Carabajal Convicted Of Manslaughter

Almogordo, N. M.—In the district court of Otero county last week the case of the State vs. Marcelino Carabajal occupied the time of the court all week. Carabajal was charged with the murder of his wife in Lincoln county, and the case was tried in Otero county on charge of venue.

Carabajal was charged with the murder of his wife. The opening statement of counsel and the trend of the evidence indicated that the defense was to be that he did not intend to kill his wife but a man with whom he alleges he found her in a compromising position with. The jury returned a verdict of involuntary manslaughter Monday.

[Ed. Note.—News has just been received from Alamogordo that the jury returned a verdict of not guilty in the Gallegos case.]

The war on the prairie dog will start with renewed vigor on the 7th in this county, according to Agent C. H. Stanford of the Biological service. Work on the destruction of the prairie dog was suspended several weeks ago, on account of the rains washing the poison off the bait. Mr. Stanford said that stockmen lost interest in the "war" when grass became plentiful, as they reasoned that the dogs would not take poisoned bait with plenty of grass to feed on. It has been demonstrated that the dogs, like a variety of feed and continue to eat the poisoned grain freely, and the stockmen are again supporting the campaign. The state supplies the poisoned grain, and the stockmen pay for placing it in their pastures. Mr. Stanford will spend the Fourth at his home in Roswell, and will start work in the vicinity of Corona on the destruction of the dogs next Monday.

Stuart Sterling, county agricultural agent, has given much of his time to this work, assisting Mr. Stanford in the destruction of the pest. Mr. Sterling feels that the campaign has been very successful and the improvement of the range is worth thousands to the stockmen.

The Carrizosa fans had an opportunity to see a real ball game.

Doan and Norman for Carrizosa was a surprise for the Cavalier, however, who were looking for easy ones, but didn't get them. The locals did not expect to win from such a fast team, but they nevertheless put up a fine article of ball playing and made the boys of the Fifth hustle in order to win. The game was a professional one, and was well attended, and proved that Carrizosa has the material that ball players are made of, and with regular practice and a few games with cracker-jacks like the Fifth, should develop a team before the season is over that will take professionals to atop.

On this Fourth of July, 1919, the American people have more cause to celebrate their country's natal day than they had since 1776, when that famous document, "The Declaration of Independence," was drafted and signed. The magnificent growth this country has experienced, the liberal government that they great document foreshadowed and the advancement of every good cause for which we have stood as a nation has fully justified the wisdom of our forefathers and the sturdy patriots who, on July 4, 1776, made possible the creation and perpetuation of the greatest, most liberal and strongest government that man have instituted.

And now, as we this year come to this greatest anniversary in our history, our hearts are filled with pride in that we have just passed a great crisis, played a most important part in shaping the world's event, and have so left the imprint of our rights and duties on the nations of the world that they, too, will recognize the virtues embodied in the 'Declaration,' and that in its recognition will become better citizens of their respective countries and thus produce better governments and form closer relations with us and more fully appreciate American institutions and the ideals for which they stand.

Out of the 'Declaration of Independence' grew the greatest country on which the sun ever shone; and the principles of those principles in the great war that were promulgated in that document have shown the world that we do believe in freedom—not only for ourselves, but for all people kind. In a greater sense, then, July 4, 1919, is a much more important occasion than it has ever been.

Sgt. William W. Gracioso reached home Tuesday, having been accompanied from Fox Bliss, where he was discharged by his mother. The sergeant looks the typical soldier in every respect, and it was his kind from this country that started the Germans on the great trek to Berlin, and nobody knows it better than the German himself.

The sergeant left here in September, 1917, with the best deal in Lincoln county's quota; went to Camp Funston, where he was trained, and where later he was made sergeant of the military police. In June, 1918, his company embarked for France, and

The Fourth of July will be celebrated from coast to coast this year as it hasn't been for several years.

A letter from Santa Rosa this week states that the oil excitement has struck that town. Every acre of land in the vicinity of the county seat of Guadalupe, has been leased to oil promoters, and the land for many miles surrounding the town has been filed upon as oil land. About a dozen years ago a similar excitement struck that town on the Pecos River, but water instead of oil was struck, and as a good water was worth considerable in that arid region, the drills were drawn, and the oil excitement died a natural death.

The Motive test well in Quay county was down 600 feet Tuesday. The drill is working through shale, and no water has been encountered. On the success of the test in it will depend for the county.

The Olean-New Mexico Oil company, of Olean, N. Y., has been organized with a capital of $750,000 and will start drilling in July on the tract of 5000 acres in Tularosa Basin.

THE Tulatosa Oil company, which is incorporated by El Paso and Tulatosa people, has succeeded in selling enough shares of stock to commence the drilling of their first well, which will be started as soon as all preliminary measures can be arranged.

The Valarog Tularosa Basin Oil company was officially organized June 28th at their executive offices in Tularosa, and Chino. A. Coffey, of Tularosa, was elected president; J. L. Lawson, of Mangroeda, vice-president. The wellbore on the ground and drilling will actually be started in about two weeks.

The latest company to organize in the Talavera basin is the South-western Talavera Basin Oil and Refining company, a company organized by El Paso and Alamogordo men. The company is organized for a capital stock of $10,000,000.

The O'Rourke Oil and Gas company is now in course of organization, and have filed certificates of incorporation. This is a company formed by employees of the El Paso & Southwestern railroad. Certificate of incorporation was filed by J. F. O'Rourke, El Paso, Texas, J. W. Palmer and Harry H. McElroy, of Alamo, Texas. The organization meeting for election of officers will likely be held in the next few days, when plans for actual development in the near future will be considered. The company is organized for $250,000. They have received favorable reports on their holdings.

Rosen Ady, publicly commissioner of the Fort Worth chamber of commerce, claims there are 165 wells now drilling in 93 counties in north central and west Texas. Among the counties leading in drilling operations are: Wichita with 763 wells; Eastland, 329; Stephens, 300; Comanche, 73; Wilbarger, 47; Coleman, 46; Clay, 37; Keith, 29; Archer, 21; and Brown 20.

The estimated average cost per well is $30,000, which means the about $5,000,000 is being spent on the 161 countries on all wells.

Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Groom are in Alamogordo this week.

About 20 automobiles from Roswell arrived Wednesday afternoon in Carrizozo, to meet and escort home returning members of Battery A, 166th Field Artillery, the famous National Guard battery of Roswell, after nearly two years in the federal service, of which more than a year was spent overseas. One hundred and forty-three men of that battery were discharged at Fort Bliss Wednesday, 57 of whom arrived in Carrizozo Thursday morning at about 1:30, and were met by friends and relatives, who, after a hasty lunch proceeded via auto to Roswell, so the people of this town did not have a chance to welcome them back. A number of them wear silver stars, indicating unusual service in the Rainbow Division.

The organization participated in practically all major operations of the world war after America's entry into the struggle. Among the operations in which New Mexico artillerymen were engaged were Chateau-Thierry, Soissons, St. Mihiel, the Champagne offensive and the Argonne-Meuse offensive.

Following the signing of the armistice the battery went into Germany as a part of the American army of occupation.

The organization was operating as army field artillery for the First American field army and on this account was not returned to the United States with other units of the Rainbow division.

The battery was formerly the famous national guard battery of Boswell, having been organized years ago by Capt. Charles M. Indremond, a naturalized citizen of Swiss nativity, who came to New Mexico in search of health. The battery saw service on the Mexican border before being called out for service in France.

The Nabours home on Three Rivers was the scene of a pleasant family reunion week. Lieut. J. O. Nabours came home on a furlough and other members of the family, located in different parts of the country, returned to the family home, and the week was given over to a pleasurable reunion of the family. The most interesting feature of the reunion of course, was the return of the military member of the family who has been absent two years during which time he graduated in the aero corps and is now a regularly commissioned flyer in Uncle Sam's air service.

HAMILTON-HALEY
Wayne Hamilton and Miss Lorena Haley were married at Alamogordo Thursday evening June 26. The groom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Hamilton, and the bride is the daughter of Jas. A. Haley. The young couple returned to Carlsbad Saturday afternoon, and were given a "warm" reception by friends that evening.

MARRIED—On Saturday at the Methodist Parsonage, by the Rev. R. H. Jewelling, Carl H. Anderson of White Oaks and Miss Maggie Burch of Capitan. The groom is a popular young man of White Oaks and the bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Burch, who live some distance east of Capitan.

But be sure to get the original imported GOLD MEDAL and accept no substitutes. In three sizes. Sealed packages. At all drug stores.

BLIND MAN POULTRY FANCIER

Missouri Has Made Success of the Work, Despite Handicap Which Would Seem Insurmountable.

Blind Edward Jones of Jefferson City, Mo., has made a record in keeping poultry which many who have eyes have not equaled. Moving among his birds, which seem to understand how he is handicapped, and guided only by his sense of touch, he performs his daily work. He has built his own poultry house and brood coops, and has hatched and raised all his chicks. Blindness does not prevent him from culling his flock. The birds are not intended to be kept as broilers, and the others are kept for the production of winter eggs.

Mr. Jones attended every poultry meeting held in his section last fall. He is now trying to organize a poultry club for blind people, and the home demonstration agent in the county has volunteered to read to the members the publications on poultry sent from the United States department of agriculture.

The Pleasures of Travel.

"W-a-n-t-to—no," said the ancient Arkansawyer, "I hain't never did much of what you'd call traveling. I was 97 years old last grass; born and raised right here in Shagbark township, and hain't been outside of the county but once. That was when I was about 30 years old. I went over to Torpidville, and they just natcherly took and started to lynch me the minute I got to town, for something or nuther. I never did find out what. One foot was already in the air and the other barely touching the ground when some feller came running and hollered that they were making a mistake—I wasn't the guilty party a-tall. As soon as they turned me loose I lit out for home as the crow flies, and I hain't done no traveling to speak of since. I always figured that on the next occasion the feller that knowed it was a mistake might not get there in time to do me any good."—Judge.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Soon Birdmen Will All Be Machine-Made Aviators

WASHINGTON.—A machine that enables you to experience all the physical sensations of flying and to test your fitness for aviation without once losing your hold upon the earth, has just been adopted by the war department for use in training its pilots. It is probable that this device, known as the Ruggles orientator, will be a feature of all flying schools, and will enable civilians as well as soldiers to determine without risking their lives whether they are fit for flying.

The machine consists of two sets of steel rings, the larger one of which is 12 feet in diameter. One ring revolves in the horizontal plane and the other in the perpendicular plane. The rings are driven by small motors as they revolve within each other. The "boat," in which the pupil sits, is suspended from the inner ring, and its movements may be controlled by either set of rings. The motors which control the boat may be operated from within by the pupil or from the outside by the instructor. The prospective pilot seats himself in the boat while the instructor sits, with his hand on the control, alongside his machine. The instructor can put his pupil through all the motions of a machine in the air by operating the controls, which are connected to the machine by means of wire batteries. After several demonstrations of looping-the-loop, dipping, gliding and veering, the pupil is permitted to operate the machine by the controls in the boat. The test is even more severe than that of actual flying. If the neophyte has anything the matter with his heart, nerves or stomach which will disqualify him for flying, the orientator will bring the fact out at once.

It used to take a hero to tackle the game. Soon the birdman will be machine-made.

Congress Not Going to Stand for the Red Flag

CONGRESS is not going to stand for the red flag in the United States. May day demonstrations, signalized with the waving of red flags in various cities, have served to emphasize the determination of congressional leaders to force enactment of legislation which will prohibit and penalize such demonstrations.

While the propaganda committee of the senate has had the subject under consideration and probably will submit a bill on the issue, there is one senator who is not going to wait for a committee to initiate such legislation. He is Senator New of Indiana, who submitted an anti-red flag bill at the last session which went down in the flood of unenacted measures on the closing days of congress. Now the Indiana senator is writing another bill and he plans to introduce it as soon as the new congress is convened. The measure, particularly directed against the anarchist propaganda movement now agitated in the United States, has already been tentatively prepared, and although subject to revision before presentation to congress, it will be substantially as follows concerning the red flag:

"That the display or exhibition at any meeting, gathering or parade, public or private, of any flag, banner or emblem, symbolizing or intended by the person or persons displaying or exhibiting the same to symbolize a purpose to overthrow by force or violence or by physical injury to person or property or by the general cessation of industry, the government of the United States or of all government, is hereby declared to be unlawful."

Provision is also made against the use of the spoken, written and printed words and the use of the mails.

The penalty for violation of the act is a fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than five years or both.

"There is entirely too much consideration shown to the class of people who employ the red flag in this country," says Senator New.

Laboratory Experts Now Predict Fireproof Wood

HAVING perfected methods by which bits of wood can be put together so that the whole is as strong as an unbroken piece; having made wood almost as resistant to moisture as iron, and having learned how to season green wood in a few weeks, the experts of the United States forest products laboratory are setting out to do what seems to the layman the impossible—that is, to make wood fireproof.

These remarkable studies in the use and properties of wood are being carried out at the forest products laboratory at Madison, Wis., which does its work in conjunction with the University of Wisconsin. In view of the work which this laboratory has done, and is now doing, it is not stretching probabilities to predict that within a few years it may be possible to build a wooden house, for less than wooden houses cost now, which will be at least as fireproof as a stone house and will rival a stone house in lasting qualities.

Loss of wooden structures by fires due very largely to carelessness. In the opinion of the laboratory experts, and they do not refer to carelessness in the use of matches and cigarettes, either. They say that the faulty use of wood in building is the cause of many fires, and they are carrying on investigations to determine just how wood can safely be used.

The experiments are accompanied by others in the making of wood fireproof. The experts say that there is no reason why wood, the cheapest and most pliant building material, should be discriminated against because of its inflammability and its lack of lasting qualities. Both of these shortcomings can and will be overcome.

The forest products laboratory had been puttering along for years until the war stirred it up to real activity.

Many of the things it discovered in war can be applied to peace. War evidently is not an unmixed evil.

Wanted: Half-Cent Piece for Paying Luxury Taxes

COMMUNICATIONS have reached the treasury department urging the coinage of a half-cent piece as a means of making exact payments of revenue taxes, but there is no indication that the department will favor the proposition.

Agitation on the subject, reported from Chicago and other cities, it was stated by treasury officials, would be successful only if sufficiently strong to induce action by congress. Such action would be necessary before a coin of a new denomination could be issued.

Inasmuch as the extra half cent which taxpayers are required to pay on numerous articles goes into the treasury, its officials would not be likely to take the lead in a move which would cut off a portion of the revenue. Members of congress, as the direct representatives of the people, might champion the proposal.

Officials of the internal revenue bureau are trying to prevent profiteering through greater increases in prices than justified by war taxes. The regulation for the collection of the luxury tax has been framed specifically with a view to this end. It is provided that it must be made clear to the customer just what the price of the article is and the amount of the tax.

Although the luxury tax has been in effect only a short time reports of profiteering are reaching the revenue bureau. Revenue agents say violations will not be tolerated.

Under the revenue law false representations are subject to a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment of not more than one year, or both.

ROAD BUILDING

OPERATION OF A ROAD DRAG

Principal Factor Is Skill on Part of Operator—Suggestions Given as Guide.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The principal factor in successfully operating a properly constructed road drag, provided that the condition of the road is favorable, is skill on the part of the operator. Such skill can be obtained only by intelligent experience in the use of the drag, and no rules can be laid down which would enable an inexperienced operator to produce first-class results. The following suggestions are intended, therefore, to serve rather as a guide to the judgment than as a criterion to be implicitly followed.

Under ordinary circumstances the position of the hitching link on the draw chain should be such that the runners will make an angle of from 60 to 75 degrees with the center line of the road, or, in other words, a skew angle of from 15 to 30 degrees. It is apparent that by shifting the position of the hitching link the angle of skew may be increased or diminished as the conditions require. When dragging immediately over ruts or down the center of the road after the sides have been dragged, it is usually preferable to have the hitching link at the center of the chain and to run the drag without skew. When the principal purpose of the dragging is to increase the crown of the road, the drag should be sufficiently skewed to discharge all material as rapidly as it is collected on the runners. On the other hand, if depressions occur in the road surface, the skew may perhaps be advantageously reduced to a minimum, thus enabling the operator to deposit the material which collects in front of the runners at such points as he desires by lifting or otherwise manipulating the drag. Many other examples of conditions which require modifications in the angle of skew might easily be cited, but these will readily suggest themselves to an intelligent operator as his experience increases.

The length of hitch is another very important consideration in operating a road drag. In the designs which have been discussed the draw chain may be readily taken up or let out at either end and the length of hitch thus increased or diminished as desired. It is impracticable to prescribe even an approximate rule for fixing the length of hitch, because it is materially affected by the height of the team and the arrangement of the harness, as well as by the condition of the road surface. Experience will soon teach the operator, however, when to shorten the hitch in order to lessen the Standing on Drag While in Operation, amount of cutting done by the front runner and when to lengthen it in order to produce the opposite effect.

When the road surface is sufficiently hard or the amount of material which it is desired to have the drag move is sufficient to warrant the operator standing upon the drag while it is in operation, he can greatly facilitate its work by shifting his weight at proper times. For example, if it is desired to have the drag discharge more rapidly, the operator should move toward the discharge end of the runners. This will cause the ditch end of the runners to swing forward and thus increase the skew angle of the drag. The operator may, of course, produce the opposite effect by moving his weight in the opposite direction. In the same way, he can partially control the amount of cutting which the drag does by shifting his weight backward or forward, as the case may be.

An intelligent and interested operator will soon learn many simple ways by means of which he can easily control the different features of the work which a drag performs, and he will also learn to utilize effectively every effort which his team exerts.

HIGHWAYS BUILT IN FORESTS

According to Department's Official Report Total of 88.19 Miles Was Constructed.

A total of 88.19 miles was constructed under the forestry road funds during the past year, according to the department's official report. At the end of the fiscal year forty-three projects were under co-operative agreement, involving the survey of 1,061.95 miles and the construction of 604.15 miles.

GOOD HOUSING

From all over the country comes the report of a shortage of dwellings. In some places people insert advertisements in newspapers offering a reward for anyone who will find them a home.

No industry is going to prosper unless there are comfortable homes for the workers. They will go somewhere else, and the business will have to be constantly breaking in new help.

Many manufacturing concerns took up the housing problem long ago and have built hundreds of homes for workers. They do their best to encourage home spirit, offering prizes for gardening and the best looking cottage. They make it easy for workers to become the owners of their little homes. Any concern that has done that has placed its business on a much more secure basis. The home owner never is an anarchist.

Conditions of congestion in many manufacturing towns have become almost unendurable. Families are herded together promiscuously and without regard to common decency.

In rural districts, much of the trouble in keeping farm help is due to lack of suitable dwellings. When the farmer puts up one or more cottages for his hired men and gives them a bit of land to cultivate, he does not have to shift his help every summer or oftener.

This is a problem that every industry, from the big corporation down to the lonely farmer, must work out somehow. The man who has settled down in a pretty little home doesn't become a Bolshevik. If you can persuade him to buy it on a mortgage, and pay interest instead of rent, he is settled for good as a constructive worker for the good of the community. It will be for the interest of Albuquerque to take this up as a community matter and see that there is a comfortable home for every industrious worker who wants to live here. —Albuquerque Journal.

An Oil Man's Reverie

By GEO. L. CASTLE.
Come see this strange land, inhabited by scorpions and snakes, Now covered at such corner by placer mine stakes, For down underneath this dry barren soil Geologists tell us there are large quantities of oil.

The ocean once rolled right here where we stand, The fossils of sea shells can be seen on every hand, And soon you will see men sweating with toil

As they work round the derricks a drilling for oil.

O, the wealth of Croesus and Rockefeller combined Will hardly compare with the wealth we will find,

While the Wheel of Fortune we will give a good spin, And those that get in early a fortune will win.

No more will we worry over the bills that we owe, But will quit this dry farm and away we will go

To split fifty-fifty with the children and wife, And have a jolly good time for the rest of our life.

Life Held As Relic

Robert Lee, Tex.—A faded white bean, a relic of the lottery for life in the stormy period that preceded the Goliad massacre, is in the possession of Mrs. R. L. Hayley of Bronte, granddaughter of Anthony Owen.

The lives of Owen and two other soldiers under General

Fannin were spared when they drew three white beans from a bag of black beans. Some three hundred other Texans under General Fannin were massacred.

It was in March, 1835, that the Texans were surrounded and forced to surrender to a numerically superior force of Mexicans. They were promised quarter if they surrendered and the band, many of them wounded or dying, gave up and were taken to the old Spanish mission of Goliad and imprisoned.

Later the Mexican commander announced that the Texans must pay with their lives for having opposed Mexican rule, but consented to a lottery and promised freedom to the three who should draw the white beans.

The historic bean is yellow with age, but is perfectly preserved.

Building Material

Lumber has made an average advance of 25% since the beginning of the war.

With an abundance of employment at high wages and the recent stimulus to economy caused by the war, there is more money that could be utilized for home building than there has been for many years.

Lumber is relatively low in price, the advance not having kept pace with the increases in wages, freight rates and other commodities — from 35 to 50 per cent and over.

Now, therefore, while other commodities are higher in proportion, and Lumber is lower, is the time to do your building.

Parsons Notes

Mrs. W. L. Weber and children, Fort Stanton, are visiting Mrs. Weber's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Rice.

Nels and Michel Bjeldanero, who have been connected with the Parsons Mining company for several years, departed last week for Norway, where they will make an extended visit with their parents.

Mrs. Charlie Wingfield, of the Ruidoso, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Mabel Robison.

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Grafton and family, accompanied by Mr. Taft of the Forest Survey, motored to Lincoln and spent the week-end with Fred Pfingsten and family.

Recent rains have caused South Fork of the Bonito to rise again, and it flows crystal clear into the main Bonito, which is muddy.

Marinus Westvelt and party of the Forest Survey, who have been camped along the Bonito for a couple of months, departed Monday for Alamogordo, where the party will break up.

The friends of Mr. Taft will be pleased to learn that he has been appointed to the Lincoln Forest, and will be stationed somewhere in Lincoln county.

Mr. and Mrs. James Robison are rejoicing over the safe arrival of their third son, who was born Saturday, June 28th.

Mrs. A. C. Austin, an old resident of the Bonito, is visiting her friend, Mrs. Rice.

Albert Ziegler and family, accompanied by Mesdames Ulrick and Farley visited friends in Parsons last Sunday.

Miss Emma Pfingsten, of the Mesa settlement, is visiting relatives on the Bonito.

Messrs. Graham, Watrous and Ronnels, of Chicago and Minnawanka, Indiana, have been here recently looking over the property of the Parsons Mining company.

Several camping parties are enjoyed the fishing and cool weather up the picturesque canon of the South Fork.

Albert Patchen, who is employed by the Parsons Mining company, has been transferred from Parsons to White Oaks for awhile.

Mrs. Ole Olson entertained the ladies of the mill settlement at the tea Sunday afternoon.

The Misses Rice gave a barn dance Saturday night, which was much enjoyed by those present. About twelve couples participated in the entertainment, and sherbet and cake were served at the close of the dance.

For the first time in the history of Parsons a picture show made its appearance in the school house last Thursday. The entertainment was conducted by Prof. and Mrs. May, and was well attended by the people of the community. Ten per cent of the entrance fees went toward the library fund of the school.

"Meats in Storage"

Every working day of the year 75,000,000 pounds of meat are required to supply home and export needs—and only 10 per cent of this is exported.

These facts must be kept in mind when considering the U. S. Bureau of Markets report that on June 1, 1919, there were 1,348,000,000 pounds of meats in cold storage. If the meat in storage was placed on the market it would only be 20 days' supply.

This meat is not artificially withheld from trade channels to maintain or advance prices.

Meats in storage consist of—

- 65 per cent (approximate) hams, bacon, etc., in process of curing. It takes 30 to 90 days in pickle or salt to complete the process.
- 10 per cent is frozen pork that is to be cured later in the year.
- 6 per cent is lard. This is only four-fifths of a pound per capita, and much of it will have to go to supply European needs.
- 19 per cent is frozen beef and lamb, part of which is owned by the Government and was intended chiefly for overseas shipment. If this were all diverted to domestic trade channels, it would be only 1½ lbs. per capita—a 3 days' supply.

From this it will be seen that "meats in storage" represent merely unfinished goods in process of curing and the working supply necessary to assure the consumer a steady flow of finished product.

STOMACH TROUBLE

Mr. Marion Holcomb, of Nancy, Ky., says: "For quite a long while I suffered with stomach trouble. I would have pains and a heavy feeling after my meals, a most disagreeable taste in my mouth. If I ate anything with butter, oil or grease, I would spit it up. I began to have regular sick headache. I had used pills and tablets, but after a course of these, I would be constipated. It just seemed to tear my stomach all up. I found they were no good at all for my trouble. I heard

CHAPTER XX.

Morin, the Fisherman.

When Rosa Varona regained consciousness sufficiently to understand what had happened she proved herself a person of no little self-control. It was she, in fact, who first voiced the fear that Cobo dead was scarcely less a menace than Cobo alive.

"What are we going to do with him?" she inquired.

Jacket, too, appreciated the dangers of the situation. "We must get rid of him quickly," said he, "for his men are close by; he will be missed and there will be a search."

"I don't intend to make him a present of that treasure," O'Reilly said, grimly. "It is our only salvation."

"But how are we going to hide him?" Jacket inquired. "One might as well try to conceal a church; oxen couldn't hot him out of that hole."

"Precisely! He has made our work easy for us. We can't take more than a small part of the money with us, any-that jewel box, but finally, with heads together and with backs to the door of the bohio, they made a furtive examination. They found emeralds and sapphires the value of which they did not attempt to estimate; and, besides these, a miscellaneous assortment of semiprecious stones.

O'Reilly realized vaguely that he held in his lap a fortune greater than his wildest dreams had ever compassed. These were the jewels of a rajah. It seemed incredible that this ragged girl beside him was a regal heiress, the possessor of a treasure such as kings might envy. After a time he realized that the mere possession of these gems constituted a new and overwhelming menace.

Morning found all hands more nearly rational and feeling the first gnawings of a healthy hunger. Even Asensio confessed to a quite miraculous improvement. While Evangelina prepared breakfast the lovers agreed upon a story to explain the origin of that mysterious gold piece, and later Johnnie warned Jacket for a second time to keep his tongue between his teeth.

Jacket nodded his complete comprehension. "Sure! All Spaniards are robbers and they'd kill us for a peso. Yes, and the pacificos are no better. I tell you we need to get out of this place."

"I intend to arrange it at once, but—the sight of those jewels has frightened me. If we are searched—if we are even suspected: I'm wondering if Rosa can endure the hardships we'll encounter when, or if, we get away."

"Exactly what I was thinking. I've been considering another plan. I told you about my friend at the market. Well, he is a miserable Spaniard, but he has a son in the manigua."

"One of us?" Johnnie was surprised. "Yes. The old fellow owns a volandra in which he brings charcoal from the eastward twice a month. He might take us out of here—on his schooner."

"How well does he like you?" "Oh, we are like two thieves."

After a period of thought O'Reilly said, "Take me to him, and remember I'm your brother Juan."

The Matanzas market did not present a scene of great activity when the two friends slunk into it. Like most Spanish markets, the building was far from clean and housed odors unpleasant even to starving people. In the smallest section, at one of the fish stalls, Jacket accosted a villainous old brigand in a rough Gallego cap, baggy blouse and trousers, and straw sandals.

"Good day, my captain," he cried, cheerily.

The Spaniard raised his head, scowled ferociously, then waved a long, thin-bladed knife in menacing fashion. "Aha! So there you are, robber! Be off now before I slit your greedy little belly! Didn't I promise to give you to the soldiers if you came back to bother me?"

Jacket was unabashed by this hostile reception. He grinned broadly and with an impudent eye he scanned the empty premises. "Where is my little fish?" he demanded. "As I live, I believe you have sold it! What a miser! For the sake of another centavo you would see me starve? There's a heart for you! Come, give me my fish! Or must I lie down and die before your very eyes to prove my hunger?"

"What a nuisance!" grumbled the marketman. He reached into a basket and flung a mackerel upon the table. "There! I saved it for you, and sent the good women of Matanzas away empty-handed. But it is the very last. Annoy me again and I shall open you with my knife and put salt on you."

"Aha! You are my good captain!" Jacket cried in triumph, possessing himself of the prize. "Where would I have been but for you?" Turning to O'Reilly, who had looked on from a distance, he said, "Captain Morin, this is that brother Juan of whom I have told you."

Morin smiled at Johnnie and extended his dirty palm. "The little fellow can speak the truth when he wishes, it seems. I began to doubt that he had a brother. What a boy, eh?"

"You have a son with the insurrection?"

"Yes." The fisherman cast a furtive glance over his shoulder.

"Why don't you go and fight by his side?" Jacket demanded.

"God forbid!" Morin flung up his hands. "I'm a loyal subject."

"Well, we are going back to fight. We are going to escape and join Gomez once more!" Jacket made the announcement calmly.

"Bah! What talk!" Morin was in a nervous panic lest they be overheard. "As if anybody could escape from Matanzas! What made you come here if you are so eager to fight?"

"I'll tell you," O'Reilly assumed direction of the conversation. "There are three of us brothers, we two and Esteban, a pretty little fellow. He was captured by Cobo's men and driven in, and we came to find him. But he is sick—dying."

"Of course. They're all dying—the poor people! It is terrible."

"We—" O'Reilly faltered slightly, so much hung upon the manner in which Morin would take what he was about to say. "We want to get him out of here—we must do so, or we'll lose him. Will you help us?"

"If in heaven's name, how?" "By taking us away in your charcoal schooner."

"You're mad!" Morin cast another apprehensive look over his shoulder. "I'm a poor man. All I have is my two boats, the vivero, which brings fish, and the volandra, which sails with charcoal. Do you think I'd forfeit them and my life for strangers?"

O'Reilly leaned closer. "You say you're a poor man. I will pay you well."

Morin eyed the ragged speaker scornfully; it was plain that he put no faith in such a promise, and so O'Reilly took a piece of gold from his pocket, at sight of which the fisherman started.

"I, too, am a poor man, but I'm willing to buy freedom for my little brothers and myself."

"How many coins like that have you?"

"Um—more than one; enough to pay you for several cargoes of coal."

"For the sake of Miguelito," Jacket urged. "Caramba! What a hard-hearted father begot that boy!"

"Hush!" The fisherman was scowling. To O'Reilly he said, "You do wrong to tempt a poor man."

"My brother Esteban is sick. He is a frail little lad with a crooked back. God will reward you."

"Perhaps! But how much will you pay?"

"Ten Spanish sovereigns like this—all that I have."

"No! It is not enough." O'Reilly took Jacket's hand and turned away. "I'm sorry," he said. "I wish I might offer you more." He had taken several steps before Morin hailed him.

"Come back tomorrow," the fisherman cried, crossly. "We will try to talk like sensible people."

The brothers Villar were back at Morin's fish stand on the following afternoon and they returned daily thereafter until they at last prevailed over the Spaniard's fears and won his promise of assistance. That much accomplished, they made several cautious purchases, a coat here, a shirt there, a pair of trousers in another place, until they had assembled a complete boy's outfit of clothing.

At first Rosa refused absolutely to desert her two faithful negro friends, and O'Reilly won her consent to consider his plan of escape only after he had put the matter squarely up to Asensio and his wife and after both had refused to enter into it.

Then, and not until then, did Rosa begin her preparations. First she made Evangelina cut her hair, a sacrifice that wrung sighs and tears and loud lamentations from the black woman, after which she altered the suit of boy's clothing to fit her figure, or rather to conceal it.

When at last she put it on for O'Reilly's approval she was very shy, very self-conscious, and so altogether unbecomingly that he shook his head positively.

"My Dear, You'll Never Do," He Told Her.

"My dear, you'll never do," he told her. "You are altogether too pretty."

"But wait until I put that hideous hump upon my back and stain my face, then you will see how ugly I can look."

"Perhaps," he said, doubtfully. A moment, then his frown lightened. "You give me a thought," said he. "You shall wear the jewels."

"Wear them? How?" "On your back, in that very hump. It will be the safest possible way to conceal them."

Rosa clasped her hands in delight. "Why, of course! It is the very thing. Wait until I show you."

Profiting by her first moment alone—Evangelina and her husband being still in ignorance of the contents of the treasure box—Rosa made a bundle out of the jewels and trinkets and fastened it securely inside her coat. After a few experiments she adjusted it to her liking, then called O'Reilly once more. This time he was better satisfied. An application of Evangelina's stain to darken her face, a few tatters and a liberal application of dirt to the suit, and he declared that Rosa would pass anywhere as a boy.

There came a night when the three of them bade good-by to their black companions and slipped away across the city to that section known as Pueblo Nuevo, then followed the road along the water front until they found shelter within the shadows of a rickety structure which had once served as a bath house.

The refugees waited a long time; they were beginning to fear that old Morin's nerve had weakened at the eleventh hour, when they beheld a skiff approaching the shore. It glided closer, entered the shade of the bath house, then a voice cried:

"Pat! You are there?" It was Morin himself.

Hastily the three piled aboard. Morin bent to his oars and the skiff shot out. "You were not observed?" he inquired.

"No."

Morin rowed in silence for a time.

"When do you sail?" O'Reilly asked.

"At dawn, God permitting. You will have to remain hidden and you mustn't even breathe."

He brought the skiff alongside a battered old schooner, and his passengers clambered aboard. There was a tiny cabin aft and on it, sheltered from the night dew by a loose fold of the mainsail, were two sleeping men. The newcomers followed Morin down into the evil little cabin, where he warned them in a hoarse whisper:

"Not a sound, mind you. If anyone comes aboard, you must shift for yourselves. Creep into the hold and hide. Of course, if we are searched—" He muttered something, then groped his way out on deck, and closed the hatch behind him.

Now that they had actually embarked upon this enterprise and the girl had given herself entirely into his hands, now that an imminent peril encompassed them both, Johnnie felt that Rosa belonged to him more absolutely, more completely, than at any time heretofore, so he held her close. Rosa lay relaxed against her lover's shoulder and in halting murmurs, interrupted many times by caresses, she told O'Reilly of her need for him, and her utter happiness. It was the fullest hour of their lives.

With daylight, Morin roused out his men. There was a sleepy muttering, the patter of bare feet upon the deck above, then the creak of blocks as the sails were raised. A few moments, then there came a hail which brought their hearts into their throats. Morin himself answered the call.

"Good morning, countryman! Have you caught any of those accursed filibusters since I saw you last? So? Cayo Romano, eh? What have I aboard?" Morin laughed loudly. "You know very well—cannon and shot for the rebels, of course. Will you look? . . . No! . . . Then a cup of coffee perhaps?"

O'Reilly peeped through a dirt-stained cabin window and saw that the volandra was slipping past the stern of the ironclad, so he withdrew his head quickly.

Of course this was but one danger past and there were many more ahead, for Morin's schooner was liable to be stopped by any of the numerous patrol boats on duty to the eastward. Nevertheless, when an anxious hour had gone by and she was well out toward the harbor mouth, the refugees told one another they were safe.

CHAPTER XXI.

Three Travelers Come Home.

Esteban Varona made slow progress toward recovery. In the weeks following O'Reilly's departure from Cubitas his gain was steady, but beyond a certain point he seemed unable to go. Then he began to lose strength. Esteban awoke to the fact that he was losing ground, and his dismay was keen, for a wonderful thing had come into his life and he spent much of his time in delicious contemplative day dreams concerning it, waiting for the hour when he would dare translate those dreams into reality. It seemed to him that he had always loved Norine; certainly she had enshrined herself in his heart long before his mind had regained its clarity, for he had come out of his delirious wanderings with his love full grown.

The time came finally when he could no longer permit the girl to decide herself or him with her brave assumption of cheerfulness. Norine had just told him that he was doing famously, but he smiled and shook his weary head.

"Let's be honest," he said. "You know and I know that I can't get well."

"You mustn't be discouraged," she told him, earnestly. "Remember this is a trying climate and we have nothing to do with it. Even the food is wretched. I'm going to take you away."

Esteban stroked her hand softly. "You can't do that, Miss Evans. You have been wonderful to me and I can't begin to express my gratitude." He stirred, but he retained his grasp of her fingers, gaining courage from the contact to proceed. "I have been trying for a long time to tell you something. Will you listen?"

"Not now," she exclaimed, with a visible lessening of color. "Don't bother to tell me now."

"I've waited too long; I must speak. You have stayed on here just to nurse me. Isn't that true?"

She nodded somewhat doubtfully. "Now, then, you must stop thinking about me and—make your arrangements to go home."

There was a moment of silence. "Yes. You see, I know how tired you are of this misery, this poverty, this hopeless struggle. You're not a Cuban and our cause isn't yours. Expeditions come from the United States every now and then and the government will see that you are put safely aboard the first ship that returns. I'll manage to get well somehow."

Norine's eyes had returned. She stood over the hammock, looking down

"Esteban, Dear, I'll Never, Never Leave You!"

mistily. "Don't you need me, want me any more?" she inquired.

Esteban turned his tired eyes away, fearing to betray in them his utter wretchedness. "You have done all there is to do. I want you to go back into your own world and forget—"

A sudden impulse seized the girl. She stopped and gathered the sick man into her young, strong arms. "Don't be silly," she cried. "My world is your world, Esteban dear. I'll never leave you."

"Miss Evans! Norine!" Varona tried feebly to free himself. "You mustn't—"

Norine drew him closer. "You're going to tell me that you have nothing, can offer me nothing. You're going to do the generous, noble thing. Well! I hate generous people. I'm selfish, utterly selfish and spoiled, and I don't propose to be robbed of anything I want, least of all my happiness. You do love me, don't you?"

Esteban's cry was eloquent; he clasped his arms about her and she held him fiercely to her breast.

"We're quite mad, quite insane," he told her after a while. "This only makes it harder to give you up."

"You're not going to give me up and you're not going to die. I shan't let you. Think what you have to live for!"

"I—did I who surrendered. Come! Must I say it all? Aren't you going to ask me—"

"What?"

"Why, to marry you, of course. We're going to be married, and I'm going to take you out of this miserable place."

"What happiness!" he murmured. "If I were well— But I won't let you marry a dying man."

Plodder Reaches Goal.

With the plodder you can reap intense satisfaction in self-conscious growth. This comes with achievement. When you get to the point that what once was hard is now easy you can know you have gained in power. And the best of it is that each tiny gain makes the next step so much easier. When you just plod on you are constantly adding to your doing power. Other people will notice it, but you will be the best judge. Then when good sense adds its judgment to ability to do, tasks once hard are easy. When the world gets awake to that fact it will begin to praise what it once regarded as common stupidity. It's certainly a pleasure to see public opinion changing front and know that it's all merited. It's part of the plodder's reward.—Pennywise Girl.

BRACE UP!

The man or woman with weak kidneys is half crippled. A lame, stiff back, with its constant, dull ache and sharp, shooting twinges, makes the simplest task a burden. Headaches, dizzy spells, urinary disorders and an "all worn out" feeling are daily sources of distress. Don't neglect kidney weakness and risk gravel, dropsy or Bright's disease. Get a box of Doan's Kidney Pills today. They have helped people the world over.

A New Mexico Case

Mrs. W. T. Murray, Main St., Carlsbad, New Mexico, says: "I do not know of anything so good for weak and aching back and other kidney troubles as Doan's Kidney Pills. About two years ago my kidneys were giving me no end of annoyance and I tried several different kidney remedies, but failed to help me, but it was different with Doan's Kidney Pills. This remedy soon cured me."

A Question.

The parents were conversing with animation about the eulogies which had been bestowed on M. Clemenceau at the peace conference by President Wilson and Lloyd George. The young ones, who were listening attentively, then put in a question.

"Tell me, papa, is it true Clemenceau is the savior of France?"

"Why, certainly, my little one."

"Just as John of Arc saved France?"

"Yes, as John of Arc."

"Then why don't they burn him, too?"—Le Cri de Paris.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it. A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Postal Note. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

Atmospheric Injustice.

"But, my friend, you must remember that the rain falls on the just and the unjust alike," remarked the chronic quoter.

"Wrong again," returned the man with the furrowed brow as he gave up the hunt, "the unjust are usually found carrying the umbrellas which belong to the just."

The housewife smiles with satisfaction

A High Flier.

"Bankrupt, is he? Why, I thought he had a fixed income of $10,000 a year."

"So he had, but his wife fixed that in three months after their marriage."

Peace Army To Be All-American

Illiterates Will Be Drilled Mentally as Well as Physically.

CITIZENSHIP AS A REWARD

Major Ferris' Development Battalion at Camp Upton Furnishes Basis for New Activity—Splendid Results Already Shown.

Camp Upton, L. I.—The knowledge gained during the war in connection with the training and instruction of illiterate and non-English speakers is to be turned to account in the recruiting of a peace-time army.

By direction of the war department there is being established here the first "recruit educational center," for which 50 barracks and other buildings have been set aside, and it will be conducted on the lines followed by Maj. Ralph Hall Ferris when he made such a success of development battalion No. 6, which went out of being when the armistice was signed. Major Ferris is retiring as camp morale officer to become commander of the center, which is the outgrowth of his own plan.

Brigadier General Nicholson, camp commander, received within a few days the order to establish the center, and recruiting has begun throughout the eastern and northeastern departments of the army.

Will Be Taught English.

An illiterate or non-English-speaking recruit who enlists under the new plan will be taught to speak English, will receive thorough American training from officers born here, and will in addition get citizenship papers when his enlistment term of three years has expired.

Under the draft act 24.9 per cent of the men enlisted, or practically one-quarter of them, were unable to read a newspaper or write a letter home. There were 1,500 such men sent here and they were put in Major Ferris' development battalion. His method of training and educating them attracted attention in Washington. In the notification sent to General Nicholson by Maj. Gen. Henry Jervay, assistant chief of staff, he said: "Your camp has been selected not only because it is centrally located but also because of the excellent results in connection with the teaching of English that have been obtained in development battalion No. 6, Camp Upton."

On August 21, 1918, the Sixth development unit was organized and all rookies who were illiterate or did not speak English, except a few who had physical defects, were transferred to it. The teachers selected were privates or noncommissioned officers who held university degrees or who were teachers in civil life. Race was not considered in the choosing of officers. It was soon proven that squads and platoons composed of different nationalities received their military instruction as easily as if racial groups had been organized for the purpose. Only English was permitted to be spoken in the mess halls, military formations and general gatherings of the men. Instruction except in the elementary classes was given in English.

Made Good Progress.

Within three months men who could speak little or no English when they entered the battalion became sufficiently proficient in military English to fulfill the ordinary functions of soldiers both in organization and on separate missions. In addition practically all of the recruits proved their spirit of Americanism by becoming citizens.

The recruits upon being accepted for the new center will be classified according to their knowledge of English and assigned to battalions accordingly. A school of instruction of the illiterate and non-English-speaking recruits is being established. The course of instruction will be normally four months, or six months in exceptional cases. The men will be classed in groups of 15 to 20 and will be graded according to the progress shown.

A board of examiners will examine the recruits for classification and prepare suitable tests to determine the rate of progress especially of slow-learning men and the reasons for their backwardness. When the recruits have developed sufficiently for assignment Major Ferris will report them to the adjutant general of the army for disposition.

Antwerp Livens Up

Antwerp.—Antwerp appears to be passing through a process of resurrection, although the tonnage handled since the port was reopened more than three months ago represents what would ordinarily come through this port in one week during the days prior to the war.

Ships now come straggling in, and along the seven-mile water front the work is heard creaking here and there, and the vision in some of the great sheds is obstructed by unpretentious stacks of bags of American rice and rows of barrels of Chicago pork, and there are foodstuffs, clothing and manufactured articles, most of which, however, is for immediate use.

The American commission of relief in Belgium had 17 steamships in port early in April and the American base for supplying the American army of occupation in Germany was unloading five others.

Shipping men are anxiously awaiting the opening of the American base at Contich, about two miles outside of Antwerp on the Malines road. Barracks are being erected at Contich for the accommodation of 20,000 soldiers at a time. This is expected to inject a little more life into Antwerp port.

The ground picked out for the American base is a vast plain, dry and well irrigated, and the doughboys will find living and sanitary conditions there much better than in other bases which have achieved greater prestige.

The Americans have taken over some of the piers where North German Lloyd steamships formerly docked. The early work was arduous, as the piers were lumbered with gravel imported from Holland by the Germans, ostensibly to repair roads, but actually to build re-enforced concrete shelters, dugouts and trenches. One hundred cubic yards of the gravel had to be removed before the piers could be used. It is estimated the Germans had enough gravel there to repair Belgian roads for 50 years.

Fifteen thousand longshoremen and stevedores are idle here and the only solution shipping men find when questioned as to how the situation can be remedied may be summed up in one word: "America."

Daniel Is Fireproof.

Bristol, Pa.—Daniel Sweeney, a shipyard employee, is fireproof. Sweeney went to sleep in a bunkhouse with a lighted cigarette in his mouth. A few minutes later some of his companions noticed smoke issuing from his room. Sweeney was found sleeping peacefully with the bedding ablaze and his vest burned off. He did not suffer a burn. He was arrested and held until he could pay for the cost of the bed.

Has Grand Little Scheme.

Kenosha, Wis.—To make sure that his wife was not away from home with some one else, Pansua Gedved, street car conductor, is said to have compelled her to ride miles and miles on his car. That was not so bad, but when he locked her up in the house and marked the bottoms of her shoes so that he would be able to tell if she left the place, she objected. Mrs. Gedved was given a decree when she told her troubles in the divorce court.

Drilled for Water; Read What He Found

De Pere, Wis.—The discovery came too early for the day of the big thirst, but Jules Dufrene says he expects to enjoy for many a day to come four jugs of 300-year-old cognac.

The jugs bear the seals of Louis XIII, with the fleur de lis, and had been buried by early traders.

Dufrene found the jugs when drilling for a well on the site of an old French trading post.

WILL CITE EMPLOYERS

Those Who Hire Service Men to Be Recognized.

Special Certificate Will Be Signed by Baker, Daniels and Colonel Wood.

Washington.—Patriotic employers who perform their duty in employing returning soldiers and sailors will receive a citation from the government. Col. Arthur Woods, assistant to Secretary of War Baker, announced.

Colonel Woods said his office has completed arrangements with both the war and navy departments for this recognition of employers who pledge themselves to take back employees who entered the service and to show preference to soldiers and sailors in taking on new employees.

For those who join this new legion of honor a special certificate will be given, signed by Secretary Baker of the war department, Secretary Daniels of the navy department, and by Colonel Woods, representing the war and navy departments. The certificate, which is headed "War and Navy Departments, United States of America," reads:

"This certifies that—has assured the war and navy departments that he will gladly re-employ everybody who formerly worked with him and left to serve in the army or navy during the great war. (Signed) Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War; Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy; Arthur Woods, Assistant to the Secretary of War."

In addition to the certificate, the council of national defense, consisting of the secretary of war, the secretary of the navy, the secretary of labor, the secretary of the interior, the secretary of commerce and the secretary of agriculture, will authorize the holder to display on his ser flag the shield of the United States as a symbol that he has pledged himself to fulfill his obligations.

Certificates can be obtained by applying to Col. Arthur Woods, assistant to the secretary of war, war department, Washington, D. C.

Had Old Bank Account.

Burlington, Ia.—James Bryant, seventy-five years old, arrested here on a charge of horse theft, suddenly recalled while in jail that 29 years ago he deposited $1,000 in a Burlington bank. An officer accompanied Bryant to the bank, and, sure enough, he found his account intact with interest accumulated. Bryant says he is afflicted with lapses of memory and says he does not recall stealing the horse, which was taken from a Muscatine stable.

Just a Little Late.

New York.—"Just heard about the war and I want to enlist," said Stephen Kresney, dashing up to a marine recruiting office. He was quite shocked when told he was too late, the war being over.

ONE BIG ORCHARD

Fruit Culture in New South Wales.

Few parts of the world possess natural facilities for the production of fruit in greater varieties than New South Wales, owing to the extent of the country and the great difference in climate, ranging from that of the temperate regions of the higher tablelands to that of the tropics on the northeastern seaboard.

From a moisture-laden atmosphere, and a rainfall of 70 inches per annum, to a dry desiccating area and a rainfall of under 10 inches per annum, and with every gradation between these extremes, the State is able to grow every kind of fruit from mangoes to cherries, and not only can the State grow this variety of fruits, but it can produce many of them of such quality, and to such perfection, that they cannot be excelled in any part of the world.

On the North Coast, adjoining the State of Queensland, the climate and conditions are almost tropical. Here the rainfall is heavy, the air laden with moisture, and in sheltered positions frosts are unknown, and here all the fruits of the sub-tropics flourish; mango, custard apple, banana and pineapple are seen side by side, and the passion fruit and guava grow wild in the bush and produce an abundance of the finest fruit without any cultivation whatever.

The orange, lemon and citron likewise thrive with very little attention and nowhere in the world can they be brought to greater perfection, provided only the choicest varieties are planted, and that the trees and orchards are thoroughly attended to.

The country immediately north and south of Sydney also offers great facilities for the cultivation of the orange and the lemon, and the growing of citrus fruits has become one of the principal industries in the districts surrounding the metropolis.

In this portion of the State's orchard, peaches, nectarines, apricots, persimmons, pears, quinces, apples, plums and table grapes grow to great perfection and add much to the picturesque quality of the country as well as to the prosperity of the settlers.

The appearance of these orchards on the lower slopes of the mountain side and along the sunlit river rises, with row upon row of trees, bright with misty blossoms, or bowing beneath the weight of luscious loads, is well known to tourists from many lands, who are not allowed to leave New South Wales without visiting one of its most attractive centers.

In the tablelands there are large tracts of country widely separated from each other, but which have a climate and rainfall that are admirably adapted for the production of fruits of the temperate regions, including apples, pears, plums, quinces, cherries and all kinds of berry fruits, such as gooseberries, raspberries, logan berries and mulberries, and hardy nuts.

In those districts the winter is more or less severe, snow not being uncommon. The summers are clear and warm, with cool nights, so that although there is sufficient sun heat to put plenty of sugar in the fruit, it does not ripen as rapidly as in warmer, or in more humid parts, and possesses much greater firmness. It therefore keeps well when shipped, and from its high quality finds a ready market in Europe.

Cherries do remarkably well in every part of the tableland and the Red Kentish cherry grows almost wild and bears a heavy crop of fruit.

In the central district of the State there is an enormous extent of country with a soil and climatic conditions similar to portions of Spain and Italy, that is specially suited for the growth of the vine, the olive, the fig, the apricot, the drying peaches. In fact for nearly every variety of drying fruit, especially raisins, sultanas and currants.

The date palm has been successfully introduced into New South Wales and at Pen Rore, near Bourke—500 miles west from Sydney—the trees planted promise excellently.

The olive, both for oil and pickling, thrives luxuriantly in many parts of the State, and promises to be a most profitable industry, as the tree is a rapid and vigorous grower, cropping heavily, bearing good fruit and coming into bearing in much less time than it does in Europe. Experts say that the conditions prevailing on the Western slopes of the tablelands are, as a whole, much more favorable to the growth of the olive than the most renowned olive districts of Spain, Italy or France.—Adv.

Gus Wingfield has been half sick with the hay fever for several weeks. He believes the weather man is to blame for the malady.

Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Humphrey arrived this week from Kansas City to take up their residence here. Mr. Humphrey accepted a position with the Outlook as foreman.

Splendid rains have fallen this week, and all indications are that the regular rainy season is on, which means abundant moisture.

An epidemic of hay fever, or something closely related to it, has been prevalent in Carrizozo for several weeks, sending many of those afflicted to the mountains for relief, while others are nursing it at home.

Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Bacon, Jr., are visiting relatives in the south and enjoying their vacation by stopping at points of interest en route.

New families are locating in Carrizozo all the time, and they have much difficulty in finding houses or even rooms to rent. The demand for small residences is increasing.

Lute Skinner, of the Mesa, brought in a sample of spring wheat this week from his ranch. The ears were well filled and from five to seven inches. The sample would be hard to beat anywhere.

The Fifth Cavalry ball team, which played the locals here Sunday, were entertained by the home team in the evening while awaiting their train for the south.

A number of Fort Stanton sports came over Sunday to see the ball game, and incidentally to get a line on the playing of the Fifth Cavalry "ball throwers," as they may play at the Fort later on the season.

Willard Arwood, who spent a year in the army, six months of which was on the German border, returned last Friday. He is now firing a locomotive between here and El Paso, his old job before enlisting.

C. W. Hyde, late sheriff of this county, returned last week from Texas, where he is interested in the oil game. He says the oil excitement still continues there, with new wells being brought in every few days.

Mrs. Peter Burleson came up Wednesday from Lincoln to meet her son, Tom, who has been with Battery A in France. Tom, however, did not come up from El Paso until last night on No. 1.

A. V. Swearingen and D. B. Humphrey were still on the west coast, as far up as Oregon, when last heard from. Van writes, "Plenty of water, nothing else."

J. R. Green, a rancher in the Capitan district was in Carrizozo this week. He stated the prospects for ranchers and stockmen were never better than this year. He expects to make up this year for the past two years which were bad ones for the farmer.

Mrs. A. H. Crawford came up from El Paso Monday to join her husband here, who is employed as fireman on the E. P. & S. W. They intend to go to housekeeping in the northern part of town.

W. T. Foster was over from the Capitan country this week. He stated that the best and most welcome rain of the season visited that part of the county Tuesday and Wednesday night, and from what he learned from others it was general throughout the county.

Mr. and Mrs. James Hobbs came in yesterday morning from Arizona, and went the same day to the Honda country, where they formerly resided. Mr. Hobbs is a brother of Mrs. Jennie Cole, and before returning to Arizona he will come to Carrizozo for a visit with Mrs. Cole and family.

Mrs. D. L. Stimmel, accompanied by her son and daughter, left the latter part of last week for Washington states for a two months' visit with members of the family. Ben is left to do the honors of the household alone, but thinks he will be able to meet all requirements.

J. S. York, of Ancho, who had the fingers of his right hand badly mutilated about two weeks ago by being bitten by a wild horse he was endeavoring to break, is improving. He will not lose the injured fingers, but the bones have been so badly crushed that it will be a long time before he will regain use of them.

L. R. Lamay and son Fred were down from their farm on Nogal Mesa this week, and brought a sample of spring wheat with them. The sample represents two months' growth, the stalks are four feet long and well headed. It would compare favorably with that grown in Kansas or northern states.
