Curious Letter Makes Legal Lights "Stop, Look and Listen."

Adjutant General A. L. Brookes is having an investigation made of the alleged "practical joke" said to have been perpetrated on the New Mexico National Guard at Tucuman, ordering them to be in readiness to go to the southern border to protect the United States from "invasion" as stated in the New Mexican yesterday. Captain O. F. Edler immediately mustered 45 men and within two hours was awaiting further orders—which did not come.

General Brookes is going to use every legal means to make it very hot for the joker or jokers who thus tried to make sport out of the National Guard. It is said that the law provides for the bringing of just forty-five damage suits against the joker in this matter.

In case difficulties are encountered in finding out who sent the telegram the grand jury may be asked to probe the matter and summon witnesses who will have to tell what they know.

Water Board Adjourns.
The meeting of the territorial water board before which were brought many appeals on rejected applications for water rights and which cases are said to raise a vital issue affecting irrigation, was adjourned today. The board will likely give for publication several important decisions in a day or two. Regardless of the decisions, however, it is thought that the cases will be taken to the U. S. Supreme Court, the highest tribunal in the land for final settlement.

Incorporations.
Articles of incorporation were filed in the territorial secretary's office today by the Elephant Butte Land and Trust Company whose main office is at Phoenix, Arizona, and whose office in the territory is at Las Cruces, with J. D. Walleit as the resident agent.

The object of the company is to do a general real estate, commission and brokerage business and it has a capitalization of $300,000 of 30,000 shares at $100 each. The directors are W. L. Walleit, J. D. Walleit, Mark Logan and N. A. Brown and the company's duration is to be 25 years with privilege of renewal.

Notaries Appointed.
Acting Governor Nathan Jaffa has appointed Julia Ferguson, of Carlsbad, Eddy county, and Colia B. Bilbo, Valencia county, notaries public.

Papers of incorporation were also filed by the Rociada Ranch Company whose office is at Rociada, San Miguel county, and of which Albert G. Adams is named the agent. The object of the company is to do a general merchandise business and starts with a capital stock of $15,000, consisting of 150 shares at $100 each. Of this stock $3,000 has been subscribed, the shareholders being Albert G. Adams, of Gascon; Leo M. Tipton, of East Las Vegas, and H. W. Clark, also of East Las Vegas, each holding ten shares. The duration of the company is to be fifty years.

For the Treasury.
Territorial Treasurer M. A. Otero has received the following sums for the treasury: Alexander Sandoval treasurer of Sandoval county, $204.45; from Game and Fish Warden Gable, $40.25.

Land Entries.
The following are the land entries at the local land office: Mary J. Cliff, formerly Mary J. McBrian, of Albuquerque; R. B. Odum, Lambertson, Benjamin E. Reeder, Halls Peak; Hilario Garcia, Santa Fe; Leandro Chavez, Gallina and Pascual Vianueva, Gallisteo.

ARIZONA WILL BE STUBBORNDespite President Taft's

OPPOSITION TO RECALL BITTER

Republicans Merely Hope to Keep Down the Affirmative Majority

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 9.—Voting on the ratification of Arizona's constitution, under which it is intended that Arizona be admitted to the Union, is in progress throughout the territory today. It is admitted that the constitution will be approved, its opponents, the Republicans hoping only to hold down the affirmative vote. Sixty per cent of the total opposition is based on the initiative, referendum and recall, which are included in the proposed constitution, the opposition to the recall applied to the judiciary being especially bitter.

Looks Black for Arizona.
Washington, Feb. 9.—Politicians here who would like to see it defeated, say the Arizona vote will be overwhelming for the constitution Thursday. They claim, however, Congress will reject it because of the referendum and recall clauses. While Taft's friends say the recall is distasteful to him, he will not refuse to sign it.

What President Taft thinks of the Oklahoma style of constitution is already known to the people of Arizona. When there, in October, 1909, he warned them against doing that which this deplorable convention, inflamed with extreme and most violent notions of Bryanism, Bryanite populism and socialism, has now accomplished and thrust upon the people for a "yes" or a "no." Mr. Taft besought the people of the territory to consider seriously the instrument of their statehood.

At the territorial capital at Phoenix he said on October 13, 1909: "If by a caution I can restrain the desire of those who are most full of the idea of having limitations on government from making the constitution other than a fundamental law, with simple rules of limitation; if I can halt and induce the people of this state to take time and deliberate over the instrument that is to follow them so long in the history of their state, I shall not have let the day go without profit."

Two days later, at Albuquerque, New Mexico, the President continued his good advice to the people of the two territories: "You want to trust your legislature, and you ought to follow the model of the constitutions of some of the other states, which have also modeled after the constitution of the United States. An amendment to the constitution is a difficult thing, as we are finding out now in attempting to amend the federal constitution, and so you will find it in the state constitutions. Therefore put there only general principles and don't attempt to legislate every fact of every man who is voluble and gets into your constitutional convention."

"I say this with a great deal of fervor, not as a partisan, but as a Republican or a Democrat, but in the interest of your state, whether you vote the Republican or the Democratic ticket. I want, if we are responsible for your coming into the Union, as I am willing to be, and as the Republican party is willing to be, that you should justify the admission by making yourselves a progressive but at the same time a conservative community."

HUNDRED TWENTY ACRE
ORCHARD SELLS FOR $100,000.

Grand Junction, Colo., Feb. 9.—The famous W. R. Haines orchards of 120 acres, between here and Fruita, have been sold to a syndicate of Dakota and Minnesota capitalists for $100,000. The property was owned by the Haines heirs of Columbus, Ohio.

Denver, Feb. 9.—The Cassidy bill, designed to prohibit the importation of strike-breakers during a strike, was killed on final passage in the senate today by a vote of 17 yeas to 16 nays. The bill required a majority of the total vote in the senate, or 18 to pass.

Seatorial Deadlock.
Denver, Feb. 9.—There was no election of United States senator today. Seven platform Democrats voted for E. M. Ammons. Otherwise there were no material changes.

tration

APPORTIONMENT COMES UP

Republicans Favor Keeping
Number of Representatives
Below Four Hundred.

Washington, Feb. 9.—The first gun in the Congressional battle over Canadian reciprocity was fired in the Senate today. Senator Beveridge of Indiana, insurgent, was the marksman, and he lined up on the side of the administration. He did not make a pretense of representing others of the progressive Republican camp. Mr. Beveridge urged the necessity for prompt and decided action.

Apportionment.
Washington, Feb. 9.—The House today took up the bill for reapportionment of the House under the thirteenth census. The Republican caucus favored retaining the present representation of 391 members, while the Democrats favor a membership of 423. If the Republicans prevail, New Mexico will be given only one Congressman.

Andrews Doing Good Work.
Special to the New Mexican.
Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—Dele-gate Andrews by most persistent fighting and with the help of the Pennsylvania friends, will secure two representatives in congress for New Mexico in the apportionment bill, by amendment, on admission of the future state.

Dr. Angell, president of the University of Michigan, in a local paper, says: "It is to be hoped that the president, with all his force, will oppose the constitution that is to be submitted to him by Arizona. The recall that is incorporated in the proposed constitution, makes it impossible." The president withdrew from the senate his nomination of postmaster John T. Bolton, of Carlsbad Springs, leaving his former appointment of Bolton for Carlsbad stand.

Permanent Tariff Board.
Washington, Feb. 9.—By a strict party vote all the Democrats in opposition the Senate committee on finance today voted to report favorably the bill passed by the House to create a permanent tariff board. Several important amendments were adopted.

Trouble Over Irrigation Report.
Washington, Feb. 9.—Conflicting reports are to be filed by the senate committee on irrigation concerning its visit to the western irrigation projects in 1909.

Senator Newlands has submitted to the committee views opposite to those of Senator Carter and other members. He finds nothing but praise for the accomplishments of the reclamation service. Reviewing the reclamation works as a whole, he submits the impression derived is that these works are well planned and executed.

He contends that this opinion is suspended by the recent report of the board of army engineers, which examined the projects in 1910.

Opposes Carter.
Newlands takes issue with Senator Carter, who charged that the reclamation service, prior to the administration of Secretary Ballinger, acted independently of Secretaries Hitchcock and Garfield, whose actions, so far as government reclamation works were concerned, were purely perfunctory.

He says Director Newell's immediate superior officer, Walcott of the geological survey, was in constant conference with Secretary Hitchcock and President Roosevelt regarding projects, and that the responsibility for the projects must be placed on these officials.

Defends Service.

Senator Newlands also defends the action of the reclamation service in including within government projects lands for irrigation under private ownership. He says the fact has been known by members of congress that private lands were being irrigated, and from legislation enacted subsequent to the original act there can be no doubt as to the use of reclamation funds for irrigation of private lands.

He says that large expenditures were due to increased cost of labor and material, the increase in details of construction and decrease in acreage assumptions.

He defends the reclamation service against the charge that premature settlement was encouraged by it on many of the projects, and that too many projects were undertaken. He thus places the blame for undertaking projects which have proven failures on the people and representatives of the several states, stating that they brought undue political pressure to have these projects undertaken.

ernment Through Columns

REBELLION IS WELL IN HAND

Military Situation Favorable to Federals Who Will Soon Crush Sedition.

New York, Feb. 9.—The Mexican government does not attach any importance to the sedition outbreaks in the state of Chihuahua, said Manuel C. Cosío, minister of war and marine, in a dispatch to the Times today. "The military situation," he says, "is favorable to the government in every sense of the word and order will be restored within a very short time."

Rebels Violate Neutrality.
Albuquerque, N. M., Feb. 9.—United States Marshal Parker left this morning for Pelea, southern New Mexico, to take nine men to Las Cruces for arraignment on charges of violation of neutrality laws. The men were caught yesterday with arms and ammunition on their way to join the Mexican insurgents. Another man arrested at Hachita yesterday on the same charges will be taken to Las Cruces today.

Suspense in Juarez.
El Paso, Feb. 9.—There was, according to officials of the provisional government, The latter claim to know the exact whereabouts of General Blanco, but decline to make the knowledge public. Orozco and Rabe, the latter commanding the federal forces in Juarez, are busy today strengthening their positions. Orozco in the hills opposite the El Paso smelter, extended his line of rifle pits, while the government soldiers placed bands of sand on the house tops of Juarez. The adobe buildings of Mexico are natural fortifications, and effective against rifle bullets. The houses are built exactly like an inverted strawberry box. The walls project a few feet above the flat roofs, the rain troughs perforating the walls are flush with the roofs and serve excellently as loopholes for rifles. The order against the use of cameras was enforced against two Americans in Juarez today. The guards removed the films from their cameras and returned the cameras with a warning.

It's All Off With Orozco.
Washington, Feb. 9.—Thomas Edwards, American consul at Juarez, reported to the state department yesterday, that unless the Mexican insurgents took the city within a few hours, they will have to give up the attempt, as their position afforded them no chance of subsistence. The revolutionist soldiers are fleeing back into the mountains for shelter. The railroads expect to resume traffic within forty-eight hours.

Orozco in Full Retreat.
El Paso, Feb. 9.—Orozco is reported by the American officers to have left his camp and is retreating south toward old Casas Grandes where Blanco with three hundred men is encamped. Orozco is not strong enough to contest his way with Navarro, who is said to be a day's march from Juarez with eight hundred men. From high insurgent sources it is learned that all thought of attacking Juarez has been abandoned. The offensive campaign of the insurgents apparently has failed, because Orozco's personal command consisted of only 350 stragglers.

Wounded in Hospital at Juarez.
El Paso, Texas, Feb. 9.—How true is the saying of William Tecumseh Sherman about war. It is evidenced in the emergency hospital conducted under the auspices of the Red Cross in Juarez on the avenue named after the great Mexican liberator. There men, victims of the terrible horror of nations, lie on cots in great agony. One man, who is well along in years, lies groaning night and day. He is shot through the head. His eyes are swollen and blackened from the wound he sustained in the fight last Sunday. He is a federal soldier, one of the many that occupy cots there.

Beside him is another man who groans but seldom, yet who suffers intense pain at times. He, too, is a soldier, a private in the ranks of the Mexican army. A steel bullet passed through both of his thighs. He will get well, but the man beside him, ah, he is shot through the head, and while the flesh may be strong, yet the brain cannot stand the tension long. His days are numbered.

Who Hears the News.
Then there is another. A friend is reading him the latest news from a Mexican paper, which in its every issue says that the revolution is at an end. What sarcasm must this seem to a man who lies writhing in pain on a cot which the good people of Juarez have made for him.

Shot Many Times With One Bullet.
Then there is another victim of the terrible fire from the guns of the sharpshooting rebels who poured the deadly fire into the ranks of the federal soldiers. He had his gun to his shoulder, preparing to send a leaden messenger of death to the opposing side, when suddenly his gun was torn from his grasp and he fell on the battlefield with a groan. A bullet had entered his left forearm, come out through the top, entered the upper muscles of the arm and making its

BLACK HAND IS SUSPECTED

Family Had Been Flooded With Demand for Ransom of $10,000.

Erie, Pa., Feb. 9.—Body snatching that may equal the daring grave robbery that stirred the country more than a quarter century ago, when the body of A. T. Stewart the New York pioneer merchant, was stolen, has stirred this section. The mausoleum of the family of the late Congressman W. L. Scott, a personal friend of the late Grover Cleveland, one of the leaders of the Democracy in the House during Cleveland's first term, and one of the most prominent railroad magnates of his time, was broken into some time between Monday and yesterday and the body of Mrs. McCollum, Mr. Scott's sister-in-law taken. The casket of Mrs. Scott was half way out of the niche in the wall apparently ready to be carried away. Footprints of six men are discernible and wagon tracks showed that the casket had been taken to town.

Work of Black Hand.
Erie, Feb. 9.—The police believe that the body is being held for ransom and that the shrouds also intended to carry away the bodies of the politician and his wife. The Italian settlement near the cemetery is being carefully searched, dwelling by dwelling. Two years ago the family was flooded with black hand letters demanding $10,000. The perpetrators were caught and are now serving prison sentences.

DENVER POSTMASTER MUST PAY WILSON'S SHORTEAGE.
Shake-up and Thorough Investigation
Has Been Ordered by Postmaster General Hitchcock.

Denver, Feb. 9.—The Post this evening says: Every department of the Denver postoffice is to be thoroughly investigated as a result of the disclosures following the arrest and confession of Carson B. Wilson, superintendent of mails. The order has gone forth from Postmaster General Hitchcock.

He issued the mandate just as soon as the reports reached him showing how Wilson was able to follow up his penulitons for years and how he would have robbed the government for years if he had not been discovered by accident.

That the report of the investigators will recommend the removal of certain officials of the department in Denver, or at least in a severe reprimand for them, is considered certain.

Postmaster Sours will be held responsible for Wilson's peculations above $1,000, the amount of the bond under which the superintendent was employed. This will be no inconsiderable sum, as the shortage is now close to $7,000 and is daily growing as the investigation by Inspector Waters proceeds.

ed at Portales, Roosevelt County,
by a Big Trust.

San Antonio, Texas, Feb. 9.—That the sugar industry in the Pecos country has been a success and has attracted wide attention is emphasized just now by the efforts of the American Refining & Manufacturing company. This company intends to erect a factory at Portales, Roosevelt county, New Mexico, at a cost of $1,000,000. Representatives of this concern now in the Pecos valley declare that the character of the soil is better adapted to sugar beet culture than the valleys around Salt Lake City, and that experiments made here with this vegetable show it can be more profitably grown in this valley than elsewhere. It is these experiments which are attracting the attention of the American Sugar Refining and Manufacturing company.

SUED FOR DIVORCE
BECAUSE MIND FAILS.Tragedy in Life of Armenian Merchant at Denver, Who Had Accumulated Wealth.

Denver, Colo., Feb. 9.—On the day before his wife's application for divorce was to have been heard before Judge H. C. Riddle, Ezekiel Tammosian, a wealthy Armenian rug dealer at 1562 Broadway, was taken to Mr. Airy sanatorium on account of his failing mentality. He was examined by Dr. Edward W. Latell, who declared that within two weeks Tammosian would be a maniac.

Four years ago Tammosian suffered a nervous stroke, gave up a flourishing business in Chicago, and came here.

His queer acts for several months finally led to his arrest Monday night by Deputy Sheriff Burkhardt. Burkhardt's action was based on an application filed in the county court by Ethel Tammosian, 18 years old, for an examination into her father's condition. She had been asked to take action by Edward Russell, owner of the building occupied by Tammosian, who said the latter threatened him with violence.

Mrs. Tammosian, an American, married the Armenian in 1888 at Chicago. There was no trouble until about a year ago, when Tammosian's nervous disorder manifested itself in outbursts of passion. He left his wife and daughter and the luxurious home at 914 East Seventeenth avenue and fitted up quarters in the rear of his store.

He allowed his wife $50 a month. Some weeks later he demanded that she get a divorce, and threatened to cut off her income.

Though much against her will, Mrs. Tammosian filed suit, alleging cruelty and insufficient support. She stated her husband was worth $65,000. The hearing on the divorce petition has been postponed indefinitely, owing to Tammosian's affliction. Both Mrs. Tammosian and her daughter are heartbroken.

COOLIDGE CASE
IS DECIDEDGovernment Loses in Its Effort to Cancel Public Land Patents

$100,000 ORCHARD INVOLVED

Testimony as to Fraud Was So Conflicting as to Lead to Doubt.

Judge John R. McAlle today decided the famous Coolidge case from San Juan county in favor of the defendants and against the U. S. government. The case was brought to cancel several government patents for lands in San Juan county, originally entered by the Coolidge and Rose Hyde, then conveyed to John W. Coolidge who sold to James H. Hand, Jr., of Scranton, Pennsylvania, who sold to Wallace and David, the present owners. It was stipulated by both sides that Hand's purchase had been without fraud, but the government set up that the original entry was fraudulent. The court held that the evidence was so conflicting that it was impossible to declare that fraud had been committed. The law as laid down by the supreme court of the United States is that a patent cannot be set aside for fraud unless upon clear, unequivocal, convincing evidence free from doubt as to the fraud alleged. The evidence failed to show that John W. Coolidge, who purchased from the entryman, was guilty of any fraud whatever or had notice of the alleged fraud of the entryman. There were more witnesses for the defense than the prosecution and their testimony was as strong as if not stronger than that of the government witnesses. While the area in direct controversy was only 640 acres, yet, the value of the interests at stake, is said to be $100,000, includes a pear orchard and extensive irrigation works. Attorney A. M. Edwards of Farmington, appeared for the defense.

The fact that they owned water rights sufficient to cover all the land and that they had constructed lateral ditches sufficient to convey water to each of the legal subdivisions was not seriously contested. The evidence showed that several thousand dollars had been expended in constructing the main ditch and laterals. There were about eight witnesses for the government, including Special Agent R. J. Satterwhite of the New Mexico field division of the general land office. There were about fifteen witnesses for the defense. Assistant U. S. Attorney Herbert W. Clark of Las Vegas appeared for the government.

ing Four Worthless Checks.

Denver, Colo., Feb. 9.—Rather than be taken a prisoner and face the charge of passing worthless checks, James K. Houghton, mayor of Ault, Colorado, attempted suicide by sending a bullet through his brain. The shot was fired before two witnesses in his room in the Kaiserhof hotel, and at the moment when Detective John McNeil knocked at the door, Houghton came to Colorado from Plymouth, Ind., four years ago, settling in Ault. He purchased a farm, which later was sold, and he opened a law office. Last April he was elected mayor on the Citizen's ticket. He is reported to have been a heavy drinker.

DOZEN COLORADO COUNTY
OFFICIALS FOUND SHORT.

Lamar, Colo., Feb. 9.—Judge Henry Hunter of Trinidad, in the district court here instructed County Attorney W. A. Merrill to proceed against certain present and past county officials for alleged shortages in the funds of their offices. Expert H. E. Mulnix of Denver, examined the county books a year ago, and reported alleged shortages, varying from $250 to $11,000 in the offices of nearly a dozen county officials. W. W. Reynolds, ex-county treasurer and present chairman of the board of county commissioners, will be charged with a shortage of $11,000. Some of the other alleged shortages are attributed to ex-Sheriff Thomas, $1,400; County Judge Thorne, former assistant attorney, $2,000; John Adkins, ex-county treasurer, $6,000; Charles Hoag, ex-county clerk, $250; ex-County Clerk Crary, $400.

THE DAILY ROUND UP.

Road Song.

(By W. G. Tinckom-Fernandez in Hampson's Magazine.)
Come out from the muck of your city streets to the tent of all the world.
When your final word on Art is said,
and your flag of Faith is furled:
When your heart no longer gives a throb at the first faint breath of spring—
Ah, turn your feet to the ribbon-road with a chorus all may sing!When the sandaled Dawn like a Greek god takes the hurdles of the hills
And the brooding earth rubs brooding eyes at the song some lonesome bird trills:Where the brook like the silver say-the of a moon awaits your warm caress—
Ah, these are the gifts that in high gods fling to mortals in duress!When the blood-red sun swings low in the West and an end comes to desire,
When the candle-gloom of the lowcolled room is bared to a pine-log fire,
And the tales of men are told anew
till the Huntress leaves the sky—Ah, these are the gifts of the sons of men to set their treasures by!Then give me the clear blue sky overhead and the white road to my feet,
And a dog to tell my secrets to, and a brother tramp to meet—
And the years may take their toll of me till I reach the weary West, Where I lodge for good in the world's own inn, a wayward, waiting guest.Death of Aged Father—Louis Stern

SCHOOL BOY FRIEND.New Version of Damon and Pythias Enacted at Capital of Lone Star State.Austin, Texas, Feb. 8.—A case has just come to light in this city showing that the boy who played with in childhood and who was his friend during the frolicsome days of his youth remains through life the real and true friend. But this instance is not without its pathetic side. A half century or more ago, John M. Prichard, now a prominent lawyer of Tyler, Texas, and N. M. Webb were very close friends. A year or more ago Webb was convicted on two long charges and sent to the penitentiary, being consigned to one of the state convict farms. The thought that his oldtime chum was imprisoned gave Prichard a great deal of trouble and he set about securing his release. Prichard having known Webb since boyhood and also knowing that his family had never shown any criminal propensities, assumed that if Webb had committed a crime his mind had become deranged before he did so. Acting upon this supposition he went to work on the case and found many things to indicate that the chum of his boyhood had been mentally deranged for a year or more previous to the alleged crime. Yesterday Prichard went before the board of pardons and that body, after hearing his statement, recommended Gov-nor Colquitt to release Webb. When this agreement was reached Prichard was so elated over his success that he could hardly restrain his tears as he said, "N. M. Webb never was a thief and he isn't today. In his boyhood he was the soul of integrity and such a boy as he was, does not become a thief in manhood."U. S. MARSHAL FORAKER purpose of investigating the arrest of nine men who were arrested at Pe-lea yesterday, United States Marshal

C. M. Foraker left early this morning for that town and will probably remain in southern New Mexico until the trouble in Mexico blows over. The nine men taken into custody at Pelea yesterday were arrested by Deputy United States marshals while attempting to cross over into Mexico with arms and ammunition, which is for-bidden by the neutrality laws. It is supposed that the men intended join the revolutionists. They will be taken today to Las Cruces and arraigned. John Doe warrants were sworn out by Marshal Foraker before United States Commissioner H. R.
Whiting yesterday afternoon. The man arrested Hachita yesterday for attempting to cross into Mexico with arms and ammunition, and also with resisting arrest at the hands of a customs inspector, will be taken to Las Cruces today and will probably be arraigned with the nine other alleged insurgents. It is understoodThere is more Catarrh in this sec-conservation of natural resources has taken a firm hold in Texas was emin this city, which has just closed. It was clearly shown by those present that no state in the Union has more natural advantages than Texas and that everything is here essential to the highest development when prop-creating a state commission of con-

this resolution be passed, it will pro-salary and report direct to the commission.

HAPPY RESULTS.

No wonder scores of Santa Fe citizens grow enthusiastic. It is enough to make anyone happy to find relief after years of suffering. Public statements like the following are but truthful representations of the daily work done in Santa Fe by Doan's Kidney Pills.

Toribio Rodriguez, 110 Johnson St. Santa Fe, N. M., says: "Two and a half years ago I gave a statement for publication in regard to my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills. Today I am stronger in my praise of this remedy than ever. I suffered greatly from disordered kidneys, the pains in my back being so acute at times that I had to stop work and sit down. The trouble steadily grew worse and I rarely knew what it was to be free from an ache or pain of some kind. Soon after I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, my pains and aches disappeared and my back became strong."

SIDE LIGHTS
ON WASHINGTON

Sherman, Lodge, Beveridge and Others Pass in Rapid Review

MRS. TAFT AT THE THEATER

Sarah Bernhardt Has Once More Started on Tour of the United States.

(Frances Wayne in Denver Times.)

Washington, Feb. 9.—Washington is as full of thrills and surprises as a three-ring circus or a good vaudeville show and in summing up the day's experiences it is difficult to decide whether Sarah Bernhardt or Senator Henry Cabot Lodge or the scenery shall have first place.

One out touring rises in the morning expecting merely to see sights; to absorb miles of architecture, tons of granite and listen patiently while the gentleman who enjoys one about leans from his seat on a decrepit back and explains that "in the house to your right William Seward narrowly escaped assassination" and "through the door of the 1234 Saloon the godlike Webster did walk to get his daily tippie of strong liquor."

This and more of the same kind is what one expects if one is merely out to be shown. But if one has eyes to see and defies Missouri and any other state to effect limitations, one's first question is, "Where is the beauty and style that are supposed to flower in the nation's capital?" The women seen at the New Willard during afternoon tea, driving on the Mall or loitering in the spacious rooms of the clubhouse at Chevy Chase carry about with them the atmosphere of the haute monde of which they are part, but lack the dash, brilliancy and sartorial daring of those women who live in the commercial centers of the country. And one searches in vain for a dazzling, memory-haunting face that might be placed with other sensations that crowd thick and fast in this history-making resort.

Yesterday morning, for a final glance at the statesmen who are doing things for and to this country, I went to the capitol. Lorimer, it was rumored would again be the subject of debate, and perhaps Lodge, the scholar of the Senate, would discuss the evils of the election of Senators by direct vote.

Vice President Sherman was in the chair. He goes at things like an auctioneer, his voice twanging in sing-song fashion the committee to which bills will be referred as fast as their titles are read. What he lacks of the frigid dignity that made Fairbanks celebrated from coast to coast as the human icepack is balanced by a genial incisiveness that gets the nation's business out of the way. The Senators, I am told, are very fond of their presiding officer; they like to look at his round, gay face and how their heads before his banker's methods, and are quite willing in the summer time to vote to adjourn when he gives the fan's sign and hankers for the baseball field.

After watching the Senate's president for a while it is like turning from the mask of comedy to that of tragedy to study Albert Beveridge of Indiana. He was young, you remember, when his state chose him for the seat that had been held by Morton and Voorhies, Turpie and Hendricks. He had dug himself out of obscurity, and poverty, and beaten back the enemies age sets to snare the progress of youth and ambition. Beveridge.

He came to a body of lawmakers who are ruled by tradition and forthwith clamored loudly for what he wanted. Without hesitation he insisted that his education and talents fitted him better than another for headship of certain important committees and the wise ones smiled and listened and gave him generously. Then all of a sudden a cog slipped and the hands of the Beveridge speedometer swung back. Instead of grinding at the trick, instead of throwing out his chest for a long breath of strength, giving air and making his period of enforced retirement one of growth and preparation for renewed effort, he snarls and sulks; he imagines that he is of the company of unappreciated geniuses and that the only thing that is right in this rotten old world is Beveridge from Indiana. Which leads to the conclusion that if there is a yolk-streak in one it's bound to come out whether one is taking a lod or making the nation's laws, and Beveridge, it is claimed, has shown himself saffron hued.

While we discussed the ploy of this phase of his career, Senator Lodge of Massachusetts was recognized by the chair. Dapper and well groomed, the gentleman who writes history as though it were inspired verse, roused and started to speak. As he did so, Lorimer came into the Senate from a cloakroom. With unburned head he held defiantly high and his wax-like face whiter in the pallid light that shines on the chamber, the man at the bar of public opinion walked through the foyer without being spoken to and left the room.

Lodge's Polished Speech.

Lodge had written his address. With voice of exquisite timbre and modulation, he recounted the story of the making of the constitution. The framers of that great document had perhaps had in mind just such a crisis as threatened the country today, when men who refuse to let the lamp of the past shine on the path of the future are insisting on giving into the hands of the people all the functions of government instead of letting the representatives chosen by the people look after their affairs.

As he spoke, LaFollette of Wisconsin let a wide grin play on his studious face, Bristow of Kansas glared, Burton of Ohio looked bored, Cummings of Iowa left his seat, preened himself as though for flight and walked to a chair nearer the speaker, whether they agreed with Lodge or not, the profound attention granted proved the vast admiration for the man's erudition and for his prestige in the body. Every school boy in this country should have a copy of that speech to preserve as literature, as reference data when economists are discussed and comparisons are to be drawn. During his address the galleries filled. When he finished there was a general exodus, for a mere lawyer had risen to expound the law.

In the evening one watched and listened to the statesmen and notables dine at the hotel, then made a choice between the divine Sarah in Rosin's "L'Aiglon" and Sothern and Marlow in "Macbeth." It is not at all that we have the great French artist world-woman with us, so why choose?

Mrs. Taft at Theater.

At New National, before a distinguished audience, including Mrs. Taft who chaperoned her daughter, Helen, and a bevy of girls from Bryn Mawr, the actress who has flipped her fingers at times, appeared. When, as the dreaming boy, this marvel of a woman, came on the stage, she looked uncanny, as though she had taken off grave clothes. Her face was white and heavy of jaw; her lips too red, like a jade green under darkly tinted lids; also her walk was a sham.

"Has the eternally young artist abdicated to the aging woman?" I asked. Then into the voice, high tenor like a boy's, leaped a flame. From that moment, throughout the long clattering dialogues, through the apostrophes and yearnings uttered by the persecuted eagle; through the wheedling scene when the son of Napoleon begs his grandfather of Austria to make him emperor of France; into the vision on the field of Wagram, and at last, when he comes to die a broken-plumaged thing, the fire of the player's genius swept and conquered us; broke down indifference and illusion and left us quite devastated when the final curtain had dropped.

This French woman, who, for forty years, has claimed supremacy over all others, who has conquered and brought to her feet the art worshippers and life lovers of three nations, guards and holds the secret of her fires today as when she burst, a living flame, upon the world and made it wonder if such as she ever really die. In April or early May she will visit Denver.

DOZEN CHINAMEN HIDDEN IN A BOX CAR.

Were Hauled Out at San Marcial and Will Be Given Hearing at Socorro.

San Marcial, N. M., Feb. 9.—A dozen Chinamen were discovered in a box car here yesterday by Immigration Agents L. D. Waters and R. N. Ames. The Chinamen were riding in a car partially filled with wood, the shipment consigned to Las Vegas. They will be arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Sweet at Socorro and will probably be deported unless they can show the necessary papers. It is supposed the Celestials sneaked across the border from Mexico, taking advantage of the disturbance there, and managed to crawl into a car in El Paso.

GRAZING COMMISSION TO BE APPOINTED.

Government Will Hold Examination For Eligibles on February 23 and 25.

Washington, Feb. 9.—A new government position is disclosed by the announcement of the United States Civil Service Commission of an examination which will be held February 23 and 25, to find three grazing examiners for the Forest Service. The position will pay a salary of $1,200 a year at entrance.

The announcement specifies that the applicants must be men, at least twenty years old, and possessed of at least one season's experience in handling stock, together with at least one year of technical training in specified botanical studies.

The establishment of this position is in line with the policy which the Department of Agriculture has always had to view in its management of grazing on the National Forests. It is not merely seeking to prevent cattle and sheep from doing damage to forest growth and watershed conditions, as they graze in the herbage which is yearly produced in the open forests, parks, and high mountain meadows within the National Forests. Ranged stock are a matter of decided importance to the American people in these days of rising prices for food products and diminishing supplies. In proportion to population, of livestock, and therefore Secretary Wilson intends that every acre of National Forest range shall be made to produce as much forage as it is capable of doing, consistently with the carrying out of the other purposes for which the National Forests are maintained.

Ever since the Forest Service took over the management of the National Forests, it has been studying the range problem along with its regulation of grazing. In the beginning it was confronted with the fact that a very large part of the range had been badly abused and depleted through the competition of rival owners, before any restrictions had been put upon them, and by overgrazing and bad methods of handling stock. Its supporting power had in consequence been greatly reduced, and was steadily declining. To enable overgrazed areas to recuperate, and to prevent the extension of over-grazed conditions to new areas, the amount of stock to be allowed on the Forests was everywhere carefully prescribed. The results were then observed, and if it appeared that there was still over-use of the range, the number permitted were cut down still further. On the other hand, where recuperation had taken place the allowance of stock has been correspondingly increased.

The proposal to appoint specialists who are both thoroughly trained botanists and men of practical experience in range matters indicates recognition of the fact that to attain the highest point of range productivity the best scientific knowledge must be applied to the study of the problems of forage production and utilization. As stock graze on the range, the effect on the different kinds of vegetation differs both with its palatability or unpalatability and with its capacity to produce seed, its time of seeding, its resistance to trampling, its manner of growth, and many other elements.

What is aimed at now is nothing less than to find out all the things on which depend the production of the largest amount of beef, mutton, wool, and hides on a given area. This involves learning how both to restrict and to time the grazing so as not to interfere with the reproduction of the most valuable elements in the forage crop, how to prevent unnecessary loss to feed through trampling and in other ways, how to exterminate poisonous plants from the range and how to prevent the loss of forage which results from the multiplication of prairie dogs and coppers, whether it is practicable to introduce new forage plants by direct seeding, and many other matters. It is to look up such matters that the grazing examiners are to be appointed.

Besides seeking to bring about the recuperation of depleted ranges, the reduction of waste, and the development of all range to what may be termed an artificial state of productivity through control of reproduction, accompanied, it is hoped, by the introduction of new forage plants, the studies planned will aim also at increasing the area of the range available. There is much natural grazing land in the National Forests which can not be put to use, either because the country is too rough for stock to be driven in, because shipping facilities are lacking, or because of a lack of water. The construction of properly located roads and driveways and the development of water through the building of reservoirs or the driving of artesian wells are a part of the general scheme of permanent improvement planned for the National Forests. To furnish the basis for comprehensive development of the grazing resources the range will be studied in detail classified according to the type of vegetation found, and mapped by "forties." The observations made will include notes for each forty acres upon the surface, soil, character and density of vegetation, evidence of over-grazing or under-use, presence of poisonous plants, damage by range destroying animals, water facilities, and accessibility. With such data in hand it will be possible to bring about much more intelligent and intensive use of the National Forest range.

NATURAL GAS FIELD ADJOINS LOWER RIO GRANDE.

Pipe Lines Are Being Laid From Wells at Reiser, Texas, to Nuevo Laredo.

Reiser, Texas, Feb. 9.—The development of the natural gas field at Reiser, Texas, and the laying of a pipe line from the wells to Laredo has started an industrial movement in that city and also just across the river at Nuevo Laredo on the Mexican side. It is reported that the American Smelting and Refining Company is planning a large smelter at Nuevo Laredo and also the same company is arranging to pipe gas from the fields to large smelters at Monterey. It is said by those in position to know that the gas field at Reiser is the most promising in the United States and the output sufficient to furnish manufacturing fuel for many years to come. So far ten wells have been sunk in this field and each is a gusher producing millions of feet per day. With this handiest of all fuel supplies lying right at its doors Laredo is making an effort to become one of the great manufacturing centers of the southwest.

LONE STAR STATE IS UNLIKE ALBUQUERQUE.

In Former, Births Exceed Deaths by Almost One Hundred Per Cent.

Houston, Texas, Feb. 9.—That Texas is not in danger of race suicide is shown in the report of John E. Rosser, registrar of vital statistics. According to this report the number of births in the state are many thousand in excess of the deaths. The percentage of deaths is 6.7 per 1,000 population, while that of births is 11.2 per 1,000 population. From those figures it will be seen that the multitude of the race is in line with that rapid development going on in all parts of the state, and that the old commandment "Multiply and replenish" is rigidly observed.

EASY CHANGE

When Coffee is Doing Harm.

A lady writes from the land of cotton of the results of a four years' use of the food beverage—Hot Postum. "Ever since I can remember we had used coffee three times a day. It had a more or less injurious effect upon us all, and I myself suffered almost death from indigestion and nervousness caused by it. "I know it was that because when I would leave it off for a few days I would feel better. But it was hard to give it up, even though I realized how harmful it was to me. "At last I found a perfectly easy way to make the change. Four years ago I abandoned the coffee habit and began to drink Postum, and I also influenced the rest of the family to do the same. Even the children are allowed to drink it freely as they do water. And it has done us all great good. "I no longer suffer from indigestion and my nerves are in admirable tone since I began to use Postum. We never use the old coffee any more. "We appreciate Postum as a delightful and healthful beverage, which not only invigorates but supplies the best of nourishment as well." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF SANTA FE COUNTY.

The New Mexican is the oldest newspaper in New Mexico. It is sent to every postoffice in the Territory, and has a large and growing circulation among the intelligent and progressive people of the Southwest.

ARIZONA VOTES TODAY.

Arizona votes today upon its constitution. Its proposed fundamental law does not compare in statesmanship or in wisdom with the one of the older commonwealths of that of New Mexico. The constitution formulated is so radical a document that its enforcement would drive capital and industry from the new state, but the faith prevails that Arizona would of its own volition, make the necessary changes before calamity overcame its people. However, Arizona will not be coerced at this time into adopting a constitution that is safe and sane. There is something admirable in this stubbornness, unwise though it be, and the New Mexican believes that Arizona should be granted statehood despite the vagaries of its majority vote. Of this, however, there is little hope. How the east regards the constitution can be gathered from editorial expressions in the newspaper owned by the brother of President Taft, and the New York Sun. New Mexico may deem itself fortunate that it had a constitutional convention that did not surrender to the clamor of a Socialistic mob.

Charles P. Taft's Times-Star of Cincinnati, has aptly described the proposal of the Arizona constitution as an attempt to incorporate lynch law in the constitution of an American state. In case of the Arizona judiciary, the subjects of terrorism, the noose, the intended victims of the new law of the impassioned multitude, are to be the very men whose function it is to apply the old law and interpret this same constitution which provides for a subordination of their decisions and constructions to the malice, the foolishness, and the frenzy of a plurality vote at the polls. There has been nothing like this since the last decade of years in the Eighteenth century. Surely this grave peril concerns not only the people of Arizona.

Under the caption, "The Bench or the Mob," the New York Sun says editorially: The reckless populism embodied in the form of constitution in which Arizona is to vote next Thursday appears in almost every article of that astounding document. Let sane Americans contemplate the proposed application of the principle of the recall to judicial officers in the state, from the lowest to the highest. Take the supreme court with its three judges. They are to be chosen at a general state election by the qualified voters of the state at large, for a term of six years. During this period the continued performance of their duties is subject to the provisions of article VIII, entitled "Removal from Office—Recall of Public Officers." We quote the material parts of this article.

The Sun here quotes articles, 2, 3, 4, and 5 and proceeds:

"To this complexion are the courts of law to come in a state in the American union. A judge rendering his decision according to his conscience and his knowledge of the law, if his decision or opinion be momentarily unpopular, may be summoned by less than one quarter of the voters to stand trial before the mob. The requisite signatures to a petition for his removal from the bench, for entertaining unpopular views of law may be obtained in separate batons, anywhere, on the streets, or in the workshops, or at mass meetings in fanned by speeches of demagogues."

"The twenty-five per cent having put the judge on trial before the mob, in presence of which, as the high court of appeal he must defend, in two hundred words or less, his conception of duty and understanding of the law. Within thirty days the judge of the supreme court, or contemporaneously, the entire bench may be dragged from the bench by a mere plurality vote. By the same plurality vote the entire bench may be supplanted by more facile interpreters of the waves of public emotion and if the attack upon judicial independence is unsuccessful in the first instance, the assailed jurist may be hauled repeatedly before the bench of the mob, at intervals of a little more than one month, during his entire six years term, or until he is disposed of, as long as anybody is willing to pay the cost of removal elections."

The Mexican Rebel army seems to have about as many generals as the Haytian outfit which was captured and executed the other day. Of the army of seven men taken captive, six were generals, and they were promptly blindfolded and shot. Epaulets do not seem to come very high in Madero's new republic.

The fight over Mary Baker Eddy's millions suggests two comforting thoughts. There are no pockets in shrouds, and that while formerly the starting of a new sect meant martyrdom, today it is a good financial investment.

THE PEOPLE SHOULD KNOW.

Territorial Treasurer M. A. Otero, at the end of every quarter, publishes a detailed report of the financial condition of the Territory. His accounts are carefully audited as are the accounts of other territorial officials by Traveling Auditor Charles V. Sanford. But these other officials should follow the example of the territorial treasurer and should publish complete quarterly reports. The banks publish reports at frequent intervals, and yet, the general public is not so much interested in the bank statements as it is in the accounts of district clerks, of county and city treasurers, of every bond and every treasurer who handle public funds. These accounts too, should be frequently audited. There are several county treasurers in New Mexico, who publish their reports for the information of the public, and there are others, again, who have not published a report since they are in office. The first suggestion is that they either are too ignorant to make a report or so crooked that they are afraid to publish a report. It is an uncomfortable dilemma, but the man who handles public money, if he is straight and if he is intelligent, is only too eager to have his accounts carefully audited and to take into confidence the taxpayer and the general public by publishing a complete report at the end of every quarter. The New Mexican will continue to insist upon statehood that every fiduciary officer handling public money must make and publish each quarter an accounting of the trust that is put in him. The territorial treasurer is doing it; the banks are doing it; wide-awake and honest county treasurers are doing it, and those who are not doing it are the very ones that should be compelled to do it. The public has a right to know and eventually will insist on knowing.

THE STATEHOOD SITUATION.

Governor Mills arrived today in the National Capital with the certified election returns and a certified copy of the Constitution, thus completing another normal step on the road to statehood. New Mexico hopes that Congress will take a positive step in the approval of the Constitution and the admission of the territory, during the next three weeks in order to clear the way for immediate admission. But circumstances are forming the same kind of an adverse combination that has followed New Mexico persistently during the many years of its struggle for its rights. President Taft has just notified Congress that it must act on Canadian reciprocity before March 4, or he will call a special session that will throw open the subject of tariff revision. It is an ultimatum on his part, and means that everything else must be side-tracked.

In the crush of the remaining days of the present Congress, statehood and the New Mexico Constitution will be carefully lost sight of, if precedents count for anything. There is not much use in protesting against this injustice, against this unnecessary delay. It is best to take things philosophically. There is nothing that can prevent New Mexico's admission by March 4, 1913, and there is a strong possibility of admission by the end of June of next year. As to immediate admission, there is still some hope, and if it is granted it will come as a pleasant surprise.

MISSOURI'S CAPITAL FIGHT.

The destruction of the capital building at Jefferson City, Missouri, by fire, has started a desperate capital fight. St. Louis, which dominates the state politically and otherwise, wants to rob Jefferson City of its only means of support. It accuses Jefferson City of lacking hotel facilities, fire protection, railroad connections and of being a country town. To Jefferson City the capital means its very existence, to St. Louis it is a mere bugaboo from the material standpoint. The real reason St. Louis wants the capital, is that it will be much more convenient for the St. Louis beer brewers to govern Missouri, if the capital is at St. Louis instead at Jefferson City. St. Louis has many luxuries and conveniences that Jefferson City has not and are dear to every beer brewer's heart. As to corruption, however, it can hardly be any worse in the Monard City than it has been in rural Jefferson City. In the fate of the latter, Santa Fe may see its own destiny unless it lifts itself out of the rut of non-progressiveness.

An orchard covering 120 acres at Grand Junction, Colorado, sold this week for $100,000. This is not because Grand Junction has soil or climate superior to that of Santa Fe, but because some one who knew how and gave personal attention to the work, planted and kept the orchard until it produced sufficient revenue to justify a price of almost a thousand dollars an acre. There are orchards in the Grand Junction section that are worth even more per acre and there ought to be a hundred orchards in the Santa Fe and other neighboring valleys in equally as high state of cultivation.

PLACER LOCATIONS.

Locations of placer claims are watched with considerable interest by the progress of legislation in congress designed to remedy the hardships imposed by the ruling of the department of the interior in the "Yard" case. The chances now appear good for the enactment of the proposed remedial legislation before the end of the present session.

The decision in the "Yard" case, which applies to all placer locations of gold, oil, etc., was in substance that only twenty acres may be patented by a company. In New Mexico and California and elsewhere in the west, it had been the belief that eight persons could locate twenty acres for oil or other placer purposes, and then transfer their holdings to a corporation, each of them receiving one-eighth of the shares of the corporation, and that the corporation could go ahead and get a patent from the government for the 160 acres so held. In pursuance of this belief, it had been the custom to follow the procedure mentioned. There are many oil locations in New Mexico, made under this practice, and not a few gold placer locations. The decision of the department that only twenty acres could be patented under such circumstances would operate to disarrange entirely the plans of the locators. In California, the loss and hardships involved would be enormous. And yet, the decision of the department is generally regarded by lawyers as sound in law.

The California delegation in Congress has been working hard for legislation which would protect the owners of locations that were made under the old system prior to the "Yard" decision. On Friday last the committee on public lands of the house of representatives reported a bill providing for the needed remedial legislation, and it is expected that the senate committee on public lands will today report Senator Flint's bill, which is identical with the house bill. If this legislation goes through, the locations now held under the "eight claims" system will be permitted to go to patent, but all locations made since the "Yard" decision will have to conform to that decision.

A REFERENCE LIBRARY.

The Las Vegas Optic last evening told of the great success of the high school reference library in the Mead City that is proving a great success, in fact so much, that a separate librarian had to be appointed. It is a good habit for pupils to get into, to consult reference books, and to learn where to find things in books. The Public Library at Santa Fe would greatly extend its usefulness, if teachers would encourage and urge the pupils, especially of the grammar and high schools, to take advantage of library privileges and guiding them into the selection of books for reading and study. At the same time, the City Board of Education, should annually give $100 or more toward building up a first class reference alcove in the public library, a room stocked with modern reference works adapted to school conditions. Next to knowing a thing, is the ability of finding it, and much of the helplessness of public school graduates is to be ascribed to the fact that they never learned where to find the things they wanted to know and ought to know.

Options that the Arizona and Colorado Railroad Company had secured for a right of way through San Juan county, have been returned, and this is taken to mean that the proposed Southern Pacific branch from southern Arizona to Durango, Colorado, will not be built. And who needs to wonder? Who can expect men of capital to invest in Arizona, or in San Juan county, both of which have given such palpable evidence lately that they are permeated with socialism and do not believe in a safe and sane constitution that would protect property as well as personal rights. Let the Socialists put up their own money constructing railroads and developing resources. This much is certain, after they have invested, they will become more conservative and more amenable to reason. Many a corporation baiter has been turned into a conservative by just a little bit of business experience.

The Chinese famine should awaken sympathy throughout the United States. It is no small affair in which a few thousands suffer. Its magnitude is much greater than the famine in Russia which a few years ago led the people of this country to give so generously for the relief of the peasants. In China the population involved by the famine runs into the millions and the suffering of men, women and children is dreadful beyond description. Add to this the spectre of the bubonic plague and it will be acknowledged that generous thanks offerings are due by every one in the United States, out of gratitude for not being born a Chinaman in the famine stricken provinces.

Trusts are anathema in eastern New Mexico, at least among the radical majority. The sugar trust is considered the worst of them. Yet, note, when the Sugar Trust plans to build a million dollar beet sugar factory somewhere in eastern New Mexico every community from Carlsbad, north to Portales and Clovis, extends wide arms to embrace the wicked, wicked trust. Can it be after all, that sordid considerations are able to change the point of view of these radical patriots?

With an anti-vaccination campaign in progress in darkest Texas, it may yet be necessary to have the mounted police establish a quarantine along the eastern border.

Two suits for divorce were filed by well known people at Las Vegas yesterday, and one wife deserter brought back. Says the Las Vegas Optic:

INSUBORDINATION AND MUTINY AT ROSWELL.

Eight Students at Military Institute Are Expelled After Making a Rough House.

Insubordination, growing several days, developed into open mutiny Tuesday night when a score of cadets refused to don full dress for 5 o'clock parade at the military institute at Roswell. Colonel J. W. Wilson gave the battalion ten minutes in which to appear properly dressed and all but three complied. These were expelled on the spot, and yesterday six more left the institute, coming down town without permits, and they were expelled.

Brooks, Story of the Aeneid. Leaders of the management expects to restore order. For two days cadets have been touching off giant fire crackers, secured in an unknown manner, and Tuesday night three pounds of open powder was put in a bath tub in the barracks building and touched off. The explosion broke out the windows in the room but no other damage was done.

MARKERS FOR SANTA FE TRAIL IN SAN MIGUEL.

County Commissioners Take Action to Set Them in Designated Places.

Tuesday the county commissioners of San Miguel county before adjourning their regular monthly meeting, decided upon having the stone markers for the Santa Fe trail set in the designated places as soon as the weather conditions will permit. The markers, which were presented to the county by the Daughters of the American Revolution, arrived here some time ago. They are of granite and are handsome and permanent monuments that will assist materially in preserving the outlines of the old trail. The locations for the markers, which were decided upon some time ago, are as follows: The hill between Las Vegas and Watrous; the Plaza, Old Town; Bernal; San Jose, Colorado. The latter place is a historic old post near Rowe. The Gallinas bridge is, perhaps, the handsomest monument on the trail, which is being marked by the Daughters of the Revolution throughout Kansas, Colorado, and New Mexico.

EVOLVES NOVEL ATHLETIC TRAINING IDEA

Coach A. A. Stagg, University of Chicago.

Coach A. A. Stagg of the University of Chicago has evolved the new "American idea" for athletic training in the educational institutions of the land. Departments founded for the present and future welfare of all the students, with specialized directors and improved facilities, is the coach's plan for the correct physical culture of college youths.

Coach Stagg's ideals are embodied in a report entitled "Some Comments of Physical Education," prepared for the Society of Directors of Physical Education in Colleges, of which he is president. In giving details for more efficient work in athletic lines he emphasizes the moral and educational importance of athletics in centers of learning.

In addition to caring for the students' health and morals Coach Stagg recommends training that will benefit the collections after graduation.

"An ideal scheme of physical education, it seems to me, would not be complete unless it provided the student with the training for recreational exercise in after life," he says. "To that end, therefore, students should be taught and encouraged to master with some degree of proficiency swimming, bowling, handball, basketball, tennis, golf, boating, bicycling, horsemanship etc., so that he should have a degree of proficiency in many forms of exercise and recreation."

The maroon teacher's requirements for directors of physical education are probably stricter than those enforced in the majority of colleges. In discussing the ideal director he says:

"I should say first of all, that he should have the instinct of an educator. He should have a broad collegiate training so that he would have breadth of vision. It would serve him well if in college he could specialize in psychology and the theory of education. He should have normal training in a good school of physical education, either preceding or following this with a complete course in medicine. While in college he should have been interested in and closely studied gymnastics and athletics and participated in them as much as possible."

"It has been truly said that the physical director has more influence on student morals than any other teacher. That then indicates the necessity of the director being a man of high impulses, of fine personality, fair-minded, sympathetic and honest. His public and private relations with students demand frankness with sympathy, justice with firmness and uncompromising honesty."

A HOME MISSIONARY

By Martha McCulloch-Williams

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

When Sandford came back from a trip South with a bundle of curls and frills, set off with a rosebud mouth and an engaging and artless helplessness, it is putting it very mildly to say the gang was amazed.

Sandford, the soul of capacity, the stern judge, the fellow who had weighed in the balance every friend and emotion he had ever cherished before allowing himself to cherish them! It was beyond reason or calculation—they shook foreboding heads behind his back, and to his face gave him felicitations that were ghastly in their exaggeration. But Mrs. Sandford—nobody ventured somehow to call her Mabel, albeit first-naming was a rigid gang rule—smiled small soft smiles over the felicitations, and murmured that she hoped Archer's friends would find a tiny space for her.

She was a nice little thing—all agreed to that. But what of Sandford's future? Arch was none so easy to live with. Moreover, his work always suffered if he had a rasping environment. And with this ridiculous child at the head of his establishment, he could not help but be rasped. It showed how little she knew that she insisted upon keeping house—the gang affected studio life and bohemian dinners.

The married members tried to warn her—to point out the servant problem, the janitor pitfall, but all in vain. Willard said pityingly:

"Nothing is invincible but ignorance. Sandford's wife knows nothing of anything—and you can't make her know."

"Yes, provincial to the core," Mrs. Willard responded. "It's really pitiful."

Affected Studio Life and Bohemian Dinners.

ful to think of Arch—with such a career ahead of him, swallowed up in a slough of domesticity."

"He'll escape—the slough won't last six months," Bent said dully.

"Yes, he'll find even he can't dramatize butchers' mistakes, nor the ever-recurring woes of washday," Linson added.

Ada Ware, Linson's sweetheart, only sighed. But after a minute she said smiling:

"Who'll bet that we are never asked to a Sandford dinner? Arch is so hospitable, he'll want us—"

"And he'll have us just the same—but not at home to bother wife," Bent chanted, pushing the bottle to the middle of the table.

They were dining at Marella's, and had prolonged the session by an extra bottle, flavoring the wine with gossip of their friends. There were regular Marella nights, but at the next of them only a handful of the gang appeared—the fringe as it were. All the inner circle had been asked to dine at the Sandfords', and had accepted as one person.

"No! I didn't cook a thing. Isn't there a law against cruelty to guests—even if they are your friends?" Mabel asked, from the head of the table.

It was simply but flawlessly appointed—even Mrs. Willard, a fashion authority and social critic, had to admit as much. And the vands matched—were simple but delicious—moreover, they appeared almost to serve themselves, notwithstanding Mabel now and then said plaintively to her husband:

"Won't you get the things from the sideboard? Neither Mary nor I know just how you dear people like to have them—whether the cheese comes before or after, and about the cordials and so on."

There was no ban upon smoke, notwithstanding the freshness of everything. After dinner things went well—Bent sang, Willard told his best stories, Mrs. Willard concealed at least two stickfuls of matter for her next article from suggestions in what she was seeing. Ada Ware sighed happily at finding no piano. A guitar served to accompany the songs, but Linson had to play it.

Mabel shook her head at the bare thought of such a thing: "I can't play I hardly even love music—except ballads and hunting songs," she said.

Ada reached to press her hand, saying half under breath, "Thank you! May I come now and then to your oasis? I live in a howling jungle, with seven pianos, a phonograph and a young woman studying for opera."

"You may come if you like—I like you," Mabel answered in the same key.

Altogether she made a good if faint impression—chiefly by the things she did not say and do. There was no effacing herself, just a lack of forthputting. And when the party broke up she fairly dragged Archer into taking home Mrs. March, a merry widow, who had made a condescension of coming. He got back in a vile temper, but said only to his wife:

"If this is part of the programme, when next you feed lions, I shall have business—in Buffalo or somewhere."

He did not mean it. Mabel understood. She waited six weeks then called in the balance of the gang. By this speculation regarding her was on edge. Arch had not once come back to dine at the old house, though he had several times looked in on his way home after doing very far downtown. So he was not tied to an apron-string. Moreover, he looked happy. Moreover further, he had landed a new play without a scrap, in spite of having written it at fever heat. Every one thought he would do well to send his wife home to her people when released again. Oddly enough, nobody ventured to say so—there was something in his manner which forbade.

The Willards felt that they should show the gang's appreciation of Mabel—they did it by a special Marella dinner.

Next day but one Ada Ware ran in to see Mabel, who herself opened the door, and held up a warning hand. "If you come in, with safety," she said. "Mary is sick—the doctor says she has missed pneumonia by the narrowest squeak. She's asleep now—in the living room—with all the windows open. Air is the great thing. You know—"

"Anybody else would let her get it in a hospital," Ada said, with an odd feeling in her throat. She was as near as could be, but her face was strained and lined, her eyes heavy. The eyes became suddenly stic.

"If it had been me, you couldn't have driven Mary away—and if I had had the plague," she said. "When she is well enough, we are going to send her to see her people up-country—Archer has promised to take her for my birthday present."

"What will you do without her?" Ada asked—by this time the gang had decided that the Sandfords had by unheard-of luck found the one perfect servant.

Mabel looked a little thoughtful. "Why, we shall get somebody," she said. "Until we do, Arch will put up with my cooking. You know he's perfectly angelic."

The riddle remained until Mary was leaving. Ada had volunteered to go part of the way with her—her own people, it appeared, lived on the same line, so there was talk between the two girls despite their differing station. Ada was above the snobbery of patronage to any clean and simple-minded human being.

"Why! It was Mrs. Sandford herself showed me the difference between bad ways and good ones," Mary explained. "She knew a lot—and bent her mind all the time to learning more. But she was that shy of having folks know it, most of all her husband. It helps a man so to think he has something soft and helpless to take care of," she told the once. And she'd laugh and say: 'Mary, we don't know so much, both of us put together, but don't you think we can learn, with love teaching us?'"

"Yes, ma'am, she meant love of everything—your work, your husband, your home. She's the sort that will make any girl worth her salt. You just have to do the best that's in you for a lady that expects nothing else."

That night Ada wrote Linson a long, long letter, and Mary's saying was the text of it. He answered it in person; they went back to town married. Mabel then gave a dinner, not up to the double standard of herself, plus Mary, but still more than passable.

As Linson and Ada went away he said, patting her hand softly:

"Mabel is a real home missionary. We'll go hunting an apartment with a real kitchen tomorrow."

PUNISHED THE WRONG BOY

But What Happened to Boy for Whom Whipping Was Intended Is Not Told.

"Judge Ford's story about his schoolmate, who, after having put on a lot of extra clothes in anticipation of a whipping, had to stand for two hours close to a red-hot stove, reminds me of something that happened to me when I was a kid," says Banker A. E. McKee.

"I was on my way to see the principal of our school about something or other, one day, when I came across a playmate in deep distress. He said that he had a letter for the principal, but was too busy to deliver it. Would I take it along?"

"Sure I would, and I did. But no sooner had I handed it to the principal than he seized me by the coat collar and gave me a royal 'biding.'"

"What's this for?" I demanded when I got through yelling. "I haven't done anything."

"Read that!" he said, and he thrust out the letter of which I had been the innocent bearer. And this is the way the letter read:

"This boy has tormented me past all endurance. He richly deserves a whipping that he will not soon forget."

"The letter was signed by our teacher. Well, I got the whipping all right, but I should like to tell you what happened to the boy for whom the whipping was really intended when I met him next day."

Preferred the Baby.

"A Michigan bear carried off a baby from a blackberry patch when it might have had all the blackberries it could have eaten."

"That was distinctly complimentary to the baby."

A Recollection.

"Did it take you long to learn the college yell?"

"No, indeed. I yelled the first night the sophomores got me."

Oh, Fudge!

Four times in one half hour I rose from my much needed slumber. To go downstairs and tell some one: "Nope, you've got the wrong number."

How It Happened.

"How's this?" remarked the tall office boy with the newspaper. "Here is where an educated monkey ran a sewing machine."

"Aw, that's nothing," sneered the short office boy. "Yesterday I saw a mouse run a typewriter."

"Come off! What are you giving me? Where did this happen?"

"Right in the old man's office. The mouse came from under the desk and made for the pretty typewriter, and she's running yet."

ADVERTISE!

YOUR SALESMAN may speak to twenty persons a day praising your wares. HE BRINGS YOU BUSINESS.

YOUR ADVERTISEMENT in the NEW MEXICAN speaks to thousands every day. IT IS BOUND TO BRING YOU BUSINESS.

THE SUBSCRIBERS to the local paper are the prosperous people of your town. THEY ARE THE PEOPLE WHO BUY.

YOUR ADVERTISEMENT in the local paper helps to build the town. The outside judges Santa Fe by the advertisements in its local papers.

It is a BUSINESS MAXIM universally accepted that advertising pays. That is, if it is done right.

PEOPLE READ ADVERTISEMENTS. Let the "New Mexican" place in its most obscure column that you are selling sugar at one cent a pound and your store tomorrow will not hold its customers. Advertise calico at one cent a yard and you will have to telegraph to your wholesale house for car-load lots.

YOU CAN STIMULATE BUSINESS BY ADVERTISING. Today no business will increase permanently unless by some method of advertising. The fool in his heart will say that there is no virtue in advertising but the wise man knows that the fool is deceiving himself.

AN ADVERTISEMENT in the "New Mexican" DRAW! LIKE A POROUS PLASTER. It cannot fail if it advertises the right goods at the right price.

THE NON-PROGRESSIVE MERCHANT is noted by the fact that his advertisement does not appear in the local papers. The sheriff has an eye on his business and his credit must be poor.

LAST YEAR, the "New Mexican" took in $12,000 in subscriptions. The readers who had that much for the local paper have as much for your store but you must let them know that you are doing business, where, and how you are doing it.

THE ADVERTISING RATES in the "New Mexican" are but a fraction of the rates in other cities. It is untrue that you cannot afford to advertise; the fact is when you feel that you cannot afford to advertise, you cannot afford NOT to advertise.

The "New Mexican" goes into the homes of Santa Fe and it reaches every post office in New Mexico

It pays to advertise in the "NEW MEXICAN"

King George Announces Thoroughbreds Will Be Raced Next Year Under Majesty's Colors.

The announcement has been received by several prominent American turfmen that King George of England would personally conduct his stable of thoroughbreds on the English tracks next year and follow the example of his father, King Edward.

King George has always been a great admirer of racing and before ascending the throne was prominently engaged in most of the English classics. After the death of King Edward, however, those of His Majesty's horses which were in training were run in the name of Lord Derby.

The news from England is that King George has decided to take up the famous thoroughbreds and will enter all the horses in his own name. The latest issue of the English racing calendar, the official journal of the Jockey Club, contains details of the entries for next season's meetings that have already entered into on behalf of the King. The engagements relate to the New Market, Second October, Bath, Bibury Club, Doncaster Spring, Gatwick October, Hurst Park Whitson, Newbury Summer and Sandown Park first summer meeting.

Omaha Signs Pickering.

Olle Pickering, the veteran outfielder who distinguished himself with the Louisville American association team last season has been signed for the 1911 season by Pa. Rourke. Mr. Rourke says Pickering will be placed somewhere in the outfield, but does not know where. Pickering was in Omaha in 1898, when he did good work for the local team. His start in the baseball world was made in Columbus, O., in 1896. He was with the St. Louis Browns in 1907, with Washington in 1908, the next year with the millers of Minneapolis and last year with Louisville.

GOOD POINTS IN FOOTBALL

Among Other Things It Teaches Players Value of Moderation in Eating and Drinking.

There is no doubt that football is a very strenuous sport, and that it has more than a dash of danger in it. But, after all, it has its use, declares the Baltimore Sun, and possibly they will outweigh its dangers in the long run. It is for the most part a clean, manly sport, though there occasionally creeps into a line-up some coward who takes advantage of the opportunity offered to wreak personal spite or to gain victory by dirty work. The game itself teaches young men in the first place, the necessity for taking care of themselves physically. It teaches them that moderation in eating and drinking is of the highest value in putting athletes in condition and keeping them there, and it is thus useful in forming their habits of life. Then it teaches them on the field that instant, unhesitating obedience to command is absolutely necessary to success; that they must not stop to question the advisability or argue the expediency of a movement decided upon by the leader, but that they must instantly obey.

GOSSIP OF SPORTDOM

Baltimore is making strenuous efforts to get Bob Unglaub of the Washington team.

It is about time for another celebrity to "refuse to coach the Harvard baseball team."

George Huff, the Cubs' aggressive scout, is scouring the woods in search of the ideal bat.

Editor Travis of an eastern golf magazine is maintaining his record for continuous play in amateur tournaments.

Arthur Shafer, Giant utility infielder, has the distinction of being the first American baseball player to go to Japan as a coach.

Western Golf association leaders want a few more concessions from the reluctant east, so they are reviving that familiar war talk once more.

Tommy Burns just can't stay retired. Now the Canadian says he will return to the fighting game and battle Langford if he can cure a bad knee.

"Muggsy" McGraw, manager of the Giants, arises and remarks that he will get in condition this spring with the intention of jumping into the game occasionally.

Handing titles to athletes has not proved successful in the past, and Mahmont will be working under a sort of hoodoo defending that passed to him by Gotsch.

Elliott, new infielder of the New York Highlanders, has fallen heir to $30,000 left by a relative. That is not enough to put him out of the game, he says. Only the umpire can do that.

In the Steps of Solomon.

Two women came before a certain magistrate with a fat pullet, each declaring that it belonged to herself. The magistrate from his high seat frowned heavily at the first woman. "Does this pullet belong to Mrs. Jones?" he asked her. "No, indeed, it don't, sir," she replied. Then he turned to the other woman. "Does this pullet belong to Mrs. Smith?" "It certainly does not," she replied. "The pullet," the magistrate then decreed, "does not belong to Mrs. Jones nor does it belong to Mr. Smith. The pullet is mine. Take it round to the house and give it to my cook."

Dr. McCarthy called at the headquarters of the Beavers in the Duke City and found them more entertaining. He said the Beavers have their furniture and are apparently ready to enjoy comfortable club life.

Writing to Mother.—Further down the aisle of coats on each of which lies a wounded soldier, most of them shot in the legs, is a man writing a letter. He is young, he has not been long in the service, but already he understands its demands on the youth of his country. He pens a few lines in a wobbly hand, stops, cogitates, winces from the pain of the wounds in his legs and lies down for a moment to recover his composure. Then the writing is resumed. He had finished but one word. It was "quenda." He started the second word nam—then he fell over and in a few seconds was asleep. He was writing a letter to his mother.

Then Another Remembers Mother.

His companion on the next cot is also writing. He stops and thinks between the lines, but he is older, much older and better able to stand pain, for youth is not used to it. He is writing and smiles now and then, stops, looks at his companion fast asleep, takes the partly written sheet from his hand and glances at it. Then a tear trickles down his cheeks. He lays aside the letter he was writing and starts another. He too, is now writing to his mother. He had forgotten her at first, he was going to write to his sweetheart in Mexico City, but his mother, ah, she is well, for it would never do to tell one's mother that he is lying on a hospital cot with bullet wounds in his legs.

Doctors, nurses, all with the gentleness which is known to no other profession, pass food along the aisle, give the injured some food, then a little medicine and pass along to the next. They are ministering angels whose presence is the only gentle thing about war.

EAGLE, EMBLEM OF FREEDOM, IS HERE.

Was Caught in Socorro and Was Sent to Governor Mills By Mrs. Ryan and Mrs. Gonzales.

The eagle, king of birds, the standard of the ancient Romans, and the gold standard of ten dollars in this country, the eagle, the national emblem of this country, is here, alive, and possessing all the strength, size, graceful figure, keenness of vision and perhaps extraordinary flight of the bird known to every one.

The eagle arrived in the city today, but it did not come through the air in all its majesty but chose an overland, express route.

It was sent to Governor Mills by Mrs. John Ryan of Socorro and Mrs. Eleuterio Gonzales of San Antonio, in Socorro county. The eagle was captured in eastern Socorro county, and Mrs. Ryan and Mrs. Gonzales thought it a good idea to send it to the governor of the new state which will soon be admitted to the Union and enjoy the privileges for which the "eagle, bird of freedom" stands symbolic.

Just what will be done with the eagle is not known but it is said that Adjutant General Brooks will look after the imperial bird until the governor gets home and makes his wishes known about the matter.

Mulock has letters patent for this rifling process issued to him by the United States patent office in November, 1906, and January, 1907, respectively, and it is alleged the United States has used Mulock's patent in the manufacture of firearms without giving him a royalty.

Senator Guggenheim today also introduced a bill to pay Loran B. Sylvester of Monte Vista, Colo., $10,174 as compensation in full for loss of sheep owned by him ranging in the Rio Grande national forest, their loss being caused, it is alleged by the arbitrary and improper acts of agents of the forest service.

Magazine Postage.

Washington, Feb. 9.—The question whether magazines with extensive advertising sections are paying the government a reasonable price for carrying the periodicals through the mails was discussed today in the senate committee on postoffices and post roads.

The discussion was in connection with an amendment proposed to the postal appropriation bill to increase the rate from 1 to 4 cents a pound. No decision was reached and the controversy will be continued today.

Until today there had been no indication that the fight between the postoffice department and the publishers was to be renewed this session of congress. This morning, however, the question was taken up at the White House at a conference. The president, it is said, supported the contention of the postmaster general that some action should be taken to assist the department to reduce the postal deficit.

The method suggested was to provide for a system of weighing the periodicals so that separate rates should be paid on reading matter and advertising. The magazines are now carried, regardless of the size or amount of advertising, at the rate of one cent per pound.

A proposal was made by Mr. Hitchcock that the reading matter be carried for one cent, but that the advertising, which in some magazines is twice the weight of the reading matter, should pay four cents a pound.

After the White House conference it was decided to hold a meeting of the committee. Postmaster General Hitchcock, when asked to explain the proposition said if adopted it would reduce the deficit five to six millions a year.

From the discussion it was indicated a majority of the committee probably favored the plan, but the vote probably will be close.

Several important amendments favored by Postmaster General Hitchcock were made to the bill. One providing for an appropriation of $50,000 for an investigation by actual experiment of conducting a parcels post on rural routes. It is proposed that such a parcels post route be established and packages not exceeding eleven pounds be carried, and in that manner, the actual cost to the government be ascertained.

No action was taken on the proposition advocated by some senators that the government take over the pneumatic service operated in half a dozen cities.

The purchase by the government of this property was opposed by Mr. Hitchcock who urged that a commission, partly of postal and partly of business men be appointed by the president to make an investigation of the worth of the tube system.

JUDGE E. R. WRIGHT IS TAKEN ILL.

Convenes Court at Santa Rosa, Guadalupe County—Docket is an Unusually Large One.

Santa Rosa, N. M., Feb. 9.—District court was convened here with Judge E. R. Wright on the bench. The court officers present are District Attorney H. H. McElroy, Clerk Charles P. Downs, stenographer for grand jury, Miss Belle Parker; court reporter, Miss Olga Miller; Sheriff J. M. Casaus, Court Interpreter George Sena, and grand jury interpreter, T. Labadie.

Under instructions of Judge Wright, the grand jury, with Adolfo Grzechowski as foreman, began its work at once. It is probable that court will last as long as the court fund of $6,000, now on hand will last. As it takes about $300 a day to run court here this will mean 20 days of court. Two important criminal cases will take up a portion of the time. First is the McNabb murder trial. He is charged with having on the 13th of October, in the town of Vaughn, killed H. H. Hargis, an agent at that place of the E. P. & S. W. railway. His defence, it is said, will be what is popularly known as the "unwritten law." The other case is that of Lewis Tapia, charged with the murder of his stepdaughter, Miss Nora Stewart, on the 19th of January, this year, at Tapia's ranch on the Mesa Aragon, west of Santa Rosa.

A number of civil cases, in which Judge Wright was interested as an attorney previous to his appointment as judge, and consequently disqualified to try, will be heard by Judge Mechem, who will be here on the 15th.

Judge Henry Swan, an attorney of Tucumcari, came down to assist the district attorney in the prosecution of the McNabb case.

Judge E. R. Wright was confined to his bed yesterday. The physicians in attendance think he will be able to resume court business Thursday.

WE want to prove to you, how simple—how easy it is to make an old piece of furniture like new—what beautiful, lasting results you can get from Johnson's Materials.

A bottle of Johnson's Electric Solvo to instantly remove the old finish. A bottle of Johnson's Wood Dye—choose your shade from list below—to beautifully color the wood.

A package of Johnson's Prepared Wax to impart that beautiful hand-rubbed effect—protect the finish against heel marks and scratches. It will not catch or hold dirt or dust.

Johnson's Wood Dye

is not a mere stain—not simply a surface dressing. It is a real, deep-seated dye, that goes to the very heart of the wood—and stays there—fixing a rich and permanent color.

Johnson's Wood Dye is made in 14 standard shades:

No. 126 Light Oak No. 122 Forest Green No. 130 Weathered Oak

No. 123 Dark Oak No. 124 Flemish Oak No. 131 Brown Weathered

No. 125 Mission Oak No. 128 Brown Mahogany No. 132 Green Weathered

No. 120 Bog Oak No. 129 Light Mahogany No. 133 Mahogany Oak

No. 121 Moss Green No. 129 Dark Mahogany No. 134 Early English

Let them demonstrate what Johnson's Materials will do in your home.
