The object of the new company is to manufacture and sell machinery to make good roads. This company is said to be incorporated in many states, as they all seem to need good roads machinery.

Irrigation Among Indians.

General H. F. Robinson, superintendent of irrigation for the Indians in New Mexico, Arizona and Utah, in his annual report just made public, says that the expenditures last fiscal year were $69,422.70.

One of the most important projects forwarded during the year is the twelve and a half mile canal tapping the San Juan, called the Hogback canal. When completed it will furnish water sufficient to irrigate 4,000 acres. It will be in use within two years. At present the Indians have 600 acres under cultivation.

The extra rains this season will accelerate to a small extent the irrigation crops of the Indians.

"It will mean a great deal to the Navajos, who plant in 'draws' and slopes where they expect a little water to come before the season is over," said Superintendent Robinson today. The Taos reservoir, completed two years ago has been leaking due to the fact that rains caused the Taos mesa, adjoining the project to settle, and repairs upon the reservoir are being made. There are 300 acres, under cultivation at present, and 1,300 acres are under ditch and available for cultivation. An area of 4,000 acres will eventually be reclaimed by the Taos storage system.

San Francisco, Calif., July 12.—The entire blame for the danger in which the passengers of the Steamer Santa Rosa which foundered last Friday Point Arguello, were placed, was shouldered last night by Captain J. D. Faris of the wrecked vessel.

In an interview Captain Faris declared that he was in complete command and that messages received from the San Francisco office of the Pacific Steamship Company with regard to the removal of the Santa Rosa's passengers were merely in the nature of suggestions.

PUBLIC INTEREST PROTECTED

Alleged Attempts of Guggenheim and Other Interests to Monopolize Alaska.

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican)
Washington, D. C., July 12.—Secretary of the Interior, Walter L. Fisher, was a witness today before the committee on expenditures in the Interior Department which is inquiring into the alleged attempts of the Guggenheims or other interests to monopolize Alaska.

Though not subpoenaed, Secretary Fisher was allowed to make a statement in which he declared his conclusion that the public interests had not been jeopardized by anything done in the Alaskan case.

"From my examination of the case," he said, "I have satisfied myself that Richard S. Ryan has obtained no rights in Controller Bay whatever, that jeopardize the rights of anyone."

Fisher Urges Haste.
Secretary Fisher asked the committee to hasten the inquiry into the alleged "Dick to Dick" letter, which can not now be found in the department files.

W. P. Fannell, counsel for the committee, replied that the letter was not of so much interest as the facts. "It was within the power of the president," added Mr. Fannell, "to throw these lands open to all, so that the race would be to the swift, but it was not done that way. It was known only to a few and those few already have obtained a monopoly of the mineral rights in that territory. That is what we want to investigate."

"I am much concerned," said Secretary Fisher, "about the publication of a letter which Miss M. F. Abbott says she saw in the files of the Interior department and that is not there now. If there is any one in the department who would be a party to the abstraction or destruction of public documents we want to know it. Men who had been in charge of the files in the Interior department have left the service and others are about to leave, and I urge inquiry into that as soon as possible so that we may take steps to replace responsibility of the letter, if it ever existed. I never saw such a document as described, a letter from Mr. Ryan to Mr. Ballinger, and never heard of it until I read of it in the newspaper the other day."

Chairman Graham said the committee would get to the matter as soon as possible.

Secretary Fisher said that all information now obtainable relating to Controller Bay was being compiled for the Senate in response to the Poindexter resolution of June 27.

This data, he suggested, would be available to the House committee. Chairman Graham announced he would be glad to hear from Mr. Fisher on the merits of the Controller Bay case, adding that the committee in all probability, would ask him to appear formally later.

Secretary Fisher said his attention was first called to Controller Bay by Senator La Follette, who sought specific information as to the claims, the identity of claimants, etc. After thorough examination, Mr. Fisher said he was unable to see how the public interest had been jeopardized.

"I made up my mind," he added, "that if anything was wrong we wanted to know it. I checked up the case particularly to see if I could find anything irregular."

"I confessed that I was not so much concerned whether the method of opening the lands was one way or another. The real thing I am looking for is to get constructive results."

"I found in my investigation that Richard S. Ryan, after the release of the Shore Line lands had made three entries, none of which had been completed. He made an entry as a terminus for a railroad. That has not been determined and his rights will be decided according to law and subject to my review."

"I found considerable other frontage available for railroad entry. The important thing is to ascertain what shore line rights lead to deep water. If there is only room for one railroad the question to be determined is whether it shall be Ryan's or some other railroad."

LOSSES EXCEED $2,500,000

Many Families, It Is Feared,
Have Perished—Destitution Widespread.

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican)
Alpena, Mich., July 12.—Reports today from the fire-swept regions of Northern Michigan indicate complete destruction of the towns of Oscoda and Au Sable at the mouth of the Au Sable river, and having a population of 1,800. The towns of Tower and Onaway are partly destroyed by forest fires, with heavy losses at Millersburg, Metz, Posen and La Roque. Several settlers' families and lumber camp crews near Wolverine and a number of families near Gaylord are missing and it is feared perished in the flames which in places are sweeping the country with the speed of an express train.

It is rumored also that there is loss of life at Oscoda and Au Sable, where the school house and the two dwellings are the only buildings standing.

Narrow Escapes.
Two hundred and eighty fire victims from Oscoda, principally women and children arrived at Port Huron today on the steamer barge Niko, some just managing to board it last night when the vessel cut loose with her bow and stern on fire. They report many shelterless in the swamps and fields still burning about the town.

Nothing to Eat.
A carload of food was hastily collected at midnight at Bay City, and dispatched with a volunteer committee to Oscoda where the homeless have had nothing to eat since yesterday noon.

Losses $2,500,000.
One of the heaviest losers in the district is H. M. Loude Sons company, of which Congressman George Loud is the head. The company's loss is nearly three-quarters of a million. The total fire losses in the district will probably exceed two and a half millions.

Bridges and Cars Burning.
High winds were general throughout northern Michigan last night and from all over the district came reports of heavy fires fanned to huge proportions by the breeze. The entire population of Lewiston is fighting fire which threatens to destroy the town. Alger, on the Michigan Central, and Turner on the Detroit and Mackinac Railroad, are also in danger. At Richmond, forty-eight cars and a bridge were destroyed. In Beaver township, Crawford county, the town hall and several farm houses were burned. Several lumber camps at Montmorenci are in extreme danger. A. P. Jacobs, a Chicago traveling man, arrived at Bay City this morning and said there are reports of a number of bodies, burned and blackened beyond recognition found in the streets of Oscoda and Au Sable today.

Bodies Recovered.
Detroit, Mich., July 12.—Up to noon today three bodies had been found in the ruins of the villages of Au Sable and Oscoda, which were destroyed by forest fires. One of the bodies was that of Samuel Rosenthal, a tailor, and the other two were so badly charred as to be beyond identification.

State Fire Warden Oates received reports today of fires near Onaway, Millersburg, northwest of Roscommon, and in Antrim county, but said that the telegraphic reports from his deputies did not indicate that any communities were menaced at present.

Warden Oates said however, that rain was badly needed throughout the entire upper section of the lower peninsula.

Exaggerated Reports.
The destruction yesterday of the twin villages of Au Sable and Oscoda, and the $500,000 fire at Alpena, which was not due to forest fires, probably caused exaggerated reports of heavy damage and possible loss of life from forest fires in the northern counties of the southern peninsula of Michigan. Towns along the Detroit and Mackinac from Posen, in Presque Isle county to Onaway, in Sheboygan county, suffered much damage but many towns that were last night reported burning are today safe.

These include Lewiston, Turner and Alger.

Panic Stricken Refugees.

Most of the reports of loss of life originated from the stories of panic-stricken refugees who in their mad rush from the burning towns, saw many people fall from exhaustion and counted all these as lost, some of the reports estimating the dead as high as fifty.

Fatal Forest Fires in Canada.

North Bay, Ontario, July 12.—As the result of forest fires in northern Ontario, thirty lives are known to have been lost at Porcupine, including Captain White and family at West Dore and many have been injured. A hospital train is now on the way to Porcupine Falls. It is believed the casualties will number hundreds.

COMPROMISE IS ABOUT REACHED

Delegate W. H. Andrews
Brings Opposing Factions Together

WILL SETTLE STATEHOOD NOW

Original Resolution by Delegate to Be Basis of Agreement.

Special to the New Mexican.
Washington, D. C., July 12.—Delegate W. H. Andrews has about succeeded in bringing the warring factions on statehood together on a compromise which has the sanction of President Taft, Senator Smith, Senator Penrose and Senator Nelson. Under this compromise, Senator Nelson will present a substitute for the Flood resolution, which will embody the original resolution as introduced by Delegate Andrews providing for the approval of the New Mexico constitution and the admission of the Territory without any conditions or special vote on the amending clause of its constitution. As to Arizona, the resolution will provide that Arizona shall vote on the recall of judges at the election for state officers and if the voters reject the recall, Arizona shall be admitted at the same time as New Mexico. Senators Owen, Shively and Chamberlain have agreed reluctantly to this resolution, but admit that it is the quickest method of letting in Arizona and New Mexico.

Under this arrangement, President Taft can order Governor Mills to issue a proclamation for a state election the moment that the resolution reaches him. The minority report of the Senate Committee will be adopted, Senator Smith explaining that this is necessary to prevent a veto which would delay New Mexico's admission until it came in automatically next year. He wants the statehood question disposed of at this session and wants to see Arizona come in at the same time as New Mexico, which would not happen if New Mexico comes in automatically next June. Senator Nelson declares that the President will sign his substitute and Senator Penrose will consent to a vote on statehood if it can be had with out delaying reciprocity.

It is possible therefore that the resolution will be passed within the next two weeks, and signed by the President.

Railroads Father Sugar Trust.
Washington, D. C., July 12.—"If the tariff is the mother of trusts, the trunk line railroads of the country constitute the father, and the Trunk Line Association the grandfather," declared Frank L. Neal, of Philadelphia, a steamship and railroad shipping broker, in protesting to the House Sugar investigations committee today against what he termed a discrimination in freight rates against the Philadelphia sugar business. He did not lay this discrimination expressly at the door of any interest. He contended that distance from refineries should control the freight and consequently the selling price of sugar.

Railroad Rates Honest.
Washington, D. C., July 12.—Mr. Neale said he believed railroad rates now were honestly adhered to but he was not so sure as to what was done where the "trust" had lighterage arrangements.

The witness said artificial reasons "led the sugar trust" to transfer a large percentage of the sugar refining business from Philadelphia to New York, although Philadelphia received an advantage in freight rates to the West, got coal cheaper and had better water facilities. He referred to the Brooklyn terminal company "owned by the Havemeyers, reaping enormous profits in lightening sugar in New York harbor," and to the opportunity to commit customs frauds as possible reasons.

ALBUQUERQUE STATEHOOD MEETING IS HELD.

Ex-Governor George Curry returned this afternoon from Albuquerque, where with Hon. H. B. Ferguson he was the principal speaker at a statehood meeting held at the Commercial Club. Others made brief remarks, and Simon Stern, John Lee Clarke, P. F. McCanna, B. Spitz and George Arnot were appointed a committee to go to Washington to work for statehood. The following telegram was formulated:

"We, the undersigned citizens of New Mexico, respectfully request that you, as one of the fifteen senators to whom we have sent similar telegrams, make personal effort to secure immediate favorable action insuring statehood for New Mexico and Arizona, thereby ending the uncertainty that has caused widespread business depression in both territories. We appeal to you personally to exert your influence in our behalf."

Terrell, who was appointed by Governor Brown to fill the unexpired term of late A. S. Clay. Senator Smith was at one time a law partner of Chief Justice William H. Pope of Roswell. He was the secretary of the Interior during the administration of President Grover Cleveland in 1893 and resigned in 1896. He was born at Newton, North Carolina on September 2, 1855; and moved to Georgia when 17 years of age without having attended any school "teaching him. He taught school in Georgia, studying law in his leisure moments, was admitted to the bar, became proprietor of the Atlanta Journal, was elected Governor of Georgia and is a staunch advocate of prohibition.

BALLOON REACHES ALTITUDE OF 22,000 FEET.

Two St. Louis Gasbags Win the Honors in the National Elimination Race.

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican)
Kansas City, Mo., July 12.—With the balloons St. Louis IV and the Million Population Club, both of St. Louis, rests the honors of winning first and second prizes in the National Elimination balloon race which started from this city on Monday evening and to two St. Louis pilots falls the right of joining Alan R. Hawley of New York in representing the United States in the international balloon races for the James Gordon Bennett cup, which will start from here on October 5.

Made Altitude Record.
While official returns of the races will not be in for several days, there is no doubt according to officials of the Kansas City Aero Club, that first place will go to St. Louis IV which landed near La Paz Junction, Indiana at 4:15 yesterday afternoon and second place to the Million Population Club which came down at La Crosse, Indiana, at 2:45 yesterday afternoon. The altitude record of the race as well as the distance record is believed to have been made by Lieutenant Frank P. Lahm and Lieutenant John P. Hart, pilot and aid in the St. Louis, whose instruments recorded a maximum altitude of 22,000 feet.

Pursued by Thunder Storm.
All the pilots seem to have encountered thunderstorms which pursued them for miles.

Unattended Sore Eyes of Babies to Blame For One Fourth

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican)
San Francisco, Calif., July 12.—That the amount of impaired vision found among school children is a matter of grave concern to educators was evidenced by the number of addresses on this subject made before the National Education Association today.

Dr. Mark D. Stevenson of Akron, took the position that the eye has been bullied out of its natural function of long range vision and with the development of printing, forced to do unnatural duty as a keen discriminator at short range.

"The eye is chiefly adapted for seeing distant objects," he said. "A special muscular effort is required to see close objects."

Babies sore eyes he said cause about one fourth of blindness in children. J. A. Shawan, superintendent of schools at Columbus, Ohio, declared in his address that limited vision can be increased by proper training.

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican)
Chicago, Ill., July 12.—Expert accountants under the direction of a committee of Chicago bankers today began an inspection of the books and accounts of the late James Pettit, and the Peavy Grain Company, in an effort to determine the exact condition of the Board of Trade firms' finances. The latest developments seem to indicate that the losses of the concern may reach a million and a half. A series of big losses in speculative plunging in the wheat and oats markets covering a period of two years during which James Pettit used the credit of the Peavy Grain Company to carry on his trades, is said to have led to the large shortage.

Representatives of the insurance companies in which Pettit carried policies aggregating $100,000 are still investigating the circumstances of Pettit's death.

URGING McMANIGAL TO REPUDIATE HIS CONFESSION.

Unless McNamara Are Tried Soon
State's Chief Witness Will Collapse Completely.

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican)
Los Angeles, Calif., July 12.—Mrs. Orrie E. McManigal and her uncle, George Behm of Portage, Wis., both of whom are aligned with the defense, shared the interest with the McNamara brothers today when the dynamic conspiracy case was called, and Judge Walter Bordwell prepared to render a decision on the motion to quash the indictments against the accused labor leader and his brother.

Mrs. McManigal and her uncle came to the court directly from the jail where the two made another effort, it is asserted, to induce Orrie McManigal, the alleged confessed co-conspirator, to repudiate his confession. Torn between conflicting desires to do so as his wife wished also to keep his alleged pledge to become a state witness, McManigal is said to be on the verge of collapse. His jailors said today that he was extremely nervous, that he had lost 15 pounds since he was in jail on April 26th and that unless the trial of the McNamaras was soon McManigal would be in no condition to assume the role of principal witness against them.

May Plead Tomorrow.

In case the decision of the court is against the defense, the accused men will be forced to enter their pleas to 19 charges of murder tomorrow unless Attorney Clarence S. Darrow and associate counsel have another preliminary move in view.

The visit of McManigal's wife and uncle to his cell today was followed by a similar call yesterday. Behm arrived here several days ago. He heard McManigal from boyhood and is said to have urged his nephew to do as his wife wished and remain true to his fellow prisoners.

McManigal is said to have wavered but to have refused finally to desert the prosecution. "I cannot do it," he is quoted as saying. "They would hang me if I did."

INJURED IN BRIDGEPORT WRECK SUFFER TERRIBLY.

Not One of Patients at Hospitals Died
During Night but Several Are Not Improved.

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican)
Bridgeport, Conn., July 12.—At the Bridgeport hospital all the 25 patients from the wreck yesterday in the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad passed a fairly good night.

St. Vincent's Hospital, where the more serious cases were taken, reports that no deaths have occurred, but that most of the patients there are developing shock quite noticeably and the condition of several serious cases has not improved.

More Bodies Identified.

Bridgeport, Conn., July 12.—One identification and the finding of two more bodies and the reported continued improvement of the injured summarizes the developments today following the wreck of the Federal Express of the New York, New Haven and Hartford, R. R., here yesterday, in which 12 were killed and over three scores seriously injured.

The body identified is that of Mrs. Virginia W. Palmer of Richmond, Va. This afternoon the wreckers found a body which is believed to be that of Edward Goff, the missing flagman of New Haven, who was on his way from New York to his home and was not on duty when killed.

A body believed to be that of a brakeman was also found.

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican)
New York, N. Y., July 12.—The break in the heat wave promised by the weather bureau made itself felt today, although the change was gradual and little real comfort was in prospect until tomorrow.

At 9 o'clock, the official thermometer registered 80 degrees.

Following yesterday's maximum of 94 degrees, death stalked through the crowded tenements last night. Twenty deaths have been reported since 12 o'clock. The deaths from the heat up to midnight had numbered 25. This brings the total deaths during the 10 days since the extreme heat first visited New York up to 277 and beats all previous records.

PUBLISHER OF WOMAN'S DAILY IS INDICTED.

E. G. Lewis Again in Clutches of Federal Officers and is Charged With Fraud.

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican)
St. Louis, Mo., July 12.—E. G. Lewis until recently publisher of a number of magazines and promoter of enterprises, was indicted by a special grand jury in the U. S. District court today on charges of fraudulent use of the mails.

Lewis is alleged to have obtained several million dollars by misleading statements, circulated through the mails.

It is charged that Lewis, through misrepresentation, with intent to defraud, sold unsecured notes on the Woman's Magazine building and the Woman's National Daily building in University City of which Lewis is Mayor, unsecured notes of the University Heights Realty and Development company, operating a "debtors' scheme" and that he misrepresented the condition of the Lewis Publishing company in selling stocks in the concern.

The government's investigations leading directly to today's indictment was in progress for the last year.

Lewis recently put his corporation in the hands of trustees with sole power to handle them for five years. At the end of that time it is expected that he will receive them back without indebtedness. Certain creditors have attacked the trustees in the federal courts by asking that a receiver be appointed.

Lewis was indicted in 1905 on charges of conducting a scheme to defraud through his operation of the People's United States Bank, one of his corporations.

He was acquitted on several of these charges and all were dismissed later by the government.

CRIPPEN'S ATTORNEY SUB-PENED FOR PRACTICE.

Conducted Case From Sensational Newspaper and Not From Legal Standpoint.

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican)
London, Eng., July 12.—Arthur Newton, who was found guilty of professional misconduct in his defense of the wife murderer, Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, by a committee of the law society, was today suspended from the practice for one year and ordered by the divisional court to pay the costs of the inquiry.

Newton was alleged to have abused his privilege as a lawyer by aiding and abetting H. W. Bottomley, editor of a weekly publication and member of parliament, for the south division of Hackney, to publish false statements regarding the case and also to have aided the Daily Chronicle to give publicity to similar untruths.

Justice Darling, in announcing the decision of the court, said that the case had disclosed the gravest state of affairs, absolutely inconsistent with public advantage.

Crippen, he said, was not defended as he should have been, with a view purely to his defense. The case had been conducted largely for the purpose of making copy for the newspapers, which subscribed money for the defense.

That a solicitor should lend himself to such practice was a very grave offense, the justice said, and he added, that in his opinion the newspaper connected with the affair deserves punishment equally with Newton.

Newton gave notice of an appeal from the judgment of the court.

UNSAID: UNDONE.

The words that I have left unsaid,
Fearing to bring upon the head
Of someone, although well deserved
Man's punishment; if I had swerved
And said, perchance, another thing
Instead to mitigate the sting—
May such words absolution bring
To me.

II

The deeds which I have left undone
From rise to height and set of sun
Because some trouble they might breed

For those in direr, sorer need;
Rearing, instead, a better thing
To help, not hinder—soothe, not sting
May such deeds absolution bring
To me.

Envoy.

I've no regrets for deeds not done,
For words unspeaken, songs unsung
That may have caused two lives to part

An opened wound, an aching heart.
I only mourn the careless thought—
In language couched, by action wrought—

That to mankind fresh grief has brought Through me.

Magazine for July.

Clergyman's Son Cured of Tuberculosis

To neglect a cold, bronchitis, lung trouble or Consumption is dangerous. We all know how prone people are to deny they have Consumption. It is a flattering disease, and the sufferer is filled with bright hopes of improvement. Call consumption by its own dread name—and then—take Eckman's Alternative, because it is effective in Tuberculosis. No one need doubt about it—there is plenty of evidence from live witnesses. Investigate the following:—
Amelia, N. Y. Gentlemen: "Prior to Feb. 1908, I was located in Rochester, N. Y., suffering with LaGrippe, which developed into Tuberculosis. My physician gave me one month to live. I was having terrible night sweats and mid-day chills and losing flesh rapidly, having gone from 155 to 125 lbs. I coughed and raised continually and became so weak that walking a few feet exhausted me. On my return home, my regular physician gave me little encouragement. My father, who is a clergyman, heard of Eckman's Alternative and induced me to take it. The night sweats and chills disappeared, my cough became easier and gradually diminished and in a few days I developed an appetite, the first in months. I am now in perfect health, back to 155 lbs. I feel certain that I owe my life to Eckman's Alternative."
(Signed) E. H. COWLES.
Gentlemen: "I cannot find words to express my appreciation of what your remedy has done for my son. It changed despair into hope within two weeks after he began taking it, and without any doubt in my mind, it saved his life. I wish to add my endorsement to every word of his testimonial."
(Signed) REV. J. J. COWLES.

Zamora was fined ten dollars and costs and Santallanes fifteen dollars and costs.

Collects Delinquent Taxes.
As the result of the many suits for the collection of delinquent taxes filed recently by District Attorney C. W. G. Ward, tax money is coming in rapidly to the coffers of the county and Deputy Treasurer and Collector Robert L. M. Ross is being kept busy receiving the money and issuing receipts. Those persons who are delinquent have not waited for judgment to be obtained but have hurried to the court house to settle up. Mr. Ross says the amount of money brought in by the suits will amount to several thousand dollars. Some of the suits were for taxes delinquent since 1901.

To ward off Bright's disease or diabetes. Doan's have done great work in Santa Fe.

J. T. Sandoval, 115 Ortiz St., Santa Fe, N. M., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for two years and they have done me a world of good. A dull pain in the small of my back, sometimes extending into my bladder caused me a great deal of suffering, particularly when I took cold. I was bothered mostly in the winter, and in addition to the pain in my back, there were symptoms of inflammation of the bladder. The kidney secretions were highly colored and when passed were attended with a scalding pain. I never used another remedy that acted as satisfactorily as Doan's Kidney Pills. They proved to be just the medicine my case required and the complete cure they brought has led me to recommend them on more than one occasion."

CONSERVATION OF VISION DAY

Care of Eyes to Be Topic on Certain Date This Fall

NATIONAL MOVEMENT STARTED

Music in the Public Schools to Elevate the General Taste.

(By Special Leased Wire to New Mexican)

San Francisco, July 12.—A "Conservation of Vision" Day, when the care of the eyes will form the subject of consideration in the schools and public assemblies throughout the United States, was proposed by Dr. F. Park Lewis, of Buffalo, in an address today before the Department of Special Education of the National Education Association. This suggestion was made in order that thought may be fixed upon the subject, and the public enlightened as to the necessity. A certain day in the fall of 1912 as a Conservation of Vision Day was suggested.

"In his address, Dr. Lewis said in part: 'The children of the country are its most valuable resource. To the extent that their efficiency is developed, and their productivity increased, will the standard of civilization be raised. The most valuable single asset of their effectiveness in their eyesight, and this is in a large proportion of cases needlessly sacrificed. One third of all blindness is preventable, and a much larger proportion of people with defective vision need never have suffered this handicap had right protective measures been employed.'

"A movement is under way to coordinate the efforts of the teachers—the doctors—the social workers—the sanitarians—the architects—the engineers—the mothers and the public generally in making more widely understood and carrying into effect the principles of the hygiene of vision. This is being developed through the American Association for the Conservation of Vision, which includes in its active membership many of the most distinguished scientists in the country."

"It is proposed, and this work has already been begun, to issue publications under the authority of specialists, in the various departments. These will include studies in the proper lighting of schools—the best form of type and paper to be employed—and more especially the lessening of the hours of eye work. It will consider, also methods of protecting the eyes from needless accidents. These causes contributing so largely to defective eyesight, are already governable."

Public School Music. San Francisco, July 12.—The keynote sounded in a paper by Miss Elsie M. Shawe, of St. Paul, Minn., President of the music department of the National Education Association, at a section meeting of the Association today, on "Public School Music in Relation to the Music of the Community," was that public school music is one of the largest factors in the making of America a musical nation. Music in its relation to the home was first considered. "Germany," said the speaker, "is said to owe the pre-eminent place it does in the musical world today to music in the home. One of our foremost musicians in America today—a German by birth—has said that he owes his musical gift, not to his father, who was noted as a conductor, virtuoso and composer but rather to the lullabies and other simple folk-songs that he heard from his earliest infancy from his mother's lips."

"How can our public schools assist in bringing more music and music of a better quality into the home? By having nothing but the best music sung or played in the school, and second by including in the course of study many beautiful folk and other simple but good songs, which through love and familiarity the child will naturally carry to his home. With the advent of the mechanical piano-player and talking machine in the school, the supervisor has an additional responsibility, as it becomes the duty of the supervisor to select music for the children to hear that will cultivate in them an appreciation of the very best in the Art of music."

Ex-Governor L. Bradford Prince Tells of Early Tree Planting

PLAZA SEVENTY YEARS AGO

Aesthetic Plans of Governor Martinez Which Made Him Beloved.

In these days when beauty is almost as much regarded as utility in the building of cities, and when even in Santa Fe the planting of trees for shade and ornament is recognized as one of the most important improvements and attractions requiring attention, it seems only proper to give credit to those who began this work long before it received much appreciation.

Every one recognizes the Plaza as the central feature of Santa Fe, on account of its noble trees and restful shade. For almost a generation it was the only real park in New Mexico and inquiries are frequent as to the person who had the taste and the public spirit to make it a thing of beauty. Down to 1844 it was an open sandy square, partially filled during the day with a motley array of wagons, horses, mules, oxen and burros; and when the caravan of the Santa Fe trail arrived, crowded with the vehicles and animals which had crossed the Great Plains.

In that year there came for New Mexico a new governor—Mariano Martinez, direct from the capital of the Republic—He was young, handsome and gallant, and soon endeared himself not only to the departmental officials but to the people in general. He was accompanied by his beautiful young wife, Dona Teresa, whose tact, courtesy and graceful manners made her fully as popular as her husband.

They brought with them many ideas which were novel in New Mexico, and among them was their love of trees and shaded public grounds. So one of the acts for which Governor Martinez has ever since been gratefully remembered, was the planting in the Plaza of cottonwood trees which for more than two thirds of a century have been the pride of Santa Fe. Two generations have enjoyed the benefit of their refreshing shade and they still remain to render the Plaza of Santa Fe famous.

These trees were planted under the direct supervision of the governor and he took such a personal interest in their success that he is said to have held each tree in its proper place as the earth was placed around its roots.

Governor Martinez was not satisfied with this one park in the center of the city, but he set an example which might well be followed even now. He planned a large park for beauty and pleasure in the outskirts of the town; and laid out and planted with choice young cottonwoods a spacious square in the valley just south of the Rosario chapel. To insure rapid growth he had a system of acequias constructed to carry water to all parts of the park; and during his term of office it rapidly became a thing of beauty. Unfortunately after his retirement, no interest was taken in the matter by his successors; and by neglect and from lack of water, the trees gradually died and disappeared.

Coming down to a somewhat more recent period, the splendid rows of cottonwoods which are the attractive features of Washington and Grant Avenues were planted by the United States military authorities, under the direction of Captain John Ayers, who is well remembered by many Santa Fe people. To the day of his death, it was the special pride of Capt. Ayers, and the frequent subject of his conversation, that he was thus the father of one of Santa Fe's most characteristic attractions; and when, in his later days, he was custodian of the Military Reservation, he would give the history of almost every tree of special size or beauty.

While this is but a brief sketch, yet it carries its moral, which is that few acts of officials bring more lasting benefit and pleasure to the people, or a more grateful memory of the benefactor, than the planting of trees, and the construction of parks. There is room for such action today, and it is much more easy than it will be in the future. There is no reason why there cannot be a park exactly where Governor Martinez laid out his, in 1844; there ought to be one in a central position on the south side and if it can still be obtained, the Clenega with its constant water supply, presents an ideal situation for a park with a pond in the center, like the "Bishop's Garden" on a large scale.

OLD LADY'S SAGE ADVICE

Knoxville, Tenn.—Mrs. Mamie Towe, of 102 W. Main Street, this city, says: "If you had seen me, before I began to take Cardui, you would not think I was the same person. Six doctors failed to do me good, and my friends thought I would die. I could hardly get out of bed or walk a step. At last an old lady advised me to take Cardui, and now I can go most anywhere." All ailing women need Cardui, as a gentle, refreshing tonic especially adapted to their peculiar ailments. It is a reliable, vegetable remedy, successfully used for over 50 years. You ought to try it.

AN APPRECIATION OF THE
LATE JUDGE JOHN H. KNAEBEL

Delivered by Attorney A. B. Renahan, at His Funeral on July 5.

As one who knew him well, who enjoyed his confidence, and who was admitted to the wholesomeness of his humanity, the breath and warmth of his philosophy, the greatness of his erudition, the beauty of his refinement, and delicacy, and gentleness, who called him friend and was in turn called friend by him, I come to lay the tribute of my puny words upon his bier.

When first I ventured upon the devious paths of my profession, a profession which, to be rightly pursued, demands of its votary soul and conscience, dutifulness, self sacrifice and self-immolation, bigness of mind and labors manifold, he took me by the hand and led the way.

His was honor undefiled, and so straight the course he took that none can say he was a faithless advocate for rectitude he worshipped as the saint his deity; none can say that he, in all his works, was not moved by an overwhelming sense of right, justice, duty and propriety, behind all of which there stood as constant monitor a kindness of thought and word and deed, whose like it is doubtful if we shall see again.

In his eyes the material was not entirely worthless, neither was it the end and aim of all. The spiritual with him was the master motif.

The Paraclete, the Comforter, abided with him, and he was paraclete, the comforter, to many.

When doubt surged around me, he was the Pierian spring from which I drew large draughts of inspiration, for out of his abundance he gave abundantly.

He was my guide, philosopher and friend.

"Teach me to feel another's woe, to hide the fault I see," was a large part of his gospel, and from his tongue never fell harsh comment on his brothers, but only the kind, the generous, the magnanimous address. He knew that in the strong there is a weakness, and in the weak some undiscovered strength.

Enemies he had none, and when he suffered any blow, it came from the hand of his friend, at whose dereliction he sorrowed in patience without will or thought of vengeance, believing in his heart that the wrongs men do are not always born of vice, but often the offspring of occasion which a fortuitous debility did not or could not resist. He himself gave no stroke of hate or anger.

From us there has gone a master mind, a lawyer without a peer, a splendid gentleman, a lawyer, a good citizen, a pure man, a universal Christian, who like Abou Ben Adhem, loved his fellow men.

MANY CUNNING WAYS OF DAN CUPID.

Man's Inconstancy and Woman's Foolishness Permit Him to Play Many a Joke Each Day.

Denver, Colo., July 12.—Mrs. Alvin L. Jessup, the second victim of the Capitol Hill thug, who ten years ago terrorized the residence district of the hill by a series of brutal attacks upon women, was secretly divorced several months ago.

Couple Charged With Bigamy. Mrs. Helen Allison and John Rorros, whom she married on June 3, were bound over to the district court yesterday by Magistrate Thrush on a charge of bigamy. Their bonds were fixed at $1,000 each.

Wife Should Get Two Thirds.

Although several representative women have answered, each in her own way, these questions which Mrs. Ella W. Peattie raises in a recent magazine article, a brand new solution is given by Mrs. Sofia M. Loebinger, editor of the American Suffragette. This is defined in two words—marriage contract.

"And how much should the contract award her?" I asked.

"I think she should always have at least half her husband's income; half the property he possesses at the time of his marriage should be settled on her," replied Mrs. Loebinger. "But when it is understood that she is to pay for the housekeeping supplies out of her allowance a larger amount should be assigned her."

"Under these circumstances two-thirds of the family income is none too large a sum to put at her disposal, with the understanding, of course, that half this is to go for household expenses. Then her own personal allowance and that of her husband will be equal, which is as it should be."

Sent Her Beer and Fish.

Complaining that her husband sent presents of beer and fish to another woman, Mrs. Ida P. Hawpe filed a suit for divorce from William W. Hawpe, a police officer. The couple were married November 20, 1905.

Mrs. Louise Le Lan Smith has instituted divorce proceedings against Joel T. Smith, a wealthy mining and irrigation promoter, whom she declares is worth in excess of $75,000. She asks $5,000 permanent alimony and $50 a month.

Discovered Man's Perfidy.

Los Angeles, July 10.—Dropping in to Swobd's millinery store, 74 South Broadway, to purchase a hat for her honeymoon journey, Mrs. Bertha Shuley Powers was waited on by Mrs. Willie Wallace Powers a saleswoman. In chatting over styles, the customer blushing admitted she was married only last Saturday and added, with considerable pride, that her husband, John W. Powers, was one of the best and nicest of men. "Why," exclaimed Mrs. Willie Wallace Powers, "my husband's name is John W. Powers but I haven't seen him for a long time. He ran away from me in Cleveland, O. months and months ago." Examination of photographs proved that both women had married the same man.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF SANTA FE COUNTY.

The New Mexican is the oldest newspaper in New Mexico. It is sent to every postoffice in the Territory, and has a large and growing circulation among the intelligent and progressive people of the Southwest.

THE HUNTER AND THE HUNTED.

The hunter who goes hunting does not ask about the morals of the game. Thus the men appointed by governments to prosecute wrongdoers have often not so much in mind the justification of the law as they have the conviction of those accused of wrong doing; it is not so much justice they desire to do, as to make a showing as to the number of people they have sent to the Penitentiary.

There is something pathetic in the death bed statement of Gustav Kissell, which the Associated Press made public yesterday. He was one of the large class of solid businessmen who prided themselves upon their integrity, who did business according to the accepted rules of the business world, who are good, and kind and charitable, who have no idea of wronging any one. He was of the type of men who have done wonders in making the United States foremost among industrial nations and a leader in finance.

In the natural course of business, as it has come to thousands of men and banks, he made a loan to a friend to enable this friend to tide over a business enterprise, a sugar factory. In the course of events that friend went to the wall despite the efforts of Kissell to help him. To save part of the loan, the factory was sold to the American Sugar Refining company, which finding that the mill could not be operated at a profit closed down the mill.

The transaction on the face appeared to the government like a conspiracy in restraint of trade. It set its minions to work and Kissell was indicted without being given a chance to be heard before the grand jury. Kissell felt the net tightening around him; he seemed as helpless in the grasp of the federal law officers as a mouse in the jaws of a cat. Public prejudice was against him. Public prejudice is never with the man who has money or loans money or who builds railroads or factories. It is a terrible thing to be in the clutches of a federal government that has inspectors and spies and legal talent at its command and which concentrates all these on an individual who is unpopular and who is charged with transgressing the law.

It may be thought that no really innocent man is ever convicted but even to an innocent man it sometimes seems as if the only escape from the clutches of the law is suicide or to die like Kissell did, of broken heart. There is nothing to compare with the agony of the helplessness of the man who deems himself innocent and yet is caught in a business transaction that on the face of it furnishes ground for suspicion. He may turn this way or that, he may retain the best legal talent, he may have friends by the score, if the federal officers set out to destroy a man, and public sentiment is with them, neither age nor previous good conduct, nor good intentions, nor family, nor ignorance that the transaction was illegal, will help. There is an end to the chapter in that human life.

Of course, it cannot be otherwise. The fear of the law and the government demands that law officers must be merciless in the prosecution of crime, must ferret out every bit of evidence, must put the most unfavorable construction upon every act of the accused. But the average citizen must remember that he has many a time been guilty of obliquities as great as those which sent men like Walsh and Morse to the penitentiary and Kissell to his death. The obliquity may not run into the millions of dollars but obliquity is not measured in that manner. A wrong is a wrong, whether it affects thousands or only a few, whether it is gambling with a bank's assets or playing poker for money when the law forbids it, or enticing young men and young women into a life of shame. The most culpable transgressors are not always the men pilloried in the courts and in the newspapers.

THE SCENIC HIGHWAY.

The Las Vegas Optic appeals to Governor William J. Mills to repair the Scenic Highway up Gallinas Canon which has been damaged somewhat by recent rains. The Good Roads Commission should heed this appeal and at the same time put a force of convicts into the Santa Fe Canon to place the Scenic Highway into good condition and then push it through to the Pecos. It is poor business to let a $20,000 investment go to ruin and fall to make it available and profitable when it can easily be done. The past two weeks have seen the road between Canoncito and Glorieta, and between Las Vegas and Mora badly washed out. This will be an annual occurrence on all roads located like that and it should be the duty of the local authorities to build and maintain these arteries of local traffic. The commonwealth should only build such difficult roads as scenic highways, which are beyond the financial status of the local governments and would not be built and maintained by them.

Yet, such roads are necessary to throw open not only to the world but to local people, the beauties and riches of mountains and forests which otherwise are a sealed book to all except a few venturesome souls that attempt the trails. It is the state constructed mountain roads in Switzerland that bring that little republic $30,000,000 from tourists annually.

The New Mexican has the promise of high railroad officials both of the Santa Fe and the Rock Island systems and the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad would certainly join, that as soon as the Scenic Highway is pushed through to the Pecos, they would give New Mexico advertising equal to that now benefiting the Grand Canon and the Yellowstone Park and which would bring millions of dollars annually into New Mexico.

Isn't that worth while, and more than the profits of all other roads taken together? Does it need any argument with progressive and far-seeing men like Governor Mills, Territorial Engineer Charles D. Miller and Commissioner R. P. Ervin, to prove that the immediate task of the Good Roads Commission is to carry into effect the intent of past legislatures when they legislated for the construction of this Scenic Highway and authorized the expenditure of more than $20,000 upon it? They would be benefiting not only Santa Fe and Las Vegas but the entire commonwealth and there is no other road project of more general importance and that would or will bring one-hundredths of the benefit to any locality or to the Territory at large that the completion of the Scenic Highway to the Pecos would mean to the entire commonwealth.

CIVIC DEPRIVITY.

"Civic depravity," was denounced by Richard Welling of New York, one of the speakers at the section meeting of the National Education Association, today. His subject was "Public Self Government as a Training for Citizenship." Mr. Welling said in part:

"Eight years ago I addressed this Association on Training for Citizenship in the Schools. We were then at the beginning of a wave of civic righteousness which passed over the country. I say 'passed over' advisedly because there seems to have been a lapse into the lethargy of the older days as is evinced by the conditions in many places.

"The vote selling in Ohio, Indiana and my own state of New York indicate not merely a low tone of citizenship but a civic depravity. The Lorimer case gives a clue to the lack of intelligent interest of the citizens of Illinois in the selection of their public servants. The deadlocks in many legislatures bespeak the trafficking and log-rolling that still obtain where the servants of the people are supposed to be registering the popular will. In the main, the interest of the people in their public affairs is confined to the weeks preceding the annual elections. The only other times they are aroused from their civic slumber is when a scandal is uncovered or a public official is under prosecution.

"Is not this condition of things an indication of the failure of the schools in effective training for citizenship? My viewpoint is that of a citizen. Several years ago, I looked into the matter of civic training in the schools. I found that the only attempt to prepare our children for their life in this democracy was a study of the structure and functions of government. Except in rare instances, this dry pursuit of the theory of government was not coupled with any activity whereby the pupils were exercised in the business of being good citizens.

"Is it not a reasonable question to ask, 'Has our public education from the standpoint of citizenship been a paying investment?'

"I advocate pupil co-operation in the government of the schools as a method of exercising our children in democratic life. Forty principals of Elementary and High Schools in fifteen states report that they are successfully employing the plan; five thousand children rejoice in their democratic school life. The movement is growing. It should grow faster. It is high time the National Education Association took up this subject for a thorough inquiry."

The value of domestic animals in Colorado exceeds $70,000,000, or considerably more than the assessed valuation of all the wealth in New Mexico. The Census Bureau in a bulletin issued today credits the Centennial state with 1,126,365 head of cattle, 1,424,187 sheep, 1,721,445 fowls, 293,251 horses and colts, 14,711 mules, 3,230 burros, 178,838 swine, and 31,446 goats. New Mexico can beat this but it does not appear so on the assessment rolls.

Utah's crops on a cultivated area much less than that of New Mexico, were valued in the census year at $15,000,000 by the Census Bureau which today issued a bulletin on Utah's crop statistics. One half of that was the value of hay and forage crops, while $6,000,000 worth was in cereals, and almost a million dollars in potatoes. Wheat led in the cereals with a production worth $3,765,017, while oats came next with a value of $1,671,068.

PROBATE PRACTICE IN NEW MEXICO.

The New Mexican is pleased to note that La Opinion Publica at Albuquerque sees and condemns the iniquity of the present method of administering estates in New Mexico and the looseness with which the probate law is administered. The New Mexican probate code is conflicting, ridiculous and inadequate, but what there is enforceable of it is too often disregarded. The duty of sitting in judgment in probate matters requires as much legal education and knowledge in some respects as does the act of presiding over the district court. Opinion Publica is therefore quite right when it says:

"The probate judge's office is one of the greatest responsibility and importance in all counties. The people who have a right to vote at the polls and who take part in the conventions of the different political parties, ought to take care in selecting for such delicate positions, only honest persons, by this we do not mean that a judge is honest because he is good and modest.

"In the second place, persons holding such positions ought to be competent and able to discharge their duties as judges; third, the judges must be persons that will not allow any other person to guide them, especially if they are more ignorant than themselves; fourth, care must be taken that the judges are not inclined to vice or drunkenness.

"We make these small observations because the probate judges are considered as parents to the orphans and protectors of the widows, as it is their duty to see that nobody steals the property willed to them by their predecessors. It is desired that in the next election the voters pay more attention to the important office, as it is a pity that the widows and orphans come into the hands of incompetent, drunk and easy to guide judges; and we suggest that the district attorneys do their best to remove these bad ones who are at present in office in different parts of the territory. It is the district attorney's obligation and duty to enforce the law, especially as to the county officers concerned."

PROSPERITY AT OBAR.

Happiness is a state of mind. This is exemplified by the optimism of Editor Kleinfelter of the Obar Progress in a corner of Quay county which up to a few years ago knew no farmers and no intruders outside of herds of cattle and a few cowboys. There is a lyric in the following, a paean of homely prosperity or rather of hope of prosperity, and a confidence that it's all coming out all right tomorrow no matter how the drought may pinch today and how bitter the disappointments of yesterday:

"There is an epidemic of prosperity and incidental sartorial splendor sweeping over the New Mexico newspaper field.

"Two weeks ago the editor of this paper confessed having an extra shirt and last week Editor Hawkins of the Montoya Republican admitted owning socks.

"Stories of the destitution said to prevail in New Mexico are circulated in the east and a great many well-meaning people believe them.

"If these people had been in Obar on the Fourth and seen the big table, loaded to the guards, with things to eat that people had brought from their homes in baskets, they would wonder who started the hard times story.

"Here is some of the 'dstitution' they would have seen:

"Pyramids of pie, stacked after stack of layer cake; a foot high, square yards of bread, with tubs of butter, gallons of pickles and enough fried spring chicken to run a Methodist Conference. There was free lemonade, a first-class article, using no 'dope' of any kind, just lemon and sugar and ice water."

Who wouldn't have enjoyed spending the Fourth at Obar, not only to partake of the layer cake and the free lemonade, but to mingle with so plucky and hospitable a people.

Senator Sutherland in his address in the Senate yesterday afternoon pointed out the weak point in the practical application of the initiative, referendum and recall proposition, beautiful and satisfactory though they are in theory. When he said: "The people, as a whole, have neither the inclination, the specialized training nor the time requisite to enable them to master the thousand and one details necessary to qualify them to discharge wisely the functions of ordinary legislation." He considered laws are the greatest bane to which a community must submit and how many ill-considered laws there are when deliberative assemblies are supplanted by initiative and referendum, it is very easy to predict.

What a wonderful panorama of life, what thrilling drama, what a picturesque epic, that passes before the eyes of the readers of the New Mexican and every other daily newspaper each day. There is nothing to compare with it in the Illad, the Odyssey, or the modern drama, or the greatest novel ever written. Of course, some people read their newspapers without recognizing the mighty forces at play throughout the world, without even getting a glimpse of the passions that throbb in almost every line, but those who read thoughtfully and carefully, those who have a vision beyond bread and butter, enjoy a keen interest in the portrayal of the day's happenings in all parts of the world and in every sphere of life.

When the Democrats of Arizona were advised by those who had the welfare of Arizona at heart that President Taft would never consent to a "recall of judges" provision in their constitution, they sneered and declared that the President would not dare to stand against such a provision. But they have learned their lesson by this time.

When you see it in the New Mexican it is so.

STUPID

BY NELLIE CRAVEY GILLMORE

Leonora laid down her mandolin and took up a book. Ten minutes later she tossed aside the book and went over to the piano. She played whimsically for a quarter of an hour and banged down the lid impatiently. Then she crossed the room to a window and, parting the green velvet curtains, peered frowningly out at the snow-blanching air. At last she turned and walked over to the fireplace, her eyes seeking for the fifteenth time the good-natured face of the old clock on the mantel. Only three! Another hour, at least, to wait.

The imperative thinking of the door bell caused her heart to bound foolishly. Perhaps! But before the conjecture was finished, a maid entered with a note, and handed it to the girl. It was without address or envelope and Leonora opened it a little curiously. The writing inside was familiar enough, and brought the blood spurting into her soft cheeks. The lines were scribbled in haste, apparently, with a pencil, and ran:

"Impossible for me to keep engagement this afternoon. Something more important on hand. Will have to see you later, when more at leisure."

"TOM."

The paper slipped to the floor from Leonora's nerveless fingers. The angry crimson slowly dyed her temples. "Something more important!"—"see you when more at leisure!" With a sudden gesture of contempt, she picked up the note and tore it in two; then she threw it into the fire, and with an indescribable look on her face, stood watching it blaze and char and vanish completely.

What a wretched simper she had been, to be sure, to have wasted her time and her love on a creature like this. The bitter tears rushed to her eyes and made scalding tracks down her quivering cheeks. What should she do? What could she do? After Tom Bateman's deliberate insult, what was there to do but put him out of her life forever?

When she had gathered up the shattered ends of her self-control, Leonora went slowly upstairs to her room and sat down before her desk. She pulled open a drawer and took out two letters lying there. One was from young Bateman—the last one he had written—and in which he had begged permission to come to her on this very afternoon, hinting openly of the words he intended to speak; that he had spoken, in fact, in a hundred little ways since he had known her. The other letter was from her cousin, Billy Townsend. Billy had been very dear to her ever since the days of pinafores and pigtail; he had never left a month go by without making some allusion to the time when they should be married. And in reality, she would doubtless have consented to share her future with Billy, had it not been for Tom Bateman's sudden appearance on the horizon of her life—growing closer and closer into the very fiber of it till everything in the whole world had seemed transformed.

With a little sobbing catch of her breath, Leonora unfolded her cousin's letter and read:

"Dearest Leo:

"It's no use, I suppose, but I'm not going to quit without one more stagger. If you are sure it's quite hopeless, tell me so, and I'll never bother you any more. But you know, girlie, that my heart is always in the same place—right in the hollow of your own little hand—and if, at any time, you need me, or want me, just say so, and I'll spend my life making you happy. As ever and always,

"BILLY."

Again the tears ran down the girl's cheeks, but this time they were a different sort of tears. Dear, generous Billy! He had seen the perilous path she was treading, had divined the chasm at the end of it, and in his tactful, big-hearted way, was offering her the protection of his home and love in her mortification and disappointment. Under the swift influence of her gratitude, she seized a pen from the rack and wrote rapidly:

"Dear Billy:

"I want you—and need you. Meet me at Decey's at half-past five. I am too restless to stay here. "LEO."

She summoned the maid and dispatched her immediately to Townsend's office with the note. Then she dressed herself quickly and went out into the street, to walk herself, if possible, into some semblance of calm. At exactly half-past five, she turned the corner and walked half a block down, to Decey's. The first thing that met her eyes was her cousin's big green car. He was sitting in front, with his cap drawn over his eyes, and his fur-coat buttoned close up to his throat. The girl approached him rapidly, her head bent slightly, against the keen lash of the snow.

"Oh, Billy!" was all she could say, when she got up to him.

He made room for her, and she sprang in beside him. The next instant they were whirling off down the glittering avenue.

"Why did you send for me, this way?" was the first question he asked her.

"Because," she answered simply, "because I wanted you."

"I'm afraid there's been a mistake somewhere." His voice was grave, but the whir of the machine, and the wind in their faces, drowned all accent completely.

Leonora shot a swift query at him. "A—mistake?" she questioned sharply.

"Yes, Tom Bateman's wild about you. And—forgive me, Leo, but I believe I was right in supposing that you—that you cared for him."

The girl said nothing, but a little half-smile caught in her throat.

"Was it?" They were going perceptibly slower now, and it was difficult to catch the tremor in Leonora's tone.

"You—you have no right to ask me such a question, Billy."

The answer was sufficient, and for several minutes they rode in silence.

ience. Presently, the man turned and said:

"At least, dear, I know there has been some sort of trouble. You sent for—for me, to tell me. Now what was it, Leo?"

She hesitated a moment, then told him everything, of Bateman's attentions to her, his letter asking permission to come—and the insulting note that followed. When she had finished the man at her side drew a deep breath; but all he said was "Ah!"

Ten minutes later, he ran the machine up to Leonora's door and jumped out, assisting her to the pavement.

The leaden sky had just released a hurricane of snowy feathers and the keen wind was whipping crimson roses into the girl's cheeks. She waited while her companion removed the goggles from his eyes, her heart beating turgidly as she speculated on the possible outcome of her letter.

"Come in for a little while and get warm, Billy," she said, "then we can talk."

He turned. It was Tom Bateman! The color fled from Leonora's face. "I beg your pardon," she began, stiffly.

"I beg yours," he interposed, coming toward her, "Miss Winston; what must you thought of me?"

She made no answer, but stood regarding him coldly, a bewildered light in her eyes.

"Where is Billy?" she demanded. "Down at his office, where he's been all afternoon. As luck would have it, I was there with your cousin when your note came to him. I had just confided my intentions to him and was on the eve of going to you. Neither of us could understand your attitude. Billy could not leave his work; he is a very good friend of mine, besides—so he made me go in his place. When I saw that you did not recognize me, I purposely kept up the deception because I wanted to know the truth."

"But—that note—" she protested, indignantly, the hot blood circling her cheeks.

To Leonora's amazement, Tom Bateman laughed outright. Her head went up with a swift touch of pride.

"All that stupid Tim's doing," he explained as they ascended the steps. "After having been here nine-hundred-and-ninety-nine times with notes for you, it looks as if young Timothy O'Brien would have had better sense than to bring a note intended for Dick Chestnut here to you, doesn't it?"

Leonora dimpled in spite of herself. "It looks as if you might have been a little careful in addressing your communications."

Bateman reddened. "As if a man in my fix had any sense at all, sweetheart!"

"Anyway," said Leonora as they entered the door, "I am glad even Timothy thinks I'm the only one you can write notes to."

She was very close to him now; the corridor was deserted. He closed the door softly and took her in his arms.

Hitchcock's Hungry Raiders.

The evening following the famous raid of the postoffice department on the big brokerage firm of Burr Bros., in New York, Postmaster General Hitchcock received the newspaper men in his hotel room to give them any information they desired about the raid. He paid a high tribute to the ten picked inspectors who had pulled off the job, and then stood leaning against a door for a long time, answering the questions fired at him.

When the reporters had left, he said:

"I haven't had a bite to eat for more than 12 hours."

He stepped into the next room, where the inspectors were waiting.

"You fellows hungry?" he asked.

"A little," replied one of them.

"A lot!" answered another. "None of us has had a mouthful for the past 24 hours."

Whereupon Hitchcock and his ten terrible raiders went to a restaurant, and ate nearly everything the place had in readiness.—Popular Magazine.

Empty Pockets.

"I have a friend who has followed the races for years," said Colonel William Swearer, the Harlem wit, "and he was not happy when the racing bills went into effect, especially as he was a big loser. I asked him how he felt about it and he replied:

"I feel like the very young chick looked to the small boy. The kid had never seen chicks before and didn't know the patches at the sides were wings. So when one of the baby fowl tried to spread its wings he cried:

"See! See! He's opening his pockets and there ain't anything in them."

By Their Smoke.

Uncle Hiram stroked his whiskers and watched the big touring car as it whizzed past him and up the road, emitting a trail of bluish smoke from its oil-choked engine.

"Huh!" he sniffed. "Them may be swell city fellers, but they certainly was a-smokin' some dern awful see-gars."—Tic-Bits.

HE SHOULDN'T HAVE DONE IT.

Currie—You seem to think a lot of Clarence.

Cholly—Yes, he once saved me skin, the dear fellow.

Currie—Indeed! How?

Cholly—Gave me a cigarette when I was ten miles from town.

RECRUIT HAD ROOM TO SPARE

Private's Boots Were So Large That His Feet Turned In Them Without Being Seen.

As a sergeant was bawling out his orders the other day in barracks, and watching the line of feet as the raw recruits endeavored to obey the word of command, he found, to his astonishment, that one pair of feet, more noticeable on account of their extra large size, never turned. Without taking his eyes off them, the sergeant shouted a second order: "About face!"

He could see that all the faces except those he watched turned in obedience. Rushing up to the owner, a little fellow, he seized him by the shoulder, shouting:

"Why don't you turn with the rest?"

"I did," replied the trembling recruit.

"You did, eh? Well, I watched your feet, and they never moved."

"It's the boots they gave me, sir," said the poor fellow. "They're so large that when I turn, my feet turn in them."

Truth Will Out.

"Tell me, darling, that you are not marrying me for my money?"

He—Why, my pet, what could put such a thought in your head?

She—Well, in your last letter instead of "I love you a hundred thousand times better than anything else" you wrote "I love you a hundred thousand dollars better than anything else!"

Fliegende Blaetter.

HE WAS HAPPY.

Magistrate—You had no right to hit the Spiritualist medium.

Prisoner—He was drunk.

Magistrate—What's that got to do with it?

Prisoner—My father always told me to strike a happy medium.

Quite So.

"You are always worrying," remarked the baseball magnate.

"It is the constant search for something new," explained the theatrical manager. "You know, I have to cater to the tired business man."

"I don't let the tired business man worry me any. He roots with the others when he gets to the ball park."

A Word of Commendation.

"So you can find nothing about my article to approve of," said the magazine writer.

"I wouldn't say that," replied the editor as he surveyed the manuscript critically. "It is quite evident the typewriting was done by an expert."

Natural Advantages.

"Women would be complete failures in politics. What do you suppose would happen if they went to congress, for instance?"

"Doesn't every man's domestic experience prove to him that a woman is a born speaker of the house?"

Greatness.

"Every man might be great at something, you know."

"Yes, I heard one of your neighbors say, the other day, that if you had gone in for that sort of thing early in life you might have become one of the world's greatest porch-painters."

The Source of a Compliment.

"A Spanish painter says America is a great country."

"How many pictures has he sold to rich Americans?"

"About $750,000 worth this trip."

"No wonder he thinks America a great country!"

A Boomerang.

"So Miss Gummage got no damages in her breach of promise suit?"

"No. Her lawyer proved the man to be such a lowdown, contemptible specimen of humanity that the jury decided he hadn't any value and congratulated her on losing him."

Rapid Communication.

"Think of the bright days when they had no telegraph or telephone."

"Yes," replied the traveling orator; "and yet it must have been a comfort to make a speech in one town without feeling that you would have to stand for every word of it in the next."

Know His Business.

Askitt—Who is that man who is explaining all about aerial navigation?

Notit—Oh, he's one of our most prominent experts.

Askitt—Ah, an expert aviator, eh?

Notit—No—er—an expert talker.

Would Get Lost.

"If I take this young man, I will start him with a small sum weekly, but he'll have to find himself."

"Oh, that would never do! He is too absent-minded."

"Do you think you'd stand any show in heaven?" asked the curate earnestly.

"Well, I don't know," replied the man about town. "I've been able to stand almost every old show that was ever produced on earth."

Side Lights on History.

Henry C. Work had just evolved the stirring melody "Marching Through Georgia."

"It's my Magnolia Opus," he said.

The world kindly overlooked that remark, but it willfully perpetuated the song.

The Best Way.

Buyers attach more importance to good newspaper advertising than to any other form. Other kinds doubtless are worth money and may earn a profit, but be sure that before adding the hundred and one other kinds which you can use, that you first give proper attention to the field which—for retail selling—works with least resistance and is uniformly the most profitable—your home newspaper.

LINCOLN PIONEER ADVERTISER

Acquaintance With Editors Make Him World Famous, Declares R. J. Finnegan.

Abraham Lincoln outshone Theodore Roosevelt as a booster of his political interests by judicious newspaper publicity, declared Richard J. Finnegan, former candidate for congress, in an address at the weekly luncheon of the Irish Fellowship club of Chicago in that city the other day. According to Mr. Finnegan, to Lincoln belongs the honor of being the first to make use of newspaper publicity for obtaining high rewards.

"Mr. Lincoln, by an intimate acquaintance with Illinois editors and by the employment of what might be called spectacular methods to air his views through the press, rose in a few years from an obscure country legislator and circuit lawyer to a national and international character," said Mr. Finnegan.

"Two of Lincoln's earliest journalistic friends were Joseph Medill and Charles L. Wilson. Medill and Wilson were among the group of friends whom he consulted before he became a candidate for United States senator in 1858. With him they had been among the first to subscribe to the doctrines of the Republican party.

"Greeley and other Republicans of the east, and some of the western Republicans, were willing to help Stephen A. Douglas, the Democrat, in that contest because he was opposing some of the elements of his own party more obnoxious than he was to the Republicans, and because they sought his senatorial influence.

"It has been said that Theodore Roosevelt is the most notable example of the public man who boosted himself by judicious use of newspaper publicity. That honor really belongs to Abraham Lincoln.

"In passing, we may observe that the American editor of the past took a more active actual part in political deliberations and happenings than does the editor of today. In these days an editor and his views counted more than they do today with party leaders."

OBJECTION TO OUTDOOR ADS

No Opportunity for Convincing Argument on Billboards—Public Feeling Also an Important Factor.

Many factors are contributing to make outdoor advertising less popular all over the country. There is first the intense public feeling against defiling the landscape, which leads many people to decline to buy goods thus advertised. Then there is the common sense view that the billboard gives no opportunity for thoughtful convincing argument, which in these days of fake advertising is needed to persuade the buyer. Still another reason is that outdoor advertising unless constantly renewed, presents such a discreditable appearance. Rain-storms fade paint and wet paper, and soon your advertising looks decadent and discreditable. A faded sign board or torn poster conveys a suggestion of a dispirited and beaten merchant, who cannot afford to make his appeals to the public in attractive fashion. Under such circumstances the run-down advertising acts as a deterrent to the possible buyer. No such false impression can be given by the cleanly printed advertisement in the columns of a newspaper possessing good mechanical facilities.

Sign of the Times.

The conviction that newspaper space constitutes the most valuable form of advertising is constantly growing. As a result it is supplanting other forms of publicity more and more. The following from the Salisbury (N. C.) Post is significant, just at this point: "The Circus Owners' association has wisely voted that its members will use newspaper space exclusively in the future and cut out the billboard entirely. In this enlightened age every business man ought to know that as an advertising medium nothing can compare with the columns of a newspaper."

Advertising is not medicine.

Advertising is not medicine, to be taken in time of distress. It is nourishment and should be taken regularly.

Only Way to Succeed.

"Only by advertising in the local newspapers and by intelligent application of the things learned here," said S. R. Miles in a chalk talk before the Iowa Retail Hardware association at Des Moines, "can the merchant in the town expect to gain success. It is not enough merely to understand the principles of good salesmanship and management, but the merchant must apply these principles to his own conditions, and he can do this only through exhaustive study."

A Woman's Right.

"Anyway," snapped Mrs. Nagers, "a woman has a right to her opinions."

"Of course she has," growled her husband, "and if she would only keep them to herself nobody would question that right."

Afraid to Stay Away.

"Our culture club generally has a full attendance."

"The ladies are brought through mutual admiration, I presume?"

"No; through mutual distrust."

YOUR ADVERTISEMENT in the NEW MEXICAN speaks to thousands every day. IT IS BOUND TO BRING YOU BUSINESS.

THE SUBSCRIBERS to the local paper are the prosperous people of your town. THEY ARE THE PEOPLE WHO BUY.

YOUR ADVERTISEMENT in the local paper helps to build the town. The outside judges Santa Fe by the advertisements in its local papers.

It is a BUSINESS MAXIM universally accepted that advertising pays. That is, if it is done right.

PEOPLE READ ADVERTISEMENTS. Let the "New Mexican" place in its most obscure column that you are selling sugar at one cent a pound and your store tomorrow will not hold its customers. Advertise calico at one cent a yard and you will have to telegraph to your wholesale house for car-load lots.

YOU CAN STIMULATE BUSINESS BY ADVERTISING. Today no business will increase permanently unless by some method of advertising. The fool in his heart will say that there is no virtue in advertising but the wise man knows that the fool is deceiving himself.

AN ADVERTISEMENT in the "New Mexican" DRAWS LIKE A POROUS PLASTER. It cannot fail if it advertises the right goods at the right price.

THE NON-PROGRESSIVE MERCHANT is noted by the fact that his advertisement does not appear in the local papers. The sheriff has an eye on his business and his credit must be poor.

LAST YEAR, the "New Mexican" took in $12,000 in subscriptions. The readers who had that much for the local paper have as much for your store but you must let them know that you are doing business, where, and how you are doing it.

THE ADVERTISING RATES in the "New Mexican" are but a fraction of the rates in other cities. It is untrue that you cannot afford to advertise; the fact is when you feel that you cannot afford to advertise, you cannot afford NOT to advertise.

Donnell spent yesterday in the La Joya valley, 40 miles north of Santa Fe, and brought back with him specimens of wheat that are being grown in that garden spot of the upper Rio Grande valley. The half inch of moisture came down in less than twenty minutes shortly after 5 p. m. in a thunderstorm that came up rapidly from the northwest. The arroyos northwest and northeast of the city were brimful again and for a time even the city streets were rivers. The night was partly cloudy with brilliant moonlight through the rifts in the clouds. The maximum temperature yesterday was 75 degrees, the minimum 57 degrees.

Letter Morgue—The young man and young lady who write postal cards to their "dear" friends and cousins seem to forget that Postmaster Burke has not chairvoyant powers but has to read addresses like any other postmaster before delivering the mail. Today a neat card was mailed to a young lady whose first name is evidently Frances and the writer tells her to be a good little girl. But the postmaster wrote the card "Who?" for their is no name or address besides the word "Frances" in the correspondence. The card has been sent to the letter morgue.

Where the Ball Players Go—The Santa Fe base ball team will leave here Friday morning for Dawson and the Santa Fe will hold the train 40 minutes at French to let them make connections. The team will play Dawson Saturday and Sunday and Las Vegas on Monday. The team will be reinforced by Cornish and Lemke and ought to give a good account of itself in both Dawson and in the Meadow City.

For Those Who Ride Horses—The heavy rains in the past ten days have made the unpaved streets muddy and the paved ones slippery. There have been three or four accidents to equestrians and equestriennes this week from horses slipping and those who round corners quickly or ride at great speed may await even more serious mishaps.

WEDDING TAKES PLACE AT HIGH NOON.

Miss Mary Nevada Miller of This City, and Dr. Charles Freeman of Pennsylvania, United in Marriage.

A wedding of more than passing interest to Santa Fe and to New Wilmington, Pa., was solemnized today at high noon, when Miss Mary Nevada Miller, of Santa Fe, became the bride of Dr. Charles Freeman of New Wilmington, Pa. The ceremony occurred at the home of Dr. and Mrs. James Albert Miller, on Grant ave., the north parlor being beautifully decorated for the occasion. In the midst of floral beauty, to the strains of Mendelssohn's impressive wedding march, played by Mrs. Arthur Robinson, and surrounded by the family and a few intimate friends, the Rev. B. Z. McCullough of the First Presbyterian church, spoke the words that united these excellent young people in the holy bonds of matrimony.

Miss Miller, the bride, is the only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Albert Miller, a petite brunette of many womanly graces, who has won her way into many of the hearts of Santa Fe since coming here from Pennsylvania two years since. Dr. Freeman, the groom, is one of the noted educators of Pennsylvania, dean of the faculty of Westminster College at New Wilmington, and professor of chemistry in that well known institution. It is rumored that Dr. Freeman slipped away from his eastern friends without disclosing the full import of his vacation trip, and there will no doubt be many hearty congratulations in store for him and his bride when they return to the college city.

The happy couple departed on a late train today for the upper Pecos valley resorts, and will spend their honeymoon in the midst of the beauty and grandeur of the mountains of New Mexico, returning to Pennsylvania in time for the opening of the college in September, and will be at home in New Wilmington, Pa., after October 1.

FINANCIAL TALENT GOING TO WASTE IN NEW MEXICO.

In the district court before Judge John R. McFie, the testimony in the case of Smith and Rickert, a commission house of Kansas City, vs. Blas Duran, Hill Brothers and The El Paso Bank and Trust Company, if true, is revealing glimpses of high finance that would stun even Wall street. In the suit are involved 4,700 head of sheep valued at $21,000 and $10,000 worth of wool. According to the allegations, Hill Brothers obtained an option on the sheep by paying Blas Duran of Duran, Torrance county, $500 down. Hill Brothers, so it is averred, then went to Kansas City, mortgaged the sheep to Smith & Rickert. Then, so it is alleged they returned to Duran and through some process mortgaged the sheep to Duran. They are then accused of shearing the sheep and borrowing money on the wool from the El Paso Bank and Trust company. The present suit is to untangle these transactions at to get at the truth or falsity of these allegations.

To Oust Sheriff. Attorney General John Dawson has commenced proceedings against Sheriff Ralph Martin of Cherokee county, Kansas, because Martin protected the liquor dealers.
