1. Utilizing whereby existing proposed programs may be judged 1. Criteria for collecting essential data listing upon established criteria for evaluation of program quality, and provide against such criteria

2. Program Development

This Mission, Goals, and Means statement is now ready for faculty endorsement and subsequent approval by the Board of Regents as the essential basis for long range planning, unit review, and more comprehensive work by our divisions. Once UNM's Mission statement is clear and agreed upon, we may proceed.

Step Two: Step two included operationalization of the Mission, Goals, and Means statement and detailing of programmatic interests.
 Divisions have specific goals for enrollment, instruction, faculty, media, space, facilities, consulting, student academic progress, student aid, budget, administration, and so forth.

Step Three: The next step is to incorporate the university with the goals. The subdivisions of the university will derive their goals from the larger university goals rather than from traditional traditional definitions.

Step Four: The departments begin to coordinate.

Step Five: Budget allocations and expenditures reflect achievement of goals.

Step Six: The final step involves constant evaluation and unit review which becomes corrective and proactive.

The other delineated business of our committee is the detail-tion of the composition of the long range planning committee. It was is should report and the final development of the implementation of the planning process. Both the endorsement of the Mission, Goals, and Means statement and the committee composition will have to be left until Fall 1978. Meanwhile, as chair of this committee, I would like to recommend that we take this unprecedented opportunity to be responsible faculty in shaping not only the future of UNM but our own.
