FAILED TO REACH MOUNTAINAIR

Governor Mills Spent Warm Day in Albuquerque Railroad Yards.

Governor's Day at the Mountainair, Torrance county, Chautauqua, was celebrated yesterday without the presence of Governor Mills. And thereby hangs a tale. Governor Mills had set out for Mountainair on Tuesday evening. He went to sleep on his Pullman, hoping to find himself in Mountainair by morning. But when the porter called, the governor found himself in the Albuquerque yards of the Santa Fe railroad. A freight wreck at Barr had tied up all south bound trains at Albuquerque. "One hour for breakfast, sah," said the porter at 7 a. m. But eight o'clock arrived and the train still seemed glued fast to the tracks at Albuquerque. Hour after hour passed in the sizzling sun and when at four o'clock in the afternoon train No. 10 pulled out, eight hours late, Governor Mills boarded it for the cooler clime of Santa Fe, much to his regret, however, and to the disappointment of the people of Mountainair.

INJUNCTION AGAINST ILLINOIS MINE WORKERS.

Restrained From Interfering in Any Manner With the Operations of the O'Gara Company.

Danville, Ill., Aug. 4.—Judge Wright of the United States district court today ordered an injunction restraining President Walker of the Illinois Mine Workers and other officials of the state organization from interfering with the operation of the mines of O'Gara Coal Company in Saline county. The company operates four mines for the Big Four railroad. The Wright decision, it is said, may go far toward settling the differences between President Lewis, president of the national organization, and President Walker of the Illinois body, which threatened to result in a split of the United Mine Workers. The trouble between the officials arose over the settlement of the differences of the miners and operators of this state.

CALIFORNIA HAS MURDER MYSTERY

Charred Remains of Bones of Kendall Family Are Discovered

JAPANESE BOY IS SUSPECTED

Gruesome Tragedy Enacted on Ranch Near Santa Rosa.

Santa Rosa, Calif., Aug. 4.—Sonoma county officials believe that a Japanese boy Henry Yamaguchi, for whom a vigorous search is being made, can furnish the key to the mysterious triple murder on a lonely ranch near here, the element of which parallels in certain respects the gruesome tragedy of the Guinness farm in Indiana. The crime was revealed yesterday, when officers investigating the mysterious disappearance of a family of three, discovered the charred bones of Enoch Kendall, his wife and Thomas Kendall, their son, in the yard of their canon home north of Santa Rosa. The Japanese boy is believed to be the murderer of all three. Yamaguchi occupied a cabin on the ranch and is known to have had a violent quarrel with Thomas Kendall, and who is said to have beaten and shot at the boy.

Stone Covered With Blood.
Santa Rosa, Calif., Aug. 4.—A few days ago neighbors noting that nothing had been seen of the Kendalls for more than a week, called the attention of the authorities. Sheriff Smith and two court officers visited the ranch. In the ashes of the stove in the kitchen, fragments of bones were found. A trail of cinders led to the yard. Following this, the searchers came upon an ash pile containing a large number of human bones, and several blackened pieces of jewelry which were identified as belonging to the Kendalls. A heavy stone covered with blood, was found under the fence. The ranch was owned by Mrs. Margaret Starbuck, the wife of a prominent Oakland architect. Frequent quarrels between the Kendalls and Mrs. Starbuck occurred, and Mrs. Starbuck several times had gone into court over such matters.

BLOODLESS SURGERY AT OSTEOPATHIC CONVENTION.

Lorenz Operation Performed Amidst Applause Upon an Eight Year Old Boy at San Francisco.

San Francisco, Aug. 4.—The fourteenth annual convention of the American Osteopathic Association, was inaugurated with a demonstration of the famous Lorenz operation, performed by Harry W. Forbes of Los Angeles, upon 8-year-old Vera Sternemann of Oakland, who was born with an acute dislocation of the hip.

The demonstration of the bloodless surgery feat performed by Dr. Lorenz of Vienna upon little Lolita Armour, daughter of the Chicago packer, was witnessed by more than 500 delegates to the convention, seated in the ballroom of the St. Francis hotel. Dr. Forbes' skill in the performance of the operation was applauded by his audience. The condition of the patient will be carefully watched and daily observations will be made by experts in order that a detailed report of the case may be made for the study of osteopaths.

Dr. E. C. Rieker of Minneapolis, president of the association, was in the chair at the opening of the session.

Norton, president of the First National bank of Newell, Iowa, and member of the firm of Norton Brothers, prominent real estate and land agents of that city, died at the Alamosa hospital of Bright's disease, after an illness of four days. He was 62 years old and leaves a wife, three sons and four daughters. He was prominent in the Masonic order. The body will be returned to Newell for burial. CHICAGO GETS $7,000,000 A YEAR FROM THE SALOONS.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—The number of saloons in Chicago, according to the latest census report received from Washington yesterday, is gradually decreasing although the prospect is that it will be a good many years before the ratio of one saloon to every 500 citizens laid down in a city ordinance is achieved. To attain that distribution the city must either lose 2,500 existing saloons or gain 1,500,000 in population.

GORE SPRINGS HIS SENSATION

Accuses Republican National Committeeman of Offering Him Bribe

SHERMAN MAN HIGHER UP

Blind Senator Was to Receive $25,000 in $30,000 Land Deal.

Muskogee, Okla., Aug. 4.—Carrying out his purpose to disclose all he knew concerning the alleged offer of a bribe of $25,000 for which he said he was to promote a $30,000,000 Indian land deal, United States Senator Gore today, told a special House investigating committee the time and place at which the alleged bribe was offered. Senator Gore named Jason Hamon, former national Republican committeeman from Oklahoma, as the man who offered the bribe. The bribe was offered at Washington May 6th the senator testified.

Vice-President Sherman Accused.
Muskogee, Okla., Aug. 4.—Vice-President Sherman was named by Senator Gore as the man "higher up" in connection with the McMurray contracts.

Drugs in Vice President Sherman.
Muskogee, Aug. 4.—Senator Gore declared when he frowned upon the bribery proffer, Hamon said the amount might be raised to $50,000. "Hamon also told me that Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas and Congressman McGuire of Oklahoma were interested in the McMurray contracts," testified Senator Gore, "and while I am about it I might as well tell that he said an official higher up in the government was also interested in the contracts." The senator at first said that he was reluctant to name the man mentioned higher up, but being pressed by Congressman Burke, the chairman of the committee, declared Hamon had used the name of Vice President Sherman.

"When he named the person higher up, I held up my hands in astonishment," continued Senator Gore, "and said: 'Is it possible that a person so high in the United States government could lay himself open to such imputation?' 'Well," replied Hamon, "this is lots of money, you see." The bribery offer Senator Gore explained followed his opposition to the approval by Congress of what are known as the McMurray contracts which affect the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes of Indians. By these contracts the senator said, J. F. McMurray, attorney, and his assistants, were to receive ten per cent of the profits in the sale of 450,000 acres of coal and asphalt lands belonging to Indians which a New York syndicate stood ready to purchase for $30,000,000. President Roosevelt, the senator explained, had refused in 1908, to give his approval to these contracts with the Indians.

Sensor Gore created another sensation by saying that Congressman C. E. Creager, Republican of the third district of Oklahoma, also had been approached in connection with the bribery offer. "Mr. Creager told me so," said the senator. "He also told me to go ahead and make these charges and he would stand by, giving his testimony."

Ormsby McHarg Is There.
Muskogee, Okla., Aug. 4.—Ormsby McHarg and 12 other witnesses are here to attend the hearing before the congressional committee investigating charges by Gore.

Curtis Ready to Testify.
Topeka, Kan., Aug. 4.—Senator Curtis today telegraphed to Chairman Burke of the investigating committee that he is ready to appear at any time or place.

Senator Curtis Denies.
Topeka, Kan., Aug. 4.—Senator Curtis, of Kansas, today emphatically denied that he had any connection with the McMurray contracts.

NATIVE SHEEP HERDER KILLED NEAR GRAND JUNCTION.

Authorities Investigating Whether Shooting Was Committed By Cattlemen or Accidental.

Grand Junction, Colo., Aug. 4.—Aledolas Zerzo, a sheep herder employed by Goshen brothers, was killed on Pinon mesa, in the disputed cattle and sheep territory, thirty miles south of this city. Word of his death was brought by James S. Laphan, and Coroner Day left at once to investigate. Laphan declared the death was due to an accident and that the Mexican apparently had fallen on his rifle and discharged it himself. Comrades of Zerzo think, however, he was killed by cattlemen. They are excited over the tragedy and fear future results. This is the first death since the recent outbreak between Colorado cattlemen and Utah sheepmen, and the cattlemen insist Zerzo died at his own hand.

UNREST ACUTE IN SPAIN

Armed Encounter at Barcelona Followed by Charge of Police

CLASH IMMINENT AT CAPITAL

Preparations for Hostile Demonstration Continue Despite Prohibition.

Barcelona, Aug. 4.—A collision in which weapons were used, took place on the streets today, between the Carlist adherents of Don Jaime, the Spanish pretender, and the Republicans. One Republican was wounded with a knife. The police charged the fighting crowds and dispersed them.

Clash is Imminent.
Madrid, Aug. 4.—Renewed and formal prohibition of the proposed manifestation of the clerical forces at San Sebastian, the summer capital, next Sunday, was issued today by the minister of the interior. The organizers nevertheless persist in their plans and as the Republican leaders are arranging an anti-clerical demonstration at San Sebastian the same day, great apprehension prevails. The clerical press today published articles of extreme violence against the government. Troops are held in readiness to enter the summer capital at any moment.

Butcher Weyler Makes a Threat.
Paris, Aug. 4.—All danger of serious disturbances in Catalonia appears to have been warded off, says a special correspondent in Barcelona, by Captain General Weyler's energetic precautionary measures and his well-known decision of character.

"The moment a revolutionary outbreak in Barcelona compels me as captain general to assume the supreme command," General Weyler is credited with saying, "I want the revolutionists to know they must prepare for a merciless fight. There will be neither prisoners nor wounded. The hospitals will become useless and the cemeteries will have to be enlarged." At the same time he assured the strikers and workmen that they would have nothing to fear while remaining orderly in their disputes with their employers.

ENOUGH GERMS TO KILL OFF EVERY KANSAN.

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 4.—Thirteen vials, containing tuberculosis and diphtheria germs, addressed to Dr. Sarah A. Greenfield, bacteriologist of the state board of health, disappeared from the United States mails last Friday and a search for them resulted in finding the vials, open and empty, in an alley in the west part of the city. The package containing the vials was taken out by the postman, but was lost or stolen before he delivered it. The state board of health declines to tell exactly where the vials were found, fearing to rouse the neighborhood.

There were enough germs in the vials to depopulate the state, but the board of health thinks there will be no serious results, as the broken vials were found where the direct rays of the sun shone on them.

WANTS TO BE A BOY

Had Your Aunt Been Your Uncle What Would Have Happened?

CONUNDRUM BY CANNON

He Has No Comment to Make on Insurgent Victory in Kansas.

Mackinac Island, Aug. 4.—"I know nothing of the Kansas primaries except what I saw in the papers, as I am on my vacation trying to be a boy and throw double somersaults which is not hard if you know how," said Speaker Cannon today, when asked his opinion on the insurgent victory in Kansas. "You can easily prove by any of the metropolitan papers," continued the speaker, "that I am in my second childhood, so I ought to be allowed to do anything now I could do in my tender years. I probably will not say anything regarding the elections. It is a case of had your aunt been your uncle what would have happened? I am up here for a good time and prefer to let politics alone. I just want to be a boy."

RUMOR OF CONFESSION DENIED

No Evidence That Miss Leneve Had Married the Dentist.

London, Aug. 4.—Superintendent Freest of Scotland Yard, again today gave his personal assurances that not a single word had been received from Inspector Dew, that Crippen had confessed. He added that if a confession had been made he certainly would have been informed. He said this morning that an exhaustive official investigation had failed to produce any evidence of a marriage between Crippen and Miss Leneve. The police are hoping that Miss Leneve will make a witness for the crown, but if it is proven that she is the wife of Dr. Crippen she may refuse absolutely to take the stand against her husband.

Defense Makes First Move.
London, Aug. 4.—Solicitor Newton, who has been retained to defend Dr. Crippen, made his first move today when he filed a formal application asking the authorities to permit an independent physician to examine the bits of human flesh found in the Crippen cellar. It is understood that Newton will contend that they cannot be identified as having belonged to the body of Belle Elmore.

COULD HAVE FOUND A JOB IN SANTA FE.
Swedish Girl Attempts Suicide Because She Could Not Find Employment.

Colorado Springs, Aug. 4.—Lying prostrate on the steps of the Swedish Baptist church, a young Swedish girl, giving the name of Otilla Johnson, was found by passersby and when taken to police headquarters told a strange story of how she had haunted the foothills in the vicinity of the Garden of the Gods for the last two weeks and lived on berries and twigs of trees.

"I went there to die," said the girl. "I was out of work and had no friends. I despaired of finding help in this heartless country and felt that my time had come." The girl showed the effect of exposure to the weather and was weak from hunger. According to her story she had been employed as a domestic by a family, but was discharged. The family, she declared, refused to give her any of her belongings and slammed the door in her face when she made an appeal to them.

The Associated Charities is investigating the case, and meanwhile the girl is being cared for by the association.

WILL GIVE CLOTHING TO 5,000 POOR CHILDREN.

Charity to Be One of Features of Independence Celebration in Capital of Mexico.

Mexico City, Aug. 4.—In addition to their plan to give clothing to 5,000 poor children of the public schools during the centennial independence celebration in Mexico next month the ladies of the Society of the Protection of School Children purposes several permanent charities, such as the establishment of restaurants for pupils who are often compelled to attend school without sufficient nourishment, and a shop in which clothing for the children will be made.

The ladies have issued a circular appealing to the merchants of the capital for their assistance.

The restaurant plan contemplates giving wholesome food to all children who may be certified by their teachers as being too poor to obtain enough to eat otherwise. In the clothing shop many persons will be employed to make garments for the little ones.

Some of the most influential women in the capital are behind the movement to help the school children. They insist that this is the noblest work that has been undertaken this centennial year, and they are finding many supporters among those who are able to give to aid the cause in which they are engaged.

SHARP ISSUE IN TENNESSEE

Governor Patterson's Political Fate in Balance at the Primaries

INDEPENDENCE OF JUDICIARY

Accusation That Chief Executive Sought to Co-erce Court.

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 4.—Today the selection of candidates for the supreme court, the court of civil appeals, chancery and circuit judge and attorney general and four Congressmen, takes place. Overshadowing interest, however, centers in the hearing of the result on the political fortunes of Governor Patterson, who is a nominee for a third term. A supreme court, free from the domination of the governor, is the prime issue involved. This grows out of the celebrated Cooper trial, three of the judges of the present supreme court having charged Patterson with attempted coercion in connection with that case.

AN AVIATION MEET FOR SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA.

Big Program Arranged for Frontier Day and Carnival in Capital of Golden State.

Sacramento, Calif., Aug. 4.—An aviation meet with Charles X. Hamilton who recently flew from New York to Philadelphia and back, as the leading feature; the big frontier days show, with its wild horse riders champion steer ropers and bucking horse contests; the annual tournament of the Pacific Association of the National Amateur Athletic Union, with probably 200 athletes competing for track honors; and last but not least, the magnificent fireworks display by the Pain Pyrotechnic Co., the big program for the fiesta of the Dawn of Gold is at last complete in all its essential details.

Thousands will journey to Sacramento to see Hamilton fly and they will be well repaid for their trouble. The contract for his appearance was closed after extended negotiations following Curtiss' telegram announcing that he will be unable to keep his engagement. Curtiss is known the world over and has a reputation second to none as an aviator, but Hamilton is conceded to be a more sensational performer, and so rapidly has he forced to the front during the last few months that his services are in constant demand at all the big meets in the east. He has also been honored by being selected by the government to make a series of experimental flights for the war department.

One of the conditions insisted on by Hamilton before agreeing to fly for the fiesta spectators, was that the fiesta committee should put up $2,000 to be awarded to any aviator breaking world's records. This money reward will undoubtedly attract other aviators to the fiesta and some interesting contests may be expected.

The Frontier Days show will divide the honors of the fiesta with Hamilton and will probably prove an even greater attraction as it will bring a large class of people to Sacramento that takes comparatively little interest in aeroplanes and Man Birds. Cowboy sports in which are exhibited marvelous horsemanship and reckless daring, are an irresistible attraction to the majority of people, whether they come from town or country. Every known form of cowboy sports will be depicted in the Frontier Days show by the greatest experts in the country, and in addition to the exhibition stunts there will be a large number of contests for big money purses which will bring contestants from all over the west.

The Athletic tournament will open the fiesta and will last one, and possibly two, days. It is expected that between twenty and thirty teams, averaging ten men each and representing all the big amateur athletic organizations in California and Nevada, will contest for the medals and trophies. If a sanction can be obtained from the national officers in New York, the tournament will be enlarged to take in the whole Pacific coast.

The fireworks display, which will be given every evening of the fiesta, will be the most magnificent and spectacular ever seen in the west, if not in the entire country. Two hundred men and women, including two score Indians, will participate in the opening tableau, representing an attack by Indians on a mining camp and massacre of the inhabitants, followed by the killing or capture of the Indians by soldiers. The set pieces and aerial fireworks will be beautiful and brilliant beyond description and wonderfully fascinating.

With this program there can no longer be any doubt of the success of the fiesta, which means the success of the state fair, in conjunction with which the fiesta will be held.

THE DAILY ROUND UP.

MIDSUMMER.

Dappled and dimpled with clover and daisies;
Slopes the broad meadowland down from the ridge—
Down to the slow footed brook where it lazies,
Under the willows and under the bridge.

One by one, placidly, thin clouds are filing.
Music-mad bobolinks gladden the hours.

Summer, half drowsing, looks up to God smiling,
Pleasant with odors and brilliant with flowers.

Dreamy old maples their branches are swaying,
Stirred by the breezes that fitfully flow.

Deep in the scented grass cattle are straying,
Daintily cropping the solemn sheep go.

Time, even time, has forgotten to hurry.
Listless all earth lieth, languid, a swoon.

Off with your troubles, away with your worry,
Summer's at flood; it is nature's high noon.

—V. G. Doty in the Columbian.

ACT QUICKLY.

Delay Has Been Dangerous in Santa Fe.

Do the right thing at the right time. Act quickly in times of danger. Bachache is kidney danger. Doan's Kidney Pills act quickly. Cure all distressing, dangerous kidney ills.

Plenty of evidence to prove this. Locario Lopez, Agua Fria St., Santa Fe, N. M., says: "I have had no severe return attack of kidney trouble since using Doan's Kidney Pills several years ago. Now and then I have suffered from backache but at such times Doan's Kidney Pills have given prompt and positive relief. For a long time I was made miserable by attacks of kidney complaint and my back was often so lame and painful that I could scarcely do anything. I did not sleep well and no matter whether I was lying down or standing up, the trouble was in evidence. The kidney secretions annoyed me both day and night by their irregularity in passage and there was a heavy sediment in them. After several remedies had failed to help me, I procured Doan's Kidney Pills and they lived up to all the claims made for them. I never hesitate to say a good word for Doan's Kidney Pills when opportunity occurs."

IN NEW MEXICO'S POLITICAL PASTURES

The Republicans of Springer have chosen Messrs. Mikesell and Parish to represent them at the Colfax county convention at Raton on Saturday.

Tonight a Republican rally will be held at the city hall of Eat Las Vegas. The speakers will be Attorney Charles A. Spiess of Las Vegas, and Attorney V. O. Soule of North Dakota.

Throughout Arizona young men in both the Republican and Democratic parties are forming clubs to take active part in the campaign for the election of delegates to the constitution convention.

The Republicans of Precinct No. 20, Raton, have selected the following delegates to represent them at the Colfax county convention, August 6: A. R. Streicher, A. Starub, G. S. Brown, Thomas McBride, Elmer Studley, E. C. Champton, James K. Hunt, William Oliver, T. A. McAuliffe, T. B. Hart, C. A. Whitte and L. S. Wilson.

The Republican party organization in Santa Fe county is harmonious. At the central committee meeting on Tuesday evening, a spirit of fair play prevailed. The primaries were called for Wednesday evening, August 17, at 7:30 p. m., and the county convention for August 20. Precinct chairmen were named for each precinct. In Santa Fe, in Ward No. 1, Telesfor Rivera will be president; in Ward No. 2, District Attorney E. C. Abbott; in Ward No. 3, Thomas B. Catron, and in Ward No. 4, Colonel George W. Prichard. These selections will assure good order and proper procedure at these meetings and no one will find any excuse on that score for staying away from these important meetings. It still looks as if the Democrats would not put a ticket in the field in this county, as they recognize that Santa Fe county has the most to gain by harmony and much to lose by dissension at this time.

"I was surprised to hear, upon coming to Santa Fe," said former Associate Justice Edward A. Mann of Albuquerque, "that my name had been mentioned in connection with the attack of the Albuquerque Morning Journal upon Judge A. B. Fall of Otero county. One report goes so far as to say that I was present when Delegate to Congress W. H. Andrews, is alleged to have offered over the telephone $1,500 to some one in Alamogordo, to defeat Fall. I was in California, when the newspaper warfare was inaugurated and it is a matter of indifference to me, what personality is sent from Otero county to sit in the constitutional convention, except as to the interest that every other citizen has in the result. I am neither for or against at this time, either Delegate W. H. Andrews, or Judge A. B. Fall, for the U. S. Senate, but I do believe that personal ambitions should be kept in check until statehood is secured. Our first duty is to unite efforts to secure a good constitution and to be admitted under it as a state. Then there will be plenty of time to pass on personal ambitions for preferment. It is to be regretted that any dissensions should occur now over personal antagonism and ambitions. Of course, the above reports I refer to are as false as they are absurd."

The Bernalillo County Democratic Club at a meeting at Albuquerque on Tuesday evening adopted the following resolutions: "It is the sense of the Democratic club of Bernalillo county that the candidates of the Democratic party for delegates to the constitutional convention in this county should be selected at a direct primary by the voters of the several precincts and not by delegates to a convention, under such rules and regulations for the holding of said direct primaries as will insure that such candidates shall be the express choice of the Democratic voters of the county; that delegates pledged to the support of those candidates receiving the highest number of votes at such primary, to a county convention to be held to ratify the action of such primary, shall be selected in each precinct at such primary, such delegates to constitute the county central committee. It is further the sense of this club that such rules and regulations should be formulated by the Democratic county central committee in conjunction with a committee of this club to be selected by the president, and of which he shall be a member, and these resolutions are hereby submitted to said central committee for its consideration."

August time, tells on the nerves. But that spiritless, no ambition feeling can be easily and quickly altered by taking what is known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Within 48 hours after beginning to use the Restorative, improvement will be noticed. Of course, full health will not immediately return. The gain, however, will surely follow. And best of all, you will realize and feel your strength and ambition as it is returning. Outside influences depress first the "inside nerves" then the stomach, Heart and Kidneys will usually fail. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative and see how quickly health will be yours again. Sold by Stripling Burrows Co.

APPLE CROP TO YIELD $100,000,000 YEARLY.

Northwest Sets an Example That New Mexico Will Find Profitable to Follow—Still Room for Homeseekers.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 4.—"While apples are not yet the principal product of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, those who are familiar with the unrivaled climatic, soil and other conditions believe the time is near when the apple yields of the four states will be worth $100,000,000 yearly and the culture of the king of fruit will be the chief industry."

H. L. Moody, of Spokane, where he is a member of the Chamber of Commerce and other organizations, said this in an address on "Apple Culture and Irrigation in the Northwest" at the first meeting of the Chicago Irrigation Association in the La Salle hotel here the evening of July 28. Judge Charles F. Fishback was toastmaster. Mr. Moody added among other things:

"Federal and state engineers say in reports to their respective departments there are approximately 200,000,000 acres of undeveloped arable lands in the United States west of the 98th meridian, and men versed in agriculture assert that under proper cultivation this area could be made to produce between 4,000,000,000 and 5,000,000,000 bushels of wheat yearly, or other crops in proportion. The settlement of these lands would mean homes for not less than 20,000,000 population and a source of added food supply, and as a consequence, permanent prosperity."

"The four northwestern states contain 253,984,760 acres, as follows: Montana, 93,806,080; Oregon, 61,887,360; Idaho, 53,960,320; Washington, 44,241,000. Less than 5 per cent of this land is occupied by farms and the total population is not more than 3,000,000 in an area of 397,700 square miles. More than 50,000,000 acres of this land is adapted to irrigation. Planted to apples and properly watered the minimum crop at maturity would be a matter of 20,000,000,000 bushels, or about 40 per cent of the total crop of the United States in 1909, when less than 22,000,000 barrels of apples were harvested."

"I mention these facts merely to show the possibilities of the country as proof that as gold was the strong magnet which sent the first American across the continent to the California coast in 1849, so today the apple is attracting thousands upon thousands more people from eastern, middle-western and southern states to the great orchard belts of the northwest. "The apple is king throughout the vast northwestern domain, and it is conceded by pomological experts that no district in America stands higher in fruit production. Washington has now more than 200,000 acres in orchards, and the value of a full fruit crop would undoubtedly equal $100,000,000."

"With increased transportation facilities and the steady influx of settlers, the early attempts in the valleys and uplands have become more pretentious and systematic. Irrigation plants have been established by private individuals and corporations, and the United States government is expending enormous sums in reclaiming the volcanic wastes which are so wonderfully rich and fertile and so peculiarly adapted to raising fruits, unblemished and perfect in size and color."

"Apples grown in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana are in demand in the eastern and middle-western states and in Europe and Australia and the markets are being extended year by year. Experts in the east who have studied conditions in the northwest frequently refer to these states as 'a world's fruit basket,' adding there has been established in a comparatively short time a domain where the first foot of soil, properly cultivated and irrigated, is worth more than all the mines from Alaska to Mexico and all the forests from the United States boundary to the Arctic sea.

"Regarding possible over-production in the northwest, I may say that the demand is growing greater every day, not only throughout America, but in Europe, Australia and the Orient. Although population and the domestic demand for these fruits has increased, and exports continually augmented, strangely enough, the production of the apple has steadily decreased. The apple crop for 1909, reported to be less than 23,000,000 barrels, for example, was only slightly in excess of one-third of that for the years 1896 and 1900, and much less than the crop for 1905, when the production reached a low figure. The fact that the production in the United States has averaged below 30,000,000 barrels in four of the last five years alone should dispel any thought of over-production."

"Economists have warned the people repeatedly during the last quarter of a century of the failure to make the sources of food supplies keep pace with the increases in population. They have warned against the menace of congestion in the larger cities, also, however, expressing the belief that the crisis toward which the world's food problem is leading may be averted by increasing the productive capacity of the land or by extending the agricultural area. Advocates of irrigation now come to the fore with proof that modern tillage has greatly increased the acre production as well as the productive area, also showing that beautiful orchards mark the sites of former barren deserts."

"The movement of population has been turned from urban to rural life to an appreciable extent during the last few years and emigration experts show by the establishment of prosperous towns and productive farms in Washington, Idaho, Oregon, Montana and other states in the semi-arid west that never in history has there been such a widespread movement of homeseekers. Most of the settlers to the northwest invaded unoccupied semi-arid lands, as others are doing today, and there successes are cited as proof that these irrigated acres have been made highly productive by the practice of the principles of modern irrigation. More than that, they show that the productive capacity of hundreds of thousands of acres of land under cultivation for years has been greatly increased and enhanced in value."

OFFICIAL PAPER OF SANTA FE COUNTY.

The New Mexican is the oldest newspaper in New Mexico. It is sent to every postoffice in the Territory, and has a large and growing circulation among the intelligent and progressive people of the Southwest.

GUARANTEE OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY TO THE PEOPLE OF NEW MEXICO.

The pledging of all delegates to the constitutional convention, elected from the ranks of the Republican party, to the adoption of a safe, sound and fundamentally simple constitution, which will guarantee and preserve to all the people of the proposed new state all of their civil, political and religious rights, and which shall be sufficiently broad, expansive and flexible to authorize and insure legislation necessary to secure the best welfare of the people of all classes and conditions.

THE SANTA FE COUNTY DEBT.

Several of the New Mexican's Democratic contemporaries still persist in misrepresenting the amount of, and provisions made in the enabling act for the payment of, Santa Fe county's railroad bonded indebtedness. One editor's imagination leads him to say that the debt amounts to many million dollars; that the million acres given by Congress will never pay it and that the taxpayers of the new state will have to shoulder the unpaid portion, and rather than do that, they should defeat the constitution and statehood.

The original principal of the Santa Fe county railroad bonded indebtedness was $300,000, representing the issue of two sets of railroad bonds of $150,000 each. The bonds were issued contrary to law and the promises made to assure popular consent to the issues were only in part fulfilled. The contention that the bonds were illegal and void was sustained by the United States supreme court in passing on a similar issue made in Pima county, Arizona. Naturally, the tax payers of Santa Fe county refused to pay the interest on the bonds and taxes levied for that purpose. The bond owners as a last resort went to Congress to validate the bonds. By what means this nefarious act was slipped through, it is not necessary to dilate upon here, but the tax payers of Santa Fe county took the position that Congress had no moral, and perhaps, no constitutional right, to make that a debt which was not a debt before, for such an act would be taking private property without compensation, in other words, confiscation. There were also technical defenses founded in the indefinite wording of the validating act which left in doubt which bonds of those issued were intended to be validated. Be that as it may, Congress, when it passed the enabling act, recognized the great injustice it had perpetrated in validating the railroad bonds and therefore in the enabling act provided for their payment, not by the Territory, not by the tax payers, but by giving outright a million acres of public land which otherwise would have remained the property of the United States. This donation will not only pay the debt and the defaulted interest, but there will be a residue of a million or two dollars which, under the act, is to revert to the benefit of the public schools of the new state, a royal present indeed, and which even the carping critics will not refuse.

REPUBLICAN VIEW OF THE CONSTITUTION.

The attitude of the Republicans and the Democrats toward constitution making in New Mexico is not the product of a mere chance, not of one party being against what the other advocates, but it is the historical, the logical outcome of well defined tendencies in both parties. The same tendencies fought for supremacy in the constitutional convention of the United States; they have battled ever since with varying fortune through every national administration and in every state. Senator Cummins of Iowa, in his address to the Iowa Republican convention, defined that attitude as follows:

"The voters of the country know that there is infinitely more hope of making the Republican party effectually progressive than there is of efficient and comprehensive legislation from the Democrats."

"There are many Democrats who are distinguished for their wise and broad views upon public affairs, but the large majority of the leaders of the Democratic party are incapable of making or administering laws for a country like ours, for they invariably find in the constitution an insuperable obstacle in the way of doing the things which are imperatively demanded, and which if done at all must be done by the general government.

"I have been accused oftentimes by some of my blind and passionate opponents of having Democratic leanings, and I have many warm personal friends in that organization, but there never was a time in my whole life when I would have been willing to commit the destiny of the country to the Democratic party, and there is less reason now for doing so than ever before."

"So long as I look upon the constitution as a command to look after the welfare of the people, rather than a mere injunction against invading the rights of the states, there will be an impassable gulf between the Democratic party and myself."

"The character of the problems which now hold the first place in the American mind makes the Republican view of the constitution vital to the common good. I admit that the differences between Republicans are many and that they are important; but any Republican who, by reason of these differences, votes for a Democratic candidate, will find that he has jumped from the frying pan into the fire."

BUILDING GOOD ROADS.

The territorial good roads commission is doing splendid work and the results of the tasks accomplished by it in the past are already significant. The many who went to Santo Domingo today to witness the corn dance, could not but help to admire and appreciate the road construction over La Bajada hill which up to last year was impassable for automobiles and almost impassable for teams. Today, the great bluff is descended by easy grades over a wide, smooth-surfaced roadway built by the good roads commission. Similarly, by next year, the glories of the Pecos will be convenient from Santa Fe over the Scenic Highway as well as over the Santa Fe trail, and from Las Vegas, a model road way will cut down distance as well as grades to the county seat of Mora. The work of the good roads commission should be an incentive to county authorities to adopt systematic plans for road building. One road district in Guadalupe county did so the other day. Instead of scattering the annual road labor, made compulsory by law, over a lot of byways, it will be concentrated on a new road from Vaughn to Pintada Canon, fourteen miles long, and the result will be a permanent improvement that will be of benefit for many years. In Santa Fe county similar work should be done on the road from Santa Fe to Santa Cruz, and its important branch into the cliff dwellings, and on the road from Santa Fe to Cerrillos. Year after year, the money expended for roads and the labor put on them, would produce visible and beneficial results. In the past, it has been mostly wasted for the idea was more for the road overseers to draw their $500 and for the adult male citizens to slip out of their road work with the least inconvenience possible than it was to build good roads.

The fact that the school census for 1910, taken by the local school authorities, shows 500 persons less of school age in Santa Fe, than the school census of last year, is an indication that Santa Fe is losing population rapidly. The town is improving otherwise, but it cannot expect to hold much longer the native families whose fathers and sons can not find steady employment in this vicinity. The day is past when a family can, or wants to make a living on the income from the washing taken in by the women of the household. The younger men especially, are going to distant coal camps and industrial centers to find employment. At present, Santa Fe does not offer employment for the support of more than 2,500 people, and its population will dwindle to that figure, unless the land round about is reclaimed and industries are established that will offer steadier employment than the game of politics. There is much significance in the fact, that the public school attendance at Albuquerque is three times that of Santa Fe.

With the city and school authorities leading in the clean up campaign and enforcing the ordinances covering the subject, Santa Fe ought to become as clean as a pin and all danger of epidemics during the coming fall and winter reduced to a minimum. It would be costly for the city authorities to do all the necessary cleaning up itself but with 5,000 people to help, and each cleaning up his own premises, the task is a light one.

A PLAYGROUND FOR THOUSANDS.

A businessman from southern Texas, who for the first time spent his vacation on the upper Pecos, today expressed himself astounded that Santa Fe makes so little of that great scenic park, which he says is not surpassed in splendor or in beauty by anything he had seen in Switzerland, in Colorado or in California. He pulled out of his pocket the latest timetable of the Santa Fe system and pointed out how the construction of the Santa Fe cut-off on which work is progressing rapidly, will give southwestern Texas a direct line to Santa Fe, Las Vegas and the upper Pecos. He also showed that this section will be nearer to a million people who have need of just such a summer resort than are the mountains of Colorado, which at present attract thousands each year from that part of the Lone Star state, or even Cloudercroft which is receiving its quota. He is certain, that these people will come to the upper Pecos, as soon as judicious advertising dispels the idea that all of New Mexico is hot during the summer, and as soon as Santa Fe and Las Vegas teach Texas that they are cooler and more agreeable in summer than are Boulder, Colorado Springs or Denver. As another preliminary condition, he mentioned the completion of the Scenic Highway, as the needed key to the upper Pecos. He predicted that as soon as it is completed to the Pecos from Santa Fe and Las Vegas, it would be advertised far and wide by the railroad companies as one of the wonders of the southwest and would in itself attract so much attention to this section that the upper Pecos, Santa Fe and Las Vegas would fill up annually with visitors from southwestern Texas alone.

PUNISHING CRIME.

The Nemesis of the law is pretty sure to overtake the evildoer sooner or later. It may be taken as an evidence of the degree of civilization attained by a community, that it pursues and punishes crime with unflinching zeal. The relentlessness with which a number of murderers have been hunted down lately with two continents watching the chase; gives an illustration of this. Only yesterday, a man was arrested in the far northwest for wrecking a Santa Fe train eight years ago at La Junta, Colo. In Great Britain, of late years, 95 per cent of the murders committed have been punished. In the United States, too many criminals still escape punishment, but each year crime is pursued more relentlessly and punished more certainly, as even evildoers in high places have learned. In this lies the only safety for civilized communities for the inventions and the ingenuity that have helped so much in peaceful pursuits are also at the command of the criminal and therefore murder, burglary, embezzlement and other crimes have become easier to commit and easier to hide, and the only safety for the individual, as well as for the community, lies in making it a point never to give up the chase for a criminal and to make certain that every crime is punished, no matter what the cost in money, time or effort.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the fact that the country, in every section, is enjoying a degree of prosperity which is almost unparalleled for this period of the year.

The greatest amount of activity, perhaps, is to be noted in the south and southwest, where almost every city and town is launching industries and movements involving the expenditure of sums in which a million is frequently mentioned, and which are making for more work and greater opportunities. But the wave of public welfare is general.

And here is evidence which should make for the best kind of optimism. With the steady marching forward of the country there are new opportunities for the individual. It is evident that there never has been a period when there have been better prospects for the man with a purpose, with an idea, with money to invest, with labor or material to sell.

It may be years yet before the Santo Domingo Pueblo Indians cease giving their annual corn dance, but it is within measureable time that many of the features that give the southwest a glamour and color of its own will have passed into history or will have assumed a more modern aspect. It is now, therefore, that the east should come to see the southwest; that the tourist should make it a point to spend some time at Santa Fe and surroundings, in no other clime and at no future time will he be able to see just quite so picturesque and so characteristic a scene as at the corn dance at Santo Domingo, today.

The New Mexican learns with regret that most of the homesteaders in southern Santa Fe county are taking leaves of absence for six months and will be gone during the fall and winter. It is true that this exodus will greatly swell Republican majorities in this county, for the newcomers in the southern part are mostly Democrats, yet, it is deplorable, that the impression should go abroad that dry farming in New Mexico is a failure and that the homesteaders had to go to other states in order to tide over the winter.

It is to be wondered whether the participants and promoters of a prize fight at Clayton, Union county, are aware that they violated a federal statute passed for the special purpose of preventing such exhibitions in the Territory? It might be well for U. S. District Attorney David J. Leahy to inform them of the fact.

A new building for the First National bank on the east side of the plaza. Thus almost every day brings some item or the other indicating that Santa Fe is progressing even if it is not growing. But there is no adequate reason why Santa Fe should not grow as rapidly as it is progressing.

How Love Came to Harriet

By Temple Bailey

(Copyright, 1909 by Associated Literary Press.)

Harriet threw her books on the couch and said in a tone of disgust: "Everything is so different this year, and horrid—"

Mazie looked up languidly. "What's the matter?"

Harriet sat down on the foot of the couch. "Well, last year all the girls were just jolly and simple and natural, and now they're all come back in love. Four of them engaged, and the rest—mooning."

Mazie laughed. "Well, they are old enough, aren't they?" she demanded. "This is their senior year."

"Yes, they are old enough," Harriet admitted, "but I don't see why they wanted to tie themselves up, and now they can't talk of anything but romance and roses, and they are always writing letters. Even you, Mazie, when I begin to talk on sensible subjects, your eyes get dreamy, and before I know it you are asking me if I don't like blue-eyed men better than brown-eyed ones."

Mazie blushed. "You'll know how it is yourself some day, Harriet."

"If I do," said Harriet, fiercely, "no one will know a thing about it. I'll keep it to myself, and not go around looking like a dying calf."

Mazie's laughter rippled. "You couldn't hide it, Harry—no woman can."

"Well, you see," Harriet said, "but I'm not going to fall in love—I'm going to stick strictly to books and let boys alone."

"Of course," said Mazie, demurely. "I wish you joy, Harriet."

They studied in silence for awhile, then Harriet said, "I am going for a walk—want to go, Mazie?"

Mazie's eyes twinkled. "I've got a letter to write, Harriet."

"To Bob?" Harriet demanded.

"Yes."

"But you wrote to him yesterday."

"Why not?"

"Oh, you are hopeless," said Harriet, and flung herself out of the room.

On the way downstairs she met four dreamy maidens, each of whom refused her invitation to walk, and Harriet laughed and joked and teased, but when at last she was out on the snowy path her eyes were full of tears. It was not easy to make new friends, and last year she had had such close companionship.

She went down the Lake road, head up, cheeks red, trying to walk off the blues that oppressed her.

And because her head was up she slipped on an icy stretch of ground, twisted her ankle and fell in a forlorn heap.

And there a plodding old farmer, with his plodding team, found her, a half hour later, half frozen in the middle of the road.

"I called and called," Harriet said, "and I couldn't make anybody hear."

"There wasn't anybody to hear," said the old man. "I was on my way to the mill, but they ain't many goes this way—"

"If you could take me to the—"

Harriet began, as she tried to stand up, and then, before she could finish her sentence, she fainted dead away.

"Hum," said the old man, and rubbed his stubby chin. Then he loaded her into the wagon like a sack of meal, and never stopped driving until he had reached the office of the only doctor in the town.

When Harriet opened her eyes, some one was saying: "It's a pretty bad sprain; she'll have to stay here for some time."

Harriet's eyes came open with a snap.

"I've got to get back," she said, with decision.

The doctor laughed—a mellow laugh that Harriet liked.

"You are going to stay here for ten days."

"But they won't allow it—the faculty, I mean—the girls have to be in the dormitory every night."

"I telephoned up to the college," the doctor said, "and they are going to send one of the teachers to stay with you."

He had a way with him that seemed to settle things, and Harriet found herself acquiescing meekly.

"Well, I'm glad it's one of the teachers you sent for," she remarked, "and not one of the girls."

"Why?"

"Because the girls are all in love. It's a perfect epidemic. If you had a cure for hearts you could get a good practice up there in the dormitory."

"They wouldn't employ me," his amused glance met her. "They don't want to be cured."

"Well, they are silly," Harriet said.

"No," he contradicted. "they are not."

She looked up quickly. "But they are so young—and there's so much in life besides love."

"There is nothing in life," he told her gravely, "but love—love of one's fellow men, love of God, the love of family, of friends and, greatest of all, the love of the lover for the woman who shares his life."

Harriet was thrilled by the way he said it. His wife must be a happy woman she thought.

She said as much to Miss Flick, the little English teacher, when they had been in the doctor's home for over a week. "How happy his wife must be."

For Dr. Redmond was one of the men who, in a selfish world, forgot himself and lived only for the poor souls who depended upon him. Night and day he toiled, glorying in his opportunities, never too tired nor too busy to give himself for others.

Harriet thought of the boys she had known—nice fellows, but occupied with having a good time. She decided that if she ever married she would choose a man like the doctor.

She wondered what kind of woman his wife might be, and complained to Miss Flick. "The doctor's wife hasn't been in to see once."

"My dear," Miss Flick exclaimed, "he isn't married."

"But the maid spoke of Mrs. Redmond."

"That was his mother who was over for the day."

"Oh," said Harriet.

Of course, everybody knows what happened. Harriet fell in love with Dr. Redmond.

"But no one shall ever guess," she resolved, bravely.

But that night as she lay on the couch in the living room, with Miss Flick downstairs, eating her dinner, the doctor came in.

"Better, little girl?" he asked.

"Yes," Harriet's tone was subdued.

He sat down beside the couch. "You'll be well enough to go back to-morrow," he said, "and I know you want to get at your studies."

Studies! Harriet had forgotten that such things as books existed.

"Oh, yes, of course," she stammered.

He gazed into the fire, his grave eyes intent on the dancing flames. "I shall miss you—" he said at last.

Harriet caught her breath. "It has been nice to be here."

He turned to her suddenly. "I wish I might say to you all that's in my heart," he said. "I'm such a lonely old fellow, and you fit in somehow—into my life. You are so straightforward and sweet—and dear—Harriet."

And then he asked her to marry him, and Harriet, man-hating Harriet, said "Yes."

"But you mustn't tell any one," she warned him, "not a soul shall know until spring."

She went back to school the next day, arriving at three o'clock. And at five she wrote a note. At seven, as she sat studying with Mazie, she caught the eyes of her roommate fixed upon her. "Harriet," Mazie said, reproachfully, "I don't believe you know a word in that book—it's upside down."

And Harriet blushed.

Mazie came and sat down on the stool at her friend's feet. "And you are different, somehow," she went on; "if it was anybody else, I should say you were in love."

And then Harriet confessed, unexpectedly. "I am. And oh, Mazie, he is the dearest thing."

And Mazie, having kissed her, triumphantly remarked: "I told you, Harriet—I told you you would be like any other girl when love really came."

Caught by Sun.

"I've got an old straw hat," said the impecunious girl, "that I wear out in the rain, never anything else, and when it is raining the darned old thing looks very well, humid, you know, with the straw soaking nicely and the big black bow doing the same."

"Well, it rained this morning and I went out in my old hat. Then, just as my luck would have it, about noon it quit and the sun came out bright as you please, brighter than usual, it seemed to me, and there I was in broad daylight in my old black straw hat. That wasn't enough mortification, but I must go shopping in it. Do you know, I sat at that stocking counter for three-quarters of an hour before the stylish girl in black and blonde hair would even notice that I was there? When she did finally wait on me she kept looking at my hat so hard I nearly broke down and cried. Never again! That hat goes to my washerwoman for a present."

Expansion.

"So your wife is a suffragette?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Meekton.

"Why does she want to vote?"

"I don't think Henrietta really desires to vote. She's merely tired of talking to me. She wants a larger and more intelligent audience."

An Off-Hand Archaeologist.

"I wonder what these figures signify?" said the professors.

"Those carved representations of fighting men?"

"Yes."

"Oh, you've probably gotten hold of some prehistoric sport page."

SETTING A TRAP

"Yes," repeated Mrs. Phelps, casually, from her wicker porch chair. She shot a fleeting glance as she spoke at Elsie McHammond, who was visiting her and who had just disposed herself in all her costly summery lace frills in another chair, where the light fell most becomingly upon her. Elsie did those things unconsciously, but one would have forgiven her anyhow, she was so pretty. "Yes, he's a woman hater."

"Not that any one has blighted his young life," she went on, "but, you see, Dr. Harper is so devoted to his work that he has had no time for frivolities. He thinks women merely nonsensical, nuisances and obstructions on the pathway to the serious things that really count. I suppose that's why he's had time to achieve so much. He just runs from women—politely, of course. He doesn't understand them and is absolutely proof against their fascinations! It's too bad he should be coming today. I wish it were some one who would be congenial to you!"

"Oh!" said Miss McHammond in a careful tone. She readjusted a lock of her hair and looked absently at the climbing roses. There was a faint smile on her lips. "How odd! I don't think I ever met any one quite like that!"

"And you've met a plenty!" said her hostess, severely. "Why on earth you don't pick one out and marry him—" "I get tired of 'em!" confided Miss McHammond, frankly.

As the Phelps machine turned into the drive Tom Phelps was explaining to the guest he had met at the station. "His interest in her was purely scientific."

"Nice girl, Elsie," he said. "And pretty. But don't waste any time on her, because—well, she's not a man hater, but she doesn't care about them. She's got so used to refusing proposals that I believe she's going to get a printed rejection slip to facilitate these little matters!"

"Tommyrot!" said Dr. Harper, cheerfully. "It's merely feminine conceit, not lack of interest!"

"Take care that she doesn't hand you one!" grinned his host.

The two guests thus fortified against each other murmured their acknowledgments of the introduction and then took stock of each other somewhat hostilely.

Any woman resents an attitude of indifference, and this tall, grave man, whom Elsie tried at first dutifully to put at ease only to discover that he had not been anything else but at ease, because he was totally callous to her compelling charm of manner, irritated Miss McHammond. As for Dr. Harper, his instant recognition that Tom had told the truth about her attractiveness alarmed him into an added brusqueness. Had he not seen pretty women before? Well, then, this was merely another!

Pride forbade his availing her. indignation prevented her from doing otherwise than trying to make him see the folly of his high-and-mightiness. But beneath his unfeeling courtesy she felt that she did not disturb, attract or annoy him in the least.

Dr. Harper, who disapproved of Miss McHammond on general principles, did not avoid her. Rather, he sought her society. He was merely seeking, he told himself, to find other disagreeable traits besides conceit and frivolity. His interest in her was purely scientific.

So it came to be the night before she was to leave for home. Indoors Mrs. Phelps and Tom were happily rummaging about getting up a late supper. Out on the dim vine-shaded porch the other two sat silent, watching the flickering leaves in the moonlight. There was a little bitter curve on the girl's lips as she acknowledged that she would be glad to get away the next day, glad to escape from this disagreeable man who was so maddeningly courteous.

Beside her he sat silent, smoking. "Thinking of germs!" she told herself. "And on a night like this!"

Then his hand closed over hers on the chair arm and he spoke huskily. "I can't help it," he said. "I—I've got to tell you how much I care for you!" Her fingers closed over his involuntarily.

Just then Rose Phelps from the doorway called "supper!"

"You and Tom go and eat your old supper!" commanded Dr. Harper. His voice had a new, riotous ring to it. "We've got too many things to talk about out here!"

Mrs. Phelps nearly strangled her husband, who was just helping himself a hard-boiled egg, as she rushed madly in and cast herself on his neck.

"We did it!" We did it!" she gasped. "I knew if we told them to prepare to hate each other they'd fall in love!"

"Serves 'em both right!" mumbled Phelps, with his mouth full of hard-boiled egg.

Postal Official—Any clue to that mysterious murder?

Detective—Yes, sir. I've arrested all the living members of the family.

Official—Glorious! What evidence have you?

Detective—When I accused them of the murder some of 'em turned white and some turned red. Now, all we have to do is find out which color means guilt.

HIS EVENING OUT

"Oh, by the way, Jack, I nearly forgot to tell you," said little Mrs. Northway, a bride of seven weeks, as she ended with a growling discord the march she had been playing, and whirled about on the piano bench. There she faced her boyish husband, who had just settled down on this their first free evening in two weeks to the rare luxury of a magazine and a pipe. "It came in the mail," went on Mrs. Northway, beginning to hunt in the litter on her writing desk.

"What is it, anyway?" asked Jack, without looking up.

"The Greek letters of your fraternity were in the corner. It had been forwarded from your father's to the hotel where we honeymooned and back here again. That's why you have such short notice. However, if you hurry, dear, you can get out in time. It's only—Mrs. Northway consulted the little French clock on her desk—"only 7:15 now, and—"

"What did you say the thing was? Do we go gadding again tonight? By Jove, Beth, can't we have at least one—There, there, dear, I'm a brute!"

Penitently Jack ran after Beth, who, having tossed her head, had rushed away, sobbing.

"Of course we'll go, dear," he said, with hypocritical lightness, as he tried to get his arms about her. "The fact is, I need to go out. Sitting about in these little rooms makes a fellow dull."

To show his very special joy at getting out of his comfortable lounging clothes into formal dress Jack hurried to his bedroom, where he kicked off his slippers, tore open the chiffonier to extract a white shirt, hunted his gold collar button from its hiding place, pulled his patent leathers from behind Beth's shirtwaist box and emptied out a dozen brand-new collars to select a special one, though they were all alike.

"Beth, what sort of doings are on tonight, anyway?" he called a few minutes later, as he stood surveying himself in the mirror and feeling his chin. "Must I shave, or—"

"I started to tell you that it was a smoker," called back Beth, with great frigidity. She was back at the piano, murdering one of the 57 varieties of love song. "But you growled so and acted like a hyena and—"

"Smoker!" Jack rushed to her. "Why, girlie, did you think for one minute that I'd go out alone and leave you here to the protection of the cook? Never! What could you have been thinking of?" Jack kneeled down and stroked his young wife's cheek, glancing furtively, however, through the blonde jungle of her coiffure to where his magazine lay on the floor.

"Jack, I insist that you go!" With a wrench Mrs. Northway freed herself and stood over her sheepish-looking husband. "Get up; you look so ridiculous. Remember what sarcastic remarks you used to make about the fellows who married and forever afterward were tied to their wives' ribbons! You must go! No one shall have a chance to say that I have buried you alive."

Jack got to his feet. In less than five minutes he was ready to leave the house and bending over Beth's shoulder to kiss her goodby.

"I hate to—Why, Beth, what's this? Crying! What—"

"I just knew you were tired of me," wailed his wife. "To go and leave me like this, and married just seven weeks and three days! If I'd married George instead of you he'd never have left me to go on a lark with the fellows. He always was so considerate! Only seven weeks! Oh-h-h!"

Somewhat doubtful as to the wisdom of the action, Jack changed back quickly to his smoking regalia, recovered his magazine and pipe and, with lips pressed tight, looked glassily at the pages held upside down.

"Jack, darling! It was Beth on the arm of his chair. "I wonder if you realize how noble it was of you to give up your fun with the fellows tonight just to stay here with little dull me?" She smiled adorably.

"It's just as well, dear, that you decided not to go to the smoker tonight, though," Beth thoughtfully remarked presently. "I wasn't exactly sure of the date anyway and when I looked it up a few minutes ago I discovered that the smoker was night before last!"

A new angle on table etiquette was obtained by a Pittsburgh man on a recent visit to the country.

He tells it as follows: "As the family with whom I was dining was a typical backwoods one, I was somewhat surprised to observe beside each plate a small dish resembling a butter chip, but a trifle larger. Now individual butter chips are somewhat of an innovation on the farm, but I thought, the good people are putting on a few frills on my account. So I helped myself to butter and placed it on the small dish. Scarcely had I done so when I discovered I was in wrong—very wrong. Each member of the family, as if in rebuke of my ignorance, proceeded to pour his coffee into his saucer, then setting his cup in the little dish, began to sip from the saucer with a long syllabic s-s-c-s-p!"

"I suppose my lack of table manners is the talk of the country side out there,"—Pittsburgh Times-Gazette.

Served as coffee, the new coffee substitute known to grocers everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee, will trick even a coffee expert. Not a grain of real coffee in it either. Pure healthful toasted grains, malt, nuts, etc., have been so cleverly blended as to give a wonderfully satisfying coffee taste and flavor. And it is "made in a minute," too. No tedious 20 to 30 minutes boiling. Sold by Frank Andrews.

DENVER PIANIST ELOPES WITH PHILADELPHIA HEIRESS.

Trans-Atlantic Romance Which Promises to End Happily for All Parties Concerned in it.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 4.—Married—In London, England, July 5, Francis Hendricks, pianist, of Denver, Colorado, and Helga Katrina Ronne, heiress, of Philadelphia, Pa.

Therein lies the story of a romantic elopement, of stern parental objection on the part of the girl's parents, carrying with it a threat of being cut off without even the proverbial shilling, from a large fortune; of a supposedly broken engagement with a California girl by the handsome and dashing young Colorado pianist, now risen to world fame, and, lastly, of a plan of the happy couple to come to this city, where society has welcomed the bridegroom with open arms, and to open a studio here.

Romantic looking young Francis Hendricks, handsome as the ideal musician should be, who was in Denver just last fall on a concert tour, and repeated the triumphs that he tasted here as a mere boy, was generally believed to be prince of the heart of a well known California girl.

Whether that engagement was shattered previously to his meeting Helga Ronne, daughter of rich old Emil Ronne of Philadelphia, or whether he simply put it aside when he found the girl he considered his real destiny is not known. In any event, Denver society was decidedly surprised when it learned that the good looking young master of the piano, who had caused many a girlish heart to thrill at his words and looks, and many a face to beam at his approach, was principal in a romantic elopement. And the thought that he is ing his bride, who flung aside the favor of financial fortune for her ented lover, to Denver, has caused little excitement.

Emil Ronne, who has a home in Brussels, and is even better known the continent than in America, sed and fumed when he found the daughter had married Hendricks. He immediately commenced a harangue about disinheriting her, but the Ronnes are billing and cooing in London, lung no attention to his rage.

They met in England, and it was case of love at first sight. The Ronnes trotted to Paris, leaving Hendricks behind in London mourning his sweetheart. With infinite tact and discretion, and no little feminine sagacity, she laid a plan to return to London, ostensibly on a pleasure jaunt. Her father consented, not stopping to think of the young pianist—or if he did think of him, he decided that there was nothing serious between his daughter and the musician, because she had been wooed by men of titles and fame and fortune, and the idea that she would for an instant regard the advances of a youth like Hendricks was not worthy of consideration.

"A Ronne marry a musician?" "Pouf!" said old Emil.

So Miss Ronne traveled to London, accompanied by a younger brother and a nurse.

Soon after arriving in the English city she conveniently "lost" the brother and nurse. The next the Ronne family heard of their beloved daughter she was Mrs. Francis Hendricks. And then the parental storm broke.

"Not a dollar!" raged the father. "Not a nickel!"

But the Hendricks merely smiled and continued looking into each other's eyes.

Helga Katrina Ronne-Kendricks is described as a beautiful girl. That her husband is handsome Denver society will unanimously agree. She is 18 years old, and has been carefully reared and educated.

Hendricks is about 26, and the son of Mrs. R. A. Hendricks of 1508 Emerson street. He has become one of the world's greatest concert pianists in the opinion of critics, and has a still greater future. His talent was recognized in Denver, when he lived here five years ago, and he has made good every prediction.

The young couple are now preparing to come to this city, and Hendricks will open a studio here. The Ronnes are immensely wealthy, and it is believed that the father will reconsider his threat to cut off the daughter. Meantime the Hendrickses do not care, because they have enough to live on.

Among other notable connections, Mrs. Hendricks is a granddaughter of the famous Cope family of Philadelphia.
