Business Men Say That It Would Not Prove a Success Here.

Governor Mills has returned from Las Vegas where he attended the commencement exercises of the New Mexico Normal University.

For the Treasury. Territorial Treasurer M. A. Otero has received the sum of $11.25 for the treasury. It is from game protection.

Appointed Engineer. Frederick C. Scofield of Raton, Colfax county, has been appointed an engineer in the field service of the U. S. Geological Survey at $1,800 a year.

Files Non-Liability. Non liability papers were filed in Territorial Secretary Jaffa's office today by the Insurance Scale Company, which does business in New Mexico.

Miners' Hospital Contract. The contract for the addition to the New Mexico Miners' Hospital at Raton, Colfax county, has been awarded to A. M. Horne of Tucuman for $11,713. He is given six months in which to complete the structure. There were seven bidders, five of them from Raton.

Land Entries. The following were the land entries here yesterday: Charles Bailey, Aztec; Royal J. Sargent, Estancia; Beatrice Minjubo, Portocito; Samuel C. Spruille, Raton; Alfredo Lovato, Lumberton; Thomas George McKellar, Wagon Mound; Felipe Valdez, Lumberton.

Contests Filled. The following contests have been filed recently at the Santa Fe land office: Eugene N. Steiner vs. George B. Wood, for the E 1-2 SE 1-4, Sec. 8 and W 1-2 SW 1-4, Sec. 9, T 10 N 9 E; John C. Orin vs. George W. Murphy, S 1-2 10 29 N 24 E.

In the past month of May there were filed 34 relinquishments and 40 cancellations.

Organized a Company. Incorporation papers were filed in the territorial secretary's office today by "La Opinion Publica Printing and Publishing company" naming Albuquerque as the place of business and Alfredo Baca as statutory agent.

The company is capitalized at $10,000 consisting of 1,000 shares at $10 each. The stockholders and the number of shares they own are Elfrigo Baca, 180; E. P. de Baca, 10 shares and Sofia Baca, 10 shares.

Postal Bank. Since the statement in the Associated Press dispatches yesterday that Postmaster General Hitchcock had designated Santa Fe as one of the postal saving bank depositories, the matter was discussed in official circles today. It is not thought that Postmaster E. C. Burke has recommended the establishment of such an office and those who know the business conditions here say that such a postal bank would not prove a success in this city.

New Seal for Normal University. A new seal has been adopted by the New Mexico Normal University at Las Vegas. The seal is symbolical of education. It shows a young man approaching a country school house. Hovering above him is an eagle carrying an olive branch and a sword. A spreading cactus plant beside the road way is symbolical of New Mexico. At the bottom of the seal is the legend "Sum Americanus," meaning "I am an American." The seal replaces the one used by the Normal for many years.

El Camino Real. The county road supervisor of Dona Ana county has a gang of men at work this week on the Camino Real between Las Cruces and Dona Ana. Thirty laborers are now busy flooding the road with river water in order to get enough sediment on the sandy stretches to bind the sand so that it can be rolled and packed. On the stretches of the road where the foundation is adobe, the flooding is being carried on just the same and road drags will be used later on to make the surface smooth. Work will be pushed as fast as possible, according to Territorial Engineer Miller and chairman of the Dona Ana good roads commission W. A. Sutherland, it being their aim to keep as many men and teams employed as they can secure. Commencing with next week a number of additional laborers with teams will be put on the road in the vicinity of Mesquite, this being the worst stretch of in the entire road from Dona Ana to Anthony.

New Land Office Order. The local United States land office has received instructions from the general land office at Washington relative to the allowance of second homestead and desert land entries under the act of February 3, 1911. This act allows a second homestead or desert land entry to any person otherwise qualified who, prior to February 3, 1911, has made entry under the homestead or desert land laws, but who, subsequently to such entry, from any cause have lost, forfeited or abandoned the same, but the provisions of the Pugilist and Companion Put to Flight Two Masked Highway Men.

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican) Minneapolis, Minn., June 2.—Joseph D. Bren, cashier and accountant of the State University was held up by three highwaymen on the banks of the Mississippi river near the University this morning and robbed of $13,826 which he was carrying in a satchel. He also lost his watch and his month's salary of $166.

Held Up Wrong Party. Chester, Pa., June 2.—Matt Wells, English lightweight champion, who came to this country a few days ago and Dan Dollings, his trainer, had a one round go last night that had not been advertised, and for which there were no gate receipts. They were held up on the road near Leipsville, where Wells is training, by two masked men, who with revolvers in hand demanded their money. Wells responded with a swing to the jaw of one of the robbers, rolling him down an embankment. His companion shot twice, slightly wounding Dollings in the head. Then Wells dashed for the footpath, who took to his heels, down the pike, and escaped.

ENGLISHMAN WHO THINKS HE CAN LICK JOHNSON.

Big Guaranty for Twenty-Round Battle—Abe Attel Cancels Date With Brown.

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican) New York, N. Y., June 2.—Jack Johnson, who will sail for England in a few days, has received a cablegram from Hugh McIntosh, offering a big guarantee for a 20-round bout with Bombardier Wells, the English heavyweight champion. John says he will agree if there is enough money in sight. McIntosh thinks that Bombardier Wells can beat Johnson if he manages to stay away from the negro for five rounds.

Attel Cancels Date.

New York, N. Y., June 2.—Abe Attel has cancelled his arrangement for a bout with Knockout Brown before the National Sporting Club here on June 8. Attel's lame hand, injured while boxing with Danny Goodman, is improving slowly and the champion does not feel that he can do himself justice, for some time to come.

FAMILY ENGULFED BY CANADIAN RIVER.

Girl Who Was to Have Become Bride Today Carried Away By Freshet.

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican) McAlester, Okla., June 2.—After floating on a log in a flooded stream for nearly twenty hours, Mrs. Sallie Tripp, who with her mother and two sisters, was swept into the Canadian river by a freshet yesterday, was found unconscious today in Gaines creek, two miles above where that stream empties into the Canadian. She had been carried up the creek by back water. Her sister was to have been married today. Physicians said she had a chance for recovery.

No trace has been found of Miss Glover's mother and her two younger sisters, reported last night from Sallie to have been drowned. The family was crossing the river in a wagon at a ford when a wall of water swept them away.

No trace has been found of Mrs. Tripp's mother and her two younger sons swept them away. The two sons of the family were also drowned.

NO REVOLUTIONARY OUTBREAK IN HONDURAS.

This is so Extraordinary That Cable Gets Busy and Tells All About It.

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican) Ceiba, Honduras, June 2.—(By wireless to New Orleans)—No credence is given here to the rumors of another revolutionary outbreak in Honduras. The report that martial law was declared last week because of a threatened insurrectionary movement along the Salvadoran border is erroneous.

Martial law was proclaimed throughout the Republic on March 20, following the termination of the rebellion led by General Manuel Bonilla.

That order which was issued to facilitate the re-establishment of peace, has not been rescinded.

No rumors of an uprising in any part of the republic have reached Ceiba.

Investors in the company have now organized a holding company.

IN BUSINESS FOR HEALTH?

"Nix" Says Member of Kansas City Fruit and Produce Exchange

PROSECUTION MAY FOLLOW

Eggs Are Stored to Keep Up Prices Is Naive Explanation of Witness.

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican) Kansas City, Mo., June 2.—Temporary restraining order seeking to oust Kansas City Fruit & Produce Exchange and dissolve it as alleged food trust may be requested of Judge Evans, special commissioner, taking testimony, according to an announcement today by Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Jost. The declaration is the result of the testimony of B. J. Hurst, a member of the exchange, who admitted on the stand that eggs were stored to keep up prices.

"How about the consumer who has to pay bills?" he was asked. "We are not in business for our health," Mr. Hurst frankly admitted. "We try to sell our products for just as much as we can get for them."

"Then you think, in the light of the experience of the last ten years that present prices cannot be maintained for another long period and still avoid the sharp corners of the Sherman law?" Mr. Littleton asked. "I do not think it can be done," said Mr. Hurst. "There is such a diversity of interests in the steel business that it seems to me that there must be some way devised to allow the manufacturers to protect themselves from obstructive competition that will drive manufacturers out of business or else we will be in chaos."

"Then," continued M. Littleton, "do you believe there is no way competition can continue freely and in benefit to the consumer?" "I don't think it can, except under government control," said Mr. Hurst.

"You think then the time has come when we must surrender the competitive method in business for acceptance of a new policy in big business affairs?" "It seems to me it has."

CO-OPERATION VS COMPETITION

President Gary of Steel Trust Declares Competitive System Dead

HASTENING LORIMER PROBE

Proposed Democratic Wool Schedule Introduced in House This Afternoon.

Elbert H. Gary, chief executive officer of the United States Steel Corporation, resuming his testimony before the house "steel trust" investigating committee today denounced the Sherman anti-trust law as archaic and declared that governmental control of corporations eventually would come. Mr. Gary asserted that the steel corporation would welcome such a change and would go so far as to dictate the prices of steel products.

In explanation of the reported worldwide "trust," Mr. Gary said a conference would be held in Brussels July 5 and 6 next to organize an international steel institute similar to the American Iron and Steel Institute. The latter he asserted, was formed to prevent demoralization in trade and to permit an exchange of ideas for the betterment of the steel industry.

In no instance, Mr. Gary said, had there been any attempt at unlawful combination or an expressed or implied agreement.

Mr. Gary said he would do all he could, morally and legally, to further the proposed international institute. Increased prices are to be charged for steel rails in the near future, according to Mr. Gary. Higher cost of labor and raw material, together with a demand for heavier rails was given as the reason for the proposed advance.

Mr. Gary asked if the United States Steel Corporation was in a position to fix prices, said that co-operative business methods which have succeeded highly competitive methods, had made it possible for big corporations to influence prices.

"We cannot dominate them," he said. "It is not the big corporation that changes prices so much as the small corporations that cut prices and force the big ones to come down."

Mr. Gary undertook an explanation of why steel rails could be sold abroad cheaper than at home. He said, like the merchant who clears his shelves once a year by selling his goods at cost, so the steel manufacturer could sell his surplus abroad at $26, or at cost.

The result was the mills were kept running, reducing the cost of production, keeping together a compact organization and bringing to this country, large sums of money. The ultimate effect, he added, was to reduce to price to the domestic consumer. All countries are "practically dumping," Mr. Gary declared.

Representative Littleton, taking up the examination of the witness inquired if it was not true that the steel manufacturers were trying to steer a nice course between the Sherman anti-trust law on the one hand and the obstacles of competition on the other. "It is," replied Mr. Gary. "I wish we knew how we could rightfully and lawfully do it."

"Then you think, in the light of the experience of the last ten years that present prices cannot be maintained for another long period and still avoid the sharp corners of the Sherman law?" Mr. Littleton asked. "I do not think it can be done," said Mr. Gary. "There is such a diversity of interests in the steel business that it seems to me that there must be some way devised to allow the manufacturers to protect themselves from obstructive competition that will drive manufacturers out of business or else we will be in chaos."

"Then," continued M. Littleton, "do you believe there is no way competition can continue freely and in benefit to the consumer?" "I don't think it can, except under government control," said Mr. Hurst.

"You think then the time has come when we must surrender the competitive method in business for acceptance of a new policy in big business affairs?" "It seems to me it has."

Re-Entry of Famous General into Santa Fe to Be Reproduced July 4.

In compliance with the request of the committee appointed by the chamber of commerce of Santa Fe, which has in hand the arrangements for the celebration to be had on the Fourth of July next, the Allanza Hispano Americana, has taken charge of that part of the program which is to be the reproduction of the entrance of "El General Don Diego de Vargas" into Santa Fe; the society designated George W. Armijo to represent Don Vargas on that occasion, and 38 members of the Allanza Hispano Americana to represent Don Vargas army. Mr. Armijo and his companions had a very well attended meeting at the court house where Hon. B. M. Read explained in detail the occasion which is about to be reproduced by the society. Hon. A. L. Morrison, Sr., also spoke approving in the highest terms the part which the lodge is to take in the celebration of the Fourth of July; every man was present and all were full of enthusiasm and determination to make the undertaking the greatest thing that ever was pulled off in the city of Santa Fe. J. L. Seligman was also present as a member of the De Vargas committee and took the measure of those who are to take part in the De Vargas procession who had not as yet been measured, so that their costumes might be secured in good time.

General Armijo expressed the hope of soon seeing the former federal commander in Mexico City.

General Navarro then expressed thanks for his escape from Juarez soon after the battle when riotous insurgents demanded his life. The Madero party is due to arrive in Mexico City next Wednesday and will enter Mexico by way of Eagle Pass.

Madero is Pleased. Juarez, Mexico, June 2.—Senor Madero intends, after crossing the border to travel in a special train, guarded by armed insurgents. He will visit Torreon, Zacatecas and Aguas Calientes in an effort to pacify that section of the country.

Senor Madero is due to arrive in Mexico City at 10 a. m. next Wednesday. Those selected to accompany him included Raoul Madero, his brother, and Francisco Madero, Sr., his father, Giuseppe Garibaldi and many minor officers, who participated in the revolution.

Senor Madero himself, was greatly pleased with the prospects of his reaching Mexico City. "It is of course, the climax of the revolution," he said, "No one, six months ago, would have believed that so great a change could come to a country. Then the country was divided between bitter enemies. Now I trust, all the hatred will be forgotten, for after all it was a hatred merely for a social condition. As Mexicans, we are all brothers. I trust tranquility will spread throughout the land."

Armed Insurrectos Will Accompany Train Which Will Make Stops.

El Paso, Texas, June 2.—Francisco Madero, Jr., left here for Mexico City today. Crowds of people thronged the station and voiced their good wishes in hearty cheering as the train pulled out. An impressive incident of the departure was the farewell between Senor Madero and General Juan Navarro, former federal commander of Juarez, who surrendered the town and was taken prisoner. When Madero saw the rugged old federal commander walking through the crowd he ran forward to embrace him. General Navarro mounted the train platform and he and Senor Madero embraced again, the insurgents applauding.

SONG.
By Alice Morgan Wright.
I never knew till I knew you
That May was May or June was June.
Or if the sea were red or blue
Beyond the dune.

I never knew that all this land
A garden was, till through the street
You came with roses in your hand
And 'neath your feet.

I never knew why men should kill
And burn and torture, day by day;
Myself I never knew until
You went away.

Deaf Mute Dead Drunk.

Juan Manzanares on his way from Santa Fe to Albuquerque raised such a disturbance on Santa Fe train No. 10, day before yesterday, while drunk, that he was arrested at Albuquerque and fined $10 and costs. It took two interpreters in the justice of the peace court to handle the case, one who could handle the sign language and the other to translate from Spanish into English as Manzanares is a deaf mute.

Albuquerque Plumbers Strike.

Every union journeyman plumber in Albuquerque is on a strike. The plumbers ask an increase in wages from $4 to $5 a day and the closed shop. The master plumbers were willing to grant the increase but would not accede to the closed shop. The employers say they are filling the places of the strikers with non-union men and are finding no difficulty in meeting their contracts.

Six deaf and dumb children came down on the train from the school at Santa Fe last evening. HANGMAN'S GROVE AT HOUSTON CUT DOWN.

At One Time Outside of City Limits, It Is Now Heart of Fashionable Residence District.

Houston, Texas, June 2.—"Hangman's Grove," one of the historic spots of Texas possessed by Houston, has passed. The last giant tree, the last standing of a group of great oaks, which in the pioneer days of Houston provided a natural gallows for the hanging of offensive persons, has succumbed to the march of progress, and "Hangman's Grove" of pioneer days, is to become a residence property.

This little grove, then far remote from the settlement of Houston, today is in the center of the fashionable residence section of the city. But few know the gawdies history of these giant oaks in Gray avenue, although the secret of their long standing on a desirable residence section now is out. Since it has been announced a residence is to occupy the site many old residents of Houston have told of the efforts of owners to sell the site, but of their inability because of the ghastly history connected with the spot.

By peculiar coincidence the last giant oak that this week fell under the axe constituted the gallows for the last hanging on this spot 37 years ago. Its broad hanging limbs ten or twelve feet from the ground were marred by the great rents in the bark where ropes tied about them had sunk into the bark as the limbs grew and widened. The last vestige of this hump long ago disappeared in the shape of souvenirs, but the rents remain and mutely tell of the gruesome happenings two score years ago. For years this grove served as a place for the execution of death sentences imposed in the early days of Houston. It served mostly for the disposal of outlaws, in those days so prevalent, but no record was ever kept as to the number that swung into eternity from these boughs. The grove was discontinued as a place of execution when public sentiment grew against it because of the immoral effect it was said to have upon the minds of boys who flocked to the place when a hanging was advertised.

NOT A DAY WITHOUT SUNSHINE IN MAY.

Precipitation Slightly Below Average; Low Wind Velocity and Equitable Temperature.

May had not a single day with less than 29 per cent of sunshine, that is at Santa Fe, according to the U. S. weather bureau. Only two days of the 31 were classed as cloudy, 11 came in under the category of partly cloudy and eighteen as clear. The average for the month was 75 per cent of sunshine. There was just one inch of precipitation and since New Year, the accumulated excess is .46 of an inch. The greatest precipitation in any 24 consecutive hours was a quarter of an inch and this occurred on May 14.

The mean atmospheric pressure was 29.80, the highest 30.17 on May 21; the least 29.45 on May 18.

The highest temperature recorded was 78 degrees on May 30, the lowest 36 degrees on May 11. There was no killing frost during the month. The greatest daily range in temperature was only 35 degrees and this occurred on May 11. The least daily range was 17 degrees on May 28. Since New Year there has been an excess of temperature over the average of the last forty years of 198 degrees.

The maximum velocity of the wind recorded in May was 40 miles an hour on May 28 from the east. The total wind movement was 7,931 miles, mostly from the southeast, the average hourly velocity being only 10.7 miles. The average maximum temperature was 69.3 degrees, the average minimum 43.7 degrees. Number of days with .01 of an inch or more of precipitation 7. Hall on May 14 and 28.

$20,000 PLEDGED BY SOUTH TEXAS IMMIGRATION ASSN.

Austin, Texas, June 2.—The South Texas Immigration Association has pledged itself to raise $20,000 to attract foreign immigration to Texas and to aid the immigrant after he gets here. Texas can care for and utilize one million foreign emigrants, it is said, and the association will seek to attract this number, and bring "farm brains" to till American dollars out of the soil.

The association proposes to seek the co-operation of the steamship companies handling emigrant business by securing space on such steamships for an exhibit of Texas products and for carrying a lecturer employed by the association who will explain the exhibit and lecture on the resources of Texas on shipboard while the emigrants are en route to the new country.

THREE BRIDGES FOR SANTA FE COUNTY.

The board of county commissioners met yesterday at the courthouse with President Chairman I. Sparks, presiding. A representative of the Midland Bridge Company presented plans for two bridges over the Galisteo, one at Cerrillos, and the other at Galisteo, and for a bridge across the Santa Fe on Canon Road. The plans were accepted and bids are being advertised for in the New Mexican today. The board of county commissioners deserves much credit for the systematic permanent road and bridge improvements that are being made.

J. T. Sandoval, 115 Ortiz St., Santa Fe, N. M., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for two years and they have done me a world of good. A dull pain in the small of my back, sometimes extending into my bladder caused me a great deal of suffering, particularly when I took cold. I was bothered mostly in the winter, and in addition to the pain in my back, there were symptoms of inflammation of the bladder. The kidney secretions were highly colored and when passed were attended with a scalding pain. I never used another remedy that acted as satisfactorily as Doan's Kidney Pills. They proved to be just the medicine my case required and the complete cure they brought has led me to recommend them on more than one occasion."

AGRICULTURE IN ARIZONA

That Commonwealth Is Far Behind New Mexico in Its Development

BIG DECREASE IN FARM AREA

Census Shows Value Less Than One Half of Those in This Territory.

Washington, D. C., June 2.—Census Director Durand issued today the first official statement from the Census Bureau relative to the agricultural statistics of the Territory of Arizona collected at the Thirtieth Decennial United States Census, April 15, 1910.

It is based on a preliminary comparative summary submitted to the Director by Le Grand Powers, chief statistician of the Division of Agriculture in the Bureau of the Census. This summary shows for both the census of 1910 and that of 1900, the reported total value of farm land, buildings, and implements and machinery; total acreage; improved acreage; average acres per farm; average value per acre of farm land and buildings; average value per acre of farm land alone; and the aggregate expenditure for labor and fertilizers. It also distributes the total number of farms according to color of farmer; specified character of tenure; whether held free or mortgaged by owners; and by certain acreage groups.

The director gives notice that the figures are subject to revision later, as a number of farms whose returns are incomplete will be included in the final tables. These additions will not, in all probabilities, modify any of the amounts or rates contained in the present statement.

The Apparent Decrease in Farm Area.

Although a marked increase in the number and value of farms is reported for the Territory, there is a net decrease of farm area of nearly 700,000 acres, confined principally to two counties—Navajo and Coconino—where some 500,000 acres belong to a large land company. The transfer to the Forest Reserve of large areas of land previously owned by the railroad, that was rented for grazing purposes in 1900, account for another large area. These lands were used for the same purpose in 1910, but not under circumstances that permit their classification as farm lands. Exclusive of the two counties reporting a decrease, the acreage of farm land in Arizona increased 44 per cent. These lands, not enumerated in 1910, were all of small value per acre, and their omission makes the average value of land per acre show up slightly larger than was actually the case.

The census of agriculture was taken primarily for the purpose of obtaining an accurate inventory of all classes of farm property existing on April 15, 1910; a complete exhibit of farm operations during the year ended December 31, 1909; and a statement of the number and value of domestic animals in cities and villages on April 15, 1910.

Statements relative to the acreage and yield of crops and the domestic animals of Arizona will be issued by Director Durand as soon as the tabulation of this data has been completed. The Rates of Increase and Decrease.

It is pointed out in the statement today that the principal rate of increase in Arizona in 1910, as against 1900, among the items for which percentages are given, in the first section of the tabular summary, are: In the average value per acre of farm land alone, 475 per cent; in the average value per acre of farm land and buildings, 436 per cent; in the total value of all farm land alone, 269 per cent; in the total value of farm land and buildings, 244 per cent; in the total value of all farm implements and machinery, 133 per cent; in the total value of farm buildings alone, 117 per cent; in the total expenditure for labor, 117 per cent; in the total expenditure for fertilizers, 100 per cent; in the whole number of farms, 39 per cent; and in the improved farm acreage, 37 per cent.

The only decrease during the decade among the items for which percentages are given occurred in the average acres per farm, 54 per cent; and in the total farm acreage, 36 per cent.

The statement shows in detail that the number of farms reported in 1910 was 8,078, as compared with 5,809 in 1900, an increase of 2,269, or 39 per cent.

Farm Values.

The total value of farm land and buildings was given in 1910 as $47,034,000, as against $13,683,000 in 1900, an increase of $33,351,000, or 244 per cent.

The total value of all farm land alone was reported in 1910 as $42,116,000, as against $11,416,000 in 1900, a gain of $30,700,000, or 269 per cent.

The total value of farm buildings alone was given in 1910 as $4,918,000, as against $2,267,000 in 1900, an increase of $2,651,000, or 117 per cent.

In 1910 the value of the farm land alone constituted 90 per cent of the total value of land and buildings, as compared with 83 per cent in 1900.

The reported value of farm implements and machinery was $1,779,000 in 1910, as against $765,000 in 1900, a gain of $1,014,000, or 133 per cent. The total acreage reported in 1910 was 1,242,000 acres, as compared with 1,935,000 in 1900, a decrease of 693,000 acres, or 36 per cent.

The improved acreage was returned in 1910 as amounting to 349,000 acres, as against 255,000 in 1900, an increase of 94,000 acres, or 37 per cent.

The improved acreage formed 28 per cent of the total acreage in 1910 and 13 per cent in 1900.

The average acres per farm reported in 1910 was 154, as against 333 in 1900, a decrease of 179 acres, or 54 per cent.

The average value per acre of farm land and buildings in 1910 is stated as $37.87, as against $7.07 in 1900, a rise of $30.80, or 436 per cent.

The average value per acre of farm land alone in 1910 was reported as $33.91, while in 1900 it was $5.90, the amount of gain being $28.01, or 475 per cent.

Color of Farmers.

Of the whole number, 8,078, of farms reported in 1910 there were 5,973, or 74 per cent, operated by white farmers, and 2,105, or 26 per cent, by negro and other nonwhite farmers, as compared with a total of 5,809 in 1900, of which 4,006, or 69 per cent, were conducted by white farmers, and 1,803, or 31 per cent, by negro and other nonwhite. The increase in the number of farms of white farmers during the decade amounted to 1,967, and in the number of farms of negro and other nonwhite farmers to 302.

Farm Ownership.

The total number of farms operated in 1910 by owners, part owners, and owners and tenants, comprising the "all owners" class, was 7,060, as compared with 4,985 in 1900, an increase of 2,075.

The total number of farms conducted in 1910 by cash tenants, share tenants, and cash and share tenants, comprising the "all tenants" class, was 857, as against 489 in 1900, an increase of 368.

The total number of farms operated by managers in 1910 was 161, as compared with 335 in 1900, a decrease of 174.

The total number of farms operated by the "all owners" class constituted 87 per cent of the whole number of farms in 1910 and 86 per cent in 1900; those operated by the "all tenants" class, 11 per cent in 1910 and 8 per cent in 1900; and those conducted by managers 2 per cent in 1910 and 6 per cent in 1900.

Of the total number, 7,060, of farms operated in 1910 by the "all owners" class, there were 6,019, or 85 per cent, reported as "owned free from debt," and 1,041, or 15 per cent, mortgaged. There were 119 farms for which no mortgage report was secured and these are included in the farms "free from debt."

In 1900 information was secured concerning the "owned farm homes." At that time 6,072, or 94 per cent, were reported "free from debt," and 380, or 6 per cent, mortgaged. There were 148 in 1900 for which no mortgage report was secured, these being included in the farms "free from debt." The Census Bureau has no information respecting the number of mortgaged farms leased to tenants.

Distribution According to Acreage Groups.

The statement relative to farms distributed according to certain acreage groups shows that those of 19 acres and under numbered 2,231 in 1910 and 2,038 in 1900, a gain of 193; of 20 to 49 acres, 1,475 in 1910 and 922 in 1900, an increase of 553; of 50 to 99 acres, 808 in 1910 and 674 in 1900, an increase of 134; of 100 to 174 acres, 2,572 in 1910 and 1,581 in 1900, an increase of 991; of 175 to 499 acres, 756 in 1910 and 411 in 1900, an increase of 345; of 500 to 999 acres, 164 in 1910 and 112 in 1900, an increase of 52; and of 1,000 acres and over, 72 in 1910 and 71 in 1900, an increase of 1.

Acreage Group Proportions.

Of the whole number of farms those of 19 acres and under formed 28 per cent in 1910 and 35 per cent in 1900; those of 20 to 49 acres, 18 per cent in 1910 and 16 per cent in 1900; those of 50 to 99 acres, 10 per cent in 1910 and 12 per cent in 1900; those of 100 to 174 acres, 32 per cent in 1910 and 27 per cent in 1900; those of 175 to 499 acres, 9 per cent in 1910 and 7 per cent in 1900; those of 500 to 999 acres, 2 per cent in both 1910 and 1900; and those of 1,000 acres and over, 1 per cent in both decades.

The expenditures for labor in 1910 reached the sum of $2,503,000, as compared with $1,153,000 in 1900, an increase of $1,350,000, or 117 per cent. The expenditure for fertilizers amounted in 1910 to $6,000, while in 1900 it was $3,000, an increase of $3,000, or 100 per cent.

The following summaries show that Arizona is far behind New Mexico in development. The first column gives the figures for 1910, the second for 1900 and the third the percentage of increase or decrease in the first group and actual increase or decrease in the second group:

MARRIED AT SOCORRO.

Young Eastern Financier, Arthur L. Lewis, Takes With Him as Bride Miss Eva Caroline Hilton.

Socorro, N. M., June 2.—At 8:30 last evening at the home of the bride, Eva Caroline Hilton, second oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Hilton, was united in marriage to Arthur L. Lewis of Springfield, Mass. Rev. Father Pelzer, the parish priest of San Antonio, performed the ceremony. A reception followed the ceremony at the Knights of Pythias hall, refreshments being served to the large number of congratulatory guests, while the Gem City orchestra composed of Mrs. Joseph Smith, Mrs. Freeman, Prof. P. A. Marcellino and Mr. Lovelace furnished excellent music. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis boarded the south bound train for El Paso and will go directly to Galveston, Texas, where they will be guests of Mr. Galen L. Stone, vice president of the Mallory Steamship Company on one of his personal yachts which will convey them to New York. Mr. Galen is an old friend of the families.

Miss Louise Fitzgerald of Pekin, Ill., bridesmaid while Connie H. Hilton, brother of the bride, was best man. Miss Annie and Felice Hilton, cousins of the bride, and little Helen Hilton were flower girls. The ushers were C. C. Clark and Coney T. Brown. Quite a number of friends of the bride were present from San Antonio, Carthage, Magdalena and San Marcial, beside the many Socorro friends of the contracting parties.

The bride is a native of San Antonio where her father A. H. Hilton has been in the mercantile business for a third of a century, former owner of the Carthage coal mines and one of the best known pioneers of Socorro county. The bride was educated at the Sisters' convent in Santa Fe and at Notre Dame, Indiana. Her father being a great lover of music early determined to give his daughter the best possible musical education. She began playing the violin at the early age of seven and showed great talent which developed rapidly while she was in Notre Dame University and during the four years she studied under Prof. Muscat of Los Angeles, formerly first violinist in the Thomas orchestra. She completed her musical studies at the New England Conservatory of Music at Boston, Mass.

It was while attending the conservatory that the romance budded which ended in the wedding of the day. The groom is the only son of Orrin L. Lewis of Lakeport, New Hampshire, a New England farmer, and owner of the Bear Island Inn at Lake Winnepesaukee, New Hampshire, one of the prettiest summer resorts in the Switzerland of America. The lake which has 180 miles of shore line is often compared to Lake Geneva and is dotted with over 200 charming islets. In this beautiful spot, at Bear Island Inn the bride and groom will spend their honeymoon. Mr. Lewis is the Springfield correspondent of Hayden, Stone and Company, bankers of Boston, and one of the largest banking firms in New England. This firm is known locally in New Mexico having financed the big Chino Copper Company. They have recently purchased from the Moffatt estate of Denver 53 per cent of a controlling interest of the First National Bank of Denver, the largest financial institution between the Missouri river and the Pacific coast.

Mr. Lewis is a young man, only 28 years of age and rising rapidly in financial circles. The bride is one of the most accomplished and thoroughly popular young ladies in New Mexico and she will be sadly missed by her hundreds of warm friends.

"NEED KNEES OF IRON, AND WRISTS OF STEEL."

Bruce Williams Says Wild West Days Still Are Seen in Navajo Indian Country.

The postmaster of Amarillo, Texas, as told in the New Mexican recently, is fast disillusioning young eastern chaps about the freedom and romance of the southwest from a cowboy's standpoint and says that to see the old days one would have had to come here twenty years ago. But Bruce Williams, the well known liveryman who recently sold out his business here to W. H. Morgan of Dayton, Eddy county, is just back from the Navajo Indian reservation in San Juan county and says there is enough of the wild western element of the good old days to suit any boy, however wild in his imagination.

Mr. Williams spent several days on the reservation in search of some fine horses and it is rumored that he wanted a type of animal suited to be a "polo pony" swift, sure footed and everlastingly durable.

He brought back a string of animals and took some of them to his ranch at Dayton which he purchased from W. H. Morgan, and others he brought here to keep them for a while. "The Navajo reservation is a wonderful country," said Mr. Williams today, "wonderful in its immensity. One does not feel cooped up in that section. One feels the vastness of space. I was a hundred miles from a postoffice and more than a hundred from a railroad. There one sees the life in the saddle which the postmaster of Amarillo, Texas, thinks has disappeared from the southwest. There one sees the real Indians, too, and they are a husky lot, and to ride with them one needs knees of iron and wrists of steel."

"Irrigation, is of course, the key that will unlock the treasures of the earth in that country, if irrigation is possible. Certainly there is plenty of space up there for the setting of vast colonies and some day I think the big cities will send out men who will try to follow the example of the Mormons who went to Salt Lake City, found a desert and turned it into a garden."

S.S.S. THE BEST SPRING TONIC

Spring is the season when the blood is weakest, and our systems least responsive to the demands of nature. It is the time of feeble appetites, poor digestion, lack of energy, bodily fatigue, and many other systemic disturbances which warn us that we need a tonic. A great many so-called tonics are mere nerve stimulants, often producing exhilarating effects, but acting with decided injury on the system later. If your system is weak and depleted you can only tone it up by supplying an increased amount of nourishment, and this can come only through pure, rich blood. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers; and it is the one medicine you can rely upon to supply the system with the best tonic effects and at the same time thoroughly purify the blood. Many people have put off using a tonic until the system became so weakened it could not resist disease, and have paid for the neglect with a spell of debilitating sickness. S. S. S. is nature's ideal tonic; made entirely of healthful roots, herbs and barks. It tones up the stomach and digestion, aids and improves the appetite, and in every way contributes to strong, robust health. S. S. S. is for sale at drug stores.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

CONVICTS BUILD HIGHWAY FOR COLORADO'S CAPITAL.

It is for Scenic and Tourist Purposes Only and Will Prove Great State Drawing Card.

Denver, Colo., June 2.—The first actual work on the construction of the Denver-Evergreen road was commenced yesterday, 40 convicts having pitched camp on the Bear Creek road near Morrison. From now on the work will be vigorously pushed. Denver business men and others are much interested in this work. It means the connecting link which will join in Denver with the foothills, and open to the tourist some of the most beautiful scenery to be found in Colorado.

It is the boast of Warden Tynan that he will make this road the model of Colorado. It is hoped to get much of it in shape for the automobile travel of this year.

In this connection a suggestion has been made by some of those who attended the opening of the skyline drive at Canon City, leaving to the top of the Royal Gorge, that a skyline drive constructed along the hogback running from Golden, southwards through Morrison. From this hogback as a point of view Denver to the east and the smaller cities and towns, together with the great plain sight. The view has been pronounced by those who have visited the place as one of the grandest roads to be found in the state. Before the foothills park and the good roads leading to and from it become established it is likely that such a road as this will be built.

At yesterday's meeting of the Real Estate exchange the following resolutions were adopted, pledging support and encouragement to Warden Tynan in the construction of the Evergreen road:

"Whereas, the Denver Real Estate exchange, like all well balanced public institutions, favors good roads and fully realizes the profit and comfort arising from same, and

"Whereas, Warden Thomas Tynan has established a road building camp near Morrison for Denver to aid in building a model highway from Denver to the mountains, that pays a third of the taxes of the state, therefore be it

"Resolved that we, the members of the Denver Real Estate exchange, do hereby go on record as thanking Mr. Tynan for the enterprise and consideration he has shown; and be it further resolved that we, the members of this exchange, do all that lies in our power, individually and collectively, to assist and encourage him to the end that his difficult task may be made as agreeable and successful as it deserves to be."

MINISTER CHASES HIS HORSES EIGHTY MILES.

Rev. John Mordy of Albuquerque Has Strenuous Experience in Sierra County.

Elephant Butte, N. M., June 2.—Rev. John Mordy who has been conducting religious services here for some time past has gone to his home in Albuquerque to rest up from a recent strenuous experience. Mr. Mordy and his traveling companion travel overland with a camp outfit. They started across the country the other day and night overtaking them pitched camp for the night and while they slumbered their horses got loose and wandered away. For five days the horses were followed in vain and after they had traversed some eighty miles of country they were finally rounded up by a cowboy and handed over to the owners. Mr. Mordy, who has begun a good work here, will leave the large tent in which he has held services here for the benefit of Rev. W. C. Buell of Mesilla Park who will continue the work here. He arrived Thursday morning.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF SANTA FE COUNTY.

The New Mexican is the oldest newspaper in New Mexico. It is sent to every postoffice in the Territory, and has a large and growing circulation among the intelligent and progressive people of the Southwest.

AN UNMENTIONABLE PESTILENCE

The Rocky Mountain News, as is well known, is not an advocate of prohibition or of squeamishness; it is worldly wise and does not simmer when dealing with ugly facts of human nature, but the Rocky Mountain News is fearless in denouncing the evil of the "tolerated" Red Light district, such as is permitted in some New Mexico towns to the disgrace of the entire commonwealth and its people. Says the News:

"Mayor John T. West of Pueblo is slightly excited. He is threatening to punch folks. Some days ago, one George J. Knapp, of the Young People's Bible society, made an address in which he said things about Mayor West, and the city partnership with vice which Mayor West has re-established in Pueblo. A Pueblo paper published a portion of Knapp's address, and thereupon Mayor West became what the tramps call 'hostile.' He went to the business manager of the paper in question, and threatened to 'beat his face off' if anything more of the sort were published.

"Now, the address of which the mayor complained struck us as the work of a very young man; and as such, it was a bit too sweeping and inclusive in its denunciations. When, for example, Knapp said that Mayor West was never faithful to anyone or anything, he exaggerated. We have known Mayor West to be faithful to the Denver city hall machine for as much as a week or ten days. Also, we think Pueblo is no worse than most cities in the matter of which Knapp complains, and that his invectives would have been fairer had they contained this saving clause.

"But the central count in Knapp's indictment of Mayor West is TRUE. That central count is that the city of Pueblo, under the guidance of Mayor West, has gone into partnership with vice, and turned the tenderloin into a municipal treasury. The magnificent work of former police magistrate Ed F. Chambers has been reversed; and the old, vicious, degrading system of levying monthly 'fines' on the women of the underworld has been resumed. Once more, the city of Pueblo has appointed a chief pandar to go among the women of the night, and tell them that the city wants a share in the wages of their shame.

"Of all the wretched, disgraceful subtleties of American cities, this 'fine' system is the worst. In effect, it says to the fallen ones: 'Your trade is prohibited by law, but I will let you break the law—for a consideration, must support me, the city, as well as yourself. I will take a share of the proceeds of your disgrace; and in return, I will let the police officials graft from you as much as they please on the side. You shall be a pillar of the public treasury; but you shall likewise be an outlaw, whom everyone is licensed to rob. You shall pay fantastic rents. You shall be under the control of those unspeakable creatures who have organized the trade in women's bodies. You shall work, sick or well. You may haunt the paths of the unwary boy, and you may pick the pockets of the drunk—provided always that you pay me a proper share of the proceeds. You may make yourself a walking pestilence—if you pay. The only thing I will not tolerate from you is idleness. Now hustle!'

"That is what the 'fine' system means when you put it in cold, brutal English; and that is all it means. Mayor West, by his own confession—may, by his own boast—has reestablished the fine system in Pueblo. A man whose conscience is sufficiently vulgarized to find matter of pride in such a performance really ought not to mind a few superlative adjectives. And as for this beating of faces, why, if Mayor West means to try that on all who say publicly that his conduct is a disgrace, he should rejoice that the anti-pass bill did not become a law. Because, he will at least need to take a trip to Denver.

"While Ed F. Chambers was police magistrate of Pueblo, that city was a beacon light to those who were inquiring how the so-called 'social evil' might be mitigated. Mayor West has quenched that light with the old, far-reaching mud of the 'fine' system."

New Mexico is far ahead of Arizona in agricultural development. Census statistics for Arizona made public today, show that the neighboring commonwealth has only one fourth as many farms and the value of those is less than one half of the value of New Mexico farms. Instead of the magnificent increase in acreage which New Mexico shows, there is a decrease of 36 per cent in Arizona, and an increase of only 37 per cent in the improved acreage during the past ten years. This latter now amounts to 349,000 acres, or one-fourth of the area under cultivation in this territory. A much larger per cent of the farms are mortgaged than in New Mexico and the percentage of farmers other than white is many times that in this commonwealth. This furnishes one reason why the prosperity and growth of New Mexico are so much more general and more permanent than in Arizona where mines and smelters give employment and sustenance to the greater part of the population, it being well known that mining and smelting are subject to violent fluctuations.

ONE REASON FOR PROHIBITION.

The papers and press dispatches are full just now with a tragic killing in a Denver saloon attached to a high-toned hotel. This time it happened to be persons high in the gay set, men prominent at champagne parties and frequenters of entertainments given by the upper "fast" set. But the occurrence hardly deserves that much prominence.

It is not exceptional. It is duplicated again and again elsewhere under similar settings. There is no romance in the happenings. It was just an ordinary bar room murder that is apt to happen in any bar room at 12:30 in the morning, the exact time when the tragedy occurred at Denver.

There were four men immediately concerned. They were loading up on drink. One of them was appropriately named Von Phil, and it seems an appropriate name for every man who lingers in such a place at such a time under such circumstances.

There was a quarrel over a woman in high society who had entertained two of the men, probably over the wine-cups. Such things occur daily, too. Then there was the pulling of a revolver and it is remarkable how often men who frequent bar rooms at such time of night, have guns on them.

There were several flashes and Von Phil fell mortally wounded. Two others, who had no part in the quarrel but who might have done better had they been elsewhere at such hour of night, also received bullets in their anatomy. One of them, a wealthy and prominent mining man, died of his wound yesterday.

The man who did the shooting, prominent, too, facing the charge of murder. A big city is aroused over the occurrence, homes have been desolated, and yet, the whole thing is just what everyone is led to expect at such time of night, in such place under such circumstances among men of that kind. The moral is simple, it is well understood and helps to roll up prohibition majorities in places where people never suspected that prohibition sentiments existed.

If saloon keepers were wise, they would and could prevent just such occurrences. They would enforce for their own protection legislation that compelled them to close up at midnight; that would prevent the sale of liquor to men who are known to over-indulge; that would punish swiftly the carrying of a weapon; that would regulate the saloon traffic so that it could not be said with truth that it is the greatest law defying institution in the land today.

But that is expecting too much from human nature and in consequence the Denver tragedy will be repeated a thousand times in one way or another even here in New Mexico until people in sheer self-defense do as has been done in San Juan, in Chaves, in Roosevelt, in Eddy counties, close the grog shops as well as the fashionable third parlors.

DITCH REFORM.

One of the next reforms to be tackled in New Mexico is that of water appropriation and distribution, which should be taken out of the slough of outworn tradition, such as the maintenance of 199 acequias and ditches across a stretch of road, when one large distributing canal would do the work and do it better and more economically. At the same time, the criss-crossing of a municipality like Santa Fe with ditch lines following old grades and surveys must give way to a systematic distribution that will follow public highways rather than cut across lots of people who do not use the ditches, or cross the streets without being covered by culverts or bridges. One half of the water would be saved if ditches were lined with cement. New Mexico has outgrown its old irrigation legislation and needs a code of laws to govern in detail the distribution of waters, the running of ditches, the matter of water rights. The administration of such a code should be vested primarily in the office of the territorial engineer, as the central authority from which would radiate the other jurisdictions, so as to establish a uniform system of water administration. It may seem as far off as good roads were a few years ago, but the innovation is coming with a rush, for New Mexico has outgrown the inconveniences, the petty disputes and injustices, the waste and mediocrity of the present mode of water appropriation and distribution in the older communities, which have done more to retard progress and development than any other one factor.

According to Norman Mack's National Monthly, and it pretends to be the Democratic mouthpiece, there are Democrats in New Jersey who predict that New Jersey won't go Democratic again in fifteen years and it probably won't if they can help it. That is the attitude of Democracy everywhere toward its own leaders who are sincere and who are in earnest, and that is why Democracy will not cut much of a figure in the national election next year despite its successes in the last year.

LET SANTA FE GET INTO GAME.

Do not forget the "Call of New Mexico," or "Post Card Day" on the 22nd of this month. No town anywhere in the United States has more attractive postcards and such a variety of them as Santa Fe; no town has so much to advertise and so much to attract. Some citizens have been kind enough to mention that the summer invitation printed in the editorial columns of the New Mexican on Wednesday, would be just the thing to send out, but there is no need of suggesting any particular production, for the material to advertise Santa Fe is abundant and post-cards especially lend themselves to rapid handling and effective propaganda. Says the Albuquerque Journal:

"Amid all the hurry burly of commencement and following the league scores, let us not forget that Thursday, June 22, has been proclaimed by the governor of New Mexico as Post Card Day and that it devolves upon every one in New Mexico to see to it that the 'Call of New Mexico' is heard around the world on June 22.

Be sure to lay in that supply of postal cards and literature; better do it now and write them now so you will have it off your mind and have your stuff already to shove into the postoffice on Thursday, June 22. Don't put it all off until the day, for you may be too busy then to do it.

"Each passing day shows that the governor's proclamation has struck a responsive chord all over New Mexico and that bales and bales of postal matter will go out north, east, south and west from every postoffice in New Mexico on June 22.

The commercial clubs everywhere have fallen in line and not only the individuals but the organizations are going to see that the mails are loaded. Development companies and concerns having attractive literature are preparing to inaugurate a big publicity campaign on Post Card Day. Much new special advertising matter will be prepared for the day; but the main thing is to assure that every private citizen sends a boost for New Mexico, the land of sunshine and opportunity to his friends in the east or middle west, Europe, Asia or Africa, on Thursday, June 22. It is the individual citizen who is going to make this day the biggest success ever known in the history of New Mexico boosting."

IRRIGATION DEVELOPMENT.

Idaho's total farm values are $219,236,000, more than twice those of New Mexico, and five times those of Arizona. According to a census bulletin issued today this is due to the great irrigation development of that state which is smaller in area than New Mexico, has less population and less favorable climate. But Idaho has the advantage of having its irrigation interests developed only lately, and it has not been hampered by hoary traditions, customs and laws that fettered irrigation development in New Mexico, nor has it suffered such limitations of the use of waters as the Reclamation Service has inflicted upon this unfortunate territory, in which all private reclamation enterprises on the Rio Grande have been fought and hampered and forbidden by the paternalistic federal government. Idaho has 16,012 irrigated farms and the acreage irrigated is 1,428,000 acres, or as much as is in cultivation in New Mexico altogether, or four times the acreage under irrigation in New Mexico. Under projects completed in Idaho, almost a million more acres may be irrigated. There are 12,000 miles of ditches and 3,081 independent irrigation enterprises. The total cost of irrigation systems is $40,983,682 and the average cost per acre under them $17.18, while the average annual cost for maintenance per acre is only 64 cents. No wonder that the increase in the value of farm lands in ten years has been 518 per cent, and in the average value per acre 276 per cent, being today $41.63 per acre, as against less than $10 per acre in New Mexico.

Nothing can illustrate better the need of a new irrigation code in New Mexico than these statistics and to the present state of affairs, which is retarding progress in the older irrigated communities of New Mexico, might be applied the words of Ex-President Roosevelt when he said at Newark, New Jersey, this week, that the laws of the land have been outworn, that they were excellent laws for the flintlock period but that they do not apply to present day conditions; that the laws must keep up with changed conditions, retaining the spirit of justice and liberty.

The choice of Probate Clerk George W. Armijo for the honor of representing Don Diego de Vargas in the great Fourth of July pageant at Santa Fe, is a fitting one in more than one respect. By stature and bearing he will carry off the part with distinction; as a descendant of one of the oldest and most prominent families in the southwest, the honor is well bestowed, and as a recognized leader among his people, the choice is truly representative. The Don Vargas pageant this year will be the foundation for an annual festival that will increase the fame of Santa Fe in many respects and will eventually draw here large crowds every year to witness the only historic pageant in the United States that has for its foundation real history of unequalled romantic interest.

The New Mexican, as is well known, agrees with the Rock Island Tribune, when the latter says: "Murder is becoming too common in New Mexico. A stop should be placed upon it right now. They are giving the territory a bad name by their frequency. The law should be made to act quickly in cases of the kind. This paper does not advocate, nor will countenance, violence in dealing with those who hold the life of others so cheaply. It advocates disarmament in every sense of the word. There ought to be a clean up of all firearms and these thrown in the river or destroyed. Every man known to possess a gun should be made to give it up to the officer of the town."

"Millions!" exclaimed Jim.
"Yes, millions," replied Phil solemnly.

PROTECT YOUR EYES!

At this season of the year the glare is unusually severe on the eyes, as is the dust. Of course, we know that a mere inflammation of the eyes is not trachoma, a certain doctor of the Indian service notwithstanding. But we must reduce the amount of light that pours in through the windows and for that purpose we have some very desirable SILK GAUGE 50 INCH WIDE GREEN CURTAINS. Seeing them is liking them. We also have some calomins and paints suited to decorate the home, inside and outside. Call on us and we will show you our furniture, too.

At the End of the Story

By NELLIE CRAVEY GILLMORE

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

"No, no! You mustn't do it. It would mean certain death!"

Vandiver paused involuntarily. He gazed at the girl in astonishment. A whimsical smile twisted his lips.

"And if it did?" he questioned curiously.

Phoebe Driscoll flushed painfully. The stranger's cynicism startled her into sudden self-consciousness. The hardness of his eyes, the lines of unconcealed bitterness about the mouth—the man's whole air of reckless desperation gave her an unpleasant shock. But the excitement and confusion incident to the fire swept aside all minor considerations. The building was likely to totter and crumble any second, and the shouts of the firemen mingling with women's terrified utterances and the deeper and more calm voices of the men, lent weird horror to the tragic scene.

Vandiver made no second attempt to plunge into the burning house. As a matter of fact, word had just been passed that Barton's child was safe, and there was no need of it. But he stood quite still where he was, at a safe distance from the conflagration, and to his surprise experienced a certain, subtle emotion at the consciousness of the small brown hand still resting on his coat sleeve.

All at once Phoebe came to herself. With a little gesture of embarrassment she withdrew her fingers from their resting place and turned away. She was bare-headed and the high wind had tossed her loosely-done hair into a cataract of gold over her shoulders. Her eyes, wide and blue and ingenuous, bore a distinctly frightened look as she hurried through the crowds to her own gate. As she laid her hand on the latch, it came in sudden contact with another hand bigger and stronger and warmer than her own.

"May I open it for you? Since you were so good as to save my worthless life awhile ago you might at least permit me to perform the trifling service."

Phoebe gulped. "You—you are very kind," she faltered, "thank you."

Her eyes met those of the stranger. She crimsoned quickly. He was head and shoulders above the average village boy in point of looks and manner, and the girl's discriminating judgment decided it unhesitatingly. The next instant she hated herself for her feminine weakness in yielding to such a thought. Accordingly, her next words were rather curt.

"Good night," she said. "It's late, and I must be hurrying in."

Vandiver had purposely barred her way, but at the abrupt dismissal he stepped aside, following her with his eyes till she had disappeared within the door of her home.

He turned off down the street, and with a careless glance toward the rapidly diminishing crowds and the smoking ruins of the house, suddenly drew his black brows together in deep thought. He wondered what the girl's name was, where she had come from, and what she might be like under more conventional conditions, why she had betrayed so much concern over his recent danger.

And when at midnight, he fitted the key in the latch of his door, he had fully made up his mind to have the answer.

Two days later, apparently by accident, but entirely by design or strategy—Robert Vandiver secured a formal introduction to Miss Phoebe Driscoll. Outwardly restrained, in some faint, intangible way, she seemed to respond instantly to the eager, underlying element of personal interest Vandiver was at no pains to hide. And at the earliest opportunity, he managed to draw her away from the rest of the party so that he might talk to her alone. Usually undemonstrative, almost self-sufficient, he startled her by breaking at once into the subject uppermost in his mind.

"Would you mind telling me, Miss Driscoll," he began, curiously, "why it was you wanted to keep me out of that burning house the other night?"

Phoebe drew a silk scarf closer about her shoulders, knotted it, smiled—and looked up.

"You are a human being," she said.

Vandiver experienced a sensation of inward collapse. But he caught himself together sharply. After all, what had he expected her to say?

"You didn't care about witnessing a cremation, eh?" he laughed awkwardly.

"Certainly not."

"I was feeling pretty down and out that night. To tell you the truth, I didn't care a hang whether I ever came out alive or not."

The girl shuddered. "Isn't it just a bit wicked to talk that way? You were—in trouble?"

"The worst sort. I'm what you'd call a failure. I've squandered every decent opportunity of my life. I've been everywhere, had everything, known all sorts of people. I've been—in love." The last words came with a little half-smile. He led the girl to a seat under one of the willows and drew her down beside him. "May I tell you the story sometime?" he asked her eagerly.

"Any time," she replied.

"I don't want to make a nuisance of myself. But if you know how I've longed to have somebody to talk to! After all, knowing a person is more a matter of temperament than time—and somehow I feel as though I'd known you for years."

A slow flush crept up to Phoebe's temples. Oddly enough, she confessed to herself, she had felt the same regard to Vandiver. But she doubted the propriety of admitting it to him.

A couple sauntered past and the girl regarded her and the good-looking, cynical stranger with suspicious eyes. Phoebe bit her lip and said, almost defiantly and loud enough for the others to hear:

"If you wish, you may tell me now."

"And you're quite sure the story would bore you?"

"Of course not. I love—a love-story."

"But this one has a very bad ending."

"Perhaps we can change that," she suggested with a touch of levity.

"Her name was Dolly," he began, "and I loved her from the time she wore pig-tails and pinafores. When she was 18, we became engaged to be married. She went abroad and I started west for a little 'roughing' to offset her 'abundant polish' as we laughingly phrased it. After a few months it became noised about that I had lost heavily through unfortunate investments, and that instead of being a man with an independent income, I was next to penniless. The rumor was absolutely untrue, but it reached her ears—and a week later I had her letter telling me that she had found that she did not love me after all. Of course she did not dream that I knew the reason, but I did—and that was what stung. I was like a crazy man for a week. Afterward I settled down to stony despair. But the eating misery of my heart would not let me rest and soon I took a different tack. I plunged into everything, going from bad to worse, till I had just about reached the point of sheer desperation. I not only didn't care whether I lived or died—I wanted to die. That is why I—"

"Tried to rush into that blazing house!"

"Yes."

Phoebe turned her head slowly and permitted her gaze to meet his frankly. "Maybe—maybe you're not exactly fair—to Dolly," she said. "She probably didn't know—"

"She had the papers regularly. I didn't permit the report to be corrected in the press."

"The girl made no reply for several minutes. At last she said: 'I'm sorry, it must be very terrible for you. But I wouldn't give up. There are lots of ways to be happy in the world—even with a broken heart.'"

"That sounds contradictory, doesn't it?"

"Happy—in other ways," she said thoughtfully, "less selfish."

Vandiver grinned. He turned and looked quickly into her pink, averted face. There were other ways.

A month passed, two—three. And despite the fact that Robert Vandiver had come to the little village of Greencove for a fortnight's prospecting, he still lingered. His face had lost its old dependency. There was a less hardened expression in the keen grey eyes and the lines about his mouth had disappeared.

One day Phoebe met him on the postoffice steps.

"I've just had a letter," he said. Something in his face, in the tone of his voice—in the very atmosphere seemed to let the light in on her mind.

"From—?" she paused.

"Yes," he said, grimly, "from Dolly."

Some of the pretty color vanished from Phoebe's cheeks.

She reaches New York on Wednesday at three. She wants me to meet her."

Phoebe forced a smile. They had been excellent friends indeed. They had spent numberless pleasant hours together in the congenial interchange of admirably blended opinions. But now he was going! After what must have been, in spite of all, empty months, he was going to his happiness! And somehow, she must seem glad—for him.

"I was sure it would all come out right in the end," she told him, gently. "Clouds will break up sometime. But—today is Wednesday—and it's past ten. There's a train that leaves Greencove in exactly nine minutes, for New York. You can just catch that."

Vandiver was looking at her very hard and with half-tried, half-quizzical expression trembling about his lips.

"But I don't want that," he interrupted her. "I'd prefer—something else."

"The roads aren't very good between here and New York. I believe the train will make better time than a motor."

"I don't want a motor," he again interposed. She had started down the steps. He matched his step with hers and the hand that supported her elbow was a trifle unsteady. "I—look here, Phoebe," he broke out abruptly, "you know what I do want, don't you?"

Phoebe shook her head.

Vandiver didn't go to New York. But he got his wish.

The Difference.

Representative Macon, at a dinner in Washington, condemned faking.

"An explorer especially should not fake," he said. "Explorers' adventures are so incredible anyway, if one of them takes to faking, how we believe the rest?"

"In fact, the difference between the true and the fake explorer is very hard to distinguish. It's like the difference between economy and vagabondage."

"The man who lives on almost nothing, you know, is an economist, while the man who lives on nothing is a tramp."

NEPENTHE.

When sorrows gloom and troubles gripe Philosophers cling to the pipe.

They strike a light and hoist their feet And puff and puff till joy complete

Doth make amends for fell mishap. Plans gone astray, misfortune's rap.

And while the smoke wreaths lightly curl, The bachelors dream of a girl.

The married wights dream of the day When they were free and wondrous gay.

Thenceforth Nicotia's soothing charm Contributes a cheerless world to warm

And brings a measure of content To chaps who can not raise the rent.

Yet, slumped down, so long as they Can fill a pipe and puff away.

BENEFITING.

"Fate doesn't always play cruel tricks on mortals."

"No?"

"The man who invented 'Pigs in Clover' died in clover."

EVENED UP.

Father—I don't think much of that young Slinkins who calls to see you.

Daughter—Never mind, father. I think enough of him for both of us.

His Quest

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

David Ross paced slowly toward the end of the platform. It was midnight and the theater crowds were packing the uptown train at Forty-second street.

Suddenly a woman's cry rent the air. Laughter and tragedy mingled in the cry and after a startled silence her voice trembled over the theurgic, voiceless crowd.

"My slipper! Dick! It's gone down through that crack!"

The crowd, happy, irresponsible, laughed and continued to laugh when the girl's escort, with quick presence of mind, picked up the slipperless girl and carried her into the train.

"Step lively! Watch the step!"

The gates slammed shut and the train moved off.

David Ross strolled over to the edge of the platform where the incident had taken place. Quick as a flash he was down on the track level and back on the platform. So quick was his maneuver that it passed unnoticed.

He strolled to the far end of the station and with his back turned to chance observers drew his hand, with its contents, from his pocket. He gazed whimsically at a woman's bronze pump; on the toe was an exquisitely wrought butterfly of semi-precious stones.

"Neither large nor small," David Ross mused running his fingers into the slipper, "but soft and warm. Silly little foot-gear for the middle of winter."

Ross thrust the slipper into his pocket and boarded his train. All the way uptown he was conscious of a deep interest in the owner of the bronze pump. Yet it seemed more or less like hunting for a needle in a haystack even to contemplate the finding of the girl who was somewhere in the big metropolis. "Somewhere" was a trifle indefinite but David Ross set his face into hard lines and determined to find the owner of the slipper.

There was but one point in his favor and that was the value of the shoe itself. The stones of the butterfly were not the ordinary beads that decorate all fancy slippers but were of sufficient worth to suggest that the owner would have a desire to reclaim the footwear.

Arrived in his apartment David Ross placed the slipper on the corner of his chiffonier. That one small article of feminine attire changed the entire atmosphere of the room. Ross smiled whimsically and wished that there might be a girl in his life whose slippers belonged all over his room if she wanted them there. In his fancy he pictured a head of hair that would gleam under his lamp like the bronze of that slipper and he could imagine the trally part of her dull gold gown where in moments of rashness the toes of a slipper peeked out.

David took out his note book and worded an advertisement. He would have it inserted in every New York paper. The type should be large and it would remain in the "Lost and Found" column until something happened. When the advertisement was worded to his satisfaction David Ross retired with feelings akin to those of a Prince Charming of the Golden Slipper.

Two evenings later, David's reading was disturbed. His valet had ushered in a large, colored mammy who held down her part of the floor with uneasy feet.

"I done called for the slipper. My Missy she said to give you this," Black mammy grudgingly held out a ten dollar bill.

David Ross thought quickly. He knew that if he relinquished the slipper in this way it would be the end of the affair. The girl's maid would return it to her mistress and the incident would close. That would never do. David Ross turned and addressed his visitor.

"I am very sorry—but you have given me no proof that your mistress is the rightful owner of the slipper."

Black Mammy's righteous wrath arose. "Haven't I done put dem gold slippers on my missy's feet for six months now?"

Ross turned to hide his smile.

"But my good woman, that does not prove anything to me. Your mistress may or may not have lost this particular shoe. I will not give it up until I see it properly fitted upon the foot to which it belongs."

The woman's indignant protests as she turned back, with muttered imprecations against all white trash amused Ross.

He sank back in his chair and reviewed the affair. Even if he should meet the girl now, would she ever forgive him for having treated her personal maid so barbarously? Couldn't he at least have sent a polite little note stating that he desired to see the mate to the slipper before giving up his own.

When a week had passed and David Ross had heard not a word from the owner, he concluded that he had made a perfect botch of the whole affair. Still—as the evenings wore on he continued to dream dreams while the slipper held its own on the corner of his chiffonier.

It was, during the month of February that Ross found among his mail a letter from an old college chum.

"Dear Ross:

"I learn from Jimmy Holden that you are located in the east now. We are giving a masquerade cotillion on the twenty-seventh and want you to join us. Why couldn't you have let a fellow know you were in town? Hope to see you soon. Am inclosing an invitation."

"Sincerely yours,

"DICK BLACKSTONE."

"Will I go?"

David Ross did not question himself a second time. He realized suddenly that his life in the big metropolis had been void of social intercourse.

Upon the night of the twenty-seventh Ross rigged himself out in a suit of spangled armor. The gray steel following the strong lines of his frame made of him a knight upon whom many a feminine eye lingered. Just before leaving his apartment Ross had slipped the golden pump into the pocket of his great top-coat. He never knew just what prompted his action.

David Ross was a conspicuous figure in the wonderfully costumed assemblage. He had danced several figures of the cotillion and always with the pleasurable uncertainty of his partner's identity. His partner in the seventh figure was a golden butterfly, and the girl seemed in reality to float about with the great diaphanous wings which were attached to her bare arms. When Ross attempted to encircle her with his arm for a waltz he became entangled in the gauzy folds.

"You will have to come under my wing," laughed the girl in a voice that was music. She raised her arm and David drew her to him. They danced in perfect rhythm.

During the figure, each girl was expected to kick off one of her slippers, then escaping from her partner, find a seat and there wait until she should be reclaimed. The men seeing a floor full of slippers, each picked up one. Then the hunt for a hundred Cinderellas began.

David Ross, because golden slippers seemed ever to be his fate, picked up one of that color.

All about the huge ballroom David searched for a feminine foot encased in gold. He found many of that hue, but all had beads or bows, or were of a different cut. Last—but always having had her in mind—he approached the girl with whom he had been dancing the golden butterfly girl.

"May I—?" the silver knight knelt beside the butterfly girl—"try on this?"

"Yes, but you see it does not match mine." The girl put out her other foot and David Ross started.

The girl's voice went on. "I think every prince in the room has tried to fit his slipper on my foot, but somehow the mate seems lost."

"I think I can help you," Ross was on his feet, "if you will wait only a moment—will you? He bent over the girl trying to get a glimpse of her eyes through the mask."

"Yes—I'll wait."

Ross went swiftly to the cloak room and from the pocket of his coat extracted a bronze pump. As he turned to the ballroom he thought he saw a familiar black-faced mammy near the entrance to the woman's cloak room.

True to her word, the golden butterfly had remained where he had left her. The silver knight again knelt beside her and it was with trembling fingers that he placed on her foot—the slipper he had held for so many weeks.

"Come, Cinderella!" David's tone was light, but the manner in which his arm held her during the remainder of the waltz spoke in many voices. The girl was strangely silent.

"Where is the mate to this slipper," he asked, holding up the one which he had taken from the floor.

"I—I put it in the conservatory."

"Shall we look for it? Supper and unmasking follow this figure—come!"

"Shall I get Dick—to introduce us?" the girl's voice held a hint of mischief. "Then you are Dick Holden's sister?—and my hostess?"

David Ross began to understand the clever little plot that had been arranged for his benefit.

"Yes, Mr. David Ross. Dick was rather indignant at the treatment my old black mammy had received and went up to investigate. When he saw your name on the door plate—"

"I see everything now except—"

"Except whether or not I am pretty," laughed the girl.

"No, that is not it. I have always pictured you as having the kind of hair that will sparkle and gleam under a lamp—"

Beneath the mask the eyes of the butterfly girl grew wide. That so naturally spoken "will" had sent the blood rushing to every part of her being, but she did not speak.

"—and eyes that are big brown shadows except when—"

"Unmask! Unmask! Unmask!" A sonorous voice vibrated through the rooms.

The heart of David Ross beat quickly as he saw the butterfly girl's fingers go up toward her mask. They trembled and David leaned forward.

"Permit me." With steady fingers he unhooked the fuzzy, velvety head-gear and it fell back.

Their eyes met quickly; hers held dark shadows, save where, far in their depths, a fire was kindling.

After a moment David spoke. "Come," he said drawing her arm close to his side.

They passed under the big chandelier and the girl glanced up to catch his expression.

"Is it?" she asked half seriously. David's eyes caressed the gleaming hair and then looked down to where two slippers peeped, turn about, from butterfly gauzes.

"Far, far more beautiful," said David.

MELODRAMATIC.

Miss Vassarward—And wasn't the professor awfully, awfully provoked when he caught you in the very act of painting his door with nasty, black, sticky tar?

Yaleton—I guess he was pretty mad about it. He told me to never darken his door again!

Alas and Alecki!

Although the maid is fair to see And worth a lover's sighs, Her hair will never be as black as mine.

STAR BALL PLAYER IS SPEED DEMON

Ty Cobb, champion batsman of the American league for the season of 1910 and star outfielder with the Detroit Tigers, wears the smile of a speed demon as he sits at the wheel of a big racing car at the Indianapolis motor speedway. Cobb made several fast drives while he was at Indianapolis recently and proved beyond a doubt that he can handle an automobile wheel as well as a baseball bat.

PACKY M'FARLAND IS FAST ADVICE TO EXCITABLE FANS

So Says "Young Griffo," Who Saw Chicago Boy Trim Owen Moran of England in New York.

A gray-haired, sturdy-looking fellow was introduced to the crowd at a local boxing club the other night as "the greatest lightweight boxer ever known." Before his name was announced veteran ring followers recognized Albert Griffiths, better known as Young Griffo, of Australia, who has traveled a rocky road since his retirement from the ring a dozen years ago. Griffo is taking some care of his health nowadays and hasn't tasted intoxicants for more than a year.

Griffo saw Packy McFarland trim Owen Moran and was enthusiastic over the wonderful little Chicago fighter.

"McFarland is about the fastest man I've ever seen," exclaimed the Australian after the bout. "He's got a great head and knows more about real boxing than any of the lightweights of the present day."

The present day. The strongest point I noticed was his speedy footwork. He was all over the ring, in and out, and he would have puzzled any man. I am sure that Packy would have held his own with the lightweights I used to box. That is to say, he would have outpointed a lot of them and would have stalled off the others."

STOCKS REACH HIGHEST NOTCH THIS YEAR.

(By Special Licensed Wire to New Mexican)

Chicago, Ill., June 2.—Fear of manipulation brought about an irregular, unsettled market today for wheat. The July and September options pursued difficult paths, and during a great deal of the time one delivery was up when the other was down. Predictions, however, that world shipments would be more than two million bushels in excess of last week tended to head off any general advance. July started at 90 5/8 @ 7-8, unchanged to 1-4 down rose to 91 and then fell back to 90 5/8 @ 3-4.

Corn opened easy but rallied because country sales were only fair.
 July opened unchanged to 1-4 off at 53 7-8 to 54 1-8 and recovered to 54 1-4.

Strength developed in oats because of dry weather complaints from France. July started at 36 1-4 to 36 3-8, unchanged to 1-8 down, and then climbed to 36 1-2 @ 5-8.

Provisions were weak. Lard sales were 21-2 @ 5-8 cents to 10 cents lower with July pork at 14.70 to 14.75 and September lard and ribs respectively
 8.17 1-2 and 7.82 1-2.

Grasshoppers, Drouth and Hessian
 Flies.

Chicago, Ill., June 2.—Scorching dry weather southwest caused later a decided return of strength which was added to by news of grasshoppers in Minnesota and of Hessian fly in Indiana. The close however, was easy on profit taking. July sold finally at a net gain 1-2 cent. Corn closed steady with July at a net decline of 1-4 @ 3-8.

Wall Street.
 New York, June 2.—A number of stocks were carried to the highest level of the year this morning. The demand for railroad issues was inspired largely by April reports demonstrating that effective steps had been taken to curtail expenses.

Further weakness in American Tobacco securities had no effect on the general list. The common stock dropped 12 points to 400 on the curb and the bond issues were also sold freely.
 The bond market was firm.

The market in general reflected the change in sentiment that has been the outgrowth of opinions expressed in the supreme court decisions in the trust cases.

Market Closed Strong.
 New York, N. Y., June 2.—The government report on cotton furnished more ammunition for the bulls and was directly reflected in the southern group of stocks.

The market closed strong.
