Subject: Posting of Grades by Social Security Numbers

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act [FERPA] prohibits an educational institution from disclosing "personally identifiable information" from an education record of a student without the student's consent (with various exceptions not applicable here). "Personally identifiable information" is defined as including "a personal identifier, such as the student's social security number," as well as personal characteristics and other information that would make the student's identity easily traceable.

The Department of Education is charged with enforcing FERPA. The Department has taken the position that the posting of grades by social security number is the equivalent of disclosing personally identifiable information, and is therefore prohibited under FERPA. While I am not sure I agree with the Department on a technical reading of FERPA, it has become clear to me that the practical effect of posting grades by social security number is that some students in fact learn each other's social security numbers, and thereby gain access not only to grade information, but to other personal and private information, such as credit histories, etc. In any event, it would behoove us to follow the Department of Education's interpretation, barring a compelling reason not to do so.

You explained to me that each professor receives from the Registrar's office a computer printout with each student's name in one column, corresponding social security number in another column, and a space for grades in a third column. The entries are in alphabetical order by the student's last name. The listed names can be separated from the sheet so that what remains is a list of social security numbers in alphabetical order with the corresponding grades. These are typically posted. The Department of Education would view this as being in violation of FERPA.

The Department suggests assigning code numbers to students for the purpose of posting grades. These numbers could either be given to students for their entire stay in the University, or could be assigned by professors for the particular class. Fred Chreist informs me that he and Mo Miller are working on a system to allow students to get their grades by telephone, using a PIN number. This would meet our FERPA requirements and will hopefully be in place in a semester or two.
