BOSCHEE'S SYRUP.

A cold is probably the most common of all disorders and when neglected is apt to be most dangerous. Statistics show that more than three times as many people died from influenza last year, as were killed in the greatest war the world has ever known. For the last fifty-three years Boschree's Syrup has been used for coughs, bronchitis, colds, throat irritation and especially lung troubles. It gives the patient a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectoration in the morning. Made in America and used in the homes of thousands of families all over the civilized world. OBTAIN MAXIMUM YIELD OF OATS

Light Frosts or Even Severe Freezes After Seed Is Sown Rarely Injure Plant.

DATE OF SEEDING UNCERTAIN

Midseason-Maturing Varieties Usually Give Best Yields in Northern States—Preparation of Seedbed Important.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

To obtain maximum yields sow oats as early as it is possible to get land in satisfactory condition. This crop grows best in cool weather, and frequently is injured considerably by a few hot days when approaching maturity, and light frosts or even severe freezes after the seed is sown rarely injure it.

The date of seeding naturally depends on the locality and season. In the corn belt the best date is usually from about March 25 to April 15. In the more northern states seeding during the latter half of April is advisable whenever conditions permit. In favorable seasons seeding before the middle of April frequently can be done to advantage, while in unfavorable ones seeding may have to be delayed until early May.

Varieties of Oats to Sow.

Throughout the northern states midseason-maturing varieties, such as Swedish Select, Silvermine, Banner and Victory usually outyield other varieties. In average yield the large, late (slide out) varieties rarely surpass the midseason type in this section. In unfavorable seasons, however, early varieties, such as Kherson and Sixty-day, frequently outyield the midseason varieties. In the corn belt early varieties as a rule produce the most satisfactory yields. For the northern portion of this section strains of the Kherson and Sixty-day type are to be recommended, while in the southern portion Red Rustproof, an early red oat, is the most dependable. For growing under irrigation at high elevations midseason varieties of the Swedish Select and Silvermine types are the most suitable.

Seedbed for Oats.

Prepare a good seedbed for oats. The old idea that oats will produce well on a poor seedbed has persisted too long. This crop responds as well to thorough seedbed preparation as any other cereal. Do not plow land that was in a cultivated crop last year, but disk and harrow sufficiently to make a loose, friable surface seedbed two or three inches deep. As oats require a fairly firm seedbed below the

DETERMINE QUALITY OF EGGS

To Obtain Accurate Knowledge of Condition It Is Necessary to Rotate Before Candle.

It is necessary to rotate an egg before the candle if one is to obtain an accurate knowledge of its condition. By tilting at various angles, the location and size of the air space can be seen, and very often the position of the yolk. But the quality of the egg is very largely determined by the ease with which the yolk moves and the direction of its motion. The operator, therefore—

1. Grasps the pointed end of the egg with the tips of the fingers.
2. Holding the blunt end uppermost, places the egg closely against the opening or spout of the candle.
3. Gives the egg a quick turn to the right or left, watching the movement of the yolk.

If the egg is perfectly fresh it may be difficult to find the yolk at first glance, but as the egg is turned a glimpse of it will be obtained.

two or three inches of top soil, spring plowing is not desirable, there not being sufficient time for the soil to settle before sowing. Disking also is less expensive than plowing. Of course if a heavy growth of weeds is present in the cultivated crop it will be necessary to plow the land, in which case the seedbed should be rolled or dragged and worked down as much as possible.

Seed and Sowing.

Sow the best seed oats obtainable. Usually seed grown in the region where it is to be sown is better than that brought from some other section. Thoroughly fan and grade your seed, and then treat it for smut. The largest yields are obtained by use of a good grain drill. Drilling requires less seed, insures a more even distribution, a more uniform covering, and consequently quicker and more uniform germination. Under humid conditions the best amount of seed to use on a well-prepared seedbed is from eight to ten pecks to the acre. If it is necessary to sow broadcast on a poorly prepared seedbed use about twelve pecks. Under dry-land conditions these rates of seeding are usually reduced about one-half, from four to six pecks usually giving the best results.

IS YOUR ICE HOUSE FILLED?

Season is Getting Late and Farmer Should Not Wait Any Longer for Summer Supply.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Next summer when the little heat waves are rising from the cornfield and everything is parched and dusty, you're going to be mighty sorry if there isn't any ice in the ice house.

A Farm Ice House.

No ice cream, no cool drinks, and lots of sour milk returned to you. Well, it will be your own fault. You let the winter slip by without harvesting ice. Maybe you planned to do it when the next heavy freeze came. But it never came, and you lost your golden opportunity.

It's getting late now. Soon sap will be running and buds swelling. You can't afford to wait any longer. This is nature's "last call" for ice. Cut it even if it isn't very thick. If it's spongy or soft, put up more than you would ordinarily to allow for greater waste. Get busy. You've heard about that place that's paved with good intentions! Ice next summer depends upon prompt action now—not next week.

GIVE CORN IN COLD WEATHER

One of Best Winter Feeds for Poultry, but Must Not Be Depended on Entirely.

More corn should be given to poultry in cold weather than in warm weather; in fact, corn is one of the best cold-weather feeds, though of course it should not be depended on entirely, for it does not contain all of the things needed to promote health and egg production.

Average Weight of Barley.

During the last ten years the lowest average weight of barley per measured bushel was in 1919 and 1910, when it was 45.2 pounds. The standard weight is 48 pounds.

Meat of High Quality.

The breeding of animals plays an important part in producing a carcass of high quality. Selection, long-continued care, and intelligent feeding will produce meat of desirable quality.

Soil for Most Crops.

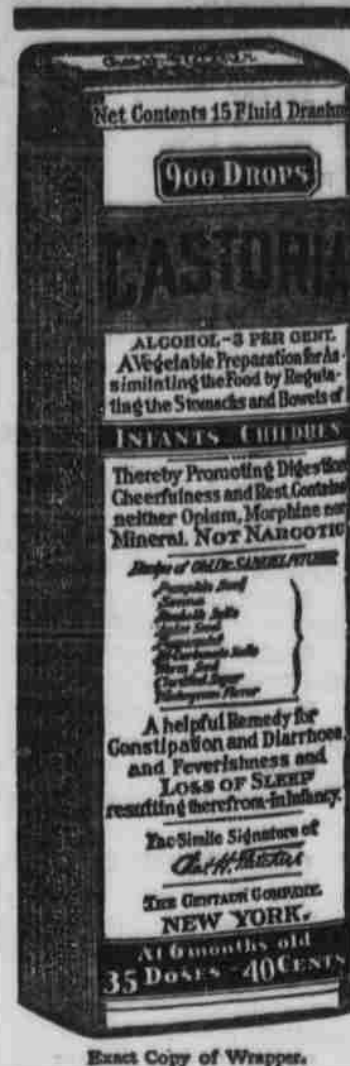

Most crops require a neutral or rather a soil that is not acid. There are a few crops that tolerate acid soils better than others.

For Small Flock Owner.

The type of sheep that combines a large body with a good fleece is the one for the small flock owner.

More Improved Horses.

Improved horses will increase in exact ratio to the decrease of stallion-selling sharks and grafters.

First School Teacher Had Met Her Chum's Friend Somewhat Earlier in the Day.

These two teachers were chums. They are still chums. The first one met the second one and was out of humor about something. "Why, the most terrible thing happened today. A regular pill of a teacher visited me. She didn't even tell me that she enjoyed my work when the visit was over—just put up her head and sailed out of the room."

The second one essayed comfort and invited the first one home with her to supper. "Then we'll go to a show and forget all about that visitor," she said.

The first one accompanied her home, and there in the living room was another visitor. The second one greeted the out-of-town cousin and turned to introduce her to her friend when the friend began with a sickly smile: "Oh, you visited me this afternoon."—Indianapolis News.

LEADS TO ODD RELATIONSHIP

Hawaiian Custom of Adoption of Children Has Been the Cause of Amusing Complications.

The very old custom of legal adoption in the Hawaiian islands, which originated when there were many tribes often at war with one another, was intended to bring peace among them. The custom has long since disappeared, but the custom still persists. When a child is "spoken for" by some relative or friend, the little baby, as soon as it can leave its own mother, will be given to the foster mother, and will be regarded as a sacred trust. A Youth's Companion contributor tells of one woman who was the mother of eight children, seven of whom had been adopted by friends. When she was asked why she gave them away, she replied sadly, "It is a superstition. I know, but if they are 'asked for' and I refuse I fear some harm might come to them." The poor soul let them go just because she loved them so much!

The custom leads to very amusing complications. One of the native princesses now living has given her baby to her own mother. The little girl is legally adopted, and therefore has become the grandmother's daughter.

300,000 RAIL- MEN TO STRIKE FEBRUARY 17

No Federal Injunction Will Stop Us And We Will Spend Last Cent, Say Workmen.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 9.—A strike of 300,000 members of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way employees and railway shop laborers was called for Tuesday February 17, at a meeting of the general chairman of the brotherhood here today.

Decision to order a cessation of work was announced by Grand President Allen E. Baker, following advices from Washington that the negotiations with the railroad administration for wage increases offered no hope of a favorable settlement.

The general chairmen of the brotherhood were empowered to order a strike by a vote of the union membership last summer. At the convention of the brotherhood in September a strike was postponed in order that President Wilson might have opportunity to attempt to bring about a reduction in living costs. According to union officials, his efforts have been fruitless. Original demands of the brotherhood were for an average increase of forty per cent.

"No federal injunction will stop us and we will spend the last dollar the organization has to win the strike," Mr. Baker said in announcing the strike decision.

Life's Seeming Sunset

At twenty minutes past eight o'clock last Sunday evening, Mrs. Martha Hamilton, mother of Mrs. Wm. Barnett and Mrs. Calvin Carl, passed away at the ripe old age of seventy-eight years. Mrs. Hamilton had not been in a good state of health since last November and since that time she was confined to her room at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. Calvin Carl. Her condition became worse Sunday evening and failing to rally to medical aid, she passed to the world beyond.

Mrs. Hamilton was born in the state of New York, coming west with her parents at the age of twelve and located in the town of Marengo, Illinois, where she married and raised a family, afterwards moving to Kansas with the Carl family and then to New Mexico where she lived the past eleven years preceding her death. The funeral services were held at the Methodist Church with the Rev. Douglas conducting the same, the Methodist being the church of her choice. About one year ago, her only son, Roy was killed in an engagement in France. Her two daughters, Mrs. Barnett and Mrs. Carl reside here, to whom the community in general tenders its sympathies.

THE NEW SOUTHWEST HOTEL

The above is a reproduction from an architectural drawing of the New Southwest Hotel soon to be erected in Carrizozo. The site selected for this valuable improvement is on the corner of Alamogordo avenue and Main street which will place the hotel directly in the center of the city.

The structure will be three stories high and will contain sixty rooms, thirty of which will be on the upper floor. Sixteen of these rooms will contain baths. On the first floor, besides the offices, barber shop, news and cigar stand, a large lobby will be had, 30 by 40 feet which will be larger than that of most hotels of its size. The Hotel will be equipped with elevator accommodations and all modern conveniences. The space used in its construction will cover 142 feet on Main street and 100 feet on Alamogordo avenue.

As we have said in previous issues, the cost of erecting the Hotel will be $75,000 and as soon as 50 per cent of this amount is subscribed, the work will begin. About $25,000 has already been subscribed and the balance will be an easy matter. The committee will in a short time make a final effort and already have assurances that there will be no trouble in raising the balance of the amount needed. The opening of the spring will be the keynote for breaking the ground which will be followed with the finish by the 4th of July.

Mrs. Blaney Will Attend

The series of educational meetings planned by the N. E. A. to be held at Cedar Falls, Chicago and Cleveland, are worthy of our attention.

At Cedar Falls, the following topics will be presented and discussed by speakers of ability and experience:

1. The advantages and disadvantages of the various units of taxation and administration as related to Rural School Consolidation.
2. What the course of study should be and do for Consolidated Rural Schools.
3. The problem of transportation and good roads as related to Rural School Consolidation.
4. The preparation of teachers for Consolidated Rural Schools.
5. Teachers' salaries in Consolidated Rural Schools.
6. The need of more money in the Consolidation of Rural Schools.

The vocational meeting in Chicago will deal with questions relating to the administration of vocational education and the Federal Vocational Education Act.

The Department of Superintendence of the N. E. A. will meet in Cleveland, Ohio, February 23-28, 1920 inclusive, and discuss Americanization, moral education, health service, administration, of school affairs, school buildings and many other questions of equal importance.

The County Board of Education has instructed Mrs. Blaney, to attend these meetings.

Redpath Lyceum Course

Miss Gay Zenola McLaren, Dramatic Reader, will be at the Methodist Church, February 20, at 8 p. m., as the next number of the Redpath Lyceum Course. Miss McLaren is one of the best artists in her line in the United States, and everybody should hear her. Don't forget the date and purchase a ticket for this important number. Stand by the men who have guaranteed this series of entertainments for Carrizozo. The numbers from start to finish are of the very best.

Legion Notes

The Benjamin I. Berry Post of the American Legion, Carrizozo, N. M. will meet in the Lutz Building at 8:00 p. m., Tuesday, February 24, 1920. All members are urged to make every effort to be present as a number of important matters will come before the meeting.

There are now 89 members of the post with 46 paid up and in good standing.

The library books of the Post and the shelves are now installed in the K. of P. Hall.

Excerpts from the Constitution of the Legion:

"To safe guard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness.

"While requiring that every member of the organization perform his full duty as a citizen according to his own conscience and understanding, the organization shall be absolutely non-partisan and shall not be used for the dissemination of partisan principles or for the promotion of the candidacy of any person seeking office or preferment."

The constitution and by laws of the Post will be read at the meeting, February 24, 1920.

Rev. Johnson, rector of the Episcopal Church issues an invitation through the columns of this paper to the American Legion to be guests of the church at the services held on Sunday evening, February 22. The members are requested to attend in civilian's attire which request meets with the approval of the officers of that body. As Rev. Johnson is also a member of the legion, the organization as a whole will be deeply interested in the importance of the message the Reverend gentleman and comrade will have in store for his guests on Washington's birthday.

Cloud Hovers Over The Lane Home

Mrs. Laura Lane, of White Oaks, wife of Mr. Allen Lane of the mining firm of Jackson & Lane, operators of the North Homestake Gold Mine, passed away at El Paso last Sunday morning. Mrs. Lane located temporarily at the Pass City last fall in order to have the children attend school there, for the winter. All went well until about two weeks ago, when Mrs. Lane was taken ill with the influenza, the children likewise becoming afflicted with the same disease.

Mrs. Lane's condition grew gradually worse and in spite of all medical aid and attention she died on Sunday morning at 2 o'clock. The remains were held for several days with the hope that the condition of the children would improve so that they might be present at the funeral, but their improvement was not sufficient to warrant their coming and the body, accompanied by Mr. Lane was brought here Wednesday and the funeral held at White Oaks the following morning, the Rev. Smith of the Carrizozo Baptist Church conducting the services. The Lanes have lived at White Oaks for years, Mr. Lane being interested in mining there since the early days. Mrs. Lane was well known and much loved by her many friends both at home and surrounding localities. The Outlook extends its sympathy to the surviving relatives.

Stockmen's Convention

Roswell, N. M., Feb. 12.—The annual convention of the New Mexico Cattle and Horse Growers' Association which will be held in Roswell, March 29, 30 and 31, will be one of the most important in the history of the association. Plans have been under way for this big meeting of stockmen for several weeks, although the date was not definitely decided on until the meeting of the executive committee in Carlsbad, N. M. last week.

Good speakers for every session and the handling of problems of vital interest to every stockman is the aim of the program committee. The executive committee believes that the stockmen of New Mexico are very much in earnest over the association and that it is a strictly business proposition with them. Every effort will be made to get speakers of national reputation who can discuss problems from which the stockmen will derive real benefit.

Visitors are assured of accommodations during the convention. Roswell is a busy city now with people flocking in every day, but in order to entertain the stockmen, the Roswell homes will be thrown open to visitors.

Once Crown Royal "Nut" Asks to Stand Trial in

By Allies.

Washington Feb. 10.—Frederick William Hohenzollern, former crown prince of Germany, in a cablegram received today by President Wilson, offers to surrender himself for trial by the allied governments in place of the Germans whose extradition has been demanded.

After enumerating the many so termed wrongs his country has been subjected to, he says:

"As the ex-crown prince, I wish to take the place of my countrymen. If the allied and associated governments desire a victim let them take me instead of the 900 Germans who committed no other crimes than to serve their country in war."

O. I. L. Co. Closing In

The activity of the gentlemen interested in the above named company is plainly evident from the fact that in a short space of time, they have organized and leased some very good holdings in this state and now have options on proven fields in Louisiana. When we take into consideration the fact that Louisiana is the coming oil center and follow this up with the fact that the O. I. L. company have options there, the outcome of the game looks good indeed.

The representative we spoke of last week will start for Louisiana on the 20th of the present month. He is thoroughly competent to make investigations and his report will be looked forward to with much interest. Between now and the time of his departure, parties wishing to get in on a good deal should do so before he leaves. Information concerning the affairs of the company may be obtained from the promoters, whose names and addresses will be given to interested parties, who apply at this office.

Great Elk Herd Saved From Starvation

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—Recent statements that the great elk herds of Yellowstone Park are now starving in Jackson Hole, Wyoming, are not true, according to a statement issued by the Secretary of Agriculture.

The department has secured about two thousand tons of hay in that region, which is being used to feed the elk, and officials of the Biological Survey state that this amount of hay will feed most of the animals of the southern herd during the winter. The National Park service has secured enough hay to feed the northern herd also, which has likewise been threatened by starvation.

CHAPTER XII.

Conward paused to speak to Irene before leaving the house.

"I owe you my good wishes," he said. "And I give them most frankly, although perhaps with more difficulty than you suppose."

"You are very good, Mr. Conward," she acknowledged.

"I could not wish you anything but happiness," he returned. "And had I been so fortunate as Eiden, in making your acquaintance first, I might have hoped to contribute to your happiness more directly than I can under the present circumstances."

He was speaking in his low, sedulous notes, and his words sent the girl's blood rushing in a strange mixture of gratification and anger. The tribute he implied—that he himself would have been glad to have been her suitor—was skillfully planned to appeal to her vanity, and her anger was due to its success. She told herself she should not listen to such words; she should hate to hear such words. And yet she listened to them, and was not sure that she hated them. She could only say:

"You are very good, Mr. Conward."

He pressed her hand at the door, and again that strange mixture of emotions surged through her.

Conward proceeded to the business section of the town, well pleased with the evening's events. He found his way impeded by crowds in front of the newspaper offices. He had paid little attention to the progress of the war scene, attributing it to the skillful publicity of interests connected with the manufacture of armaments. To the last he had not believed that war was possible.

"Nobody wants to fight," he had assured his business acquaintances. "Even the armament people don't want to fight. All they want is to frighten more money out of the taxpayers of Europe." To Conward this explanation seemed very complete. It covered the whole ground and left nothing to be said.

But tonight he was aware of a keener tension in the crowd atmosphere. They were good-natured crowds, but they were in some way more intense than he had ever seen before. There was no fear of war; there was, rather, an adventurous spirit which seemed to fear that the affair would blow over, as had so many affairs in the past, and all the excitement go for nothing. That war, if it came to war, could last no one dreamed; it would be a matter of a few weeks, a few months, at the most, until a thoroughly whipped Germany would retire behind the Rhine to plan ways of raising the indemnity which outraged civilization would demand.

Conward elbowed his way through the crowds, smiling in his superior knowledge, over their excitement. Newspapers must have headlines.

At his office Conward used a telephone. Then he walked to a restaurant, where, after a few minutes, he was joined by a young woman. They took a table in a box. Supper was disposed of, and the young woman began to grow impatient.

"Well, you brought me here," she said, at last. "You've fed me, and you don't feed anybody, Conward, without a purpose. What's the consideration?"

"I'm pulling off a little joke, and I want you to help me. You know Eiden—Dave Eiden?"

"Sure. I've known him ever since that jolt put him out of business up in your rooms, ever so many years ago. He was too rural for that mixture."

"I want you to get him down to your place some night to be agreed upon—I'll fix the date later—and keep him there until I call for him, with his fiancée."

"Some joke," she said, and there was disgust in her voice. "Who is it on—Eiden, me, or the girl?"

"Never mind who it's on," Conward returned. "I'm paying for it. Here's something on account, and if you make a good job of it I won't be stingy."

He handed her a bill, which she kissed and put in her purse. "I need the money, Conward, or I wouldn't take it."

This part of his trap set, Conward awaited a suitable opportunity to spring it. In the meantime he took Mrs. Hardy partially into his confidence. He allowed her to believe, however, that Eiden's habits would stand correction and he had merely arranged to trap him in one of his favorite haunts. She was very much shocked and thought it was very dreadful, but of course she must save Irene.

But concerning another part of his program Conward was even less frank with Mrs. Hardy. He was clever enough to know that he must observe certain limitations.

At length all his plans appeared to be complete. The city was in a tumult of excitement over the war, but for Conward a deeper interest centered in the plot he was hatching under the unsuspecting noses of Irene and Eiden. If he could trap Dave the rest would be easy. If he failed in this he had another plan to give failure at least the appearance of success.

The fact that the nation was now at war probably had an influence in speeding up the plot. Everything was under high tension; powerful currents of thought were bearing the masses along unaccustomed channels; society itself was in a state of flux. If he were to strike at all let the blow fall at once.

On this early August night he ascertained that Dave was working alone in his office. Then he called a number on a telephone.

"This is the night," he explained. "You will find him alone in his office. I will be waiting to hear from you at—" he quoted Mrs. Hardy's telephone number. Then he drove his car to the Hardy home, exchanged a few words with Irene, and sat down to a hand of cribbage with her mother.

Porling over his correspondence, Dave, with his ear cocked for the cry of the latent extra, spent the evening hours in a valiant effort at concentration.

There came a timid knock at the door. "Come in," he called.

No one entered, but presently he heard the knock again. He rose and walked to the door. Outside stood a young woman.

"If you please," she said, "excuse me, but—you are Mr. Eiden, aren't you?"

"Yes. Can I help you in any way?" The woman giggled a moment, but resumed soberly: "You will wonder at me coming to you, but I'm from the country. Did you think that?"

"I suspected it," said Dave with a smile. "You knocked—" He paused.

"Yes?"

"Like a country girl," he said, boldly. She giggled again. "Well, I'm lost," she confessed. "I got off the train a short time ago. My aunt was to meet me, but there are such crowds in the street, I must have missed her. And I saw your name on the window and I had heard of you. So I just thought that I'd ask—if you wouldn't mind—showing me to this address."

She fumbled in her pocket, and Dave invited her into the office. There she produced a torn piece of paper with an address.

"Why, that's just a few blocks!" said Dave. "I'll walk around with you." He turned for his hat, but at that moment there was another timid knock on the door. He opened it. A boy of eight or ten years stood outside.

"What is it, son?"

The lad looked shyly about the office. It was evident he was impressed with its magnificence. "Are you Mr. Eiden that sells lots?"

"Yes. Were you thinking of buying a few lots?"

"Did you sell lots to my father?"

"Well, if I knew your father's name perhaps I could tell you. Who is your father?"

"He's Mr. Merton. I'm his son. And he said to me, before he got so bad, he said, 'There's just one honest man in this city, and that's Mr. Eiden.' Is that you, Mr. Eiden?"

"Well, I hope it is, but I won't claim such a distinction. I remember your father very well. Did he send you to me?"

"No, sir. He's too sick. He don't know anybody now. He didn't know me tonight." The boy's voice went thick and he stopped and swallowed.

"And then I remembered what he said about you, and I just came."

"Have you help—a doctor—a nurse?"

"No, sir. We haven't any money. My father spent it all for the lots that he bought from you."

Dave winced. Then, turning to the young woman: "I'm afraid this is a more urgent case than yours. I'll call a taxi to take you to your address."

To his surprise, his visitor broke out in a ribald laugh. She had seated herself on a desk and was swinging one foot jauntily.

"It's all off," she said. "Say, Dave, you couldn't lose me in this burg. You don't remember me, do you? Well, all the better. I'm rather glad I broke down on this job. I used to be something of an actress, and I'd have put it over if it hadn't been for the kid."

The fact is, Dave," she continued, "I was sent up here to decoy you. It wasn't fair fighting, and I didn't like it, but money has been mighty slow of late. I wonder—how much you'd give to know who sent me?"

Dave pulled some bills from his pocket and held them before her. She took them from his hand.

"Conward," she said.

Dave's blood went to his head. "The scoundrel!" he cried. "The low-down dog! There's more in this than appears on the surface."

"Sure there is," she said. "There's another woman. There always is."

Eiden walked to his desk. From a drawer he took a revolver, toyed with it a moment in his hands, broke it open, crushed it full of cartridges, and thrust it in his pocket.

The girl watched with friendly interest. "Believe me, Dave," she said, "if Conward turns up missing I won't know a thing—not a d— thing."

For a moment he stood irresolute. He could only guess what Conward's plan had been, but that it had been diabolical and cowardly, and that it concerned Irene, he had no doubt. His impulse was to immediately confront Conward, force a confession, and deal with him as the occasion might seem to require. But his eye fell on the boy, with his shock of brown hair and wistful, half-frightened face.

"I'll go with you first," he said, with quick decision. Then to the girl, "Sorry I must turn you out, but this case is urgent."

"That's all right," she said. "I'm used to being turned out." And before he knew it she was in the street.

"All right, son," said Dave, taking up the matter now in hand. "What's your name—your first name?"

"Charlie."

"And your address?"

The boy mentioned a distant subdivision.

"That is out, isn't it? Well, we'll take the car. I guess I'd better call a doctor at once."

He went to the telephone and gave some directions. Then he and the boy walked to a garage and in a few moments were humming along the by-roads into the country. Dave had already become engrossed in his errand of mercy and his rage at Conward, if not forgotten, was temporarily dismissed from his mind.

He chatted with the boy.

"You go to school?"

"Not this year. Father has been too sick. Of course, these are holidays, and he says he'll be all right before they're over."

Dave smiled grimly. "The incurable optimism of it," he murmured to himself. Then outwardly: "Of course he will. We'll fix him up in no time with a good doctor and a good nurse."

They drove on through the calm night, leaving the city streets behind and following what was little more than a country trail. Here and there they bumped over pieces of graded street, infinitely rougher than the natural prairie; once Dave dropped his front wheels into a collapsing water trench; once he just grazed an isolated hydrant.

"And this is one of our 'choice residential subdivisions,'" said Dave to himself. "Fine business! Fine business!"

As the journey continued the sense of self-reproach which had been static in him for many months became more insistent. The intrusion of Conward into his mind sent the blood to his head, but at that moment his reflection—were cut short by the boy.

"We will have to get out here," he said. "The bridge is down."

Investigation proved him to be right. A bridge over a small stream had collapsed and was slowly disintegrating amid its own wreckage. Dave ran the car a little to one side of the road, locked the switch and walked on with the boy.

"Fine business!" Dave repeated to himself. "And this is how our big success was made. Well, the 'success' has vanished as quickly as it came. I suppose there is a law somewhere that is not mocked."

They were passing through a settlement of crude houses, dimly visible in the starlight and by occasional yellow blurs from their windows. Before one of the meanest of these the boy at last stopped, pulled the door open and Dave entered. At first he was conscious of a very small and stuffy room, with a peculiar odor which he attributed to an oil lamp burning on a box. He walked over and turned the lamp up, but the oil was consumed; a red, smitten, smoking wick was its only response. Then he felt in his pocket and struck a match.

The light revealed the dinginess of the little room. There was a bed covered with musty, ragged clothing; a table littered with broken and dirty dishes and pieces of stale food; a stove cracked and greasy, and one or two bare boxes serving as articles of furniture. But it was to the bed Dave turned, and with another match bent over the shrunken form that lay almost concealed amid the coarse coverings. He brought his face down close, then straightened up and steadied himself for a moment.

HIGH PRICES FOR DIAMONDS

Value of the Highly Desired Sparklers Has Been Soaring to Unheard-of Heights.

The economic situation of the world at large is said by jewelers to be more responsible for the present high prices of diamonds than any shortage of diamonds in the South African mines or any manipulation of the output by the De Beers Diamond company.

The following figures concerning diamond prices were obtained from Antwerp, the European center of the diamond market. An uncut diamond before the war cost $23 a carat and $32 after cutting. Immediately after the declaration of war, the price slumped.

In 1915 the Germans began to get nervous regarding the value of paper money and started buying all the diamonds they could find.

France, Switzerland, Italy and England followed suit and the price went up rapidly. On the eve of the armistice, an uncut carat diamond was worth $70. Since the war ended, the diamond market has boomed, owing to the depreciation of European money, the difficulty of exchange and the embargo on the export of currency from one European nation to another. Today a carat of uncut stone finds a ready market at $150.

The Antwerp merchants no longer seek customers. The market is swamped with buyers. Credit is no longer given. The sales are for cash. The buyer frequently resells and the new purchaser sells again at fat profits. Thus the price keeps going up. Large stones are snapped up at unheard-of prices.

Dove Valuable in Warfare.

It is odd to realize the practical use of the dove, generally accepted as the symbol of peace, in carrying on war. And it has probably surprised many people to learn that the homing pigeon differs materially from the carrier pigeon so long associated with the bearing of messages. As a matter of fact, the carrier pigeon has practically ceased carrying and is nowadays raised for its fine looks rather than its homing instinct. The homing pigeon used in the United States army and navy is of another type, which has been trained through many generations to fly. Training begins when the birds are about three months old, and the flying distances are gradually increased to 500 miles, when the bird is held to be qualified for real work.

Savage's Salt.

From time immemorial savage man has extracted salt from ocean water by evaporating it in pools, and distant inland tribes have journeyed far to trade with him for it. The salt works that are in operation in Rizal province of the Philippine Islands have been worked for centuries, at first in a very crude way by allowing ocean water at high tide to flood a slight natural depression and then roughly damming the narrow neck where the overflow occurred to keep out succeeding tides until the water in the "pan" dried up. This left a mass of muddy salt crystals, which were scooped out with coconut and calabash shells; and then the process was repeated.

The Almighty Dollar.

Bribery has been the downfall of many public men during the course of history. Francis Bacon, the greatest thinker of his age, was ruined by his cupidity. Lord Chancellor Macclesfield and Waterbury were destroyed by the same vice. Benedict Arnold sold a fort in New York to the enemy for $31,575. For this same sin Gorgel betrayed Austria, Athitopol forsook David and Judas delivered up Christ.

I have a small brother, writes a Youth's Companion subscriber, who is three years old. On one occasion he came walking slowly and quietly up to his mother and turned a very wan, pinched little face up to her. She asked him in a sympathetic voice:

"What is the matter, Joe? You aren't sick, are you?"

"No, ma'am."

"Well, what is the matter?"

"Nothin', only I just feel so pitiful!"

By now his feelings were so "worked up" that he began to cry.

"Well, is that what makes you cry so easily?"

"No, ma'am, that's what makes me cry so hard!"

"Now, Joseph, what is mamma's boy crying so hard about?"

"I'm cryin' 'bout as hard as I can."

And he proceeded to do so.

THE change in Peter's expression was wonderful to see. "You did wire me?" he exclaimed. "I'm glad!"

Why, he did not say — nor did the ask.

"I'm sorry about your father," she murmured. "Terribly sorry. I—I think that I misjudged him."

A shadow of pain overcast Peter's face.

"Please—" he began. But she hurried on:

"I—I think that judging people is my worst fault—or one of them. I—I wanted you to know that."

Why, she did not say — nor did he ask.

"I misjudged you, too," Peter reminded her, "about that telegram." He held out his hand. "Let's be friends. And you'll stay here—"

"Oh, I want to!" she cried.

RED CROSS LAYS PLANS FOR 1920

Substantial Sum Is to be Kept in Reserve in Case of Sudden Disaster

Out of a fund of $30,000,000 available for its work this year, the American Red Cross has set aside $15,000,000 for European relief, $13,750,000 for use at home and $1,250,000 for completing its program in Siberia.

In making public plans for carrying forward peace time activities, Dr. Farrand, head of the organization, declared that a considerable reserve must be held for emergency calls "incident to such possible events as the opening of Russia to intercourse with the United States." This determination, Dr. Farrand said, was reached after long and full consideration with government representatives in this country and Europe.

With appeals infinitely beyond its resources, and unable to count on additions to its total fund during the year, the executive committee, Dr. Farrand said, found it "both wise and necessary to consider the application of its funds so that the soundest possible sense of proportion might prevail."

All obligations to soldiers, sailors and their families must be provided for, Dr. Farrand reported, while the Red Cross must be ready at the same time to meet relief demands due to disasters.

"We are pledged," he added, "to the establishment of a peace-time program in America for which $13,750,000 will be made available. In considering this item it must be kept clearly in mind that while expenditures in this country arising directly out of the war remain high they should rapidly diminish, and while our work for establishment of peace-time undertakings will increase in some measure, this increase will be inconsiderable as compared with the reduction of war items."

THE EGYPTIAN LOTUS

(In an artificial pond.)

Proud, languid lily of the sacred Nile,
"Tis strange to see thee on our western wave,
Far from those sandy shores, that rattle on miles,
Papyrus-plumed, stretch silent as the grave.

O'er dark, mysterious pool and sheltered bay,
And round deep dreaming isles thy leaves expand,
Where Alexandrian barges plow their way,
Full freighted, to the ancient Theban land.

On Karnak's lofty columns thou wert seen,
And spacious Luxor's temple-palace
walls,
Each royal Pharaoh's emerald queen
Chose thee to deck her glittering banquet halls;

Yet thou art blossoming on this fair lake
As regally, amidst these common things,
As on the shores where Nile's soft ripples break,
As in the halls of old Egyptian kings.

Thy grace charms, day by day, men's curious eyes,
But be whose outer senses thought hath probed.

Looking at thee, sees stately temples rise
About him, and the long lines of priests, white-robed,

That chant strange music as they slowly pace
Dim-columned aisles; hears, trembling, overhead,

Echoes that lose themselves in that vast space,
Of Egypt's solemn ritual for the dead.

Aye, deeper thoughts than these, though undefined,
Wake in the quickened soul at sight of thee,

For this majestic orient faith enshrined
Man's yearning hope for immortality.

And thou wert Egypt's symbol of the power

That under all decaying form lies hid:
The old world worshiped thee, O Lotus flower,

Then carved its sphinx and reared its pyramid.
—Arthur Wentworth Hamilton Eaton.

DECIDING ON THE BREED OF FOWL

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A small flock of hens can be kept with profit by many city dwellers who have a back yard. Even as few as eight or ten hens should produce eggs enough, when used economically, for a family of four or five persons throughout the year, except the molting period of the fall and early winter.

Householders usually desire not only eggs for the table and for cooking, but also an occasional chicken to eat. For this reason one of the general-purpose breeds, such as Plymouth Rock, Wyandotte, Rhode Island Red, or Orpington, is preferable to the smaller egg breeds, such as the Leghorns. Not only do the mature fowls of these breeds, because of their large size, make better table fowls than the Leghorns, but the young chickens for the same reason make better fryers and roasters, whereas chickens of the egg breeds are suitable only for the smaller broilers.

The general-purpose breeds are also "broody" breeds, the hens making good sitters and mothers, which is a decided advantage when it is desired to hatch and raise chickens, since the hens of the egg breeds seldom go broody and are in any event rather unreliable sitters and mothers. If, however, the production of eggs outweighs the desire for an occasional table fowl, the lighter egg breeds undoubtedly will be found better, because they lay as many eggs and do so on less feed, with the result that they produce the eggs more cheaply. It is by all means advisable to keep some pure breed or variety. Where this is done, sales at a profitable figure can often be made of breeding stock intended for market, or of eggs for hatching.

There are no points of the compass on the chart of true patriotism.

All good ends can be worked out by good means. Those that can not are bad, and may be counted so at once and left alone.

While we walk through the valley of youth, its beauty, its variety, its pleasant greenward and dancing lights and shadows make us forget that it lies low. As we climb into middle age the road is steep, but we know that each step takes us nearer the sun.

Must Have Good Tools.

As long ago as the time of the cave dweller, prehistoric man learned that the best arrow or spear was tipped with the best piece of flint. In brief, to do good work you must have good tools. In the terms of today, this means that the expert or specialist must be preferred to the untrained.—William Roscoe Thayer.

Contrary Statement.

"That was a paradoxical report our doctor made about the typhoid in the family."

"What was it?"

"That it was the well water which made us sick."

False Notes in the Harmony.

Young woman (scoffingly)—Life is one grand, sweet song.

Old Bach (dolefully)—Yes, but some of us have very poor voices.

A Sad Materialist.

"Your favorite musical instrument is the ukulele?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Cumrox. "It doesn't make much noise at best; and when you get tired of listening to it you can demolish it without anything like the expense that would attach to smashing a grand piano or a good violin."

Scout Naturalist Advises Boys Not to Limit Walks to Roads and Beaten Paths

"Do not limit your winter walks to the roads and the beaten paths," advises Edward F. Bigelow, the scout naturalist, in Boys' Life. "That may be necessary in the marshland of the summer, but when the freezing weather has been prolonged take to the swamps. But be careful. Even the coldest weather sometimes leaves treacherous places in the underbrush and in other sheltered spots. Sometimes the frost is only superficial even when ice on the open ponds is thick. A little good, plain common sense will discover the riches and avoid the danger. One never can see the best parts of a brook bank from the opposite bank. They must be seen from the middle of the stream. I never thoroughly realized that until I started out with camera and rubber boots so that I could safely go into water about a foot and a half or two feet in depth. The ice fringes, the ornate palaces, the wonderful recesses, the strings of jewels, the fairyland caves are all beyond our most vivid dreams. I cannot sufficiently emphasize this, because I know that there are scouts who will not believe, no matter how often I reiterate, I did not believe it myself until I tried it, and the trial was almost by chance. But when I discover this foreign fairyland, I hold it in my possession and frequently explore it. There are many puzzles in that icy region. One cannot even imagine how some of those formations could have been made, but some of them may be puzzled out, and solving the problem is always entertaining and more so than finding the answer to word riddles. Things are more interesting than words."

Minister Was Inventor of First Percussion Lock for Fire Arms; First Used 1825

The first percussion lock for fire-arms was invented and patented in 1807 by the Rev. Alexander J. Forsyth, a Scottish clergyman, who was born Dec. 28, 1768. Firearms were first made in Italy in the fourteenth century, and were employed in war by the Burgundians at Arras in 1414. These first small arms were really small cannon, and were borne by two men. In 1471 Edward IV. had 800 Flemings armed with hand-guns in his army, and a little later the Swiss armed 10,000 men with arquebuses. The musket was employed in the army of Emperor Charles V. early in the sixteenth century. These rude firearms were at first discharged by the application of a flaming torch. About 1517 the wheel-lock method came into use, and afterward the flint was used, from 1602 until the Scottish clergyman invented the percussion principle of igniting gun-powder in muskets, by means of detonating powder. The flint-lock guns were used by all the European armies during the early period of the Napoleonic wars, and only a few guns embodying Forsyth's invention were in use a century ago.

Percussion caps were first generally used about 1825.

Honorificabilitudinitatibus Printing Center of the World.

The latest official statistics show that one-fourth of the printing done in the United States is handled in New York city, where nearly 8,000 establishments employ nearly 70,000 people. New York now outranks London, which has been considered the printing center of the world.

THE UTILITY GOWN

Black Velvet Draws Palm of Popularity, Writer Says.

Fabric Suitable for All Purposes From Breakfast Robe to Ball and Theater Attire.

In these days of the high cost of everything few women can afford to make a distinction between dinner gowns and evening dress. They both signify formal wear, but to persons of meticulous care in dress there is a difference. With housekeeping such a tremendous problem and the domestic question a shawl on which many households founder, the custom of dining out is becoming more and more prevalent. At the more exclusive restaurants one is not properly dressed unless in evening clothes, yet if the evening's entertainment includes the theater one's costume needs to be more reserved than if a dancing party or the opera is contemplated.

Of all the materials we have seen this season, observes a fashion writer, the palm of popularity goes to black velvet—unquestionably the fabric suitable for all purposes from breakfast to ball gown, and in the restaurants and theaters it predominates. A clever woman whom we see at every important function is not noted for her wealth nor her lavish expenditures on dress, but she is always tastefully if rather unobtrusively gowned.

At the opera one evening she appeared in a stunning gown of black silk velvet made severely plain with a round of décolletage and the skirt ankle length with a long, straight panel falling from one hip to form a side train. We remarked the costume for its extreme elegance of line and lack of adornment. A few nights later this woman came into the dining room of our most fashionable and exclusive hotel again gowned in black velvet. We noticed that the bodice was cut rather low and filled in with a shirred gilet of embroidered black net, short sleeves edged with tiny ruffles were of net and chiffon, and on one hip several flat loops of the velvet simulated the bouffant effect.

It was not until afterward that we realized that this costume was in fact the opera gown worn with a glimpse of net, and with the train looped up. Not one woman in a hundred, unless she were in the habit of scrutinizing and analyzing feminine wearing apparel, would have discovered the metamorphosed frocks. Very convincing transformations may be accomplished by a woman who is clever with her needle or who has a good dressmaker.

FOR MILADY'S SPRING WEAR

Becoming, indeed, is this straw hat in sennet braid which soon will be added to the wardrobe.

Turn Gloves Before Washing. Turn a silk glove wrong side out before washing.

New Lingerie and Long Gloves

Lingerie is one of the things which have had an impetus during the season. There seems to be an idea of getting away from the old and well-tried ideas and of indulging in undergarments which are original and pretty at the same time. Chiffon is the material most favored. The pale yellows and the shades of mauve are particularly attractive, and so are the tones of cerise and orange. For a bright color in chiffon loses the heaviness which might result from the use of a thicker material.

These dainty bits of undergarments are embroidered in thin rows of flower patterns and are generously helped along by inlays of hemstitching. Then there are ribbons used not too conspicuously and varying a little from the general tone of the material.

Accordion plaiting is cleverly used. Two or three rows of double hemstitching, with the rest in plaiting, and you have a slip which cannot be said to have a serious rival. Laces are used

NEW PLAITED PONGEE SKIRT

Billowing charms in every bit of this accordion plaited pongee skirt, trimmed with several rows of stitching in delicate blue. This stitching is also used on the cuffs of the charming waist which has a dainty collar of old blue velvet. The girdle is of the same material.

JEWELRY OF CHINESE JADE

Season's Vogue for Green Tints Brings Costly Decorative Articles into the Limelight.

One of the things which the season's vogue for green tints in women's garments has done is to bring into unprecedented popularity various articles of jewelry made of real Chinese jade. The articles in demand range from tiny eardrops to necklaces so high in price as to surprise even persons who think they know a good deal about costly gems. It is a matter of record that small necklaces of jade beads, every one measuring less than a quarter of an inch in diameter, have been sold in China at from $1,000 to $3,000 each. Naturally, the values of these necklaces are enhanced when they are brought to this country and resold.

New Veil Fastener.

A smart veil shown in one of the exclusive hat shop windows was made of heavy black mesh with a ribbon of leather fastened at a point that would come right below the chin in the front. This ribbon extended on either side and was provided with a snapper so that when it was down around the neck it would fasten securely in the back collarwise, leaving the veil itself snugly gathered in about the lower part of the face.

Materials for Handbags. Chiffon velvet and suede are the favorites for handbags.

TWO OF A KIND

By GEORGE E. STREETER

(Copyright.)

He sat in front of the post office every working day throughout the year. No one seemed to know his real name, but the townspeople called him Armless John, and being otherwise remarkable for a peculiar kind of stammer, he was for some years the object of pity. Around his neck he wore a sign bearing the following rather ambiguous appeal:

KIND FRIENDS
Please help a POOR man WILLING but UNABLE to work with a LARGE FAMILY.

According to his own statements he had lost his arms in a variety of ways; the juvenile population had been informed that sharks—or bears—had eaten his lost arms; to very old and simple-minded ladies it was "fire-damp," or "on the railway," or just "cannibals." He had also "fallen from the mast-head," "dropped out of a balloon," and "got caught in an elevator." Sometimes his loss had occurred while "fighting in Cuba," or engaged in "blasting rocks in California." In fact, of "moving accidents," Armless John was a long way ahead of Othello.

His memory being somewhat treacherous, he sometimes had to listen to this kind of a remark:

"Why! you told me last month that you lost your arms in Peru—now you say it was in Australia; you must either be lying, or had a lot of arms to start with."

To all such personal and unkind observations, the stammering beggar would reply somewhat like this:

"Wa-wa-wa-s'n't I in-sen-si-ble at the ti-ti-ti—at the time? How'd I've a-s-s-ose—" (He had a habit of breaking off like that.) "But I lost 'em, you b-b-bet."

A man of perhaps fifty years of age, shabbily dressed, stopped one morning in front of Armless John.

"Nice morning," said the stranger.

"Fi-fine, sir," agreed John.

"Yours is a bad case, my friend," rejoined the other.

"T-terrible, sir."

"How did you lose your arms?"

"Gun p-p-powder explosion at Mel-mel-bourne."

"Australia?"

The beggar shook his head.

"That's my native place," added the stranger.

"I don't mean there. Mel-mel-bourne in Kentucky is the p-p-place, all right."

"You're a liar, Phillips. Do you know Sing Sing?" asked the man.

"Never there," answered John, now looking for the first time in the other man's face.

"Yes, you were, my friend. You and I spent about five years there. What an old fraud you are! How do you manage to dispose of your arms like that?"

John was speechless, as well as stammerless, though still apparently armless.

"I hope ye won't squeal on me, Tom?" he remarked.

"That all depends. Have you got a large family, as the sign says?" inquired Tom.

"There's six of us altogether, including the dogs."

"Well, you'll have to pay me so much a week, and I won't say a word," replied the other.

"There ain't enough comin' in to do that," said John dolefully.

"Something must be done," remarked Tom. "I haven't got work, and I can't get any."

"Suppose you come up to the house tonight, and we'll talk things over. Go away now, Tom, do! see you to-night."

The stranger moved away slowly, remarking to an old lady about to drop a coin in the little tin mug: "That's a bad case, mum; the poor fellow lost his arms falling off the roof of a church."

"Did he, indeed?" sympathetically said the lady. "I always give him a trifle when I pass, but I thought he lost his arms in battle."

The ex-convicts were holding a midnight session.

"I've thought out a scheme, Tom, which will pay us both, and we'll be independent of each other. Suppose you go and stand at the library, and be a blind man. There isn't such a fellow in the place. Every day one of the children can bring your dinner down to you, and also lead you home at night. I'm sure you'll make more than I do."

"Don't suit me," answered Tom. "I ain't a-going to keep my eyes shut all day. I think I'd better be a one-armed sailor, suffering from a shark-bite."

"That'll never do," said John. "I'm in the shark business at times, you know. The blind dodge is the only one any good, so far as I can see. I believe there's a fortune in being a 'Poor Blind Man.'"

"I can't see it," answered the doubting Thomas.

"You're not supposed to see anything," replied John, with a laugh, which the other did not relish.

In a few days there appeared a totally sightless man in town, carrying a small, simple sign—

PITY THE BLIND

His first day was very wearisome, but Tom got through it all right, and had a good many coins as a result. He did well, and very soon the receipts of Armless John fell off.

"Tom's simply ruining my business," said John to his wife one evening. "All day long old women come to me, and speak of the 'poor blind man' who lost his sight through reading a Bible with too close print. I wish something'd happen to him."

Strange as it may seem, but within a week, while the little girl was handing something to eat to the blind man, Towser, the dog, caught Tom by the leg and caused that victim of close biblical study not only to shout and use sundry passages not found in any volume, but also led him to open his eyes, in the presence of a wondering and sarcastic crowd, including an officer of the law, who at once took charge of the sham Bartimeus, and introduced him next day to the magistrate.

"Charge of vagrancy, your honor. Been pretendin' to be blind, your honor, but I've been suspecting him for days. Yesterday a dog bit him, and he opened his eyes, and when he saw me he started to run away, your honor?"

"Whose dog was it?" asked the judge, detecting the possibility of another case.

"Belonged to a little girl, your honor; daughter of that no-armed man," replied the officer.

The judge lectured Tom and imposed a sentence of three months in jail, and warned him that should the dog die, the owner, "that poor cripple," would have remedy against him at civil law.

"That poor cripple," as you call him," said Tom, "has got arms."

"This is strange," said the judge. "Constable, inquire into this, and if you find the prisoner's story true, bring that other fraud before me tomorrow."

Constable Flynn "inquired" into the matter, and found that Armless John, Mrs. Armless John, and family had left town the previous evening, shortly after the arrest of Thomas.

Now, gentle reader:

This tale offers the following for the consideration of a gullible and patient people:

1. Fakers are takers—but take 'em easy.
2. Beware of the Dog—and the POOR BLIND MAN.
3. Be sure your FRIENDS will find you out.
4. The "far-seeing" public is—oh, so blind.
5. Help others out—of town.

HELPED BURGLAR TO ESCAPE

Four-Year-Old Miss Is Regretting That She Was So Polite to Her Visitor.

Burglars always have been the peevish aversion of Margaret Bearsey of Omaha, eight years of age. She admits she is just scared to death of a burglar.

When it was too hot to play Margaret slipped into her nightgown and crept up on the lounge in the guest room to rest.

Looking up from the wallpaper sample book with which she was amusing herself Margaret beheld a strange man standing by the dresser. He wore a workman's black cap and carried some electric-light cords.

"Oh," he said pleasantly, "I'm the electric-light man. I've come to inspect the lights and I got sort of mixed up in the rooms."

"I'll show you the way," volunteered Margaret, and she jumped up, slipped on a tiny kimono and escorted the electric-light man all through the upstairs. Now the police are looking for the man with a black cap and two electric light cords and Margaret's family call her "the burglar's pal."

Stirred Up a Pudding.

One Sunday some friends of ours were spending the day with us. While I was preparing dinner the woman came into the kitchen and asked me if there was anything she could do to help me. I told her she could stir up a chocolate pudding. She fixed it and when it came time for our dessert my husband, who is always saying things he hadn't ought to, remarked: "Edith, this is the poorest pudding I ever knew you to make."—Exchange

John Mihok and His Lucky Stone

John Mihok

JOHN MIHOK is not a character in a short story in a fiction magazine. He is a real, flesh-and-blood man. He lives at 1943 South Twentieth street, Omaha, Neb. He is a furniture polisher and has worked at his trade for six years in Omaha. He has a wife and five children. He can walk into a national bank in Omaha and be identified. And what's more, people in his neighborhood point him out on the street and say: "There he is. That's John Mihok himself."

John Mihok was born in the village of Nagy Koros in eastern Hungary. In the Mihok home on the shelf over the fireplace one of the ornaments was a small rough stone. His father had picked it up one day beside a stream and had brought it home. It was a curious sort of stone. Here and there through the rough covering pretty red colors showed. Altogether it was an oddity and rather pretty. So the family kept it over the fireplace for years, while young John Mihok was growing up.

The boy wanted to come to America to seek his fortune and the whole family saved for years to hoard up the money to pay his passage. At last the time came for him to start. When he said goodby his father took the "pretty stone" from the shelf and put it in John's hand.

"Here's a keepsake for you, John; something to remember the old home by. Maybe it will bring you luck in the new country across the water."

John thanked his father and said, "Sure enough; maybe it will be my lucky stone." And he put it in his pocket.

The voyage by steerage from Trieste to New York was long and tiresome. John got tired carrying the stone in his pocket and chucked it into his big canvas bag, with the rest of his things.

One day he was rummaging through his bag and came across the stone. He showed it to some of his fellow-emigrants. While they were looking at the stone and he was telling them its story, a party of first cabin passengers came along on a slumming-trip through the steerage. One of the sightseers offered him $5 for it. John was tempted, but finally decided to keep it, because his father had given it to him.

At Ellis Island the customs inspectors went through his scanty belongings. The lucky stone was right there in plain sight with the rest of his things. But the inspectors never gave the stone a second glance.

This was in 1903. John worked in various places. His first job was in Scranton, Pa., where he married. Then he worked in Cleveland, Ohio. Six years ago he came to Omaha, and now he is a citizen of the United States.

In the meantime the Mihok family in the United States was growing. It grew faster than John's earnings did. It grew almost as fast as the H. C. L. It wasn't always easy for John and his wife to make both ends meet.

One night John was reading a newspaper and came upon a story of a man picking up a ruby beside a stream. Naturally the story interested him. And naturally it set this poor man with a wife and five children to thinking about his own lucky stone. Finally he had what a native son would call a hunch. The hunch said:

"Maybe your lucky stone is a ruby too. Take it to a jeweler and find out what it is, anyway!"

And John took the hunch. He hunted up his lucky stone and went to the jewelry shop of Joseph F. Frenzer in South Fifteenth street. He handed over the stone to Mr. Frenzer and said:

"Here's a 'lucky stone' I've had for years. Can you tell me what it is and if it's worth anything?"

Mr. Frenzer smiled and took the stone. But it wasn't one of those smiles that won't come off. It vanished in short order. For the jeweler, after a few simple tests, could give a shrewd guess at what John's lucky stone really was. He said to John:

"It's a ruby. And it's a big one. I guess it's a good one. But you'll have to have it cut to find out what it's worth. What you want to do is to take it to Chicago to a lapidary and have it cut."

John thanked the jeweler and walked out of the shop in a daze. And the more he thought about things the more dazed he got. "Take it to Chicago and have it cut!" The jeweler might as well have told him to take it to the man in the moon.

But John had not been here sixteen years without assimilating a fair amount of Yankee shrewdness, and after much hard thinking he went to Rev. Father William F. Rigge of Creighton university. Father Rigge is something of a scientist himself and quickly saw that the stone was in all probability a ruby of great value. He also realized that John was in a good deal of the plight of a hungry hobo with nothing but a thousand-dollar bill.

So Father Rigge called in Edmund McCarthy, a lawyer. They told him the whole case up to date. John offered McCarthy one-fourth of what the stone might bring if he would take charge of the whole affair and manage the cutting, polishing and marketing. Mr. McCarthy accepted the offer. Lawyer and client were soon on their way to Chicago.

"We did not sleep a wink that night on the train, I can tell you," said Mr. McCarthy. "We both kept guard. I won't tell you where we had the ruby, but it was in a mighty safe place."

"Arriving in Chicago we asked for the name of a precious stone expert and in due time came to the establishment of Gustaf Gillman, lapidary, 1134 Webster avenue.

"Our hearts were in our mouths when we handed the stone to him. What if the Omaha jeweler and scientist had made a mistake? What if the 'lucky stone' was nothing but a 'pretty stone'?"

"The expression on Mr. Gillman's face was not encouraging. He smiled a little as Mr. Mihok undid the package in which he had the stone. Mr. Gillman took the stone in his hand and immediately the cynical smile disappeared. His eyes seemed to bulge and his mouth opened.

"He gave an exclamation, then rushed with the stone to his work-room and put it through various tests, talking all the while in most excited fashion.

"And then he told us that we had a wonderful ruby. He could not tell how pure it was before cutting it, but he said it was probably one of the finest gems in the world of its kind."

Mr. McCarthy and Mr. Mihok took turns remaining with Mr. Gillman during the process of cutting and polishing and when the work was completed the lapidary turned it over to them saying:

"There's your 'great Mihok'—and it's all I told you it would be—and more!"

The two men took the "Great Mihok" back to Omaha with them. Then sat up all night again and hardly dared mention the precious thing even in whispers.

In Omaha they went directly to the safety deposit vaults of the United States National bank; rented a box and saw that the lucky stone that had been kicked around for sixteen years was securely locked up, with the key in their possession.

Then John Mihok went home and told the good news to his wife.

"She wouldn't believe me at first when I told her we would not have to work any more and that we could move in a nicer house where we would have electric lights," he said, "but now she believes me and we will have comfort in life."

"We will buy a new home. I know a nice one, just what we want, for $4,000. And we are going to buy a little automobile. The rest of the money we will put in Liberty bonds, I think. There it is safe."

"We are no fools. We don't spend it all and we don't try to get rich quick. We put it away for our old age and for our children's education. The oldest boy, who left school last year, will go back again and maybe we make a doctor of him. All the children get now a good education. My dead father was the giver of all my good luck. We are thankful, indeed, and very happy."

And how much is the "Great Mihok" worth?

Well, here is what Mr. Gillman says of John Mihok's "lucky stone":

"The 'Great Mihok' is a genuine pigeon blood ruby; its color is a deep carmine red; it is flawless; its specific gravity is 4.05; its weight is 23.9 carats; it is the largest ruby I ever saw or ever heard of; I believe there is one in India that weighs about 17 carats; large rubies are scarce and valuable; one of ten carats is about ten times as valuable as a diamond of the same weight; Altogether, I should say the 'Great Mihok' is worth about $200,000."

Collar Ironing Machine.

Laundrymen have long used a curved plate with a self-heating, grooved iron for smoothing the folded edge of linen collars so that they will not irritate the neck. An improved machine has now appeared, however, in which clever mechanical design takes the place of the human skill formerly required. As the operator rotates the iron a ball-bearing roller on a camlike track carries it gently onto the collar, and, after the edge has been ironed, off the collar and out of the way.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

WE Mean Business

WHEN you walk into a grocery store and find the clerks all busy every minute of the day preparing goods for delivery, you naturally wonder what can be the cause of so much business.

There is a reason—You will find that the clerks in that store are courteous and efficient, the service excellent, and the quality of goods the highest. Or you will find the price the best to be secured and a high quality of merchandise.

A combination of these good qualities has made our business grow far beyond our expectations. We have two phones for the convenience of our trade.

SCHOOL NOTES

(By Supt. E. E. Cole)

Last Saturday about thirty students of the high school, in spite of cold and cloudy weather early in the day, went out to the lava beds west of town. Hollands cave was their destination. They report a very delightful time.

Some very good work is being done in the English department of our high school. The superintendent recently heard the students of one of the classes in English, one at a time, facing the class, speak from two and a half to five minutes on some one subject. This work shows preparation on the part of the student and is good practice in speaking before others. Miss Lutton has the credit of doing this work.

The health department of New Mexico has called for another report from the schools of the state in the matter of vaccination. It calls for a report as to every pupil; whether he has been vaccinated or not. The Carrizozo schools submitted a typewritten report last Wednesday.

The County Teachers' Convention, of Lincoln County, will be held March 26 and 27. E. E. Cole is president of the county association. The program committee consists of Mrs. Maud Blaney, of Carrizozo, Mrs. A. Baumeister, of Corona, Miss Mildred Peters, of Capitan. Several of the leading educators of the state are expected to be present. Other announcements will be made as the program develops.

A meeting of the teachers' Reading Circle Class was held Monday afternoon. Mrs. Gumm very creditably discussed the subject "Language in the Several Grades." Mrs. Gumm urged teachers to give special attention to the use of proper oral language in lower grades. Miss Hughes discussed "Reading and Literature in Fifth, Sixth, Seventh and eighth Grades." The selection of choice readings and the memorizing of poems should be adopted to the age and mental ability of the child. Miss Neff discussed "Spelling in All the Grades," placing emphasis on the written spelling. Those present were Mrs. Blaney, Mrs. Gumm, Mrs. Massie, Misses Hughes, Neff, Jarrett, Sullivant and Supt. Cole.

Everyone should have some intelligent idea concerning the educational opportunities that the public schools of the community have to offer. "Know thyself," is an oldtime dictum. "Know thy school," is the new demand of the age when the school is trying hard to meet the test of social efficiency.

The following daily inquiry is important if we should connect up the home and the school:

Could you tell a stranger what your schools are doing?

Could you mention the studies your children are pursuing?

Do you know the teachers of your child, or must some one point them out to you?

Do you know whether your child is doing excellent, mediocre, or poor work in school?

The schools must be brought close to the people; not merely as structures of stone or wood, with desks and books and teachers; not merely as places where children are kept out of mischief six hours a day, but as institutions having a vital relationship to the affairs of daily life in the community.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

The Ford car can well be called the "people's car," because there are more than 3,000,000 of them in daily operation. That is about four to one of the nearest follower in the motor car industry. This would not be so if the Ford car had not for sixteen years proven its superiority in service, in durability, and in the low cost for operation and maintenance; this would not be so if the Ford car was not so easy to understand, so simple in construction that anybody and everybody can safely drive it. ALLIES DEMAND SURPRISES HUNS

TAGEBLATT SAYS "TERMS OF
TREATY ARE IMPOSSIBLE TO EXECUTE."

LEISNER LEAVES PARIS

GERMAN MISSION HEAD RATHER RESIGN THAN TRANSMIT DEMANDS.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Berlin, Feb. 5.—The Tageblatt says the list of persons demanded by the allies from Germany surpasses anything which even the greatest pessimists had considered possible. "One now realizes," it adds, "what tremendous stupidity it was to offer to sign a peace treaty the terms of which were impossible to execute."

London.—The understanding in diplomatic circles here is that the official list of German war criminals will not be published before the despatch of their names to the German government. The question as to whether they should be published immediately is said to have raised a considerable debate at Paris, since one of the allies desired that this course be followed. The decision was finally reached that it would not be polite to publish the list before the German government was notified, and furthermore that it would be unwise to given the accused individuals notice that their names were included, thereby allowing them a chance to flee to Holland or otherwise take refuge.

Berlin.—Baron Kurt von Lersner, head of the German mission in Paris, has been relieved of that office. He left immediately for Berlin.

Baron von Lersner, it is stated, had received explicit orders to transmit the expected allied note on extradition demands to his government.

(Paris advices quote Von Lersner as declaring he had resigned rather than transmit the list of Germans demanded by the allies.)

Berlin.—Following is a partial list of the persons demanded for extradition from the German government:

Karl Aegidi, Duke Albrecht of Wuertemberg, Submarine Commander Arnold de la Perre, General Count Sixt von Armin, General Otto von Below, Count Johann von Bernstorff, former ambassador to the United States; Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, former Imperial chancellor; General von Beseler, Count Bismarck, General von Boehm, General von Bothner, Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, the Duke of Mecklenburg, General von Bredow, Bronsart von Schellendorf, General Otto von Buelow, Admiral von Spelle, General Groener, General von Dalming, General Pasha, Prince Ernst of Saxony, General Falkenhayn, General Frick, General von Gallwitz, Alfred von Gienapp, Otto von Gottberg, General von Gravenitz, General Count Haeseler, — Hammerstein, Dr. Handt von Halmhausen, the grand duke of Hesse; Field Marshal von Hindenburg, whose extradition is demanded by France and Belgium; Prince August of Hohenzollern, Prince Eitel Friedrich of Hohenzollern, the Crown Prince of Germany, Prince Oscar of Hohenzollern.

The list is said to contain the names of 500 German officers and others.

With Pass Railroad Bill.

Washington.—Casting aside the anti-strike provision of the Cummins bill, against which labor has leveled protests and threats, and modifying the rate-making clauses of the same measure, senators and House representatives reached virtually a complete agreement on legislation designed to meet conditions growing out of the return of the railroads on March 1 to private control.

Match King Dead of Flu.

Akron, Ohio.—Ohio Columbus Barber, millionaire match king and head of the Diamond Match Company, is dead at his mansion on Anna Dean farm near Barbertown, of influenza and complications. Mr. Barber was in his seventy-ninth year and until a week ago possessed robust physique.

Few U. S. Troops in Siberia.

Washington.—Half of the 8,000 American soldiers in Siberia have been withdrawn. The War Department announced that on Jan. 27 there remained 371 officers, 4,910 enlisted men and 500 civilian welfare workers.

IF BACK HURTS USE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if Kidneys feel like lead or Bladder bothers.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulates them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so that no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1/4 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

DO YOU KNOW?

THAT within two hours drive from Carrizozo, N. M., at an altitude of 8,000 feet, is to be found one of Nature's Great Beauty Spots, located on a little mountain stream of pure, ice cold water, where the speckled trout abound, where one is awakened from his slumbers by the echo of the call of the cunning old gobbler in the distance?

Where one may sit in the shade of the giant spruce, and watch the playful squirrel as he runs, and leaps from limb to limb?

DO YOU KNOW?

That the Southwestern Fish, Game and Forest Protective Association, has acquired a lease from the U. S. National Forest on this Nature Beauty Spot, and has spent over $3,000.00 and is going to spend more time and money in the development of a place of rest and a playground for its members?

And that they are going to give you, and every lover of fresh air and sunshine, a chance to become one of its members?

At a recent meeting of the board of Directors, it was agreed to accept applications for membership, for a short time only, at the old rate of $20.00 which will (if accepted during this short period,) include dues till June 1st, 1921.

DO YOU KNOW?

That hardly less essential than sleep is sunshine and the open air?

There are some men and women who do not manage in six months to be out in the open sunshine for as much as an hour.

These same individuals have been taught that the energy conveyed to man and to all animals and plant life by the sun is what makes for vitality, health and vigor; yet they ignore this fact, living out merely as they and their fathers have been accustomed to do, indoors, in shadows and half-lights.

Sunshine helps to remove and burn up bacteria, corruption, decay and disease, and to restore lost force, energy and power to animal and plant tissue. Therefore, to remain young in spirit as well as smooth of brow, face you forth as much as you can in the sunshine of the fresh out doors.

Don't miss this wonderful opportunity. Write or see our secretary, Mr. S. L. Squires at once.

Smith Brothers

Will Entertain

What will prove to be one of the most entertaining dances given in this section of the country for years is soon to be staged at the Smith Brothers' ranch which these genial stockmen lately bought of A. W. Adams. The ranch house is large, roomy and accommodating; the furniture installed is of the very best; and now after being thoroughly located, the Smith Brothers intend to give the old-time stockmen and their friends the time of their lives.

There will be no dress suits worn by the attending guests. Those who insist on coming attired in this manner will be given a ducking in the big watering tank. The regulation stockmen's attire is not only good enough, but is the only manner in which guests will be admitted to the festivities. Everybody must come on horseback. None of this new-fangled business will be tolerated, and guests receiving invitations from Floor Manager Joe Stratton will be so advised. It was the original intention of the promoters of this event, to have the affair "pulled off" on Ground Hog day, but the sun that day drove the ground hog back and as that was a strong indication of bad weather, the date was changed. Jerry Dalton has been rehearsing with his string orchestra and when the floor manager blows his horn for the "start," the music will be ready.

The guests will "all hands around and circle to the left" to the "Arkansas Traveler," "They Kicked Me out of Cheyenne," "The Golden West," "Sandhills of New Mexico" and all the familiar tunes of the old times. Ed Harris has been induced to superintend the refreshment table. There will be no "sissy" dishes in sight. Only the good old fashioned fare that you can ride a hundred miles on, will be served. There will be plenty to drink—not the kind you are expecting us to say here, but as everyone connected with this undertaking has registered an oath over the word "Camel" that nothing stronger than milk and water shall be served, the word goes. Manager Dingwall of the "Crystal" will be requested to run the reels of Bill Hart in "His Hinges" on that night just before the dance begins. Look out for the invitations and get ready to "ride."

A KANSAS WOMAN Run-down—Nervous, Weak

Kansas City, Kans.—"I found Dr. Pierce's medicines a wonderful help to me during middle life. At that time I became all run-down, nervous and was weak. I would have smothering and dizzy spells so bad that I could not stand up and my back would ache terribly all the time. I took both Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and these medicines built me up, gave me strength, and brought me through the change in the best of health. I am glad to recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines, for I know they are good."—MRS. GEORGE JACOBS, R. Route 3.

MOTHERS

Bushong, Kans.—"I am the mother of four children and from my experience with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I fully appreciate its value and can highly recommend it to prospective mothers as it helps to alleviate one's suffering. During my first expectancy I suffered untold pains, so the second time I was determined that I would avail myself of some means to lessen the agony, and I can say without any hesitation that the 'Favorite Prescription' carried me through that trying time with all the desired ease and comfort. Later on, however, I made a grievous mistake in believing that I could dispense with the 'Favorite Prescription' during motherhood and I did so to my sorrow. It will always be my stand-by hereafter.

"I hope that through this statement some other woman may be relieved of the dread of motherhood."—MRS. V. W. HOWLEY, Route 1.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a non-alcoholic remedy that any ailing woman can safely take because it is prepared from roots and herbs containing tonic properties of the most pronounced character.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

LITTLE RODENTS DO MUCH INJURY

Mountain Beaver or Swellel and Cotton Rat Gain Prominence
as Crop Destroyers.

CONTROL MEASURES DEvised

Small Fruits and Market Produce
Damaged in Humid Regions of Northwest Coast—Sugar Cane
Industry Is Menaced.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Two animals not much spoken of previously have gained prominence as destructive rodents during the past year, reports the chief of the biological survey. One is the mountain beaver or swellel, a curious rodent living in the humid regions of the northwest coast. It was formerly considered harmless, but with the development of agriculture in its region it has become increasingly injurious to crops, particularly small fruits and market produce.

Control Measures Devised.
Control measures have been devised, and representatives of the department have given demonstrations in Oregon and Washington, where active measures were needed.

The other animal that has come into prominence as a destroyer is the cotton rat, a small rat-like rodent limited to the South Atlantic and Gulf states. Its depredations are principally in connection with sugar cane in Florida, where experimental plantings within the past two years gave promise of very profitable development.

Serious Damage by Rats.

So serious has been the damage by cotton rats, however, that the principal company interested in the development of the sugar cane industry in Florida has written the department that the success of the industry will be impossible unless some method can be found for successfully controlling the cotton rats. Losses of from 40 to 50 per cent of the growing cane have been reported. The bureau of biological survey, however, announces the determination of successful poisoning methods, and it is believed that, through demonstrations and advice, the growers will be able to control the rats and reduce the losses to a negligible amount.

Depends on Root Growth.
In order to stand straight and firm a newly set tree depends largely upon speedy new root growth to anchor it in the soil.

Winter Coop for Hens.
Don't forget that the hens spend more hours indoors during winter than during summer. Hence, it is just as essential that quarters be kept clean and well ventilated, and above all, dry.

Treat Seed Potatoes.
The treatment of seed potatoes with formaldehyde or with corrosive sublimate has been recommended for many years as a preventive of scab and other diseases carried on the tubers.

Diseases of Potato.
Soil conditions have an important relation to potato diseases, and many of these are widely spread throughout the country, perhaps native to some soils.

Tools and Implements.
In these times of high prices for all kinds of supplies, we should exercise special care in housing, protecting and repairing implements and tools.

Roosters Are Nuisance.
For commercial eggs, roosters are a dead expense and a nuisance. Inferior eggs keep much longer and better.

Decay in the transportation of potatoes, cantaloupes, lettuce, tomatoes, spinach, strawberries, and onions is primarily due to faulty methods of handling and refrigerating, according to the bureau of markets. Marked reductions in losses have resulted from more careful methods of digging and grading potatoes, suitable temperature in refrigerator cars and storage houses, and by improvements in the handling of lettuce, such as the more complete removal of the lower leaves of each head in harvesting, and shipment in ventilated crates instead of closed hampers. It was found that the decay of strawberries in transit results largely from avoidable injuries inflicted in picking and washing and from inefficient refrigeration. Vegetables from the South, shipped in properly constructed cars, cooled one degree an hour faster than those forwarded in cars of the ordinary type, and deteriorated less than one-third as much, the bureau reports.

MAKING FARM IMPROVEMENTS

Iowa Farmers Are Putting Profits
Into Houses for Hogs and Poultry and Water Systems.

"The farmers of Iowa are putting their profits into farm improvements," says John S. Glass of the agricultural engineering department of Iowa State college after visiting thousands of farms in all parts of Iowa this year.

"An average of 30 new hoghouses to every county, or nearly 3,000 in the entire state were erected last year. New poultry houses rank next in popularity with the builders. There is an average of about 15 modern poultry houses that have been constructed or are under construction in every county.

"Three out of every four farms I visited asked for plans for water systems. Every one interested in a new water system also wished to construct a sewage disposal plant. Many farmers are installing light plants on their farms or connecting farmers' lines. In Des Moines county every main road has a farmers' electric line, and the farmers are making use of them."

GOOD FERTILITY IS WASTED

Burning Straw Stacks, Stubble or Stalks Is Bad Practice—Few Insects Destroyed.

Burning straw stacks, stubble, or corn stalks, will destroy only a few insects at best and will destroy much valuable fertility. Now that it is possible to spread straw on fields economically with a straw spreader there is really less excuse than ever for burning straw stacks.

BLISTER BEETLE IN WINTER

Time During Cold Weather Spent as Whitish Grub Inside Egg of Grasshopper.

The old-fashioned potato beetle or blister beetle spends the winter as a whitish grub inside the egg pods of the grasshopper and it will be seen at once that any action that tends to destroy grasshopper eggs will at the same time destroy numbers of the blister beetles.

PEOPLE YOU KNOW OR SHOULD KNOW

Carl Arnold, employed on the Spence & Sons ranch north of town, suffered a painful accident Sunday. A horse he was riding stepped into a prairie dog hole and lurching violently to one side, threw Mr. Arnold to the ground. The horse becoming frightened, made frantic efforts to regain his feet and accidentally struck Mr. Arnold in the face with one of his hoofs, badly lacerating it. He was 25 miles from the ranch house at the time of the accident and traveled that distance Sunday night, suffering intensely. He was brought to town Monday and given medical attention. His face, although badly cut and bruised, will soon heal leaving no scars, the doctors say.

F. E. Richard received a telegram Monday afternoon which conveyed to the family the sad news of the death of his sister, Mrs. C. A. McMullen, who passed away at Wellington, Kansas, Sunday night. Mrs. McMullen left Tucumcari a short time ago in company with Mrs. Richard and journeyed to Kansas where she hoped a lower altitude would benefit her health, but not long after arriving at Wellington her condition became serious and all efforts to restore her to health proved futile. Mrs. Richard left Tuesday on No. 2 to attend the funeral which will be held in Wellington.

Miss Brainshaf, of Santa Fe, who represents the American Red Cross Anti-Tuberculosis Association, spent Wednesday and Thursday here conferring with the local committee. During the time of her stay arrangements were made whereby the local chapter will employ a county school nurse, whose duty will be to interest herself in the health of the pupils, reporting the conditions to the county and city physicians. Aside from this she will assist the doctors in their duties, in such manner as they may hereafter agree upon.
