THE SEARCH FOR OIL

On the night of April 26, Carriage Lodge, No. 30, I. O. O. F., will hold an Anniversary meeting in honor of the 102 years of the order's existence. An elaborate luncheon will be prepared and together with a "amaker," the evening will be spent in good social fashion. Rev. Wm. Hoffman of the Baptist Church, who is a member of the order, will deliver the principal address. All members of the order and also the Relatives, are invited.

STRICT ECONOMY IN GOVERNMENTAL EXPENSES
URGED

I know of no more pressing problem at home than to restrict our national expenditures within the limits of our national income, and at the same time manfully lift the burdens of war

Farmer Must Be Protected.
It would be better to err in protecting our basic food industry than paralyze our farm activities in the world.

Freight Discourages Production.
Freight carrying charges have mounted higher and higher until commerce is halted and production discouraged. Railway rates and costs of operation must be reduced.
Congress may as well investigate and ordinated with our inland transportation and our shipping has governmental encouragement, and government operation, in carrying our cargoes under our flag; over regularly operated routes, to every market in the world, agreeable to American exchanges. It will strengthen American genius and management to have it understood that ours is an abiding determination, because carrying is second only to production in establishing and maintaining the flow of commerce to which we rightfully aspire.

It is needless to call your attention to the unfinished business inhering from the preceding Congress. The appropriation bills for army and navy will have your early decision.

Neither branch of the government can be mindful of the rail for reduced expenditures for those departments of our national defense. The government is in accord with the act

To the complete reestablishment of peace and its contracted relationship to the realization of our aspiration for nations associated for world helpfulness without world government, for world stability on which humanity's hopes are founded, we shall address ourselves, fully mindful of the high privilege and the paramount duty of the United States in this critical period of the world.

President Harding's Address

Washington, April 20.—"The very favorable impression made upon the public mind by the President's inaugural address has been very greatly strengthened by his first message to Congress," declares the Republican Publicity association, through its president, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr. "From various sources there has come in recent weeks an effort to create the feeling that the president was wavering in his attitude on the League of Nations—the issue upon which his election was chiefly determined. His message is not only a reassurance to the country in this respect, but it confirms the earlier conviction that he is a man of stable mind who can be depended upon to fulfill in both letter and spirit his campaign pledges."

"The president very properly relegated the league and peace treaty to the last place in his message, for they are among the least of our national problems. Reduction of the burden of government was treated in a most practical manner, for the president sets forth the only possible plan for reduction of taxes—reduced appropriations combined with diminished expenditures. He seeks to shirk none of his own responsibility for curtailment of the cost of the government."

"The country will heartily approve not only his utterances on that subject but also his declaration that while the government must not interfere with legitimate business neither can it tolerate restraint of trade or maintenance of prices by unnatural methods. He very appropriately called attention to the fact that reduced cost of basic production has been recorded but high cost of living has not yielded in like proportion, and that the maintained retail costs of perishable foods can not be justified."

"If any have entertained the fear that in an effort to encourage restoration of normal business conditions unfair practices would be overlooked, then fears are allayed. There will be no class favoritism in the Harding administration. Rich and poor, labor and capital, organized and unorganized, will be accorded equal opportunity and held to similar responsibilities."

"The government is to be supreme over selfish interests and the rights of all are to be protected from the encroachments of a few."

Carrizozo Woman's Club

The Woman's Club of Carrizozo met in regular session at Lutz Hall, Friday afternoon April 15. In the absence of the President Mrs. Stadman presided over the meeting; in the absence of the Secretary, minutes of the previous meeting were not read. Resolutions were adopted, urging the County Commissioners to set aside the one-half mill tax in making up their budget for the coming year, for the maintenance of a Public Health Officer in Lincoln County. A committee consisting of Mesdames French, Cole and Scott was appointed to draw up the resolutions.

The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. J. B. French, who had arranged a splendid program, foremost of which was an excellent talk on "Public Health" by State Public Health Officer H. E. Grey of Santa Fe. His talk was very instructive and highly appreciated by those who were so fortunate as to be able to hear him. Then, Mrs. Greene, presented the children from the school across the track in delightful songs, drills and readings. Those, together with recitations by Richard P.atty and Boyd Loughrey, were extremely enjoyed. Miss Eva Wack followed with "What We Have Learned, as a Class," showing benefits derived from the teachings of Nurse Greene during the past seven months. At the close, Mrs. French again urged the Club to do all in its power to secure a Health Officer for the County.

First Methodist Church

The sermon next Sunday morning will be an "Object Sermon," planned especially for children and youth. By the means of cords, ropes, etc., the binding power of sin will be illustrated. Rev. Higbee will request the assistance of some of the children to help him preach this sermon. It is hoped that the parents will plan so that their children may come to Sunday School and remain for this service. Decision Day will be held in connection with the morning session. While no undue pressure will be exerted and no one received into the church without first securing consent of parents, it is earnestly desired that many who are young and tender in years will decide now to be permitted to grow up in the kindness of God, under the protecting wing and guiding hand of His Church. The Church may not be perfect, but her influences are the greatest and her ideals the highest, known to men. Let us give our children the full benefit of the best attainable. The evening services will be Evangelical.

Prof. Robert Huston, who has been announced in the Outlook to assist in the local revival, was enabled to finish his work in El Paso sooner than expected and arrived here last Sunday evening. The services are being held at the Methodist Church this week, but will be held in the Lutz Hall after Sunday. Attendance has increased and interest deepened. People are pleased with Prof. Huston's singing. The preaching is being done by Rev. Higbee. It is not of the caustic type, but a fair and frank dealing with the truth as it is honestly understood; his attitude, one of sympathy, sharing in the problems which all must face. All who stand for the moral and spiritual uplift of our community, are invited to co-operate with us. Young People's service at 7:00 and evening preaching at 7:30 p. m.

Attention, Teachers!

All teachers of the county who have undertaken work in state or local history under the plan put out by the New Mexico State Normal about three months ago, are urged by the Normal to turn over to that institution, immediately after the close of their schools, the papers that have resulted from that work. The Normal is very anxious that one of this valuable material be lost through neglecting to file it and have the same kept in a safe place. Unexpected responses have come in, in answer to the Normal's call, from outsiders as well as from teachers, but the Normal is especially anxious that the material being collected and worked up by the teachers and students of the state, shall not be mislaid or neglected. So you are requested to send it in at the earliest practicable moment.

W. O. HALL, PRES.,
New Mexico State Normal.

Baptist Church Notes

The funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. M.
 F. Lovelace were held at the Church last Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m., with the pastor Rev.
 Wm. Huffman conducting the same. The floral offerings were beautiful. A choir of ladies sang several selections and Miss Ula Edmiston sang, "Jesus Lover of My Soul," in keeping with the request of the deceased.
 The scripture lesson was the 23rd Psalm, which was also in accordance with her wishes.

Our preaching services both morning and evening were well attended. Announcements for next Sunday are as follows:

The regular morning and evening services have been called off in deference to the revival movement at the Methodist Church. There will be prayer meeting, Sunday School and B. Y.
 P. U. meetings as usual. The Ladies' Missionary Society will give a Bazar and Tea at Mrs.
 Adams' Millinery Store on the afternoon of April 28.

IN THE PROBATE COURT

To Whom it may concern:

Notice is hereby given,
 that John M. Cravens, Administrator of the Estate of Edmund R. Hall Deceased, has filed his final report of his acts and transactions as Administrator of said estate; that the 9th day of May, 1921, has been set, the same being a special term of the Probate Court within and for the aforesaid
 County, at the hour of 10 O'clock, A.

 Carrizozo, New Mexico, as the time and place for hearing any objections to the same.

Therefore, any person or persons wishing to object to said final report, may do so by filing their objections on or before the above named date.

Dated at Carrizozo, N. M., this 12th

Notice to Tax Payers

Section 416 of Committee Substitute for House Bill No. 100, passed by the last Legislature provides for a penalty of 5 per cent to be added 15 days after any taxes shall become delinquent. Provides however, that on delinquent taxes on the 1921 call shall not be penalized until August 1st, 1921.

There seems to be a general misunderstanding about the above law, under the impression that this refers to the regulatory penalty on delinquent taxes.
 The above has nothing to do with the one percent per month penalty which has to be paid on delinquent taxes.

Respectfully,

H. G. Norman,

Treasurer & Ex-Officio Collector.
 April 15-3.

"YES; HE'S GONE."

Synopsis—Frustrated because of the seemingly barren outlook of his position as a school teacher in a Canadian town, John Harris determines to leave it, take up land in Manitoba and become a "homesteader." Mary, the girl whom he loves, declares she will accompany him. They are married and set out for the unknown country. They select a homestead, build a home and put in a crop. Returning from selling his first crop, Harris finds his wife almost insane from loneliness and with immediate expectation of becoming a mother. A son is born and they name him Allan. The story now jumps forward 25 years. Harris is prosperous and all for getting rich. Mary is ill-worn and saddened over the change in her husband. Allan works on the farm. Beulah, the pretty daughter, is rebellious at the shut-in farm life. Jim Travers is an unusual hired man and he is in love with Beulah.

"We'll hurry up the plowing. Dad, and run west before the harvest is on us," Allan said as they rode home through the darkness. "We can file our land and get back for the fall work. Then we will go out for the winter and commence our duties. The only question is, can they grow anything on that land out there?"

"That's what they used to ask when we came to Manitoba," said his father. "And there were years when I doubted the answer myself. Some parts were frozen out year after year, and they're among the best in the country now, and never think of frost. The same thing'll happen out there, and we might as well be in the game."

To do him justice, it was not altogether the desire for more wealth that prompted Harris. It was the call of new land; the call he had heard and answered in the early eighties; the old appetite that had lain dormant for a quarter of a century, but was still in his blood, waiting only a suggestion of the open spaces, a whiff from dry grass on the wind-swept plains, the sight of a wagon-trail streaking afar into the horizon, to set it tingling again.

So this morning father and son were especially anxious that not a moment of their plowing weather should be lost, and it was particularly aggravating when the hired man's long delay resulted in a bubbling sputter followed by a dry hiss from the injector, warning the engineer that the water-tank was empty. Allan shot an anxious glance down the road to the coulee, but the water team was not in sight. Seizing the whistle cord, he sent its peremptory summons into the air. Harris looked up from the plows, and the two exchanged frowns of annoyance. But the water stood high in the glass, and Allan did not reduce the speed, although he cut the link action another notch to get every ounce of advantage from the expansion. But the water went down, down in the glass, and still there was no sign of a further supply. Allan again cut the air with his whistle, and at length, with a muttered imprecation, he slammed the throttle shut and jumped from the engine.

"Keep a keen eye on your fire," said Harris, "and I'll go down and see what's wrong with him." So the farmer strode off across the plowed field. The delay annoyed him, and he felt unreasonably cross with Travers. As he plodded on through the heavy soil his temper did not improve, and he was talking to himself by the time he came upon Travers, giving his team their wind at the top of the hill bounding up from the creek.

"What kept you?" he demanded when he came within a yard of the wagon. "Here's the outfit shut down waiting for water, and you—"

"I'm sorry, Mr. Harris."

"That isn't what I asked you. You can't make steam with sorrow. What have you been foolish about?"

"I haven't been fooling. As to what delayed me—well, you're delaying me now. Better jump on and ride up with me."

"So you won't tell me, eh? You think you can do what you like with my team and my time, and it's none of my business. Well, see whose business it is."

Harris came threateningly toward the wagon, but was met only by the imperturbable smile of his hired man. He thrust his foot on a spoke of the wheel and prepared to spring onto the tank, but at that moment the horses stirred and his foot slipped. Seeing that the farmer was about to fall Travers seized him by the collar of his shirt, but in so doing he leaped and lost his own balance, when the weight of the falling man came upon him, and the two tumbled onto the grass in each other's arms.

Allan, having satisfied himself that the engine would take no harm, had followed his father, and came over the crest of the ridge above the coulee just in time to see Jim apparently strike his employer and the two struggling on the grass together. In an instant the young man's hot blood was to his head; he rushed forward, and just as Jim had risen to his knees he struck him a stinging blow in the face that measured him again in the grass. It was only for an instant. Travers sprang to his feet, a red line slowly stretching down his cheek as he did so. Allan came upon him swinging a tremendous blow at the jaw; but Jim guarded skilfully, and answered with a smash from the shoulder straight on the chin, which laid his adversary's six feet prostrate before him.

Allan rose slowly, sober but determined, and for a moment it looked as though a battle royal were to be fought on the spot, both men strong, lean, rigid, hard as iron, and quick as steel; Allan angry, careless, furious; Jim calm, confident, and still smiling. But Harris rushed between them and seized his son by the arms.

"Stop it, Allan; stop it, I say. You mustn't fight. Jim didn't hit me—I'll say that for him. Now quit it. As for you" (turning to Jim), "I'm sorry for this, but you have yourself to blame. I'll give you one more chance to answer me—what kept you?"

"I don't choose to answer," was Jim's reply, spoken in the most casual tone. His eye was rapidly closing where Allan's blow had fallen on it, but his white teeth still glistened behind a smile.

"All right," said Harris. "You can go to the house and tell Mrs. Harris to pay you what is coming." And the farmer climbed onto the wagon and took the reins himself.

When Jim entered the kitchen he was received with astonishment by Mrs. Harris and Beulah. "Why, whatever has happened?" they exclaimed. "Has there been an accident? You're hurt!"

But Jim smiled, and said: "No accident at all. I have merely decided to go homesteading." And he went up the stairs to pack his belongings.

CHAPTER VI.

Into the Night.

Harris and Allan drove straight to the engine, never looking back to see what became of the hired man. On the way the farmer explained to his son what had taken place; that words had passed between them, but no blows had been struck, until Allan, as he said, had intervened.

"I can't make out what got into Jim, that he wouldn't answer a civil question. Jim was a good man, too." Perhaps the disturbing suggestion entered Harris' mind that the question had been one too civil, and he was really longing to feel that after all Jim might be the aggrieved party. But he dropped down such a snarl upon the subject. "It don't matter how good a man he was," he declared, "as long as I pay him what I'm going to call the rate."

"It puts us up against it for a waterman, though," said Allan, thoughtfully.

"So it does," admitted Harris, who up to that moment had not reflected that his hasty action in dismissing Travers would result in much more delay than anything else that had occurred. "Well, we'll have to get somebody else. We'll manage till noon, and then you better ride over to Grant's or Morrison's. They'll be able to lend a man or one of the boys for a day or two."

At noon Jim's chair was vacant, and the family sat down to dinner amid a depressing silence. No mention was made of the morning's incident until the meal was well advanced, when Harris, feeling that he ought in some way to introduce the subject, said: "Is Jim gone?"

"Yes, he's gone," blazed Beulah. "You didn't expect he'd wait to kiss you good-by, did you?"

"One in the family is enough for that treatment," put in Allan, whose swollen chin and stiff neck still biased him against Travers.

"He didn't, either. And if he did it's none of your business, you big—!" she looked her brother straight in the face, her swollen eyes telling their own story, and repeated deliberately, "you big coward!"

Allan bit his lip.

"Jim's quite a hero, all right. It's too bad he's gone."

"It's a good job he's gone," said Harris. "By the way Beulah talks things have gone far enough. I don't want my daughter marrying a farmer."

"Her grandmother's daughter did," said Mrs. Harris.

"Yes, I know, but things are different now. I look for something better for Beulah."

It was characteristic of Harris, as of thousands of others, that, although a farmer himself, he looked for "something better" for his daughter. He was resigned to Allan being a farmer; his intimate, daily relationship with his son shrank from any possibility of separation. But for his daughter—no. He had mapped out no career for her; she might marry a doctor, lawyer, merchant, tradesman, even a minister, but not a farmer. It is a peculiarity of the agriculturist that, among all professions, he holds his own in the worst repute. In later years has come a gradually broadening conception that farming, after all, calls for brain as well as muscle, and that the man who can wrestle a successful living from nature has as much right to hold up his head in the world as the experimenter in medicine or the lawyer playing hide-and-seek with justice through the cracks in the criminal code. Herein is a germ of the cityward migration: the farmer himself is looking for "something better" for his children.

"Jim was a good man," persisted his wife. "Don't you think you were—well, perhaps, a little hasty with him?"

Harris sat back. It was his wife's business to agree. For twenty years and more she had been faithful in the discharge of that duty. That she should suggest an opinion out of harmony with his indicated a lack of discipline, not very serious, perhaps, but a seed which, if permitted to flourish, might develop to dangerous proportions.

"So you're going to take his part, too? It's a strange thing if I can't handle my hired help without advice from the house."

Mary flushed at the remark. Any open quarrel with her husband, especially before the children—for she still thought of the man and woman to her left and right as "the children"—was more painful to her than any submission could have been. It would be so much easier to change the subject, to follow the line of least resistance, and forget the incident as quickly as possible. But of late the conviction had been coming home to her that some time, somewhere, she must make a stand. And, quite unbidden, a strange surge of defiance welled in her when her husband so frankly told her to mind her own business.

"I was under the impression we were managing this farm together, you and I, John," she said, very calmly, but with a strange ring in her voice. "When we came West I understood it was to build our home. I didn't know it was just to be your home."

The look of surprise with which Harris greeted her words was absolutely genuine. A hot, stinging retort sprang to his lips, but by a sudden effort he suppressed it. "We will talk about that some other time, Mary," he said. "If Jim had answered my question fairly, as he had a right to, instead of beating around the bush, I might've let him off. But when I wanted to know what kept him he simply parried me, making a fool of me and rubbing it in with that infernal smile of his."

"So that's what started it?" exclaimed Beulah. "Well, I'll tell you what kept him, if he wouldn't. The cattle got into the oats through a break in the fence, and I couldn't get them out, and the dog went lying over the pasture after a rabbit, and just as I was beginning to—condemne over it Jim came up and saved the situation. What if he did keep your old engine waiting? There are more important things than plowing."

"Aha!" said Harris, knowingly. "Well, I guess it's just as well it happened as it did. Jim was getting' altogether too good at runnin' at your heels."

"That's all the thanks he gets for working late and early, like no other hired man in the district. All right. You and Allan can milk the cows to-night, for I won't—see?"

"You see, they're living—and we're existing."

BELIEVES IN SAVING PENNIES

Rich New York Banker Certainly Cannot Be Justly Accused of Undue Wastefulness.

Russell Sage made a great record, but there's another rich man who is not on his trail.

This man is a New York investment banker who is largely interested in a southern railroad. Once a year he makes a trip of inspection over the property in a private car. Usually he takes with him two big valises, into which his extra clothing is packed. Arriving at the end of the road he sends his valet to a barber shop, which he has patronized once a year for years, to arrange for a bath. A porter carries the two valises there and back. For this he receives a tip of five cents. The banker pays 25 cents for his bath. After bathing he returns to the private car. He sleeps in it in the railroad yard rather than pay the fancy price the hotel charges.

The financial man's valet never washes out his employer's shaving cup. The banker does not believe in wasting soap. —Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Smart Dog.

"I've just paid three dollars for an alarm clock, and I consider it positively disconcerting," grumbled Brown one evening.

"But why buy an alarm clock?" answered Jones. "I have a dog that is as good as any alarm clock. He barks every morning at 5:30 o'clock."

"What a wonderful dog!" remarked Brown, without much enthusiasm.

"Yes," continued Jones, "all I have to do is to get out of bed and hit the dog, and then he barks, and I know it is time to get up."

Inseparable.

"Waggle and his young wife are inseparable, aren't they?"

"Yes; he calls her his altar ego."

A woman never thoroughly enjoys anything she can't cry over.

MADE QUEER HIDING PLACE

Sleeping Aperture Proved Effective in Concealing Elongated Individual in Lady's Bedroom.

Lord Rossmore, who has just died in England, was a great sportsman and hunter, and had many good stories, not only of the hunting field, but of life in many other places. One of these concerned his friend, Ray Middleton, whom he describes as one of the best riders to hounds that ever lived, and runs as follows:

"Ray once told a lady that he could hide so effectively in her bedroom that she could never discover him. She hunted high and low, but never a trace of the hidden one could she see."

"The lady was completely at her wits' end, and at last, when she had literally gone all over the room inch by inch, she was startled out of her seven senses by hearing Ray's voice exclaiming: 'Hallo! I can see you.' This was a puzzle and no mistake, but the mystery was at last solved, for Middleton, who was long and thin, had got inside the bolster!"

Culinary Note.

"What'll you have for lunch, mum?" "What have we in the house, Mary?" "Well, there's some lamb scrap from yesterday, a hunk of that beef roast, two pieces of sausage and a stalk of celery."

"Good! I guess we'd better make some chicken croquettes." —Richmond Times Dispatch.
