Planning a Systematic Review

Wednesday, May 19, 12 - 12:50 PM

Tuesday, June 1, 5:30 - 6:20 PM

HEALTH SCIENCES LIBRARY
& INFORMATICS CENTER

Thinking of creating a systematic review? Want to know how to proceed? This introductory class walks participants through the steps in a systematic review process. Jon Eldredge offers practical advice on the logistics and resources involved with performing a systematic review. This class is designed for busy clinicians, clinical researchers, residents, and advanced students who want to learn the practical logistics of conducting a systematic review.

Learning Objectives:

By completion of this 50-minute class, each participant should be able to:

1. Outline the major steps in the systematic review process;
2. Appreciate the length of time, iterative loops, multiple skill sets, and challenges involved with conducting a systematic review

2 Sessions:

Wednesday May 19, 2021 12:00-12:50pm

Tuesday June 1, 2021 5:30-6:20pm
