me than to see Christine your wife—some day. But we must face the true conditions. She may always be a circus rider. I hope to take her away from this life—yes, soon, may it please God. You think now that you will always care. But I know the world. I know youth too well. I—You must go your way, David. We will go ours. If God is good to us we may come together again. You are eighteen. Christine is fifteen. You do not know your minds, my children. I have thought it all out. You must be content to wait. Christine must come to you from a different sphere. She must not be of the circus."

"Mrs. Braddock," said he, rising to his full height, "I only ask you to believe that I love her and that I at least will not change. Will you change, Christine?"

"No," said the girl, giving her hand as she rose to look into his eyes with the whole of her young heart glowing in hers. "I will not change, David."

"Then, Mrs. Braddock, as a Jensen of Jensen hall I formally ask you for the hand of your daughter. A gentleman may keep his word of honor for five years—for a hundred years. I pledge my love, my name, my fortune to her."

"David," cried the mother, twisting her fingers in the agony of a despair that could no longer be concealed. "How can we know what the next five years may bring to us? What will they be to my darling child? Oh, if I only knew the way to save her—to preserve her, to give her what belongs to her by all the laws of nature!"

"You must leave the show," he cried. "It is no place for either of you."

He pleaded long and earnestly with the silent, depressed woman.

"Time will tell, David," she said. "When it becomes too heavy to bear I will cast off my yoke. That is all I will say." She hesitated for a moment and then went on, holding out her hand: "God bless, David. You are going tonight?"

"I suppose so," he said dejectedly. "But, listen, I am coming back very shortly for a few days. I insist on that. If all is not going well with you and Christine, I shall know it. I mean to watch over her in spite of everything."

"We will see you again before you leave," said the mother. "I am sure we understand each other. Come back, David, if you will, but only for a day. Let us walk home. You may walk with Christine. Say your goodbyes now. Joey! Are you coming?"

When the train for the east pulled out at 11 o'clock that night David was aboard. He positively had refused to take back any of the money he had lent to Mrs. Braddock, preferring to borrow from Joey and Casey. Christine kissed him goodbye at the station.

"I know that my father struck you, David," she whispered as she put her hand to his cheek. "That won't prevent your coming back, will it? You will come, won't you?"

"As surely as I am alive," he said fervently.

There were tears in his eyes as the train rolled away.

Some one sat down beside him in the seat. He looked up.

"I guess I'll go part ways with you," said Artful Dick Cronk comfortably.

"I know that my father struck you, David."

"I want you to do me a favor. Take this money and slip into the little inn there in your town and pay the woman what I owe her. I forgot to settle when I left. I never trim a woman, good or bad."

Dick Cronk was traveling with David because his brother had disappeared from the snack stand early in the evening. The watchful pickpocket scented trouble. He traversed the length of the train to assure himself that Ernie had not slipped aboard in the darkness for the purpose of doing evil to the Virginia boy when least expected. He was satisfied that Ernie was not aboard, but it was now necessary for him to go on to the next station before leaving the train.

In Which a Bully Is Cowed.

"I HEAR you're coming back soon to visit the—er—show," said Artful Dick to David Jensen. "Let me put you on to Colonel Grand. He's a good feller, that old boy is. He's terribly disappointed because you've squared yourself with the law. He had something up his sleeve for you, but this spoils it all. But you noticed that he took it very pleasantly and agreeable cuss, he is, when he has to be. Maybe you'd like to know what his game was."

"I think I know, Dick."

"Nix. I guess not. You were to do him a great favor before long. You were going to run away with Christine Braddock!"

David started. "You are mistaken," he cried indignantly. "I wouldn't think of such a thing."

"Just the same, kid, that's what he had fixed for you to do, and you couldn't ha' got out of it. He's a wonder, he is. That's the only way he could get rid of Christine, and with Christine gone Mrs. Braddock's spirit would be smashed. He's going to get rid of Tom Braddock party soon. Tom don't know it, but his days with this show are numbered."

We will forsake David Jensen for the time being. He is well started on his journey to the home of his forefathers, where complete restoration and the newspaper reporters await him. Let the imagination picture the welcome he is to receive; if possible let it also describe the attitude of the community which had hunted him with dogs and deadly weapons, but which now stand ready to cast their most reserved of the feet of the boy who had been so cruelly wronged.

Two weeks passed over his head before he was able to turn away from the bewildering mass of legal requirements and look once more to the west, whither his heart was forever journeying. Not all the excitement that filled the fortnight to overhauling, nor all the damage that came to him, could ease the dull, insistent pain of separation from interests so vital to his young heart.

He stole away one night, accompanied by a single servant—for now he was "lord of the manor"—and traveled only as a true gentleman of the south should travel. Half way to his destination he stopped off to draw from the savings bank the money he had placed there. With this small fortune in his possession he resumed the journey, now closely guarded by old Jeff, who always had been a slave to the Jensons and would be till he died, Abraham Lincoln to the contrary.

David's constant prayer was that he might not be too late.

He was destined to find many changes in Van Slye's Great and Only Mammoth Shows.

Let us go back to the night after the one which saw David's departure from the show. For two days Thomas Braddock had slunk about the show grounds, morose, ugly, taciturn. He avoided every one except those with whom he was obliged to consult. His wife and daughter caught fleeting glimpses of him; Colonel Grand and the others saw him but little more. He held aloof, brooding over his wrongs, accumulating a vast resentment against the world and all of its inhabitants, obsessed by the single desire to make some one else suffer for the ignominy that had come to him.

Strangely enough, his most bitter resentment was lodged against the wife who had stood by him all these years through thick and thin, through incessant storm and hardship, with a staunchness that now maddened him, because down in his heart he could see no guile in her. She was too good for him. She held herself above him. She made him to feel that he was not of her world—from the beginning. She was loyal because it would have put her in his class if she had lifted her voice in public complaint. He knew that she loathed him. He hated her for the virtue which gave her the right to despise him and yet to remain loyal to him. His sordid, debased soul resented the odious comparison that his own flesh and blood justly could make. There had been bitter moments when this maudlin wretch almost convinced himself that he could rejoice in the discovery that Christine was not of his flesh and blood; that this too virtuous woman was not pure after all.

His sullen despair brought him to even lower depths. In half sober moments he began to realize that his daughter feared and despised him. She had come to feel the distinction between her parents, and she had done the perfectly obvious thing in following the instincts of the gentle blood that was in her. She had cast her lot with her mother. He forced his own aspirations and hopes for her in this bitter hour. He wanted to hurt her so that she might cry out with him in ugly rage against the coming, strange, paragon. If he only could bring Mary to his level so that Christine might no longer be so arrogantly proud of the blood that came through the Jenson veins. He drove himself at last into such a condition of hatred for all that was good and noble that he would have hailed with joy the positive proof that his wife had been untrue to him.

When the time came to go over the receipts with the ticket sellers he pulled himself together and prepared to assert his authority. He tossed away the empty bottle and advanced upon the wagon, his face blanched by self pity. He was confounded by the sight of Colonel Grand sitting inside and going over the cash with Hank, the seller.

"What do you want?" demanded Colonel Grand when Braddock after trying the locked door showed his convulsed face at this little window. Hank looked uncomfortable.

"Let me in there, Grand," grated the man outside.

"I'll attend to this. We can't have you bothering with the finances."

"I'll kick that door in," roared Braddock, "and I'll kill somebody."

Colonel Grand picked up the treasurer's revolver. He smiled indulgently. "I'm taking care of the money after this, Brad."

"I own this show, d—n you! I—I—I'll fix you!" spluttered the other. He began to cry.

"Get away from that window!" snapped Grand, his eyes glittering.

"Oh, say, now, Bob, treat me fair—treat me right," pleaded Braddock, all at once abject.

"I'll talk to you later on. Get away!"

"Don't throw me down, Bob. I've always done the square thing by you. Didn't I? I owe you everything I owed you by."

"Are you going to leave that window?" demanded Grand.

The miserable wretch looked into the deadly eyes of the man inside and realized. A great sob arose in his throat. He held it back for a moment, but it grew and grew as he saw no pity in the steely eyes beyond.

"My soul!" he groaned with the bursting of the sob. He withdrew his ghastly face and rushed away in the night, stumbling over ropes and pegs, creating no end of havoc among the men who happened to toll in his path. They ran from him, thinking him mad. Half an hour later Ernie Cronk came upon him.

"What's the matter?" asked the hunchback.

"Ernie," began Braddock in a voice that sent a shiver across the boy's crooked back it was so sepulchral. "Let me take your pistol a second."

Ernie drew back a step. He eyed Braddock nervously.

"Who are you going to kill?" he asked after a moment.

"Myself," said Braddock, lifting his haggard face.

Again the hunchback looked long at the man. Then, without a word, he handed a new revolver to Thomas Braddock. It was not the small deringer he was wont to carry.

Braddock seemed surprised at the boy's readiness. He received the weapon gingerly. A sudden spasm shook his big frame.

"Is it loaded?" he inquired, less lugubrious than he had been before.

"No," said Ernie shortly. Braddock's chest swelled suddenly. "I suppose you think I'm fool enough to let you kill yourself with my gun and me right here where they could nab me. It's got blank cartridges, that's all. Somebody changed 'em on me last night—just before that—that sneak went away on the train. But if you really want to shoot yourself," went on Ernie maliciously, "I've got a round of real cartridges here. While you're loadin' the gun I can make a sneak. If I was you, though, I'd go up that alley there, Brad. It's terrible public here."

"You wicked little brute, you!" cried Braddock, coming to his feet and drawing away as if from a viper. "You cold blooded whelp! I—I never heard of such—"

"Ain't you going to kill yourself?" demanded Ernie, grinning.

Braddock appeared to ponder. "No," he said with eager finality, "not just now. I'm going to have it out with her first. Then, maybe I won't do it at all."

Ernie's scoffing laugh followed him into the shadows. It was the last straw. He was an object of derision to this thing of jibes and sneers.

The flush of anger had come back into his bloated cheeks by the time he had slipped under the side wall into the dressing tent. A sense of loneliness struck him.

Christine was in the ring. Mrs. Braddock stood over by the tattered red curtains, peering out into the "big top." He knew just where to look for her; she always stood there while her daughter was performing with old Tom Sacks. Not Tom Braddock, but all the others, noted the weary droop of her shoulders.

She started violently when he came up from behind and spoke to her.

She faced him, hesitated an instant, and then said, without a trace of emotion in her voice:

"Tom, do you think Colonel Grand would be willing to buy out my share in the show?"

He stared. Then he laughed sarcastically.

"What are you givin' us? Buy out your share? I should say not. He might buy you, but not your share."

"You are a beast, Tom Braddock," she said, the red mounting slowly to her pale cheek.

"Say, don't you suppose I know how it stands with you and him?" he retorted. "Come off, Mary. You're both trying to freeze me out. I'm on to the little game."

"Don't speak so loudly," she implored, clasping her hands.

"Oh, I'm not tellin' any secrets," he snarled. "It's common property. Everybody's on. I should think you'd be ashamed to look Christine in the face."

"God forgive you, Tom Braddock," she cried, abject horror in her eyes.

"Say, I've got to have an understanding with you," he went on ruthlessly. "I'm going to find out just how I stand in this arrangement. Grand's taken charge of the money box. He says it's you and him against me. He's going to—"

"He lies! He lies!"

"Oh, let up—let up! I'm no fool."

"Tom Braddock, are you—are you accusing me?"

He opened his lips to utter the words which would have ended everything between them. His eyes met hers and the words slipped back into his throat. The spark of manhood that was left in him revolted against this wanton assault upon the pure soul that looked out upon him.

"Course not," he said reluctantly.

"How much lower can you sink?" she asked in low tones.

"Don't you turn against me like this," he returned sullenly.

"I have endured too long—too long," she said lifelessly.

"I'm sick of having you whining all the time—"

"Whining?" she cried. "God in heaven!"

Her bitter laugh irritated him. "Say, I got to talk this business over with you. We've got to understand each other."

"We do understand each other," she said, a note of decision in her voice. "You are ready to sacrifice me to worm money out of that horrid beast. I loathe him. You know it, and yet you force me to meet him. Either he leaves this show, or I do. I will not endure this unspoken but manifest insult a day longer."

"I'd like to know how you're going to help it," he said, glaring at her with half restored belligerence. "You can't get out without losin' what you've got in the business, and he won't get out."

"Are you going to permit him to continue paying his odious attentions to me—to your wife?" she cried.

"I don't care what he does," roared Braddock. "If he thinks you've got a price that's his lookout, not mine."

"Not yours?" she gasped. "Oh, Tom, Tom! What manner of man have you come to be? You surely are not in your right mind."

"You bet I am! Now, you listen to me. You are going to stick right with this show, you and Christine. You got to treat Bob (Grand) half way decent. How'd you suppose we'd get on without his help right now? Just as soon as we get on our feet I'll show him what's what. He'll get out of the show busness a heap sight wiser man than he is now. But we need him now. We got to stand together, you and me. We—"

"Stop!" She stood before him like an outraged priestess. This time he did not shrink, but glared back at her balefully. "This is the end! We have come to the parting of the ways. I will never call you husband again. If you even speak to me, Thomas Braddock, I shall ask any one of a dozen men here to beat you as you deserve. Oh, they will be only too happy to do it! Now, hear me: I am going to take Christine away from you—forever. Don't curse me yet! Wait! I am not through. This very night I shall offer my share in this show to Colonel Grand. He may have it at his own price. If he will not buy then I shall go forth and look for another purchaser. I—"

"Is it loaded?"

"You're my wife. You can't sell without my consent," he exclaimed.

"Then I will ask the court to give me the right. Now, go! I—"

"You can't take Christine. She's as much mine as she is—"

"I will hear no more. I have given you the last chance to be a man. This ends it."

She turned and walked away from him. He knew that it was all over between them.

"Sell out, will you?" he muttered. "I'll block that game. I'll sell out to him myself. That's what he wants."

He directed his footsteps toward the ticket wagon. Colonel Grand was leaving it as he came up.

"Hello, Brad," Colonel Grand said quite genially. "If I was a bit rougher awhile ago I apolo—"

"Say, I want to talk privately with you right away. I've got a proposition to make. It's final, too, and it's friendly, so don't look as if you're going to pull a gun on me. Come on to the hotel. Oh, I'm not as drunk as you think."

"Mrs. Braddock expects me to escort her to the hotel—"

"No, she don't," rasped the other. "She's all right. Leave her alone. Are you coming?"

Colonel Grand was struck by the man's behavior. "All right," he said. "I'll go with you."

They were soon closeted in the room back of the hotel bar, a bottle between them on the table. The door was locked. Their conversation lasted an hour. When Colonel Grand arose to depart he stood a little behind and to the left of Braddock's chair, a soft, sardonic smile on his lips. He held a sheet of paper in his hand. Pen and ink on the table alongside the more sinister bottle told of an act of penmanship.

"We'll have the night clerk and some one else witness the signatures," he said quietly.

"All right," said Braddock hoarsely. He was staring at his fingers, which he twiddled in a nervous, irresolute manner.

"The inside conditions are between you and me personally. You'll have to live up to them, Braddock."

"I'm a man of my word."

"You are to get out at the end of the week. That's plain, is it?"

"If the cash is passed over. Don't forget that. Say, Bob, I swear you're treating me dirt mean. I ought to have five times more than you are payin' me, and you know it. Five thousand dollars! Why, it's givin' the show away."

"I didn't suggest buying you out. You came to me to sell. If you don't want to let it go at the price we've agreed on I'll tear up this bill of sale."

"I've got to take it, so what's the use kicking? I'm going to get out of the business. My wife's against me. Everybody is. D—n them all!"

Critter Wisdom.

As a general proposition it may be said that the sow that has pigs before she is a year old will disappoint her owner.

Sorghum is an excellent succulent feed for cows, horses, sheep and hogs. When fed green it saves more expensive feeds and keeps stock in fair flesh until other feeds can be gathered.

The safest bull the dairyman can use is generally a cross bull. At first this may seem a strange assertion. The reason, however, is simple. The bull that is known to be cross will always be watched.

Do not give fresh cows, immediately after calving, heavy feed. Give mild or warm water and a small amount of light feed, such as bran, that will be cooling to the system and will keep the bowels loose.

Oh, You Fall!

Go hang away your summer jeans. For autumn days are here. And hang your straw hat on the hook. It's cool, quit drinking beer.

Go store that mower safe away. No longer you must grunt in pushing that dull thing around in that back breaking stunt.

Go hang the hose up on the hook. Yes, sir, keep off the grass! You're done the fun of squirting folks As they your mansion pass.

Now put the garden spade away And polish up your gun. The hunting season has arrived. Hooray for bully fun!

But listen—oh, our fun is smashed!—Just listen to Marlar. She's yelling clear across the street As if she was afire:

"Come, clean that carpet on the line! That stovepipe must come down. I've got to get my house all cleaned Before the rest in town."

"Here, clean that attic quick for me. And clean the cellar too. And don't forget, with other things, To clean that furnace flue."

"And when you've got the house all done And washed my poodle Nell Go hang yourself upon the line, And I shall dust you well."

KURIOS FROM KORRESPONDENTS

Q. Where did the Belgian hare originate, what is the origin of the Flemish giant, and which is the better rabbit for market? A. The Belgian came from Belgium or northern France. The Flemish is only a Belgian bred for size, and this gives it a coarser and less finely flavored meat than the other, which, for these reasons, sells better.

Q. Please give the natural bill of fare of the ruffed grouse or pheasant. A. Wild berries and fruits, acorns, chestnuts, beechnuts, hazelnuts, seeds, browse, beetles, weevils, worms, sawfly, larvae, apple caterpillars, buckwheat and other grains. To supply this insect ration for pheasants raised artificially our English kokezins skin a horse, let him be blowed, bury him near surface and gather the maggots for the birds when they wiggle through. The maggot method isn't in vogue here.

Q. Which do you find lay the more and the larger eggs, Rose Comb or Single Comb Leghorns, and which variety of Leghorns do you consider most profitable? A. Single Comb. The Single Comb White Leghorns.

Q. How can I breed a firm, smooth comb of uniform type on S. C. Brown Leghorn cockerels? A. Mate a male with a straight, firm, smooth, true, five pointed comb to a hen with a straight, five pointed comb.

Q. Why are not more Aylesbury ducks bred in America? A. Because the Peking matures quicker, picks easier and has that yellow butter color so popular in this country.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

The Chinese are trying to get a market for their dedicated dried eggs in this country. It requires seventy yolks to make a pound of the dried product and the whites of 200 eggs to make a pound of egg albumen. Whole dried eggs sell at 31 cents a pound, dried yolks at 24 cents and egg albumen at 44 cents. How's that for cheap?

If customers find prices for poultry and eggs higher a glance at market quotations will generally show feeds higher also. To make a reasonable profit the poultryman must adjust his prices according to the cost.

When an exploding incubator lamp set fire to her clothing Mrs. William Jones, near Ulysses, Pa., jumped into bed and smothered the flames with blankets and saved her life. Fire extinguishers and beds should be kept handy for such emergencies.

The idea that so many going into poultry will cause a glut in the market will never come true in a country whose population grows so fast and where the beef trust has the people by the throat. Chicken and eggs have largely taken the place of beef in many homes, and there is no healthier food especially when home raised.

It is claimed 70,000 chickens were killed in the shell by concussion from the twelve inch guns of the Delaware while practicing off the eastern shore near Norfolk, Va. The same reporter declared that the noise so scared the old hens and roosters that they shed all their feathers and ran to the tall timber for protection. Nuf sed.

A York (Pa.) citizen was tried in court because his bulldog "deliberately and with malice aforethought did wound and slay seven cats." The court ruled that it was natural for a dog to chase and kill cats, and the owner was not to blame. The cat protectors had to pay the costs.

The report of the Spring Creek Sparrow club of Illinois for 1911 shows that its members killed 650 sparrows, 1,150 rats, 83 moles, 131 crows, 30 owls, 32 hawks, 26 weasels, 123 minks and 63 groundhogs. They knew enough not to monkey with the skunks.

The American Poultry association has decided to exchange the corrected standard for the edition sent out at first on condition that the old book and 60 cents are sent to S. T. Campbell, secretary A. P. A., Mansfield, O.

The Ohio pardon board certainly has the rest of the states guessing as to what it will do next. It recently pardoned a chicken. Let who was serving a fifteen year term on the ground that he was a kleptomaniac and made him promise to be good and marry his brother's widow, who has seven children.

The champion chicken thief of Pennsylvania has spent most of his life behind the bars for henlifting and claims to have stolen 3,500. If you can beat that, let's hear from you.

McDonald Not a Candidate.

In reply to numerous rumors afloat to the effect that he is seriously considering the matter of becoming a candidate for the United States senate to succeed Senator A. B. Fall, Gov. W. C. McDonald, the democratic executive of the state of New Mexico, declares that he has no intention of indulging in any such procedure. He says he was elected governor of the state by the people of New Mexico on the pledge to give them honest and economical administration of their state affairs, and he proposes to live up to the obligation he owes the people by serving out his term as governor and giving the very best service of which he is capable.

And this attitude on the part of the New Mexico executive is just exactly what those who know the man best would expect from him. With a high sense of duty, he feels he can not afford to trifle with the people who called him to his present exalted position and that he would be false to his obligations if he should in any manner turn aside from the work that lies before him. Governor McDonald came into his present position under circumstances well calculated to try his metal. Under the domination and control of the republican ring of the territory, the affairs of New Mexico were in a most deplorable condition. The rule of the ring involved the least possible service to the people for the highest possible perquisites for those in official position, and under this system the most abominable lossism sprang up and honest political service was seldom thought of.

Realizing the conditions that confronted the people of his state, Governor McDonald took hold of the situation with a firm and unyielding hand and has largely succeeded in bringing order and regularity out of the existing political chaos. While he is a democrat of the old school, he has been the governor of all the people of New Mexico, and true to every made great progress in the work of purification and reformation, there yet remains much of the same work to do, and while it is possible that he might be chosen United States senator as a result of the peculiar conditions existing in New Mexico political circles at this time, it is gratifying to note that he cannot be swayed from his conception of duty to the people at this time, and will continue to discharge those duties which he was chosen to perform.

There will come other opportunities for William C. McDonald to be elected United States senator from the state of New Mexico—opportunities, too, that can be embraced without the sacrifice of any sense of existing obligations to the New Mexico people. He can afford to wait for this great additional honor to come to him just as long as the people of his state can afford to dispense with his services in the senate, and when he enters the senate it will be with the consciousness that the honor has come to him as a further reward for the good he has done in the service of the people.

The New Mexico state legislature will assemble in regular session Tuesday, January 14, for the election of a successor to Senator A. B. Fall, and while it would be a good thing for New Mexico to have a democratic senator in the next democratic congress, with the republicans in control of the state legislature, the choice of a democrat does not appear a very promising proposition.—El Paso Times.

It would seem that the Irish do not always lose. The other day Edward F. Dunne, was sworn in as the first democratic governor Illinois has had since Altgeld, by Chief Justice Dunn. It took Illinois sixteen years to mend its ways, but it was better late than never.

Judge Neblett when asked how long court would hold, stated that it would hold as long as there was a case to try.

The present term of the district court contrasts strongly with many in the past for the present term has about 200 civil cases to deal with and only one criminal case of any importance.

GOV. McDONALD AFTER INFORMATION AS TO SALARIES.

Puts Searching Questions to the County Clerks of the State on the Subject

Santa Fe, N. M., Jan. 13.—The question of salaries for the county officers which is one of the biggest matters still unsettled in the new state, will occupy a prominent place in the deliberations of the state legislature which met for a 60 days session last Tuesday.

A salary bill was passed by the legislature at its special session last spring, but because he believed it exorbitant and unjust in many respects Governor McDonald vetoed the bill.

The governor realized that it was a weighty question and to clear up some of the questions in his own mind, he has recently sent to every county clerk in the state a question list to be filled out and returned to him. From this he expects to be able to get some definite ideas on the salaries the different offices should pay in fairness both to the taxpayers and the officers themselves.

The list of questions asked by the governor is as follows:

What were the receipts of the clerk's office during the past year?

How many extra clerks were employed if any?

Is the county clerk employed all the time at his office or does he conduct a business which takes some of his time?

Give a statement of the fees received by the sheriff's office.

Number of days during the year of county commissioner and probate court meetings.

The governor himself offers to pay the cost of compiling this data.

Some Rabbits.

J. M. Adams who lives in the city and has been employed for the past seventeen months by Ross Malone, is no friend to the rabbit, and if many men went after them with the gait of Adams there soon would not be many more rabbits. This week Mr. Adams spent two days hunting the cottontails out 60 miles north on the Pecos river and killed 266 rabbits with a 22-caliber Winchester rifle. He sold the rabbits to the New State and U. S. Markets, and received $1.00 per dozen, which netted him a little over $22. Mr. Adams explained that he killed all of them while sitting still, as it was necessary to shoot them in the head to dress them so that they would be fit for market.—News.

Farmers Union Meeting.

Last Saturday night at the open meeting of the Otis Farmers Union, the Carlsbad singers under the stimulus of an appreciative audience surpassed all former efforts, the music being the finest ever rendered in the Pecos Valley.

The exercises started promptly at half past seven with an address of welcome by W. F. McIlvain.

Invocation by Rev. W. L. Ennefer.

Installation of officers of the Otis Union No. 85 of the F. E. and C. U. of America.

Secretary and Treasurer, Henry Tipton.

Conductor, W. H. Reeves.

Doorkeeper, Geo. Hunt.

Chaplain, Hubert Keith.

Solo by Mrs. Easton accompanied by Miss Stephenson. Violin solo by Mr. H. D. Woolley.

Solo by Mrs. L. E. Foster accompanied by Miss Stephenson.

Reading by Miss Pearl Schneider.

Song by Mrs. Fessenden with violin obligato.

Song by Mr. H. D. Woolley, accompanied by Miss Linn.

Every number was enthusiastically encored.

After the refreshments, sandwiches, cake and coffee were disposed of at the urgent solicitation of the members Miss Linn gave two fine selections of instrumental music, Mrs. Fessenden sang another song and Mrs. Galton gave a recitation.

Visitors from Carlsbad were:

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Fessenden, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Fitz Hugh Marshall, Miss Ethel Stephenson, Miss Jennie Linn, Mr. H. D. Woolley, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Thorne.

In another column will be found a circular letter to school directors over the signature of the county superintendent, A. E. Bailey, which is self-explanatory. It seems, from all accounts, that some of the directors in the rural schools are not as careful in expending funds of the district as they should be in view of the present state of the county school finances, and consequently some schools will not have as long sessions as they had expected. Superintendent Bailey is working early and late to bring the rural schools of our county to as high a state of efficiency as can be done and the people should co-operate with him in this effort.

Band Boys Entertained.

Professor Bunch feeling that the social side of the life of Carlsbad band was being neglected, planned a little surprise for them on the occasion of their practice last Tuesday night.

With the assistance of one or two friends, Mrs. Bunch prepared refreshments consisting of sandwiches, salad, pickles, cake and coffee, and when the band arrived in the Woodman hall for practice they found this toothsome collation waiting their disposal.

The presence of a few invited guests added to the pleasure of the occasion. The guests present were: Wilburn Fessenden, Dr. and Mrs. Parr, and children, Mrs. Rarey and son, R. M. Fessenden, Mrs. Fessenden, Mrs. Canfield, Mrs. Bunch and daughter, Messrs. Owen, Brown and Smith.

The parties mentioned above and the band boys numbering in all thirty-nine, had a good social time together, and the bond of friendship existing between the members of the band and their instructor have been more strongly connected by the effort. It is intended to make the social life of the band of more prominence in the future than has been done in the past.

A beautiful and impressive service was held at the local Methodist church last Sunday night, the occasion being the installation of the recently elected officers of the Womans Missionary Society. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Goodloe, gave an address on the work of the society, in various parts of the country and illustrated his talk with blackboard. The entire service was very interesting and profitable and enjoyed by a large congregation.

Ocean Route Agreement.

London, Jan. 15.—Negotiations are almost completed between the British and Continental shipping companies respecting a change in the north Atlantic shipping tracks. It is hardly probable that the agreement will become effective today as planned, previously, but an understanding is very near. The agreement calls for the adaptation of new crossings one degree south of the previously agreed-upon routes in August.

ANDREWS MAY BE SENATOR!

Fall Goes to Washington for Ruling—Many States Select Their Men for the Upper House.

Santa Fe, N. M., Jan. 14.—That there is going to be an election held for United States senator to name a successor to Senator Albert B. Fall, was made evident on the opening of the state legislature today. With the republican majority in complete accord, and the rumored opposition to Speaker Baca no where in evidence, the two houses proceeded to business without delay, adjourned until tomorrow when the governor's message will be received.

At a republican caucus held tonight, Jesus Romero, leader of the progressive party in the state and chairman of this party's committee in Bernalillo county, re-affirmed his allegiance to the republican party. This caucus also was attended by John Baron Burg, progressive leader of the house and Thomas Gurule, another progressive member. It is said that the two members also allied themselves with the republican majority.

Senator Fall will leave the capital tomorrow night for Washington, going there it is said, to get an expression from the committee on privileges and elections as to his second alleged election. If the committee shall hold the election invalid, then Fall is expected to return and endeavor to secure his re-election.

The return of Representative Burg and Gerule to the republican party lends color to the rumor that the progressives have made a deal with the republican majority whereby Senator Fall will be retired and former delegate to congress William H. Andrews elected senator for the six year term beginning March 4, next.

Table with 10 columns: Description, Town, Lot Sec., Sub. Twp., Range, Page, Orig. Tax, Inst. Pen., Pub. Cost, Total. It lists various property lots and their associated taxes and costs.

STATE OF NEW MEXICO, COUNTY OF EDDY. Office of Treasurer and Collector. To the delinquent taxpayers whose names appear in the foregoing list and to the unknown owners of property appearing as described therein: Take notice, that the undersigned Treasurer and ex-Officio Collector of taxes in and for the County of Eddy, State of New Mexico, after the expiration of thirty days from and after the last publication of this notice, to-wit: On the 3rd Tuesday in February being the 25th day of February, A. D. 1913, beginning at the hour of ten o'clock a. m. of said day will offer for sale at public auction in front of the County Court House door, in the Town of Carlsbad in said County and Territory, the real estate and personal property described in said notice for the amount of taxes, penalties and costs due thereon as set out in said notice. This notice is given and said property will be sold in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 22 of the Acts of the Legislative Assembly of the State of New Mexico, for the year 1899, approved March 1st, 1899, and other laws of the State of New Mexico. Witness my hand this 31st day of December, A. D. 1912. W. H. MERCHANT, Treasurer and ex-Officio Collector of Eddy County, New Mexico.

Mere Mediocrity. "I used to think I possessed the artistic temperament—the sacred fire—but I was mistaken. I'm just one among the millions of common people. "You have no right to say that! You have done some splendid things—things that you could not possibly have done if you had merely been one among the millions of common people. "No, you're mistaken. I'm just an ordinary, everyday man. Why, my wife has lived with me for eleven years without ever once thinking of getting a divorce!"—Judge's Library. Where He Was. The mayor of a small town was trying a negro for abusing his wife. She claimed he got drunk and tried to beat her and she hit him. The mayor turned to their little girl and asked, "Girl, was your father under the influence of whisky when your mother hit him?" "No, sah. He was under the kitchen table," she quickly replied. — National Monthly.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS. Miss Constance Bentley of England is in the United States trying to wear out her grief for the death of a pet cat. The Rev. Miss A. J. Allebach, the first woman minister to speak at the conference of religious liberals, is president of the National Association of Women in the Ministry. She was ordained last year and is now preaching for the missions in New York. Miss May Robertson, claimed to be the only woman stage driver in the country, makes the trip regularly between Life and Meeker, Colo., a distance of thirty miles. She looks after the baggage, attends to the seating of passengers and gives attention to considerable transportation business along the route. She is a slender young woman, not yet twenty-one, and is credited with being one of the best drivers in the west. Mrs. Horace E. Soule, the second woman wireless operator to sail out of an American port, arrived in San Francisco recently aboard the steamer Windler, eighty-four days out of New York. Mrs. Soule is the wife of the steamer's captain and became an operator that she might remain with her husband, whom she has accompanied on his voyages for nearly twenty years. They have made three round trips around the world together.

OPENING HIS HAND. William Penn was once urging a man to stop drinking to excess when the man asked, "Can you tell me an easy way to do it?" "Yes," Penn replied. "It is as easy as to open thy hand." "Convince me of that," the man said, "and on my honor I will do as you tell me." "Well, my friend," Penn answered, "whenever thee finds a glass of liquor in thy hand open that hand before the glass touches thy lips and thee will never drink to excess again." Bright Scholars. Examination "howlers" are by no means confined to schoolboys, as an "information test" of freshmen at New York university showed. The definitions of "hypothecate" as "a druggist" and "esophagus" as "a tomb in which dead kings were placed" were worthy of lineal descendants of Mrs. Malaprop, while the statement that "Reowulf" was a character in Shakespeare's "Ivanhoe" rivals the classic account of Aesop as "a man who wrote fables" and traded the copyright for a bottle of potash.—New York Tribune. Russian Discipline. While attending a fair at Riga a Russian sergeant directed a private to fill his tub for a bath. The sergeant was suddenly called away and returned several hours later to find the building flooded and the private explaining to excited tenants that he could not turn off the faucet without orders from his superior.

The Royal Box. Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria is supposed to be the best dressed sovereign in Europe and to possess a larger wardrobe than any of his brother monarchs. Sultan Mohammed V. of Turkey is private life is very simple in his tastes. His meals are often frugal, his favorite dish being, it is reported, the so-called "tas-kebab," small bits of mutton, well seasoned and roasted over a slow fire. The king of Norway spends less on his attire than any other monarch and much less than many well to do private individuals. He keeps only about a dozen suits going at the same time and the some of his shooting and sporting suits does not pay more than altogether he does not spend more than $1,250 per annum on his ordinary dress.

The ravages of the cotton boll weevil have been a blessing in disguise to thousands of southern farmers in that they have literally been driven by losses sustained along this line to quit a ruinous system of soil robbing in the growing of cotton only and take up a rotation with other crops, including the legumes. Under such rotation they have been able to produce bumper crops of corn, cowpeas and clovers, and not only this, but by giving their land a rest in these crops have been able to get a larger acre yield of cotton than before. In the work it has done along this line the department of agriculture has rendered an incalculable service to southern agriculture.

HOW TO BUILD A SAND-CLAY ROAD It is by Far the Most Economical Kind of Highway. BALANCE THE MATERIAL. Plenty of Sand is Necessary and a Good Water Resisting Clay For a Binder—Plow Deep For a Good Road, Says Expert. The sand-clay road has been in use from time immemorial, and yet the study of it has been very recent. So far as I know, the study was never scientifically carried out prior to 1900, says W. L. Spoon, road engineer of Forsyth county, S. C., in Southern Good Roads. It was built in many places throughout South Carolina, and there are many discussions as to who the inventor was. Now, the sand-clay road or the so-called binder, which is only a type, has shown a substantial durability as well as a cheapness in first cost and a cheapness in maintaining cost, or second cost; consequently it is the best road for country districts wherever conditions will permit. One of the best things about it is this—it is the most capable of withstanding automobile traffic, and the lateral or pull of the wheel seems to do but little or no harm. Then again it is the most delightful road for the stock of the farmer and the man who delights in driving.

How would you build this sand-clay road? The first problem is to make a thorough investigation of natural conditions. Sand is the primary and the fundamental thing in the building of a sand-clay road. It is the all of a sand-clay road. The clay merely furnishes or forms a binder. The durability will depend largely upon the texture of the clay. If the clay is open and porous it will sponge up and lose its grip on the sand, and you have a slush or a muddy road, but if you have a water-resisting clay and apply sand to the depth of ten inches you have a road that is easily kept in repair, more so than any class of macadam road, and at a cost that is very small in comparison. The soil is turned over by plowing process in the cultivation, brought to the surface; the rain removes the easily absorbed parts of clay and leaves only that part which most firmly resists the action of rain. Therefore when you put it in the road you get a cohesive mass that builds together like cement almost. Now, really the trouble with the soil road is if the material is not right you put it down too thin. You plow up six inches of soil and you say at once you have a foot of soil. It expands or opens up to almost double its volume. If you want a soil road of ten inches you must put down fourteen inches of loose material, so that when it is firmly welded together you have a twelve inch road. If you build that strong enough you will succeed nine times out of ten.

EGG LAYING CONTEST ENDED On Oct. 31 the international egg laying contest, which had been conducted for a full year at the Storrs Agricultural college, in Connecticut, came to a close. The contest, which has been frequently reported in this department, has been one of unusual interest as well as of great practical value. Professor Cosgrove, who has had supervision of the contest, in speaking of the practical value of the contest calls particular attention to the fact that with proper care the tenderest breeds were kept in the severe and changeable New England climate in open front houses night and day, with too few birds in a house to affect its temperature. Only seventeen birds died during the year, which was less than 3.5 per cent, which shows the healthfulness of plenty of fresh air as well as the splendid care and feeding which the fowls have. The final count, as kept, gives first prize for best pen of five hens to the White Leghorns of F. G. Yost of Pennsylvania, his fowls having laid 1,071 eggs, or an average of 214.2 each. The owner gets as rewards two $100 silver cups, a cash prize of $50 and several minor prizes. Second place in the contest was won by a pen of White Wyandottes owned by Benlah farm, Ontario, these birds making a score of 1,063 eggs, but two eggs behind the winning pen. The Marwood farm pen of White Leghorns made a score of 1,042 eggs and was the only other pen to make a score better than a thousand eggs. The next six places in the contest were won by pens of White Leghorns with scores ranging from 982 down to 918 eggs each. The remaining seven pens to make a score of more than 900 eggs were respectively in order of performance, Buff Leghorns, Brown Leghorns, S. C. Rhode Island Reds (two pens), White Wyandottes, Barred Rocks and White Plymouth Rocks. The best authenticated record of any individual bird was made by a S. C. Rhode Island red pullet belonging to Mrs. Harris Lehman of Kentucky, her scorecard showing 254 eggs. Professor Cosgrove contends that special mention should be made of the pen of English White Leghorns belonging to Mr. Barron, which led in the early months of the race, and for some time after until two of the five layers died. It is thought that had this pen remained intact it would have won first place with ease. Immediately upon conclusion of the contest summarized above another contest, to last a year, was started. The contest is valuable chiefly because it has directed the attention of poultry raisers to practical performance in egg production rather than to fine points and fine feathers—features that are unduly emphasized in the average poultry show.

"MULTUM IN PARVO." It is quite natural that the individual creamery patron should consider it a small matter that his cream is of such quality as to reduce the price of his pro rata share of the butter product a cent a pound. It is true, perhaps, that in his case it would not amount to very many dollars a year. But when all or a considerable number of the dairy farmers of a state take this same attitude and continue to be careless with their milk and cream the total amount lost runs into a huge amount. In bulletin No. 220 of the Wisconsin experiment station Professor Benken-dorf takes up this very question and proves beyond question that if the quality of the 105,000,000 pounds of butter which the farmers of that state produce annually could be improved so that its value would be increased 1 cent per pound the butter output of the state would be worth a million dollars more than it is now. This is a nice illustration of the old truth "much in little."

PRIMITIVE AGRICULTURE. In portions of Egypt the raising of wheat is carried on in the same primitive way that was in vogue when the Pharaohs were building the pyramids. The soil is rutted about a bit with a primitive plow in the shape of a crooked stick, the seed wheat is sown by hand and covered by crude rakes, while in the harvesting process the hand sickle is still used, the grain being placed in piles and loaded by hand on the backs of camels for transportation to the thrashing places. It is a far cry from these primitive tilling and harvesting processes to the triple gas tractor outfits which turn over a combined furrow fifty-four feet wide—acres every four minutes—and the reapers pulled in gangs by tractors and cutting hundreds of acres in a day.

CUBAN QUEEN CORN. A north Iowa reader of this department recently brought the writer a sample of the variety of field corn known as the Cuban Queen. It is a yellow dent variety, having a color and kernel formation somewhat resembling Reid's Yellow Dent. However, the kernels are coarser and not so deep. The ears run from eight and a half to nine inches in length and have a circumference near the butt of eight inches. The cob is large, and the ear tapers rather sharply at the tip end. In our friend's case this variety yielded seventy bushels to the acre on land that up to a year ago had been pretty systematically skinned. A strong point in favor of this variety seems to be that it matures well in latitude 43 de grees.

Thorne, left Tuesday night for San Angelo, Texas. They will visit there as guests of Rev. Mr. Wallace, pastor of the Presbyterian church at that place, a son of Mrs. I. Wallace, before returning to their home in Tennessee.

Hospital News.

The hospital building is moving on with great rapidity, one story being finished last night. The beauty of the structure can now be seen, and everything is being done in first-class shape as indeed, all the work undertaken by Contractor Toffelmire is always performed.

Since last report B. Von De Witz, a brother of Paul De Witz, of Lovington, has been admitted and Joe Graham, junior, a son of "Uncle Joe" Graham, of Pearl, has also been under treatment. Both are improving nicely.

George Frederick has been out with his subscription paper for the furnishing of the hospital, and to date, has received the following subscriptions:

Dr. F. F. Doepp, $50.00
Public Utilities Co. $50.00
The National Bank of Carlsbad $50.00
First National Bank $50.00
Joyce-Fruit Co. $50.00
Peoples Mercantile Co. $75.00
C. G. Nichols $100.00.

In addition to the above, Mesdames W. R. Nichols, Sr., and junior have each volunteered to furnish a room in the hospital. This, coming without solicitation, is very gratifying and encouraging to all the members of the hospital board.

Maccabees Install Officers.

The recently organized Hive of the Ladies of the Maccabees held its installation services in the Woodman hall Monday night, the members having secured that hall for their meetings. The regular work was put on for the first time in this city.

Mrs. N. T. Daugherty has been instrumental in organizing this society which has for its members many of our most prominent ladies. Applications are being received at each meeting and prospects are bright for this, the youngest of the many fraternal and benevolent societies in Carlsbad.

At the meeting Monday night, after the installation, a delightful collation was served, consisting of sandwiches, salad, pickles, cake and coffee, which added the social touch to a pleasant evening.

At the justice of the peace and constable election for this precinct last Monday Frank H. Richards, the present justice, was elected and Carl Gordon was elected constable. The judges of election were: J. D. Walker, H. B. Johnson, and Dennis Duncan. The clerks of election were: J. W. Lewis, and Melvin Bearup. Only sixty-one votes were polled, there being no opposition whatever. Mr. Richards received the total vote and Carl was scratched once, but no other name was placed on the ballot.

The Home and School Association held its regular monthly meeting Friday of last week at the High School building with a good attendance and an interesting program. Mrs. J. W. Lewis read a paper and Misses McKneeley and McMahan each spoke on "School Clothes for Children." A very general discussion took place on this interesting subject. It is too regrettable that more of the parents do not attend these meetings, as they are very interesting and helpful as well.

Last week A. C. Heard accompanied Dr. Heacock, the government veterinarian, to the Watkins place in Lone Tree Draw where Mr. Heard in company with Mr. Watkins has a herd of forty Jerseys and where all were tested for tuberculosis and were given a clear certificate of health. This was a work of some magnitude but, in order to be able to show that the Jerseys were in good health Messrs. Watkins and Heard decided it would pay to help the veterinarian in the work.

Mrs. Jane Cummins, who has been spending the winter in Carlsbad at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. J. Boatman left Wednesday morning for a visit with relatives in Oklahoma and will go from there to her old home in Oskaloosa, Iowa. Mrs. Cummins has the happy faculty of making friends of all with whom she comes in contact, and she will be greatly missed in Carlsbad.

The Eddy County Medical Association held a meeting last Saturday in Carlsbad, and elected the following officers: President, W. G. Cowan, of Carlsbad; Vice-President, Chester Russell, of Artesia; Secretary and treasurer, E. F. Furay, of Lakewood. F. F. Doepp, Homer F. Parr, of Carlsbad, were elected censors.

The Ousley cottage on north Canyon street, has been repapered this week, and wired throughout and will be occupied by the families of P. D. Brown and W. E. Craig who recently arrived here from Ohio, to spend the winter.

The pupils in the Grade building of Carlsbad public schools are on tiptoe of expectation, the mid-year promotion in that school taking place this afternoon. Promotions will be announced next week.

Rebekahs Install Officers.

Carlsbad Rebekah Lodge No. 13, held their semi-annual installation services last Monday night, at the Odd Fellow hall in this city. A fair-sized crowd was present and the District Deputy, Mrs. Maggie Ray Kirkpatrick, acted as the installing officer. The officers installed for the ensuing term are as follows:

N. G., Miss Lucille McKneeley.
V. G., Miss Emma Moore.
Sec., Mrs. Maggie Kirkpatrick.
Treas., Mrs. Wilhelmina Eiteljorge.
Chaplain, Mrs. M. F. Chaytor.
Conductor, Mrs. Rosa Smith.
Warden, Mrs. Carrie Etter.
I. G., Mrs. Cora Purdy.
O. G., Ed S. Kirkpatrick.
R. S. N. G., Mrs. Alice Bates.
L. S. N. G., Mrs. Ella Hicks.
R. S. V. G., Mrs. Eva Woodwell.
L. S. V. G., Miss Mable Bearup.

After the installation light refreshments consisting of sandwiches, cake and coffee were served.

The lodge of Rebekahs is one of the strongest organizations in Carlsbad and the members are planning to increase its efficiency still further the ensuing year.

Married.

In Carlsbad, Wednesday night, Jan. 15, at 8 o'clock, Tom Middleton of Queen, and Miss Pearl Cochran, of Malaga, were united in the bonds of matrimony, Rev. Mr. Goodloe, pastor of the local Methodist church, officiating. The ceremony took place at the residence of John Stewart and was strictly private.

The couple are well known in this part of the country where they have lived for a number of years, the groom being a member of the Middleton family, of Queen, and the bride a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hooley Cochran, of Malaga.

That their married life may be replete with happiness is the wish of their host of friends and the Current.

A Local Event

The great big theatrical event of the season here will take place when "The Third Degree" will be presented in this city. Its representation will enlist a company of play-talent, and staged with the same great care that is given to the exclusive city production. The company plays here the 28th. Adv.

P. D. Brown and wife came in from their home in Northeast Ohio last week, Thursday, to spend the winter. Mr. Brown spent last winter here and received much benefit from the climate. The Browns were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Craig and two children, who will also spend the winter.

The five weeks old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Hanna, Frederick William, expired last night at the family home in this city, of pneumonia. The little body was laid to rest in City Cemetery, at 2:30 this afternoon, with services at the house. The sympathy of all is with the bereaved parents.

Florence Love came in from his home in Lovington Saturday and took the early Sunday morning train for Santa Fe to assume his duties as representative from Eddy county in the legislature which convened Tuesday.

The class for the study of Missionary literature held its first meeting at the Methodist church yesterday afternoon with a good attendance. The book, "Mormanism, the Islam of America" was studied.

L. W. Crawford this week purchased a fine new car of the Chalmers variety being five-seated and having all the latest improvements. The car was purchased from Bert Sands, local agent.

The regular fortnightly meeting of the Daisy club which should have been held Tuesday has been postponed owing to some of the members being absent from the city at this time.

Roy Waller, deputy sheriff of Eddy county, returned the first of the week from the northern part of the county where he went for the purpose of summoning grand jurors.

Misses Johnson and Wilson teachers in our High School, will entertain the lady teachers of both buildings at the residence of Dr. Quirey, tomorrow evening.

William Beverly, for years a resident of La Huerta, but now living in Dalhart, Texas, is in attendance at court this week.

Mrs. S. Gillette, of Lakewood, is in the city this week in attendance on the district court in connection with some land matters.

There will be regular services at the Presbyterian church next Sunday, the pastor having returned to the city.

Henry George, of Carlsbad, was in Dayton last week on business.

Dr. Furay, of Lakewood, was in town Tuesday.

Encourage the Boys.

The boys in the Manual training department, under the direction of Prof. Hatfield, will make to order stand and center tables, piano stools, abourets, footstools, flower stands and all similar articles in Mission work; also lap boards, ironing boards etc. The proceeds of any sales they make will be used to defray running expenses. The work is fully guaranteed both as to quality and price. Specimens of the work may be seen on application to Professor Hatfield. Help the boys.

Some two months ago R. M. Fessenden had the misfortune to lose his gold watch and as all public spirited citizens do, promptly advertised his loss in the columns of the Current. Receiving no reply the grass was burned off and the yard raked to no avail. Monday, Wilburn, the five-year old son of the family, triumphantly produced the missing article which was found in plain view in the front yard. The watch, being a screw case, was uninjured and is keeping as good time as before. Wilburn claimed and received the reward offered.

Misses Thelma Benson and Lela Christian have issued invitations for a dance tonight to be given at Woodman hall, which gives promise of being one of the most brilliant affairs of the kind ever given in this city. About fifty of their friends have been invited to share the pleasure of the evening.

Oldest Candy in World is Licorice.
Most of the black licorice comes from Spain, where it is made from the juice of the plant and mixed with starch to prevent it from melting in hot weather. The licorice plant is a shrub about three feet high and grows wild where its roots can reach the water. It grows largely on the banks of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers. As the valley of the Euphrates contained one of the earliest civilizations in the world, it is probable that licorice is about the oldest confection in the world and that the taste which boys and girls like so well today was enjoyed by the boys and girls of Babylon and Nineveh 3,000 years ago—New York Mail.

Pay of French Presidents.

Marshal MacMahon paid more dearly than any other French president for the privilege of holding office, according to a story in the London Chronicle. He found it impossible to live with what he considered becoming pomp on his salary of $24,000 a year and after running through nearly all his private means became heavily involved. In his last year of office Gambetta persuaded the chamber to vote a lump sum for the payment of MacMahon's debts. It was then decided to raise the salary and allowances of the president to $48,000 a year, half of which is scheduled as "fruits de representation."
