TRADE BALANCE FOR OLD YEAR FOUR BILLION

With Steadily Increasing Trade and New Business, U. S. Will Experience Great Things in 1920.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 1.—Secretary Alexander, of the department of commerce, summed up the commercial outlook for 1920 in part as follows:

"The closing year witnessed a fabulous growth of American foreign commerce. Our trade balance for 1919 will be approximately four billions. A great fleet of merchant ships, new industries, new sources of supply and increased knowledge of our own resources are some of the assets gained from our war experience. Before the war we were engaged for the most part in the development of our own business with little serious thought of extension of our activities into world markets and we were too indifferent as regards our position of inferiority on the high seas. Today we are awake as never before. The pride of antebellum days is revived and we look to see our flag at the masthead of an American merchant ship in every important seaport of the world, carrying American goods wherever markets may be found.

Abandoning Fort Bayard Is Halted

Deming, Dec. 27.—According to the latest reports received here plans for abandoning Fort Bayard have been temporarily halted. It was reported a few weeks ago that all patients at the Fort were to be transferred to the big Government Sanitarium at Denver but through the efforts of Holm O. Bursum and Senator A. B. Fall, the deal has been temporarily held up. Both Mr. Bursum and Mr. Fall, pointed out to the officials in Washington that it would be an injustice to the soldier patients to send them to the rigorous Colorado climate and a distinct blow to the state to have Fort Bayard abandoned simply for political reasons.

Adulterated Booze Found

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 1.—Government chemists have found crude oil, embalming fluid, oil of peppermint and carmine coloring in liquor seized by internal revenue agents, according to justice Wardell, collector of internal revenue. Wardell said two persons had been indicted by the federal grand jury and 35 others arrested in three days on charges of living poisonous concoctions as beverages.

Revelers Shoot Five

Baltimore Jan. 1.—New Year's day opened here with the shooting of four young women and a boy by a group of intoxicated idlers racing along Baltimore street in an automobile shortly after 1 o'clock this morning.

Sad Holiday Season

Where others have enjoyed the passing holiday season, the B. L. Stimmel family have suffered; where others have hailed the present yule-tide with loved ones returning home, one of their loved ones has passed to the world beyond the grave. With their three boys returned from the service, Mr. and Mrs. Stimmel had made all preparations for enjoying Christmas and the week to follow when a telegram was received from Las Vegas announcing the severe illness of Mrs. Stimmel's mother. Acting on the advice of the message, she left for her mother's bedside but before she arrived at her destination a message came from Prescott, Washington, conveying word of the dangerous illness of their daughter, Mrs. Pearl Painter, of that place.

On receipt of this sad news, Benjamin, Jr., left last Sunday for Prescott, but owing to the fact that he did not arrive there until Wednesday of the present week, he arrived too late to see his sister alive, as another wire was received Tuesday which told of her death at 3 o'clock a. m. of that day. Her mother's condition improving to an extent that justified her return home, Mrs. Stimmel came in on No. 1 Wednesday morning but only to have her grief intensified by the news of her daughter's death. Inasmuch as the trip to Prescott will consume five days' time, it will be useless for the folks to attempt the journey to attend the funeral. The Outlook extends its sympathy to the bereaved family with the regret that it is one of the many sad cases in which words of human sympathy are the only means of comfort friends can offer.

Watch Meetings

Watch meetings were held at different homes over the city Tuesday night. At the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Donaldson, the Epworth League of the Methodist Church made merry with songs, recitations and games. At the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Merchant, the B. Y. P. U. of the Baptist Church held a watch meeting at which the guests whiled the hours away with a program of songs and recitations bidding the old year goodbye and extending the hand of welcome to the new. At the strokes of twelve the town was at the height of excitement. Bells rang, whistles blew, guns were fired, the broncos on the prairies taking up the refrain. The New Year has begun—Let us improve on the old.

Mrs. Adams Arrives

Mrs. Ray Adams, wife of our genial townsman at the Rely & Lujan Sanitary Store, arrived Tuesday from New York which adds one more family name to the Carrizozo register.

Plot To Kill Pueblo Men

Pueblo, Colo., Dec. 29.—Discovery of a wholesale death plot, in which, it is claimed, seven citizens of Pueblo had been marked for assassination by a band of foreign radicals here, was announced by "the committee of twenty-five," an organization of Pueblo citizens, formed three months ago, and whose membership is not known outside of the organization itself.

The men slated as victims include Frank E. Parks, manager of the local plant of the Colorado Fuel & Iron company, where a strike is in progress; George McLagan, president of the Pueblo Chamber of Commerce; Thomas H. Devine, prominent lawyer; J. Will Johnson, proprietor of the Colorado Laundry; R. G. Breckenridge, manager of the Pueblo Mining & Elevator company; Frank J. Birch, of the Birch Tent & Awning company; G. L. L. Gann, chairman of the Good Roads committee of the Commerce club.

Private detectives are said to have gathered evidence of the plot, but the matter was not given serious attention until after the attempt of unknown persons to kill Manager Parks of the steel plant Friday night when several bullets were fired at him while driving home from the plant.

Rode Bike to Capital Twenty Years Ago

(Santa Fe New Mexican)

"A. B. Stroup, attorney, of Albuquerque, who is in Santa Fe today, made his first visit to the capital just twenty years ago on Christmas night.

At that time Mr. Stroup was a teacher in Bernallillo and he rode all the way from Albuquerque on a bicycle to attend a meeting of the state teachers at Santa Fe. He reached that town tired and hungry but he finished the trip from Santa Fe, arriving that night.

That Mr. Stroup happened to be here on approximately the twentieth anniversary of his first visit was accidental. He came here on legal business, arriving last night, and he didn't pedal a bicycle all the way this time, although he may have wished to.

CATTLEMEN CALL ON WILSON FOR NEW BEEF TRUST ACTION

Leading Organizations of Western Cattle Men Visit President Making Known Their Wants.

Washington, Dec. 28.—Members of 12 western cattle growers' associations have appealed to President Wilson through former secretary McAdoo to upset the arrangements made by Attorney General Palmer to compromise the government's anti-trust proceedings against the meat packers, John Miller, of Fort Stockton, Texas, president of the Panhandle Cattle association, announced today.

The growers, Mr. Miller said, submitted to the president through McAdoo, a series of charges to the effect that the compromise does not give them any redress for their chief grievance, which, they allege, is the control of stockyard markets by the packers to the disadvantage of the producers. They ask that the prosecutions be taken out of the attorney general, and that new suits be brought with Francis J. Hene of San Francisco, former attorney for the federal trade commission, as a special prosecutor.

Voice From the Tomb

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 29.—William J. Bryan will speak here January 12 on the attitude of the democratic party for 1920. Friends of Mr. Bryan say he plans a tour of several weeks in which he will discuss the league of nations, the peace treaty and other possible campaign issues. Harry W. Walker, who managed campaigns of W. J. Bryan for president, today left for a tour of New York state and New England for the announced purpose of interviewing old members of Bryan leagues regarding reviving these organizations.

Meetings of the New York and New Jersey leagues will be called soon, Mr. Walker said. Martin H. Glynn, former governor of New York, seems to be favored as Bryan's running mate by old members of the New York league, according to Mr. Walker.

Oscuro Oil Fans Flood Carrizozo Monday

Monday was Oscuro day in Carrizozo; Messrs. Chas. Thornton, George Castle, W. L. Wellband, Charles F. Grey and others of Oscuro's male population; Mrs. Chas. Thornton and Mrs. Chas. Grey. This does not complete the list, however, as there were many more from our neighboring town, whose names we failed to get. We are always glad to meet Oscuro people, and they are easy to engage in conversation, especially when you talk about "oil!"

The outcome was that Mrs. Hardy insisted upon Irene embarking at once upon a finishing course. Afterward they traveled together for a year in Europe. Then home again, Irene pursued her art, and her mother surrounded her with the social attractions which Doctor Hardy's comfortable income and professional standing made possible. Her purpose was obvious and but thinly disguised. She hoped that her daughter would outlive her youthful infatuation and would at length, in a more suitable match, give her heart to one of the numerous eligibles of her circle.

To promote this end Mrs. Hardy spared no pains. Young Carlton, son of a banker and one of the leading men of his set, seemed a particularly appropriate match. Mrs. Hardy opened her home to him, and Carlton, whatever his motives, was not slow to grasp the situation. For years Irene had not spoken of Dave Elden, and the mother had grown to hope that the old attachment had died down and would presently be quite forgotten in a new and more becoming passion. The fact is that Irene at that time would have been quite incapable of stating her relation toward Elden and its influence upon her attitude to life. She was by no means sure that she loved that sunburnt boy of romantic memory; she was by no means sure that she should ever marry him, let his development in life be what it would; but she felt that her heart was locked, at least for the present, to all other suitors. She had given her promise, and that settled the matter.

Notwithstanding her indifference the girl found herself encouraging Carlton's advances, or at least not meeting them with the rebuffs which had been her habit toward all other suitors, and Mrs. Hardy's hopes grew as the attachment apparently developed. But they were soon to be shattered.

Irene had gone with Carlton to the theater; afterward to supper. It was long past midnight when she reached home. She knocked at her mother's door and immediately entered. Her hair was disheveled and her cheeks were flushed, and she walked unsteadily across the room.

"What's the matter, Irene? What's the matter, child? Are you sick?" cried her mother, springing from her bed.

"No, I'm not sick," said the girl brutally. "I'm drunk!"

"Oh, don't say that," said her mother soothingly. "Proper people do not become drunk. You may have had too much champagne and tomorrow you will have a headache."

"Mother! I have had too much champagne, but not as much as that precious Carlton of yours had planned for. I just wanted to see how despicable he was, and I floated downstream with him as far as I dared. But just as the current got too swift I struck for shore. Oh, we made a scene, all right, but nobody knew me there, so the family name is safe and you can rest in peace. I called a taxi, and when he tried to follow me in I slapped him and kicked him. Kicked him, mother. Dreadfully undignified, wasn't it? . . . And that's what you want me to marry, in place of a man!"

Mrs. Hardy was chattering with mortification and excitement. Her plans had miscarried. Irene had misbehaved. Irene was a difficult, headstrong child. It was useless to argue with her in her present mood. It was useless to argue with her in any mood. No doubt Carlton had been impetuous. Nevertheless he stood high in his set and his father was something of a power in the financial world. As the wife of such a man Irene might have a career before her—a career from which at least some of the glory would reflect upon the silvering head of the mother of Mrs. Carlton.

"Go to your room," she said at length. "You are in no condition to talk tonight. I must say it is a shame that you can't go out for an evening without drinking too much and making a scene. . . . What will Mr. Carlton think of you?"

"If he remembers all I told him about himself he'll have enough to think of," the girl blazed back. "You know what I have told you—and still Mister Carlton stands as high in your sight as ever. I am the one to blame. Very well. I've tried your choice and I've tried my own. Now I am in a position to judge. There will be nothing to talk about in the morning. Mention Carlton's name to me again and I will give the whole incident to the papers . . . with photographs . . . and names. Fancy the feature heading, 'Society Girl, Intoxicated, Kicks Escort Out of Taxi.' Good night."

But other matters were to demand the attention of mother and daughter in the morning. While the scene was occurring in Mrs. Hardy's bedroom her husband, clad in white, toiled in the operating room to save the life of a fellow being. There was a slip of an instrument, but the surgeon toiled on; he could not at that juncture pause; the life of the patient was at stake. When the operation was finished he found his injury deeper than he supposed, and Irene was summoned from her heavy sleep that morning to attend his bedside. He talked to her as a philosopher; said his life's work was done and he was just as glad to go in the harness; the estate should yield something, and there was his life insurance—a third would be for her. And when Mrs. Hardy was not at his side he found opportunity to whisper, "And if you really love that boy out West marry him."

The sudden bereavement wrought a reconciliation between Mrs. Hardy and her daughter. Mrs. Hardy took her loss very much to heart. While Irene grieved for her father Mrs. Hardy grieved for herself. It was awful to be left alone like this. And when the lawyers found that, instead of a hundred thousand dollars, the estate would yield a bare third of that sum, she spoke openly of her husband's improvidence. He had enjoyed a handsome income, on which his family had lived in luxury. That it was unequal to the strain of providing for them in that fashion and at the same time accumulating a reserve for such an eventuality as had occurred was a matter which his widow could scarcely overlook.

Her health had suffered a severe shock, for beneath her ostentation she felt as deep a regard for her late husband.

"No, I'm Not Sick," said the Girl Brutally. "I'm Drunk."

hand as was possible in one who measured everything in life by various social formulae. She consulted a specialist who had enjoyed a close professional acquaintance with Doctor Hardy. The specialist gave her a careful, meditative and solemn examination.

"Your condition is serious," he told her, "but not alarming. You must have a drier climate and, preferably, a higher altitude. I am convinced that the conditions your health demands are to be found in —" He named the former cow town from which Irene's fateful automobile journey had had its start, and the young woman, who was present with her mother, felt herself go suddenly pale with the thought of a great prospect.

"Oh, I could never live there!" Mrs. Hardy protested. "It is so crude. Cow-punchers, you know, and all that sort of thing."

The specialist smiled. "You will probably not find it so crude, although I dare say some of its customs may jar on you," he remarked, dryly. "And it is not a case of not being able to live there. It is a case of not being able to live here. If you take my advice you should die of old age, as far, at least, as your present ailment is concerned. If you don't—and he dropped his voice to just the correct note of gravity, which pleased Mrs. Hardy very much—"If you don't, I can't promise you a year."

Confronted with such an alternative, the good lady had no option. She accepted the situation with the resignation which she deemed to be correct under such circumstances, but the boundless prairies were to her so much desolation and ugliness. Irene gathered that her mother did not approve of prairies. They were something new to her life, and it was greatly to be suspected that they were improper.

CHAPTER IX.

Very slowly it dawned upon Mrs. Hardy that this respectable, thriving city, with its well-dressed, properly-mannered people, its public spirit, its aggressiveness, its churches and theaters and schools, its law and order, and its afternoon teas, after all, was the real West; sincere, earnest; crude, perhaps; bare, certainly; the scar of his recent battle with the wilderness still fresh upon its person; lacking the finish that only time can give to a landscape or a civilization; but lacking also the moldiness, the mustiness, the insufferable artificiality of older communities. Even Mrs. Hardy, steeped for sixty years in a life of precedent and rule and caste, began to catch the enthusiasm of a new land where precedent and rule and caste are something of a handicap.

"We must buy a home," she said to Irene. "We cannot afford to continue living at a hotel, and we must have our own home. You must look up a responsible dealer whose advice we can trust in a matter of this kind."

And was it remarkable that Irene Hardy should think at once of the firm of Conward & Elden? It was not. She had, indeed, been thinking of a member of that firm ever since the decision to move to the West. The fact is Irene had not been at all sure that she wanted to marry Dave Elden. She wanted very much to meet him again; she was curious to know how the years had fared with him, and her curiosity was not unmixed with a finer sentiment; but she was not at all sure that she should marry him.

"What, Dave Elden, the millionaire?" Bert Morrison had said. "Everybody knows him." And then the newspaper woman had gone on to tell what a figure Dave was in the business life of the city. "One of our biggest young men," Bert Morrison had said. "Reserved, a little; likes his own company best; but absolutely white."

That gave a new turn to the situation. Irene had always wanted Dave to be a success; suddenly she doubted whether she had wanted him to be so big a success. She had doubted whether she should wish to marry Dave; she had never allowed herself to doubt that Dave would wish to marry her. Secretly, she had expected to rather dazzle him with her ten years' development—with the culture and knowledge which study and travel and life had added to the charm of her young girlhood; and suddenly she realized that her luster would shine but dimly in the greater glory of his own. . . .

It was easy to locate the office of Conward & Elden; it stood on a principal corner of a principal street. Thence she led her mother, and found herself treading on the marble floors of the richly appointed waiting room in a secret excitement which she could with difficulty conceal. She was, indeed, very uncertain about the next development. . . . Her mother had to be reckoned with.

A young man asked courteously what could be done for them.

"We want to see the head of the firm," said Mrs. Hardy. "We want to buy a house."

They were shown into Conward's office. Conward gave them the welcome of a man who expects to make money out of his visitors. He placed a very comfortable chair for Mrs. Hardy; he adjusted the blinds to a nicey; he discarded his cigarette and beamed upon them with as great a show of cordiality as his somewhat beefy appearance would permit. Mrs. Hardy outlined her life history with considerable detail and ended with the confession that the West was not as bad as she had feared and, anyway, it was a case of living here or dying elsewhere, so she would have to make the best of it. And here they were. And might they see a house?

Conward appeared to be reflecting. As a matter of fact, he saw in this inexperienced buyer an opportunity to reduce his holdings in anticipation of the impending crash. His difficulty was that he had no key to the financial resources of his visitors. The only thing was to throw out a feeler.

"You are wanting a nice home, I take it, that can be bought at a favorable price for cash. You would consider an investment of, say—"

He paused, and Mrs. Hardy supplied the information for which he was waiting. "About twenty-five thousand dollars," she said.

"We can hardly invest that much," Irene interrupted, in a whisper. "We must have something to live on."

"People here live on the profits of their investments, do they not, Mr. Conward?" Mrs. Hardy inquired.

"Oh, certainly," Conward agreed, and he plunged into a mass of incidents to show how profitable investments had been to other clients of the firm. Then his mood of deliberation gave way to one of briskness; he summoned a car, and in a few minutes his clients were looking over the property which he had recommended. Mrs. Hardy was an amateurish buyer, her tendency being alternately to excess of caution on one side and recklessness on the other. Conward's manner pleased her; the house he showed pleased her, and she was eager to have it over with. But he was too shrewd to appear to encourage a hasty decision. He did not seize upon Mrs. Hardy's remark that the house seemed perfectly satisfactory; on the contrary, he insisted on showing other houses, which he quoted at such impossible figures that presently the old lady was in a feverish haste to make a deposit lest some other buyer should forestall her.

MADE MOCKERY OF SPARROWS

At Any Rate, Starling in English Park Evidenced Sense of Humor, Observer Asserts.

The sense of humor is usually regarded as exclusively human. But I am not sure that it is, writes "L. F." Yesterday I was privy to an incident in the bird world which raises doubts. Perched on a plane tree in Kensington gardens was a starling occupied in turning over his wet and disheveled feathers in the sun, for he had been bathing in the Serpentine. Presently a party of sparrows nearby began a noisy dispute—keeping up the sort of shrill cheep-cheep-cheep that one associates with the house top at five o'clock in the morning. This starling at once left off his laundry work and listened, with his head comically tossed so far back that his yellow bill pointed skyward. Then he executed a little warble—in a couple of bars, subdued and sweet. But the next instant, opening his bill to its widest gape, he broke out into that same shrill, five-in-the-morning cheep-cheep-cheep. Then he returned to his feathers.

The sparrows persisted. Again the head was thrown back and the mockery repeated. Again and again it was done, each imitation, curiously enough, being prefaced by the melodious little prelude. So exactly was the sparrows' chirp mimicked—in pitch, volume, timbre and rhyme—as to be quite indistinguishable from the original. If the starling has not the sense of humor, he appears at least to have a nice sense of the ridiculous that lies in mimicry.—Manchester Guardian.

Some Early American History.

The Automobile Blue Book takes up some early American history. Mankato, Minn., in pioneer days was the domain of the Sioux Indians. In 1802 this tribe, according to the tour bible, became dissatisfied with the slowness of the government in paying their annuities. Taking advantage of the fact that the Civil war had taken so many men from the country, the Sioux inaugurated one of the bloodiest massacres in the history of Indian warfare. The Indians were ultimately overcome by troops and imprisoned in Mankato. However, President Lincoln commuted the sentence of all but 39. One of these died and the other 38 were hanged from one scaffold on the levee in Mankato. The spot is now marked by a monument.

Date Tree Rightly Prized.

To the Arab the date tree is the perfection of beauty and utility. Every part of this tree has its use to him. The pistils of the date blossom contain a fine curly fiber, which is beaten out and used in all eastern baths as a sponge for soaping the body. At the extremity of the trunk is a terminal bud containing a white substance resembling an almond in consistency and taste, but a hundred times as large. This is a great table delicacy. There are said to be more than 100 varieties of date palm, all distinguished by their fruit, and the Arabs say that a good housewife can furnish her husband with a dish of dates differently prepared every day for a month.

Were Hearty Eaters.

Many great musical composers had exceptionally large appetites. When Handel dined alone at a restaurant he usually took the precaution of ordering a meal for three. Haydn, yet more voracious, was known to consume a meal that would have satisfied five ordinary appetites.

SCHOOL NOTES

By Supt. E. E. Cole

The school bell rings next Monday morning.

The new teacher for the eighth grade is Miss Elizabeth Shook of Fort Collins, Colorado. Miss Shook comes to us highly recommended, having first grade certificates in Iowa and Colorado. A testimonial from the Iowa State Normal states that she was second in a class of fifty. That is a high testimonial, especially as it comes from Iowa, a state with a highly developed educational system. It is difficult to take another teacher's place in the middle of the school year and we bespeak for Miss Shook the fair consideration of the good people of Carrizozo and of our high school.

At the opening of school next week probably four or five pupils of the seventh grade will be promoted to the eighth grade. This is not a new policy for us. Since the opening of school in September we have promoted, among all grades, some twenty pupils who were doing decidedly better work than their classmates and were ambitious to go ahead. With the exception of one pupil all of those promoted are making good. If they do not keep up they shall go back to the grades from which they have been promoted. The results justify our policy. Every pupil in the school should have a square deal. That means that the hard worker should have the privilege of going ahead, instead of being kept back. No greater injustice can be done a pupil than to keep him back when he plainly shows by his industry and ambition that he can go ahead twice as fast as the others of his class. In the business and professional world, industry and application are rewarded by promotion; why not in the schoolroom where the pupils are supposed to be in training for life? These pupils who are to be promoted to the eighth grade must take the eighth grade examination in May as given by the State Board of Education. Their papers are to be graded by the State Board of Education; not by any one of the teachers of the Carrizozo schools. Therefore, all in the grade will receive the same impartial treatment from a board of examiners which knows no one in the class.

The offer of promotion to the eighth grade was made to the seventh grade at the opening of the school year. Most preferred not to try it. Mrs. Carlisle, the teacher of the seventh grade, has been helping these pupils who are trying to make the eighth grade, during the Christmas vacation. They have been working hard; studying hard during the mornings and reciting in the afternoons. We wish them success in their efforts.

Parents: Will you not please see to it that your boys and girls come to school every day and that they are on time? One day's absence means one-twentieth or 5 per cent of the educational value of schooling lost in one month. This loss is hardly ever made up; it can't be. Besides the far greater part of education comes from the classroom recitation.

Are you thinking that muscle pays better than brain? It does just now but the old order is coming back, more or less, and a man is going to be worth more if his brain is trained than if only his muscles are trained. Now is the time to get that training; when the boy leaves home to go to work it is too late.

Promptness, too, is a valuable asset in ones education. The student that pokes along to school while the last bell is ringing, not caring whether he is tardy or not, is pretty likely to carry the habit into business. Meanwhile some wide-awake fellow gets ahead of him, beats him to the desired object and gets it.

Capitan News

The holiday season is being observed generally; schools closed Friday Dec. 19 and the teachers went their various ways to spend vacations with relatives and friends. Mr. Nawls alone remained and was entertained on Christmas day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Keys.

The school entertainment Friday the 19th was well attended and a decided success.

The Vaudeville and dance following Monday, Dec. 21st was enjoyed by the town people and many from adjoining towns.

Leslie Lane of Alamogordo visited friends here during the past week.

The program and tree at the Church on Christmas Eve was enjoyed by a large attendance of children and adults. The entertainment was very appropriate. There seems to be an epidemic of grip with us now. A number of families have been affected. W. T. Sterling is quite ill requiring the services of a doctor to attend to him. Miss Weatha Cox has also been sick.

New Year's Day will be observed here with a community dinner; the Ladies' Club is making preparations for a roast beef dinner to be given at the School House.

Messrs. Ackerman and Johnson of El Paso were in town over the week-end. We understand they are getting "greasy" with the amber fluid.

What has been said in the Outlook regarding the roads of this county is very good; we heartily endorse any movement that will prove beneficial. However, we are inclined to believe that the system that governs road work is at fault. Until we have a taxation system that will provide for the money raised by taxation in Lincoln county we will always be suffering from bad roads.

We wish each and every Reader a happy and very prosperous New Year.

PUEBLO EXECUTIVE GETS MAIL-
ING BY AUSTRIAN WOMEN IS REPORT.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Pueblo, Colo., Dec. 24.—The first violence in connection with the strike of the steel workers employed at the Minnequa plant here occurred when Austrian women pickets started throwing stones at steel workers who had refused to obey the union orders to continue the strike and had gone back to work. Mayor Mike Studzinski was one of the victims of the mob's roughness and suffered many bruises and scratches when he was knocked to the ground and severely pummeled by the enraged women.

Sawed-off shotguns were carried by the police reserves who had been summoned by a riot call from the steel works, but no shots were fired. Nevertheless, the officers were compelled to use their riot clubs frequently and with force to subdue some of the rioters.

While the trouble was started by women pickets, a large number of striking men were involved before the police arrived on the scene.

A dozen arrests were made by the police and those arrested will be held on charges of inciting riots and probably will be turned over to the state courts for trial.

It was not until the police had about worn themselves out with exertion in welding their clubs that the sawed-off shotguns were flashed upon the crowd. This had a subduing effect and the mob soon dispersed. Among those arrested are five women.

The five women were of foreign birth and the husband of one appeared at the station shortly after his wife's imprisonment and offered to leave his three small children with the police as bail for his wife.

The injuries received by Mr. Studzinski, who, as president of the Pueblo City Council, is mayor and also commissioner of safety, are not of a serious nature.

When the patrol wagon was loaded with rioters for its first trip to the police station, crowds of men and women swarmed about it striving to prevent the car's progress. It was with extreme difficulty that the police were able to get the prisoners away from the mob. While the wagon and its prisoners was on its way to the station, another fight started and more arrests were made. A police commander an automobile nearby and started a second load of rioters to jail.

Italians Back to Stay.

New York.—Several hundred disillusioned Italians who returned to their native land after the signing of the armistice with the idea of living on their savings, arrived here on the liner Patrie. They reported that the high cost of living was a worse problem in Italy than in the United States, and that they came back to stay.

Public to Pay Increase.

Chicago.—The public will pay the 14 per cent increase in wage granted the coal miners, notwithstanding Dr. Garfield's statement there would be no increase in the price of coal. This has been made known by a number of operators, jobbers and big dealers. The increase will be about 30 cents a ton.

Girl Is Exonerated.

Chicago.—A coroner's jury recommended the release of Miss May Byrne, 22-year-old stenographer, and her companions in the shooting gallery fatality in which John S. Reynolds, proprietor, was killed. The jury found that Reynolds' death was accidental.

Concerning Eggs.

It is thought by naturalists that the eggs of domestic hens of the present day are larger and heavier by nearly an ounce. Eggs differ a good deal in weight, the average weight being about two ounces. A good egg is made up of ten parts shell and sixty parts white and thirty parts yolk. The white of an egg contains 86 per cent water. The shell contains about 2 per cent animal matter and 1 per cent of the phosphates of lime and magnesia, the rest consisting of carbonate of lime.

Revival at the Methodist Church Beginning Jan. 4.

Rev. D. L. Coale, evangelist, of Los Angeles, Cal., has accepted an invitation to come here and assist in Evangelistic Services beginning next Sunday morning. The Pastor and Official Board of the Methodist Church has extended an invitation to the Pastor and members of the Baptist Church to join them in a co-operative meeting, and we understand they have so accepted. It is with a brotherly spirit, and the sincere desire of the two churches to render services unselfishly that they agree to co-operate at this time.

The town is fortunate in having the Rev. Coale come here. He is one of the foremost evangelists of the entire country and it is the good fortune of the community that one of Rev. Coale's dates had been cancelled that made it possible for him to come. He has associated with him Prof. J. Austin Brillhart, of Los Angeles, Cal., a chorus director and trombone soloist. The choir will, no doubt, be composed of the best singers of both churches.

Notice to Property Owners

It is required by law that each owner of real estate must list his or her property not later than the last business day of February, and failure to do so requires this office to list same to an unknown owner. It is not the desire of this office to either list this property to an unknown owner or to have to add a 25% penalty, but failure to list all property after January 1, 1920 makes it compulsory for us to do both. Please make it convenient to list your property as early as possible after January 1 or have your authorized agent to do so for you.

Respectfully yours,

What a Man Did

By WILL T. AMES

(© 1919, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

This is a story out of life—out of the life that is lived; that has its tragedy as well as its sunshine; that comes to the happy ending or to the sorrowful one as the case may be, and not as the narrator wills. If it is not just the kind of story you would wish it to be search through annals, analyze prenatal influences and place the blame where it belongs. Do not blame me.

June Phillips was the daughter of her mother, and she of her mother; and the mother's mother the daughter of still another like mother. And down that line of motherhood had run a streak of lightness, and no strain of eager willingness.

Easy, smiling, gay was June, beautiful with the beauty of great tawny eyes, dark lashes and hair with the glint of mellow sunlight in it. She was soft and warm and pouting. Endowed at once with the lavish lure of womanhood and with the pink and creamy freshness of her scant seventeen years, she drove John Halliday half mad.

John was twenty-three and might have been ten years more than that, by the settled, strong way of him. Instead of school he had chosen to take his education from an architect, after sixteen. Already he was a finished draughtsman and on his way to a place in his profession, under Holly, his watchful employer.

To June fluttering breathlessly on the margin of a never ending millennium of grown-up "good times," the attentions of the responsible, well-groomed young architect combined the virtues of a continual social triumph with limitless opportunity; for John delighted . . . take the girl about. A year of this and then, because John was insistent and the girl was the daughter of that particular race of mothers and possessed keen instinct for the easy road to easy circumstances, they were married.

Two years later John Halliday, knew, in the lottery that is marriage, what sort of prize he had drawn. What depth of stormy petulance hid beneath the winsome pouting, he could have told; but did not.

What greed for admiration, what impish thirst to dabble in the shallows along the shores of the sea of passion, what eternal restlessness and hunger for excitement lay behind the tawny eyes had been revealed to him in long months of disillusionment. But he was strong, and as patient as he was strong, and he bore with many things.

Then, coming home after a two weeks' business trip, he found her gone. She had left, the maid said, the day after his departure, only instructing the girl to remain and keep the house going till Mr. Halliday's return.

John maintained the home until his lease expired, then sold the effects to a new tenant and went to live at a hotel. There were no babies. "God, I thank you," said John, "for that."

When John Halliday was thirty-three his professional opportunity came. It took him to a great city and to a profitable partnership. Still young, enjoying reputation and established position, his earnings well in excess of his needs, life held much of promise for him.

Then it was that, walking home for exercise through a sparkling avenue in the orange sunshine of a late October afternoon, he met her—squarely face to face.

A single glance was sufficient to verify the conclusion John Halliday long ago had arrived at concerning his wife. Everything about her—in the character of her clothes, in the manner of her coiffure, in the degree in which she had insulted with pigment the God-given splendor of her eyes and skin, in her carriage, in the way she held her head—was the mark of the woman who has traded herself for the thing she calls "life," and who is satisfied with the transaction and has no regrets.

She was quite unabashed. "Hello, John," she remarked, easily and with her ever ready smile. "Have you come to life enough to visit the city? You're looking so prosperous!"

"So, if I may say so," replied John, "are you."

"Oh, I'm having a perfectly lovely time. There's no place like the big town, you know. You'll like it if you ever come here to live."

"I live here now."

"Really? Well, you might come and see me some time—if you'll telephone ahead. The name is Spencer—Miss Spencer; Selkirk apartments fifty-first street. Now I must run along—Good-by!"

With that she was gone; and John

Halliday, unshaken, master of his own nerves, proceeded on his way. Unconvincing? Unprobable? I think so myself. But, remember, I told you this was a story from real life.

It was a full week after this that John was walking home again, had almost reached his own street, when there was a commotion of fire apparatus and a crowd running toward where the whole front of an apartment house on the cross street was belching smoke and curious black-red flame.

John followed the crowd. A swirl of wind blew the smoke away from the main entrance and John saw the name "Selkirk." Something leaped up into his throat. Then at a window only a few floors up, John caught a glimpse of a face of the girl to whom, ten years ago, he had given all that a strong man can give—the whole of his heart.

There were ladders, of course, many of them, but there were many, many windows; the firemen were doing yeoman service, battling frantically and skillfully to save life—but there were so very many lives to save. There were ropes and a cordon of police.

Through these John Halliday tore and beat his way; into the burning building he struggled, leaving his coat in the hands of a detaining fireman. Past the useless, motionless elevators, through the blinding, stifling black smoke to the slippery stone stairs; up and up and up and up, gasping, tearing short intakes of air out of the solid smoke with whistling lungs; guessing with an architect's shrewd guess at the right door and hurling himself against it until it ripped from the hinges, John Halliday staggered across the room to where a film of belated daylight, shining wanly through the smudge, showed the window to be.

She was there; choking, gasping, her tawny eyes filled with such horror as only the eyes of such as she can know, the pigments making ghastly caricature of her white face.

It was a bad building, built in the bad days of jerry construction, its vaunted fireproofing a grisly joke. It was going under them. The floor of the room was burning through. In a matter of seconds the end would come.

"June! June, dear! It is I, John. I have come to be with you June, at the end. You won't have to face it, girl, alone!"

And as he took her in his arms there was a great, awful rending sound—clouds of burning brands rushed roaring out of the white holes where the windows had been, and out in the street the heartick multitude sobbed in the presence of a holocaust.

How could any one know what impulse took John Halliday to his wife's side there in the valley of the shadow? Again I must answer. This is a story of life. And I knew the man.

Clemenceau's Little Joke.

In a little village of La Vendee, France, there lived a young doctor who frequently drove into the nearest city. At the gates of this city was the customary customs officer who imposed the lawful duty upon all edibles entering the French town. This doctor, wishing to take some poultry with him and wishing to be honest and at the same time not to pay duty, drove into the city one day in a little cart with a pretty girl on either side of him. At the gate the guard asked: "Have you nothing to declare, doctor?" "Nothing but two chickens and a rooster," he replied. The customs officer laughingly allowed him to pass.

Not long ago this same evader of customs passed through the gate and an old retired customs officer said to him: "Ah, doctor, I am glad to see you back and to know that the rooster has returned a tiger," and Clemenceau laughed at the memory of his smuggling.

Dead Languages Alive.

Greek and Latin seem unconscious, after all that they were among the slain in the great war. Some of the prominent high schools of the country, such as Scott high school of Toledo, and the Germantown high school of Philadelphia, report a heavy increase in the enrollment for Latin. The board of education in Cincinnati has established a six-year classical high school, in Walnut Hills, with provision for nearly a thousand students, in which the curriculum will be based on what innovators may regard as a hopelessly archaic combination—classics, mathematics, history, and the sciences. Thoroughness in fundamentals is the ideal.—From the Review.

Oyster Shell Roads.

Two great oyster reefs in the Gulf of Mexico, one at Sabine, Tex., the other at the mouth of the Atchafalaya river on Point au Fer, La., are to be used for surfacing good roads. The reefs are valued at $65,000,000. A Galveston man has been awarded a contract to remove 1,000,000 cubic feet of shells from the Point au Fer reef for use on the roads in that section of Louisiana.

A novel idea in Americanization methods, sponsored by some of the leading figures in the American music world, is that of teaching aliens the love of their adopted country by means of proper music. NEW YORK'S WATER GOING TO WASTE

For the first time in 14 years, or since the dam was completed, water is flowing over the spillway of the huge Croton dam, Croton, N. Y., which forms Croton lake, a part of the New York water supply system. With five inches of water going over the spillway, it is estimated that the city is losing about 2,000,000,000 gallons of water every 24 hours or enough to supply Manhattan and the Bronx for a week.

Henry G. Maus, third officer of the American steamship Sutherland, who dived overboard and rescued two longshoremen who had fallen into the water. One man slipped from a near-by dock and the other in an effort to catch him as he fell was dragged overboard. Maus jumped into the icy water, held one man up with one hand and swam to the other whom he pushed against piling and held there until aid arrived. Maus, who weighs only 125 pounds, now has a record of five lives saved.

LIKE FANCY FURS

Latest in Short Wrap Fastens at the Back.

Eminently Cozy Garment and Especially Becoming to Girls, Paris Correspondent Says.

The new furs are ideally becoming. Never have we had more picturesque and wearable models shown in the best attellers, writes a Paris fashion correspondent. All the famous dress-makers and tailors of Paris are now showing what may be called "fancy furs," that is to say, fur garments which are designed and treated as velvet or silk might be.

For long wraps the barrel outline prevails. And it is really very becoming when correctly worn. We have barrel capes which only reach to the knees and other models which cover the dress entirely.

A lovely barrel wrap designed by Max was made of musquash, lined with deep blue and rose brocade and finished off with an immense roll-over collar of kolinsky. This was a regal affair and of course costly, as the musquash was in an exquisite quality. I have seen similar models in mink and in broadtail, with the linings always of the richest and softest brocades or striped silks.

For girls the latest thing is the short fur wrap which is shaped like a fichu and which crosses in front and fastens at the back with a large button and loop. This is an eminently cozy garment, and so becoming. It must of course be worn by a girl of slender figure, otherwise the full fur over the shoulders and chest would make the rest of the figure look clumsy. But given the average American girl—tall, slender and graceful—a fichu wrap in squirrel, beaver, musquash or ermine is ideal.

Satin for Hats.

Slipper, or Swiss satin will be used to considerable extent in the advance spring hats for women to be brought out if present signs count for anything. On account of the heavy texture of the cloth it will undoubtedly be used to fill the demand for softly swathed and full-draped effects. There has been talk of satin for some time to succeed the heavy winter fabrics, and some very smart models have been seen in heavy crepe satin. With it kolinsky is used with telling effect. The use of slipper satin, however, is something new. It will be rather expensive, and can be used only in making the higher priced hats. Despite this fact it is expected to meet the demands of women who insist on having "something different."

VELOURS SAILOR FOR GIRLS

Hat May Be Perfectly Straight, Roll Brimmed or the Simple Tricorne Model.

The most popular hat this year for general wear for the girl of any age from babyhood to high school is the soft, fluffy velours sailor. The hat may be perfectly straight, it may be a roll brimmed sailor, or, for the older girl, a simple tricorne. If a straight or roll brimmed sailor, a plain ribbon band is the trimming chosen, and for the tricorne a band of ribbon with rosette or bow.

Velvet is a material much in vogue for femininity of all ages this season, and it makes a charming dress-up or best frock for a child or young girl, but plain or plaid worsted or wool jersey cloth are the materials preferred for utility frocks. Wool jersey is having an especially strong vogue, and the most popular trimming is an embroidery done in wool in bright, contrasting color. Heavy silk and chenille embroidery are used, but wool is really smarter when used on a wool fabric.

ADDS TO WORK-BASKET LID

Convenience Provides Place for Various Articles Needed by Woman Who Sews.

The sketch shows a good and useful way of fitting up the lid of a work-basket. Any shape or size can be treated in this manner.

To carry out the suggestion, cut a piece of stiff card to fit the lid of the basket in the way shown, and cover it with pale pink satin or sateen or some other color if preferred. Across the upper part a band of broad elastic is sewn down at intervals, so that it forms a number of small loops, into which scissors, bodkins, needles, etc., can be slipped and held in place.

Useful Addition to Work-Basket.

needles, etc., can be slipped and held in place.

Across the lower part a pocket is sewn on, also made of sateen and gathered into a tiny frill at the edge.

When complete, this article can be easily fastened in position on the inner side of the lid of the work-basket, with a few stitches run through the corners and in and out of the wicker-work.

"Latest" in Blouses.

Short, loose blouses reaching about four inches below the waistline are a fad in Paris.

SNAP FASTENERS FOR UNDIES

Handy Contrivance Aids in Transferring Lingerie Straps From One Garment to Another.

Lingerie straps, which can be transferred from one undie to another by simply unfastening the snap fasteners are dainty things to give and handy things to have.

You might make them of batiste and trim them with fine cross-stitching in pastel colors. You might hemstitch them in colors, or you might button-hole the edges.

Then you might make them of satin—white washable satin preferably. These are very attractive when they are trimmed with small chiffon flowers just where they are snapped to the garment.

Ribbon may also be used. French knots in pastel colors or small embroidered dots will lend themselves very successfully as means of trimming these straps.

The homeliest camisole or teddy bear may be made attractive by an attractive pair of shoulder straps. They are a distinct convenience, for they are held securely in place and will not necessitate such inconvenience as removing one's clothes to refasten; as one has to do when one's sewed-on shoulder strap has dropped its stitches on one end.

An Attractive Hat.

Silver and gold trimming and elaborate brocades, however lovely these fabrics may be, are not generally suitable for the young girl, with the exception of silver wrought with white, which is extremely attractive on a debutante, particularly if she is a blond. The silver must not, however, overwhelm her. It should be used with discretion. It may be employed in the form of sheer lace wrought with silver, or as bandings of silver on net, and in silver ribbon girdles and sashes.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Supreme Court Deals Hard Blow to the Wets and They Stand Up to Get Another.

NOW ATTACKING AMENDMENT

Attorney General Palmer Persuades the Packers to Abandon Their Side Lines—Fiume Agreement Blocked by D'Annunzio's Troops—Growing Sentiment for Peace Treaty Compromise.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Like a real tragedy to a great many citizens of the United States was the chief event of the past week—the decision of the Supreme court of the United States upholding the constitutionality of the war-time prohibition act. It was a severe blow not only for the men who hoped to renew their fast dwindling supplies of "private stock" before January 16, when the constitutional prohibition amendment goes into effect, and to the dealers who had hoped for a chance to dispose of their vast stores of liquors, but also to many banks that had made loans on whisky certificates totalling perhaps $100,000,000. It was estimated that the government would lose in taxes about $800,000,000, and that the loss in physical value of plants and other property would be $200,000,000. The total was roughly put at a billion and a half of dollars.

The cases decided were those of the Kentucky Distilleries and Warehouse company of Louisville, Ky., and Dryfoos, Blum & Co. of New York, instituted for the purpose of compelling the government to release whisky from bond.

In both cases the court denied contentions of Ethel Root and other attorneys for the distilleries that the act, in violation of the constitution, takes private property without just compensation; that the period of the war emergency, for which the act was passed, had terminated; that the law was an interference with the state police powers and an undue exercise of the war powers of congress.

The war-time act, the court held, is not confiscatory, asserting that more than seven months were given distillers to dispose of their stocks, which time the court believed to be adequate. The act also was not repealed, the court held, by the prohibition constitutional amendment, which, it asserted, is binding not only in peace, but also in war times.

The wets did not give up all hope, but at once went to work on new lines, "previously prepared." The Retail Liquor Dealers' association of New Jersey and the state of Rhode Island both asked the Supreme court for permission to institute original proceedings to have the national prohibition amendment declared unconstitutional and to enjoin federal officials from enforcing it. Rhode Island is one of the states that did not ratify the amendment, and the present action was taken by direction of the legislature. These attacks on the amendment are based on the allegation that it violates the fifth amendment to the constitution, which prohibits the taking of private property without just compensation, and also on the charge that it is an interference with the state police powers.

Ever since he assumed the office of attorney general, Mr. Palmer has been at work on a plan to curb the fast growing interests of the big packers, and last week it was announced that the latter had agreed, admittedly under government pressure, to discard all their interests except those directly connected with the handling of the nation's supply of meat. More than a billion dollars will be involved in the disposing of the side lines the packers have been handling, but it is stated the bulk of their business will not be affected. The "unscrambling" process really began last summer when Swift & Co. gave up their leather business and their foreign business to new companies.

Reorganization of the packers is expected to follow virtually the plan of breaking up the Standard Oil company and the method provided in the International Harvester company agreement in 1918. Of course, the primary object of the department of justice in this is to bring about a lowering of prices of foodstuffs. Whether or not this will be the result is uncertain. The representatives of the packers were noncommittal on this point, and many persons were of opinion that there would be a tendency to increase prices through abolition of the control that now exists. If the process of unscrambling does no more financial harm to the packers than it has done to capitalists in previous instances, they need not worry on that score.

At the opening of the week the news was cabled from Fiume that D'Annunzio was to hand over that city at once to regular Italian troops, commanded by General Cavalliga, former minister of war, and that France, Great Britain and Italy had agreed that Italy should have complete sovereignty over Fiume and that all the provisions of the pact of London would be carried out. The alleged agreement was not confirmed, and at this writing D'Annunzio is still holding the city. The truth seems to be that he was asked to give it up on the promise by the Italian government that it would be held by regulars, at least until the Adriatic question was finally settled. But a large part of his garrison is strongly objecting to this arrangement. His officers and soldiers are living in luxury there, receiving much higher pay than they would as part of the regular army, and prospects for work in Italy are bad. Consequently they insist that they be permitted to remain as the garrison, and the task of ousting them promises to be difficult.

Just what the London conference discussed and what decisions it reached, if any, is not known at this time, as no official statement has been issued. Doubtless there was a lot of talk about the peace treaty deadlock in the American senate, and certain European correspondents were insistent in their assertions that the British and French were ready and willing to accept any reasonable reservations the senate might make in order to assure the co-operation of America. The European diplomats realize the urgent need for an early declaration of peace, say these correspondents, and one of them asserts that Ambassador Jusserand for weeks has been trying to see President Wilson to assure him that the senate's reservations are acceptable to France.

Meanwhile the sentiment in congress in favor of a compromise is growing stronger daily, though the president and the Republican majority continue to "pass the buck" back and forth. Senator Underwood, who is a candidate for the place of minority leader in opposition to Senator Hitchcock, came forward as an advocate of "peace at any price." He said that the president, when he declared he had no concession of any kind to offer and that all the responsibility rested on the Republicans, was merely giving notice to the senators to get busy and compromise among themselves before asking him to compromise. Mr. Hitchcock proposed the appointment of a conciliation committee for compromise in a spirit of give and take. Senator Knox again attempted to have the senate sidetrack the League of Nations and pass a resolution ratifying the treaty "in so far as it restores the status of peace between the United States and Germany," but he was blocked by objections.

Whether or not the Germans are taking advantage of the unpleasant treaty situation, they certainly are haggling a lot over the signing of the protocol. Certain concessions were made to them, but these were not enough, for they insist they are unable to turn over the 400,000 tons of harbor and dock material demanded in reparation for the sinking of the interned warships in Scapa Flow. Late reports said their proofs of this inability were so strong that experts of the allies were disposed to consider an offer to reduce the amount to 200,000 tons.

Germany's chief internal trouble just now is financial. The premium loan, by which it was hoped to raise five billion marks, was a failure, and some of the papers assert that open bankruptcy is not far distant.

Austria is starving. That grim fact has been established by the testimony of numerous persons, and it appears to be up to the United States to supply the food for that unfortunate nation. All the other nations of central Europe are suffering only in less degree, and Herbert Hoover, who knows more about the foreign food situation than anyone else, proposes that the great surplus of wheat and flour held by the grain corporation be sold to them on credit.

The Russian bolsheviks and the Estonians in conference at Dorpat are not arriving very rapidly at an amicable understanding. The Estonians suspect the Russians of treacherous designs, and in addition there are rumors that France is intervening in the battle against the soviet government. In the field the bolsheviks had more victories to report, including the capture of Kiev, capital of the Ukraine, from General Denikine's troops. They also occupied Kupiansk, southeast of Kharkov.

According to what is called authentic information from the highest sources, the government will not return the railroads to private ownership on January 1, but will continue to operate them until March 1, or perhaps for a month longer. This was good news for everybody and served to remove the apprehension that the return would be made before congress had passed the needed legislation, which certainly would result in the paralysis of transportation and business and in great general financial loss. There is no immediate prospect of the passage of the Cummins bill which the senate is considering, or any other railroad bill, and Director General Hines is said to have recommended to the president that the government retain control until legislation is effected.

Mexico's reply to Secretary Lansing's latest note on the case of Consular Agent Jenkins was received in Washington Thursday, and doubtless gave the state department little satisfaction. In it Carranza said he took it for granted that the release of Jenkins on bail had removed the cause of complaint, and then declined to have the proceedings against the consular agent dropped. He asserted that the American government's belief in the innocence of Jenkins was not sufficient cause for removing that official from the jurisdiction of the Mexican tribunals.

What Will He Write?

YEARS MERELY LIFE'S CHAPTERS

Offer Opportunity for Each of Us to Write Therein a Record Better Than
the Preceding.

THE coming year lies spread like the white plain that sweeps from the roadside to the distant forest where the gray squirrels are making tracks in the light snow. On this white sheet a little record may be written; not a full life story, but merely a brief chapter or two.

It is a great mystery that lies ahead, a treasure house of endless possibilities. The span of a man's life is short; shorter in absolute measurement than the span of a year. For each year, when October fades into November, has wrought completeness. No human life can bring completeness. It cannot bring completeness of knowledge or completeness of happiness or completeness of good works. The best man can do, in his poor, limited way, is to glean as much wisdom and win as much happiness and do as much good as the number of his days permits. When the human October fades it may thus be rich and peaceful and without the scars of stormy days or the blight of wasted days and without undue regret that what should have been seen and known and done has not been seen and known and done.

A YEAR'S completeness is but a twelvemonth. Our human incompleteness covers many twelvemonths. How fortunate that each dawning year means a new opportunity to live and learn. Again and again we may take up the thread and advance toward the goal of apprehension. We may study God's works and year by year come nearer to an appreciation of them. We can never fully appreciate them, for our minds are finite, and they are infinite. But each succeeding year is a new opportunity. It offers the perfect-tion of completeness, and by even a partial comprehension of its fullness we may move toward fulfillment of the measure of our lives.

"I am not afraid," said Thoreau, "that I shall exaggerate the value and significance of life, but that I shall not be up to the occasion which it is. I shall be sorry to remember that I was there, but noticed nothing remarkable—not so much as a prince in disguise; lived in the golden age a blind man; visited Olympus even, and fell asleep after dinner, and did not hear the conversation of the gods."

ONE who loves only artificiality, who does not note the excellence of the world he has been set to rule, proves himself unworthy of his heritage, and is punished by bitter unrest. His life lacks the boon of contentment which includes all boons. There are, or course, the few whose mental scope is too narrow for self-measurement. They do not even know that they are NOW many of us are waiting for the opportunities of the coming year! With how many of us is it the unuttered hope that tomorrow, next week, next month, then next year may be as today in its privileges and opportunities, only far more abundant.

We are told that the first day of the New Year is an appropriate time to form good resolutions. But the New Year is tomorrow, and there is a better time for such a task, and that time is today. For "now is the accepted time."—Bishop H. C. Potter.

discontented and may enjoy life as the ox enjoys life. They are fortunate. The unfortunate man is the one who has, even dimly, an understanding that the world is good and beautiful and that he is failing to reap the richness that is rightly his.

The coming year is indeed a great mystery, full of possibilities. Whoever has not watched and studied the passing years may begin today; it is never too late. Whoever has long watched and loved the years will know that to his knowledge, however ripe, much will be added. He will advance a step nearer to the goal of contentment, and in so advancing will increase his human usefulness, his helpfulness.

THE year dawns on an earth red with blood, an earth torn with strife. It will be for most of the people of the earth a year of sorrow and of sacrifice. But for all this it will not be a bad year. Not half of civilized mankind but all mankind that has not forgotten the meaning of civilization has been unselfishly, heroically engaged in the needful work of ridding the world of a noxious parasitic growth, the poisonous fungus of militarism. For those who gave themselves to this essential work it will be a good year. For all who are suffering that the years to come may be happier and healthier the year will be a good year.

February will bring its crystal brightness. April will spread her feast of flowers. June will display her green perfection of beauty. August will offer the ripening grains; October the laden orchards. The year will take no heed of the crime that has been done by man or of the vengeance that marched inexorably.

POETS died in the trenches of Gallipoli and France, watching God's sunrise or the wispy clouds in the blue. British gentlemen caked with the mud of Flanders wrote detailed reports of their observations of migratory birds and of the effect of drum-fire on bird life. French students and scholars, bearded and dirty, made careful notes of the flora of the Meuse and the Somme.

These men visited Olympus and did not fall asleep while the gods conversed. Neither did they permit the roar of man's fury to drown out the divine voices.

So it must be a good year that is ahead. There can be no bad year. The years are measured by God and not by the evil that men do.

Joy That All Can Have.
The joy of living is best found in the real success of life. Take away success and there's no joy in life to one alive to opportunities and responsibilities. No live man is satisfied with mere existence, for he wants to contribute something to the world's progress, the world's good. And it is in such contribution that real joy is found, the satisfaction that comes from full realization that one has done what he could in the year given him. So this is the joy this journal wishes every reader may have the coming year; and will have if they fully appreciate that the new year is theirs, to make it truly a happy new year.

Republicans Hope to Pass Measure to Help Veterans

The Senate Committee on Finance has favorably reported the Sweet bill providing liberal increases in compensation and other benefits under the war risk insurance act, and it is the hope of the Republican leaders that it can be brought to passage at an early date. This measure is of the greatest importance to thousands of wounded veterans and their dependents, and has been endorsed by soldier organizations all over the country, including the national convention of the American Legion at Minneapolis. Slight amendments were made by the Senate committee at the request of the legislative committee of the Legion.

"The heart of this measure is to be found in the great increase in compensation allowed for complete disability as a result of service in the war," said Representative Sweet, Republican, of Iowa. "Under the present law, the man who is totally unfitted for making his own living is allowed only $30. Under the provisions of my measure, which has already passed the house, this amount is almost trebled. The totally disabled veteran without dependents is allowed $80 per month. If he has a wife his allowance is $90 per month. If he has a wife and two or more children, his compensation is $100. In addition to these allowances he is given $10 per month for each dependent parent.

"It is estimated that the total additional allowances made for the disabled soldier will amount to $57,000,000, while the retroactive features, correcting inequalities in the present law, amount to more than $14,500,000.

I believe the Senate proposes to act upon this matter at an early date, and I am assured, by the thousands of appreciative letters received from the soldier boys, that Congress will receive their utmost gratitude for taking this step."

The Ford car can well be called the "people's car," because there are more than 3,000,000 of them in daily operation. That is about four to one of the nearest follower in the motor car industry. Christmas Letter to Carrizozo Boys

Jeff Claunch and Morgan Reily are in receipt of the following letter from the former clerk of Co. D., 3rd Army headquarters, who was a chum of the boys in the overseas campaign. The letter follows:

779 Dudley Street,
Boston, Massachusetts,
December 20, 1919.

Dear Jeff and Morgan,
"We Gates Komrad!"

It is Christmas time and I cannot help but think of one year ago. We've already seen a few holidays, but I don't if any are remembered like our Christmas of 1918. Stuck on the Rhine, thousands of miles from home, saluting shave-tails, "falling out" for some relief every few hours, waiting in line, as usual, for mess, and Capt. Towle trying to play Santa Claus by getting us a little casual pay, were some of the events of the day.

Old Company "D" was billeted in the school house then on Gymnasium Strasse. It was not until later that we moved to the Ex-Kaiser's Palace on Casino Strasse. (Some Palace, I'll say.) Nobody hung their stockings up last Christmas. If they had one of the many "peddlers" in the company would have salvaged them and sold them for "feel" marks. Our Christmas gifts consisted of seconds on doughnuts, a cake of "chokolade" from the Red Cross, and an box of soap from the Q. M. Soap and chocolate were good gifts at that even more appreciated than some of the neckties our relatives will wish on us this year. What use did you make of your chocolate and soap?

Those are good memories to look back at now, but just remember how we wished we could step off the train at the old home town; how nice it felt to do four hours and be relieved twenty minutes later; how we wondered who was kissing our girls; and how we hoped for orders to arrive for Company "D" to move out. That was last Christmas.

Well, this year, Oh Boy! Bring on the show. We're back to the old folks cooking now. We're back in those place where we longed to be a year ago, when in Germany. So be happy, be glad, just "Hise and shine." My Christmas wish this year is a darn good time.

CARRIZOZO EATING HOUSE

Table Supplied With Best The Market Affords

For well common. postpone the journey until conditions are more favorable. Percy S. Bullen, treasurer of the Association of Foreign Press Representatives in the United States, who has just returned to New York, says that London even now cannot find room for visitors and that the state of affairs when the floodgates of tourist invasion are again open will be appalling unless the intending American visitors are forewarned and therefore forearmed.

It is estimated that some 2,000,000 persons—one for each man sent to Europe by the United States during the war—are making plans for a transatlantic trip in the next two years. Their chief object is to see the historic spots where the American soldiers fought—the Argonne forest, Chateau-Thierry, St. Mihiel—and to devote such a period to a visit to England as time and funds will permit.

Mr. Bullen has been all over the western front during the last few weeks and he predicts nothing but anger, irritation and despair as the lot of any visitors who trust to luck to secure hotel accommodations.

No Steps Yet Taken.

The difficulty of the situation will be realized when it is remembered that the usual flow of tourists to Europe has been completely suspended during the war and that only those among the wealthiest will have the first chance of securing hotel accommodation when the bars against tourist travel shall have been removed.

So far no steps whatsoever have been taken abroad to meet an unusual influx of visitors. Mr. Bullen was so impressed with the difficulty threatened in London that he prepared a memorandum on the subject, which he submitted at a recent meeting of the Royal Colonial Institute in London. In the discussion which ensued it was proposed that steps be taken for the formation in London of a national committee of reception. As a nucleus of the organization it was proposed that representatives of the various Anglo-American societies should meet, with power to add to their number various representatives whose experience would be useful in solving the problem suggested. The first essential step is to mobilize and list all available accommodation provided by hotels and boarding houses, and then enlist the assistance of every householder willing to place a room at the disposal of the committee of reception. If this plan matures London will keep in touch with New York on the question of accommodations and people in the United States will be advised as to the Oste, Bruges, Ghent, and battlefields visited. Mr. Bullen declares Ypres is the "most devastated," but, with its memories of heroic fighting extending from Ypres down the Menen and Poelcappelle roads, "is beautiful in its ruins." Ostend is probably the best center for automobile parties, and the burgomaster of Ostend is one of the few men preparing to deal with an unexampled demand for hotel accommodations.

Communists in Big German Plot

Berlin.—Communists of a dangerous type are afoot in Germany. Their plots for the winter are coming to light. These range from mild demonstrations to organized murder. And, while leaders are innocently declaring that the intentions of both independent socialists and communists are peaceful, the government is constantly rounding up documents proving that at least among certain groups of communists there exist plans of the bloodiest nature.

Government disclosures leave little room for doubt that some of the wilder spirits among the Spartacists proposed to form a murderband that would do away with political opponents.

Dire Work Projected.

For instance, Munich newspapers, Prussian Minister-President Hirsch and the military are authority for revelations in the closing days of September, showing that, among other things, the Spartacists planned the following:

(a) To do away with a large number of officers and soldiers in Munich, slaying them as they slept; (b) that a group of reds from Munich proposed to blacklist a number of prominent officials, draw lots, and then "put away" the condemned; (c) that, particularly in Munich, plans were afoot for creation of red "shock troops," to use against the regular military—particularly against monarchist officers; (d) that, in cases of demonstrations, women and children were to be put in the fore ranks to shield the cowards behind from the machine guns of the government troops; (e) that the communist government should ally itself with the anarchist-syndicalist groups.

All evidence at hand in the last few weeks has shown quite conclusively that the Spartacists and the independents were endeavoring to prove conclusively to Germany and to the world that they had moderated. Certainly, in general, they adopted a new course of tactics from that pursued last winter and spring, when rioting and bloodshed were the order of the day. Their new course appeared to consist in fomentation of strikes and other internal troubles with a view to embarrassing the government and hampering the national life that the existing regime would be overthrown. Now, however, the evidence of the government contained in documents seized from imprisoned Spartacists shows that whereas sabotage and kindred weapons were probably favored by the bulk of the communists, there was another group that believed in "direct action" of the worst sort.

The murder of Government Inspector Blau in August led the government to probe even more deeply than before into the secret workings of the communist group.

Many Arrests Made.

This general investigation led to a number of arrests, including the haul at Halle, wherein about a dozen of very radical strikers were captured. It also proved to the government's satisfaction that Blau was killed by reds.

Munich continues to be a fruitful source of communist agitation. Some of the reddest of the reds have their headquarters there. From these headquarters issue secret orders which every now and then fall into government hands and prove that not only are these agitators willing to harm, and even halt, the national industrial life, but have no really sincere desire to benefit the laboring man.

Instead, it has been shown, the agitators are fattening on proletarian funds, some of which emanate directly from bolshevik Russia and others of which are collected from the "brethren" in Germany, Austria and Czechoslovakia.

Ants Eat Courthouse.

Constantine, Mich.—Ravenous ants have eaten their way through practically all the baseboards in the cellar of the courthouse at Centerville, St. Joseph county. Sashes and doors have also been destroyed.

Young Fowls Grow Rapidly

There is Always Good Demand for Birds at Profitable Prices—Feathers Are Abundant and of Valuable Texture.

Anyone who cares to investigate the question of value in the different breeds of ducks for practical purposes—that is, ducks that possess real market value—should read the history of some of the immense duck farms about Long Island, in New York state, which are so frequently illustrated and written up in the leading poultry journals.

It would seem from the pictures shown, and the articles given, that there is no thought given to any other breed of ducks for their purposes by these utility breeders than the Pekin ducks. This variety seems to fill the bill with them all the way through, which, no doubt, is really the case, for the Pekin stands at the head of all ducks when it comes to real market value. We have bred them and know something about them, says a writer in an exchange. The young stock grow fast and soon reach a marketable size, and the percentage of loss in raising them is very small.

Pekin is Good Layer.

We do not believe in the duck that lays like a Leghorn hen. We have read of her, but we never owned such a duck, regardless of breed. For a certainty the Pekin duck does not lay as many eggs in a year as a Leghorn hen, but that does not detract from her value, for she does lay enough eggs in the first four or five months of the year to enable her keeper to raise and market several dollars' worth of young ducks from her eggs. These young ducks have size and weight, and may be made fat and juicy before marketing, which is always done by the big duck raisers in the East, and this is why they raise ducks of the Pekin variety for the market. This can be done as well, and there is always a ready and profitable market for such ducks.

Three Features of Value.

There are really three features of value in the Pekin duck. One is her made, and the other is her feathers, which are abundant and of a soft texture and valuable in the market, and she may be picked at least twice a year. The third point of value is when the duck herself is fattened and marketed.

Pekin ducks are great foragers, and with favorable surroundings, such as a pond or other water source, and grass to range over, they will pick up in this way more than half of their food. It is true they may be raised under less favorable conditions, but at less profit and with more care and work.

PLOW AND CULTIVATE TO KILL JUNE BUGS

Beetles Are Parents of White Grub, Harmful to Corn.

It Takes Three Years for One of Insects to Develop From Egg Which Is Deposited in Meadows and Sometimes in Cornfields.

(By CHARLES C. WENTZLER.)

Have you ever seen the so-called June bug buzzing around an electric light or seen them swarm on the sidewalk in the gray of a spring morning?

They are a big, dark-brown beetle and at night when they bump against the window panes or fly thumping against the ceiling make you crawl and hunt for the broom.

These blundering, awkward beetles, of which the chickens and birds are so fond, are the parents of the corn pest known as the "white grub" which feeds on the roots of the plants and destroys them.

Millions of them are destroyed in spring by hungry birds and myriad others go down to death in swarming around the arc lights of a city. They are so sensitive to light that a flame, miles away, will attract them.

It takes three years for one of these beetles to develop from the egg. The beetles deposit their eggs in meadows and sometimes in cornfields. The tiny grubs which emerge from the eggs develop into thick, fleshy, white grubs which are also much sought for by birds. When matured they are fully one and one-half inches long.

Luckily for Mr. Beetle, the grub spends most of his three years in the soil out of the reach of enemies. Different beetles, however, are completing their growth every year and so we have the June bug with us each spring.

All corn is apt to suffer from them but owing to the habit of the beetle in depositing its eggs in meadows, corn that is planted in newly turned sod is more apt to suffer from these pests. The best way to destroy them is to plow and cultivate so that their natural food is destroyed and they are starved to death before planting the field. Some farmers let the chickens follow the plow and destroy hundreds of them in this way.

SUGAR SHORTAGE HITS THEM ALSO

Even the treasury department's store in Washington, where treasury employees can buy almost everything from edibles to automobile tires, is advertising its lack of sugar. This store has 17,000 possible customers and helps materially in cutting down the cost of living.

DEER BEG FOR FOOD

Invade Houses in Yellowstone in Search of Grub.

Animals So Tamed by U. S. Protection They Follow People Around.

Denver.—Deer, which invade kitchens of houses in search of food, and beggar bears, which waylay automobile tourists and pedestrians along the roads, are examples of the extent to which the protection furnished by the government to the wild game within the boundaries of the various national parks has tamed the animals, according to Horace M. Albright, superintendent of Yellowstone National park, and assistant to Stephen M. Mather, director of national parks, who came to Denver recently to attend the meeting of park officials.

"One night shortly before I left, I went to a dance," said Mr. Albright. "I took home a pitcher of cider and a plate of doughnuts. When I reached the house I placed them on a back step, while I unlocked the door. A noise behind me caused me to look around and there was a big male deer with his nose buried in the pitcher of cider. He followed me into the house for one of the doughnuts, and when I gave it to him, he trotted off."

It is no unusual sight, declared Albright, to see deer entering and leaving a house in Yellowstone. Small children feed them from their hands, and beggar bears, he declared, have come to be one of the biggest attractions of the park.

"They wait beside the road until an auto or party of pedestrians approach, and then get up on their hind legs and extend their front paws for contributions," Albright said.

The tameness of the animals has its drawbacks as well, because it makes them easy for pot hunters if they happen to stray beyond the park boundaries.

Woman Dog Catcher.

Denver, Colo.—"The only woman dog catcher in the world" is the title applied to Mrs. Laura Dietrich, deputy pound mistress at the dog pound here. Mrs. Dietrich is highly efficient in the unusual role, according to William C. Fox, superintendent, who declared that he had misgivings at first as to the advisability of securing a woman for the position, as he thought it would be too difficult. "However, I soon discovered that dogs resist a woman much less than a man," he said. "They are handled by Mrs. Dietrich with much less trouble than by a man."

Pearls in Oysters.

Beloit, Wis.—Forrest Wilson bought a quart of oysters for 50 cents. When eating them he bit on something hard and found it to be a pearl. A few seconds later his son had a similar experience. The stones had not been cooked enough to harm them. The largest one is worth $50 and the smaller $10, making $60 in two bites.

HIGH VALUE OF BUTTERMILK

Until Recently It Was Considered Waste in Creamery Business—Now in Demand.

Years ago buttermilk was considered a waste in the creamery business and thousands of pounds of it were poured into sewers. More recently its great value has been discovered as human and animal food, both as whole buttermilk and in such forms as buttermilk cheese, condensed buttermilk and powdered buttermilk.

Clearing Wooded Tract.

The farmer who contemplates clearing a wooded tract which is more or less uneven in character should make sure that, if cleared, it will not suffer from erosion.

Steady Growth of Hogs.

To maintain steady growth of hogs requires one and one-half to two pounds of grain per day in addition to green pasture, for each 100 pounds of live weight.

INCREASE INCOME FROM LAND

When Saved and Applied to Soil Manure is Valuable Waste Product—Aids Fertility.

Farm manure is a valuable waste product when saved and applied to the soil. Richer soils are needed to produce larger crops and at less cost. More barnyard manure will enrich the soil and thus increase the income from the farm.

Increase Humus Content.

There is no better way to increase the humus content of the soil than to leave a field in pasture for a number of years.

Horse Essential.

While breeding has much to do with the value of horses, care as to feeding, etc., is absolutely essential in obtaining normal development.

Good Sheep Roughage.

Cane, while not as good as clover or alfalfa, makes a good sheep roughage.

music. The Christmas decorations were left as they were first arranged which gave the affair a decided yule-tide appearance. As the lights gleamed through myrtle and holly on the mazes of the dance, the scene presented a spectacle more like a dance in fairyland than a home entertainment at the Bar W ranch. Refreshments of cider, coffee, doughnuts, sandwiches and cake were served. The enjoyable affair closed long after the clock had thrown up its hands.

Inter-Church Movement

Dr. H. R. Mills, State Supervisor of the Inter-Church movement, was in town New Year's day to arrange for a campaign in the interest of the cause. The object of the movement is not a union of the churches, but a co-operation of the forces of the same. Dr. Mills selected a leader while here and full particulars will soon be made public. Just now all that can be said is: It is time for the protestant denominations to get in line for co-operation. Dr. Mills left for Alamogordo on belated No. 3.

Won't Have to Move Chickens

Some one possessed of a knowledge of the intention of Dr. Pine to leave Carrizozo, thought it wisdom to relieve him of the trouble of paying freight on his chickens, so a short time ago the tender hearted party visited the Doctor's chicken house, taking the entire lot which numbered 16, but leaving a large bag of feed. The Doctor would now like for the party to call in the still hours of the night as before and relieve him of the feed.

Brooks & Marr of Alto, who intend to increase the capacity of the mill the coming season as there is at the present and will be in the future, more of a demand for lumber turned out at this mill which is situated well to supply the wants of the surrounding country.

Noticeable in the chorus was the work of Johnnie Green, Tonlita and Juanita Herrera. During the intermission, other features were presented and at the close of the entertainment pupils and audience were treated to a shower of Christmas presents. The pupils showed remarkable ability and the interest manifested by those who attended will create a demand for more entertainments of this nature in the future.
