Sad Ending.

As we went to press last week Ernest Timoney and Geo. Drake were in the South Homestake drift the shaft leading thereto being on fire and foul air permeating every inch of the cavernous depths, while hope and fear had hold upon the hearts of our people. Never was greater heroism displayed than during the two days of the young men's imprisonment. Several ventured down the shaft only to be hauled back more dead than alive, nor was it until about 4 o'clock on Friday morning that the lifeless bodies were found evidence being conclusive that they had succumbed to the inevitable before our people were apprised of their danger, that before daylight had filled our streets on Wednesday morning the gates of death had opened and the spirits of two as gallant, noble men as ever labored above or beneath the ground had entered the portals and joined the innumerable throng aptly designated "the majority."

As indicated, the friends of the young men were intensely interested and the lives of many were held cheaply by the possessors in the effort to rescue the entombed men from their thralldom. But who can weigh or measure the grief which freighted the hearts of young Timoney's parents, as between hope and fear they stood trembling those many hours. When the worst was manifest it was a relief, sad, but somewhat comforting.

The boys went into the pit on Tuesday evening, happy as larks. After the alarm of fire in the shaft had been sounded and all of our people had been aroused valiant efforts were made to rescue the prisoners, but the foul air forbade success until nearly 4 o'clock on Friday morning when George Fitzpatrick and Will Warner descended the shaft and entered the den where the young men were employed. There they were found Timoney lying on his stomach and Drake on his side, all surrounding in a delirium: they had been suddenly overcome by drowsiness and passed into the sleep of death without consciousness of pain or suffering.

We are all in procession, walking to the tomb. Some make better time than others and lay down their burdens early in the march, but whether late or early, death overtakes us, the strong and the weak, the aged and the youth. What is beyond is hidden—only the eye of faith or hope can penetrate it, but that man will outlive death and leap from the shaft and toil incident to this life. The more serene state of existence is evident from the fact that the learned and unlearned all feel the afflatus. The passport from bloom to decay is swift but while all that is earthly is born but to die death is but transition from one condition to another of life. Blossoms, leaflets, flowers, grass, daisies, lilies, ivy and roses decay, but they reappear. So we trustfully believe that when our mortality is laid away immortality will clothe us and eternal bliss will compensate for our probationary trials here.

Ernest McBaron Timoney was born Dec 22, 1868, in Marietta, Ga., since when he has lived with his parents in Washington, D. C., Idaho, Utah and White Oaks.

Geo. Drake was a native of Indiana, and was aged a little over 30 years. At an early age he drifted to Texas but the last few years of his life have been spent in New Mexico, vibrating between Jicarillas, San Pedro and White Oaks.

OUR GOD, in whose sovereign will we humbly bow, has seen fit to call unto Himself our beloved son Ernest ("Gen.") He was our hope and pride, and we looked forward to the day when his good and generous heart and hands would lovingly close our eyes, in that sleep that knows no awakening until the Lord our Saviour claims His own.

Nevertheless, whilst sorrow wells up in our hearts over our loss, our gratitude towards the miners and citizens of White Oaks will never cease. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." Inspired by the spirit of true manhood the miners of White Oaks, to a man, God bless them, did all that heroic men could do to save our son, and his partner, Geo. Drake, from their terrible fate; to them our thanks are ever due.

To all our friends and neighbors who have helped and sympathized with us in our affliction, we thank you, and may God in His infinite love keep and spare you from such sorrow as is ours.

E. McB. TIMONEY,
ELLA G. TIMONEY.

Words are utterly inadequate to express thanks or gratitude, but they are the only medium whereby any expression can be given of the many heroic deeds and services rendered by the people of White Oaks during the awful hours from Wednesday until Friday mornings of last week. Since time began, and fearless daring of individual safety and life were never exhibited and the amount of labor and results accomplished staggers the mind to comprehend. It is almost beyond comprehension and only Providence can tell why such miracles were wrought and not a single one of all the noble heroes were injured by the heat, smoke, falling timbers and tons of crumbling, caving rock while engaged in their effort to save our loved ones. For how in another party, Vattel, in his all famous treatise on the laws of nations, is willing to die with his hands clasped in the same manner. What but terrible the more serene state of existence is evident from the fact that the ness, to feel that our lot is cast in a little mountain town so largely peopled by heroic souls.

May the richest of heaven's blessings rest upon you, the people of White Oaks, and may a reward await you that only He can bestow: is the prayer of your sincere friend,

E. W. PARKER,
Supt. White Oaks Mining Co.

Why Does Solid Iron Float on Molten Iron?

This question, which has puzzled a good many observers, was satisfactorily explained by Dr. Anderson in a recent paper on steel read on the Iron Institute, London. When a piece of solid metal at first sinks, which shows that its volume is less than the melted metal. But soon the solid piece becomes heated, which causes it to expand its volume is increased, and it rises and floats on the surface of the molten mass. The action is the same both with iron and steel. Mr. W. Prigson said:

The experiment was frequently made by throwing a piece of iron into molten iron. They call it a "float" and might think that it was on account of the impetus which the iron had retained in falling that height, but as a matter of fact if the iron were put upon a fork and lowered, it would go down; but in the course of a few seconds it came up again, and kept expanding until the piece of iron was a considerable distance above the surface of the metal. Then it decreased in volume, and became denser than the molten metal which it joined. Any one could see by the distance that the piece of iron went above the surface that it was of considerably less density than the molten metal."—Scientific American.

Little Isaac Moses, whose grand father began life as an errand-boy and finished as a millionaire, was paid by his mother a penny a dozen for pins picked up from the carpet, to keep the baby from getting them. "Nurse," said little Isaac, as his stock of pennies increased, "do you know what I am going to do when I have sixpence?" "No," answered nurse. "I am going to buy a paper of pins and scatter them all over the floor, and then pick them up," replied the young financier, who was barely six years old.

An Irishman was charged before an English judge with the commission of a crime. During the trial the prisoner was much affected, and the judge asked the reason of his weeping. The prisoner said he was pained to think that he was far from his country and his friends. The justice assured him that he would depend upon it that full justice would be done to him, when the prisoner replied in Irish, and the judge, not understanding the language, said: "What is the meaning of that?"

If Hes we Latin, learned men would be quite common.

County Commissioners Meeting

The County Commissioners met at Lincoln this week in regular session. But little outside of routine business was done.

Capt. Clark appeared in behalf of the Lea Cattle Co., and prayed for a rebate on the assessment of land, not watered, from $2.50, which was granted and the value fixed at $2.25.

The Three Rivers Land & Cattle Co. petitioned for a reduction on a number of cattle from 4,000 head to 2,300. Petition rejected.

Petition of Gaylord for reduction of assessment on American Mine, refused.

Petition of North Homestake Mining Co. for a reduction of $25,000, no patent yet having been granted by the U. S. Land Office, was referred to the Assessor, with understanding that if no final receipt had been issued reduction should follow.

Chas. Winfield was elected Assessor to fill the place of George Curry, resigned. He qualified and filed his bond.

Commissioners ordered the several roads arbitrarily closed should be opened and the merits of the several cases to appear at the October term in the case of the Arnilla road, in the Pienacho, wherein County Surveyor was ordered to survey, damages to be determined 11 October.

Consequent upon the required number of petitioners not having signed the petition for the "Storms road," near Ft. Stanton, the application was rejected.

In the matter of the road leading from and to the Park over the divide between the Patos and Carizo it was determined to place the same in passable condition under supervision of J. P. C. Langston.

A new precinct was established embracing territory lying in the Tablos country, which will be known as Precinct No. 14.

All accounts were laid over until the October meeting except those of school character for want of funds.

Bond of T. B. McCourt, County School Supt., filed and approved.

The tax levy for the ensuing year was fixed at the same rate as last year. This includes a highway tax which was not levied last year.

The boundary line between Lincoln and Valencia Counties was fixed contingent upon Valencia County paying her proportion of the expenses of survey.

CONSUMPTION CURED.
An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India surgeon the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Weakness, Asthma, and all other Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all other Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has been enabled to make known to his suffering fellow-men. Attended by this medicine and a course of rest and exercise, I will send you of a cure, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, bearing this paper, W. A. RAY, 227 West 11th St., St. Louis, Mo.

Ox July Fourth next, and until New Mexico is admitted into the sisterhood of States, the American Flag will carry forty-four stars. Wyoming was not admitted until after July of last year, and the law prescribes that the star for a new State shall be added to the Flag the next Fourth of July following its admission.

The body of a cat which on Sept. 23, 1890, jumped from the top of Washington monument, at the capital, and lived for some time afterward, is preserved, properly labeled, in the Smithsonian Institution.

THE MAN WHO SPOUTS.

Here is a little tender guidance for another student of the art of recitation. The man from which the reader draws his material is in itself dangerously broad and deep—nothing less than the wide field of English literature. In it he finds things he is tempted to recite because he loves them. But that is one of the worst of reasons for choosing them. They may or may not gain by recitation. His personal love for them must not cloud his judgment. He finds pieces magnificent in drama and scope for declamation, but the drama may be purely taken from the literary point of view, and its very excellence judged there may be faults from the actor's and reciter's points of view.

Or the drama may be impossible for a public audience. One poem may touch too intimately or penetratingly some domestic or life sorrow, and another may jar on some feeling, possibly even some prejudice, which the reciter may not sympathize with, but which he is none the less bound to respect in his listeners. And, lastly, some tiresome incongruity of appearance or manner may be the touchstone that decides his sentence against a poem, which, if it be a poem he particularly likes and desires to recite, is more than sufficiently annoying.

A man, for instance, with a cherry face should not recite "The Dream of Eugene Aram," "The Raven" or "Il Penseroso"; nor should a pale, spare man recite a line of Falstaff or expect any great success in a scene from "Pickwick." As a rule (a rule with exceptions, of course), men should avoid all pieces written in the first person singular in which the speaker is a woman. Shelley's "Cloud" is difficult for a man because of its ideal personality. It is impossible to recite the suspicion of ridiculousness when a man gravely says: "I am the daughter of earth and water, And the sunning of the sky."

Matthew Arnold's "Forsaken Mermaid" generally fails of its full effect for the same reason. I once heard a man, remarkable for a gift of plainness, recite (very well but very vainly) Tennyson's "Dream of Fair Women." So an elderly gentleman declaiming Lewis Morris' "Psyche," a young man Christian Rossetti's "A Royal Princess" were all equally undermined in their efforts by direct physical inappropriateness.

THE POLARIS CLOCK.

A Time-Piece That Was Buried in Arctic Ice for Four Years. On the desk of Edson B. Brae, chief clerk of the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting in the Navy Department, is a little rosewood case, bound and inlaid with brass and bronze. It is in the form of a cube, about eighteen inches high, and contains a chronometer such as is used on all naval vessels. This little instrument has quite a tragic history, and is held of considerable value. It was the ship's chronometer of the unfortunate Polaris, that was sent out on an arctic expedition by the Navy Department in 1871. When the Polaris was nipped in the ice Captain Hall saved this instrument and some other things from the vessel. As long as Captain Hall survived he kept the chronometer with him. When he perished it was buried in the arctic snows and abandoned. This was some time in 1872. For four winters it lay buried in the snow and ice.

In 1876 Captain Nares, of the British navy, now Sir George Nares, then in command of the royal expedition to the arctic region, discovered this chronometer at Newman's bay. He dug it out of the snow and took it to England with him on his return. It had then been buried in the snow for four years in a region where the mercury sinks to 104 degrees below freezing point. It was found to be in perfect order, and was taken and ran all right as soon as taken from its cold bed. On returning to England Captain Nares turned the instrument over to the British admiralty office, from whence it was sent as a present to this Government. With all this experience it loses only a single second in twenty-four hours.—Washington Star.

Newspaper Laws.

Dr. Tuckerman, editor of the Workman, Cleveland, has taken some pains to collect and compile the decisions of the U. S. Courts on the subject and gives to the Washington Post, as the result of his investigations, the following, which may be relied upon as correct:

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to renew their subscriptions.
2. If a subscriber sends the address of his residence, the publisher may continue to send it until he is notified to the contrary.
3. If subscribers neglect to return their periodicals, the publisher may take their names off the list, and the publisher is not responsible until they have notified the publisher of their discontinuance.
4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, the papers are sent to the former address, and are held responsible.
5. The courts have decided that refusing to take periodicals from the office or removing and leaving them uncollected for the printer is evidence of intention to read.
6. If subscribers pay in advance they are bound to give notice at the end of the time if they do not wish to continue taking it, otherwise the publisher is authorized to send it, and the subscriber will be responsible for all arrears. If payment of all arrears is sent to the publisher.

WORLD
Under one management.
A. T. & S. F.

An eminent example of American Enterprise, Energy and Persistence.

In the hands of young men this great system has been so carefully managed that it has earned a reputation second to none for convenience, safety and the luxuries of travel.

It has opened up an almost unlimited field for pioneer enterprise in the far West. No other railroad can carry a man, who is seeking his fortune, to go to the remotest points such as are open along a thousand miles of this great system.
