DREYFUS IS EXONERATED FULLY NOW

Supreme Court Annulled Condemnation Without New Trial.

BROTHER BORE HIM NEWS EIGHT AND WOUNDS MANY Restored to All Rights, Dignities and Emoluments in the Army.

Paris, July 12.—The supreme court has announced its decision annulling the condemnation of Dreyfus without a retrial. The effect of the decision is a complete vindication of Dreyfus, restoring him to his rank in the army as though he had never been accused.

Palace of Justice Thronged.
The Palace of Justice was thronged by an eager crowd. The scene as the decision was pronounced was one of impressive dignity. The court, consisting of forty-nine judges, gathered in flowing robes, solemnly pronounced the verdict. Deep silence prevailed as the presiding judge read a lengthy decision, minutely reviewing the entire case, and completely exonerating Dreyfus of all wrong doing. The author of the famous incriminating documents on which the entire charge was founded, and ordering the annulment of the judgment of the Rennes court-martial with the publication of the final announcement of his innocence in fifty newspapers to be chosen by Captain Dreyfus. As the final determination was announced there were some exclamations of approval which the court officers suppressed. Outside the court the crowd received the decision without making any demonstration. Captain Dreyfus was present in court, his wife and daughter were with him. His brother Mathieu was dispatched by his brother to bear the good news to him in a garret where he has remained secluded.

Gives Sensible Interview.
In an interview today after the announcement of the decision in his favor, Dreyfus said:

"This has been a long and terrible ordeal. The decision restores me to my old place in the army. I have nothing to say against my accusers. Being again an officer, I am obliged to enter my regulations in silence, and I am inexpressibly thankful to those who have assisted in the maintenance of the truth."

SPIKED SWITCH CAUSES FATAL RAILWAY WRECK

Indiana Town Burned From Map--Omnibus Accident Kills

Badly Burned by Dress Catching Fire From an Alcohol Lamp.

Petersburg, Ind., July 12.—A west-bound freight on the Southern railway was wrecked today at Jackson, Mich. siding. The train and a brakeman were killed and the engineer was fatally injured. The switch had been spiked. The eastbound passenger train was delayed and three escaped being wrecked. No clear has been found to the wreckers. The railroad company owns coal mines which recently paid the advanced scale demanded by the miners, causing some resentment in certain quarters.

Boonville, Ind., July 12.—Fire supposed to be of incendiary origin destroyed the town of Boonville early today, causing a loss of $15,000. Twenty-one buildings were burned and the town, which had a population of 1,000, was practically wiped out of existence.

London, July 12.—The brakes failing to act, a motor omnibus running from London to Brighton dashed down a steep hill near Crawley this morning and was overturned. Six passengers were killed and a score were badly injured.

Later details show that eight persons are dead. The omnibus collided with a tree. The occupants of the vehicle were pitched in all directions. Several of them were horribly mangled. There were 24 passengers, mainly merchants of Orington, ten miles from London.

New York, July 12.—Word was received here from London yesterday of a painful accident to Miss Margaret Baxter, daughter of the former governor, G. W. Baxter, of Wyoming, now a resident of this city. While dressing for dinner Miss Baxter was severely burned by her dress catching fire from a lighted alcohol lamp. Her injuries for the time greatly alarmed her friends, but she is now recovering and expects in a few weeks to go to Scotland and join several house parties before returning to New York in the autumn with her mother.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS FELT AT SOCORRO AND SAN MARCIAL

And the People Are Alarmed--Adobe Buildings Tumble Down and Goods Roll Off Shelves. San Antonio Has Several Shocks.

Special to The Evening Citizen.
Socorro, N. M., July 12.—At 5:10 this morning this city experienced quite a severe earthquake shock, followed by a second shock at 5:40. Considerable damage was done to various buildings throughout the city. A number of chimneys were shaken from buildings and the walls of half a dozen older adobe buildings crumbled to the ground. The people are very much frightened, as these two shocks are a repetition of those which shook this city about a week or ten days ago. It is evident, from the talk on the streets, that a number of Socorro people will erect tents and sleep outdoors for the next few nights. No one was injured.

The shocks were also felt at Kelly, Magdalena, San Antonio, Carlsbad and San Marcial, but what damage was done in these places is not known here.

BUILDINGS SWAYED AT SAN MARCIAL.
Special to The Evening Citizen.
San Marcial, N. M., July 12.—One of the severest earthquake shocks that has ever visited San Marcial occurred here at 5:12 this morning. Buildings swayed and seemed like they would rock off their foundations. No damage was done, except plaster fell off in places. A second shock was felt at 5:13, but not so severe. These shocks have been very frequent and it is feared will end in a disaster.

DUNN. At 6 o'clock occurred another more severe than the second, another at 7:30 which was very slight, and another at 8:20, very slight, merely a tremor. The shocks were similar at Elmore, seven miles south of here.

MAGDALENA BRANCH ROAD DAMAGED BY SHOCKS.
Special to The Evening Citizen.
Socorro, N. M., July 12, 2:30 p. m.—Several more shocks started the people and the town is thoroughly excited. The chimney of the Santa Fe depot here was knocked off, and the walls of the waiting room cracked.

The Magdalena branch, well not out of commission entirely by the shocks, will have to be repaired, and Div. Superintendent Bates, who is in Albuquerque, is expected here tonight. The Magdalena train, en route this morning to Magdalena, found one rock, weighing about ten tons, on the track in cuts between Cienega and White Canyon; also one rail broken and about twenty-five ties snapped in twain. Rocks are loose in all the cuts on the Magdalena branch.

(Note.—Division Superintendent Bates, who came in from the south this morning, when approached for news relative to the Magdalena branch, stated that the conductor of the train had reported to him that he found rocks on the track, a rail broken and about twenty-five ties broken, the result of the earthquakes. He will go south to Socorro, and thence to Magdalena this evening.)

DISTINCT SHOCKS FELT AT SILVER CITY.
Special to The Evening Citizen.
Silver City, N. M., July 12.—Earthquake shocks were distinctly felt here between 5:10 and 5:20, and everywhere was awakened. A few of the buildings rocked perceptibly, but no special damage has been reported. No one was injured.

NEVER AGAIN

BRYAN MAKES FULL STATEMENT ON TRUSTS AND WEALTH TREATMENT

Wants Extermination of Trusts, But Ample Protection to Wealth Which Has Been Properly Earned and Under No Other Circumstances.

London, July 12.—William Jennings Bryan is returning home after his tour of the world, with as good a knowledge of the ins and outs of American political occurrences as if he had spent the past ten months in Nebraska.

The many Americans in Europe with whom Bryan has talked have been surprised at his familiarity with transatlantic events. He has shown that he has more detailed information at his finger tips than have Americans fresh from the United States. Bryan is very careful what he says to the newspaper men who come in contact with him. He writes or all interviews and ponders over everything he utters to the newspaper fraternity. On one occasion, after an interview with him had been called to America from Europe, Bryan wanted to revise it, and the correspondent was obliged to "kill" by cable his first interview and then send another.

The Americans who have seen him in Europe agree that he has apparently mapped out his future course of action with great care, and intends to take every precaution that only his carefully thought-out opinions are given to the public. That he is ambitious to resume the leadership of his party is obvious to those who have talked with him.

Bryan is anxious that the democratic party go into the next campaign not making hollow promises of reform, but having on its ticket such nominees as to be a pledge that definite good results will follow success at the polls.

There doesn't seem to be any doubt that he has partly mapped out in his mind a platform that he would like to see adopted at the next democratic national convention. What appears to be the most important matter for him are the extermination of the trusts, and at the same time the conversion of the American people to the belief that the purpose of Bryanism is not an indiscriminate attack on all wealth.

Bryan's reply to the republican declaration that Roosevelt is doing all any one can to control the trusts will be that it is useless for anybody to try to control the trusts. They cannot be controlled, and the only way to deal with them is to exterminate them outright.

If Bryan is the presidential nominee, the trust question probably will be fought out over republican control versus democratic extermination. Bryan has carefully thought out a plan for making impossible interstate control by a single corporation of more than a certain proportion of the product in which it deals. He has discussed the question with several Americans in Europe, but always confidentially. He believes that by his method trusts can be killed automatically, and unless they are thus attacked they will continue to be a menace to America.

While thus advocating the necessity for extreme measures in dealing with the trusts, Bryan is very careful to point out that he does not attack what he calls "legitimately earned wealth." He seems always desirous of emphasizing the point that he does not attack money, and improperly earned money.

Mrs. Hartje was called and she denied that she had written a letter to Susie Wagner, her former domestic, which, when on the stand previously, she admitted having written. She admitted she had written a letter in which there were many expressions which occurred in the letter submitted to her, but declared she never wrote the sentence saying she wanted Susie by her side.

At the conclusion of her examination David Carvalho, a New York handwriting expert, was called. He said he had examined the letters and found some written by one hand and some by others. The Sommer Children says: Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Mitchell of Albuquerque, were in the city Wednesday and Thursday, visiting their son, A. L. Mitchell and family. Mr. Mitchell was a citizen of Socorro twenty years ago and helped to put in the city's present water system.

Mrs. Joseph B. Reynolds of Las Vegas, and sons, Herbert P. Reynolds of Albuquerque, and John M. Reynolds of El Paso, have gone to Boston, Mass., where they will visit Mrs. Dudley S. Dean, daughter of Mrs. Reynolds, and sister of the Messrs. Reynolds.

Rev. N. W. Alger and wife, 124 South Waller street, leave tomorrow for the Grand Canyon, where they will spend a few days sight seeing, and then continue on to the Pacific coast, where they will remain for the rest of the hot weather. Mr. Alger will accompany his parents to California, but will return at once.

Charles E. Dagenette, outfit agent for the Indians of the southwest, in Arizona and New Mexico, was in the city, en route to his home, where he will visit his wife and children, and then return to his home in Colorado. Mr. Dagenette has several hundred laborers at work for the Santa Fe in Arizona, and 400 men and boys at work in the best fields of Colorado.

The new blacksmith firm of Goff & Goss, recently organized by J. T. Goff and about 200,000 pounds of wool sign out at their place of business, at 207 Copper avenue. The new sign is the immense awl used in the Labor Day parade two years ago by the blacksmiths, placed high above the street on top of a post.

Work on the extension of the traction company's lines still goes forward, and it is expected that as soon as the new equipment of two cars, ordered from Bakerfield, Cal., arrives the line will be in readiness for operation, as far as New York avenue, at least, is concerned. The line will be made as soon as the necessary copper wire for trolley purposes arrives.

Edwards Chavez, a general merchant doing business on South Second street, has recently returned from the Espanola county, where he purchased about 20,000 pounds of wool from several farmers of that section of Torrance county. The wool was brought to this city and turned over to the Albuquerque Wool Scouring mills to be scoured and made ready for the highest bidder.

The Durango Herald says: N. Peach, (not the seedless peach), who registered at the Savoy last night as being from Farmington, does not live there, but his home is in Albuquerque. After seeing that pretty little town on the San Juan he could not resist the temptation to call it home. Mr. Peach is in the real estate business in Albuquerque, and came up to see if there wasn't a show to make a little money in that line in San Juan county.

Colonel and Mrs. Edward Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Allison and the other family have returned to the city from their camp in the mountains, having had a most enjoyable outing. They have no fish stories to relate because there are no trout streams where they were in camp, but Colonel Johnson has promised to tell a breakfast story at the city club next morning. The story is of a capture meeting of the G. A. R., at which the ladies are invited to attend.

At the old church of San Felipe de Neri at 7:30 o'clock this morning, Father Duran performed the marriage ceremony of Federico Crockett and Miss Rosie Garcia. The bride is the daughter of Juan Antonio Garcia, of West Tijera avenue. After the ceremony the bride party took breakfast at the home of the bride's parents, and the wedding reception will close with a ball given at Colombo hall.

No action had been taken in the city at a late hour this afternoon, with the sewer committee of the council held a meeting for the purpose of deciding upon a course to be pursued by the city.

Attorney Felix Lester today filed suit in the name of F. F. Trotter against Mrs. E. Teusach, the Householder, for recovery of $100. George C. Smith, formerly of 800 East Silver avenue, to recover $60. Mrs. Smith occupied a house owned by Mr. Trotter and got in his debt to the amount of $60 for rent. One morning Mrs. Smith was found missing and immediately on her departure a wagon loaded with the furniture of the Householder Loan company had a mortgage on it. Mr. Trotter hopes to recover the rent Mrs. Smith owed him by placing a landlord's lien on the furniture.

On Saturday afternoon the State National bank, through its attorney, brought suit to recover on a note held by the bank and endorsed by Colonel D. K. B. Sellers and Colonel W. H. Greer. The note originally called for $1,000, half of which has been paid. The plaintiff in the petition asks for $600, which includes the $300 yet due on the note and $300 to cover the cost of collection.

HARRY R. MITCHNER SUES FOR PAYMENT FOR A GASOLINE LIGHTING PLANT—GUGAROFF CLAIMS LIGHT DREW BUGS.

In Justice Craig's court Saturday the case of Harry R. Mitchner, plaintiff, vs. Gusaroff, defendant, was heard, versus Max Gussaroff, a pool room proprietor, to collect on a promissory note for $25, was heard. Justice Craig reserving his decision until this afternoon.

Mitchner installed a lighting plant in Gussaroff's place of business, the latter giving him a promissory note for $25 in part payment, which he later refused payment upon, claiming that the lights gave too much heat and attracted bugs. Justice Craig struck out most of this part of the evidence, and the case was in the contract relative to the light heat, giving and bug-attracting powers. A decision will probably be rendered this afternoon.

CITY MUST NOT INVADE HIS PREMISES

The city ditch is about to cause more trouble. Mr. P. Stamm, who owns a piece of property on South Second street, that is badly damaged by the city ditch, heard this morning that Street Commissioner Tierney was going to set a force of men at work cleaning out the ditch. Mr. Stamm immediately got busy looking up the old ordinance of the council, which he says abates the ditch as a nuisance. He also requested his attorney, A. H. McMillen, to enjoin the city employees from coming on his property, taking the ordinance mentioned as grounds upon which to take his petition. No action had been taken in the matter at a late hour this afternoon, with the sewer committee of the council held a meeting for the purpose of deciding upon a course to be pursued by the city.

JUDGE RODEY WRITES CITIZEN

Describes San Juan and the Surrounding Country.

ADVICE ON JOINT STATEHOOD

San Juan, P. R., June 27, 1904. The Evening Citizen, Albuquerque, New Mexico.

The best is about to leave with this mail and I have to run things, so I will only write you a comparatively short note.

I am fully satisfied as federal judge of Porto Rico here. The country is tropical and is a beautiful one. I haven't been much outside of this city yet, but will in a short time. San Juan, they say, has about 40,000 people in it. That looks like an over-estimate to me. The space it fills is so small, that all the streets are narrow as good wide alleys and the buildings are two and three stories high, and the people are crowded into them as thick as they can be. There being no vacant lots, it may be true. Save for the sea breeze and the houses being of stone and brick and so many castles and fortifications being in sight, one would, when down in the streets, think he was in Santa Fe, for there is even more bell ringing and

As stated in The Evening Citizen in the issues of June 20 and 21, the insane man killed near the Fletcher ranch on June 11, was a laborer sent from Los Angeles to Bluewater, to work for Bright & Brown, railroad contractors. Three laborers from Bluewater, among them one Lewis Jones, positively identified the picture of the dead man, published in these columns June 14, as a companion of theirs at Bluewater, and stated that while they had forgotten his name, it could be obtained by examining the pay roll of Bright & Brown. This story was published in this paper on June 21.

Saturday, J. S. Bright, of the firm of Bright & Brown, was in Albuquerque and substantiated The Evening Citizen's story also by identifying a picture of the dead man as a man who worked for him, under the name of Joe Manning. Whether this was his real name or not, as yet no one knows, as no relatives of such a man have been forth coming to claim his remains. As far as the positive identification of the dead man goes, and as to whether he really is, or as much of a mystery man as when he was killed by Alex. Lewis near the Fletcher ranch, four miles south of this city, on the night of June 11.

CAN AMERICA CLAIM THE "GREAT, DIVINE SARAH?"

AMAZING STATEMENTS BY SUPPOSED RELATIVES MAY PROVE THAT SHE WAS BORN IN NEW YORK AND RAISED IN A LITTLE TOWN IN IOWA.

CAN IT BE TRUE?

That Sarah Bernhardt was born in Rochester, N. Y.
That her name was Sarah King?
That she was raised in Rochester, a small town in Iowa?
That Mrs. Lucy King of Minneapolis is her sister?
That the "Divine Sarah" made her stage debut at Muscatine with a strolling troupe of Uncle Tommies?
That she married a man named Bernhardt, who was manager of the show?

Special Correspondence:

Minneapolis, Minn., July 9.—The information here set forth purports to be the true history of the origin of Sarah Bernhardt, the greatest living actress. All the questions stated above are answered in the affirmative by Fred Pinefield, who keeps a small tavern in the hamlet of Rochester, Iowa.

This little town is ten miles from a railroad; the houses are few and scattered, many of the doors open with old-fashioned thumb latches and some of the inhabitants have never heard of the Civil War.

Pinefield says that his mother and Bernhardt's mother were sisters. Mrs. King of Minneapolis declines to say whether or not she is Bernhardt's sister.

Mr. King of Iowa says he knows. They say that Bernhardt, born in Rochester, N. Y., is the daughter of John and Mary King, people of French descent.

Their daughter, Mary, married John Pinefield, who removed to Rochester, Ia., and her parents, with Sarah and her sister, Lucy, followed them there. Lucy married a Charles King, who lives in Minneapolis.

Upon the death of her parents, Sarah was brought up with the Pinefields. These people say she was a precocious child, haughty and proud in her bearing and dramatic in her ways.

When about 15, Sarah, with her sister Lucy, went to Muscatine to work in a big machinery house. While there she figured in a number of amateur theatricals. One day while braiding straw, an agent for a traveling troupe, called the Bernhardt troupe, which was playing "Uncle Tom's Cabin," came in and wanted her to take the part of Mrs. Sinclair, their woman having been taken ill.

She went away with the troupe and her disreputable relatives disowned her. They heard that she afterwards married one of the showmen named Bernhardt.

John and Mary King are buried in the little cemetery in Rochester. The old family home is a heap of blackened ruins. The inhabitants of the little village tell of a strange visit about six years ago—when the great Bernhardt was in this country—of a woman who visited the village and took flowers from the grave of John and Mary King, and also got a brick from the ruins that marks the spot where the house that once sheltered the youthful Sarah stood before it burned.

It is the belief that Bernhardt knows that her relatives have recognized her and that she is now trying to find out, by secret agents, how much they know.

Fred Pinefield says that Sarah was a niece of Jerome Castle, premier and governor general of Canada, and that her mother was disinherited because she married "among the people."

In reply to a question, Mrs. Lucy King, 410 2627 Grand avenue, Minneapolis, said:

MAIN OF SARAH BERNHARDT

"Sarah Bernhardt knows a great many things that she won't tell, and neither will I until the time comes." When asked why she was so interested in her, she replied:

STATEMENT BY MRS. LUCY KING.

I was born in Ottawa, Canada, 71 years ago. I had a brother and two sisters. The name of the younger was Sarah. When we moved from New York to Rochester, Ia., we could talk nothing but French.

My mother, then a widow, died in 1851. When she had a good bye at her bedside she asked me to take care of Sarah.

When Sarah disappeared in Muscatine, detectives I hired could find no trace of her. Finally a friend of the family recognized her portrait in the lobby of a Chicago theater. He found that she had married a man named Bernhardt, and she told him that she was in the stage. About the second year of the war she sent me her photograph. Then she went to France, but she continued to write to my sister until her death.

My brother wrote that he had traced her to France, and was positive that Sarah Bernhardt was our sister. He wrote her, but she told the newspapers that some crazy man was trying to represent himself as her brother.

I was told that when she was in Minneapolis she drove by my house in the hope of seeing me at the window, but I was ill at the time.

FRENCH STYLE OF BOXING CONSIDERED TOO BRUTAL

Boxing in France is undergoing an evolution that will eventually result in the formation of a new self-defense. "La Savate" is gradually going out of existence. The visits of English and American pugilists have taught the superiority of boxing and Frenchmen are now devoting their efforts to mastering the use of their fists.

But they are stopping at that. All the good points of savate, the old game, are being preserved. It is legitimate to use the feet for the purpose of landing a blow. Clinching is not barred, and it is alright to get a man's head "in chancery" and punnel him until he yields. Wrestling a man to the ground is also permitted, though after one man goes down his opponent is forced to step back and give him time to rise.

The French idea is to develop self-defense. To that end they permit a man to use in protecting himself every agency possible. The Frenchman is not usually big or gifted with unusual muscular equipment. In a street fight he would be helpless unless trained with a knowledge of exactly what to do. Giving a knowledge of the tricks that French boxing permits, a man of ordinary strength would be a dangerous opponent for two men.

THE MAN IN FRONT OF THE BAR.

WILL HAVE TO PICK OUT NEW NAMES FOR HIS BOOZE NOW THAT THE NEW LAW IS IN EFFECT—ALSO THERE WILL BE QUEER DOINGS AT THE SODA WATER STAND.

Special to the Evening Citizen: Washington, D. C., July 9.—The new law against misbranding and adulterating foods is going to strike in some unexpected places. For example, it is predicted by a high official of the agricultural department that the law will stop the time honored practice of sending certain native American wines to France to be doctored and labeled, and returned to the United States as native French wines and champagnes.

Likewise it will stop the hush trade in cotton seed oil, which is sent from New Orleans to Europe and reimported at New York as olive oil. The whiskey trade will be affected by the new statute as much as almost any industry. When the law gets into working order it will be necessary for the man before the bar to say whether he wants "compound," "imitation" or "blend."

The department is now working on some regulations which will, in time, make clear to the drinking public what are the ingredients of liquors which are "blended" and what "compound."

When the new food law begins to work, the druggists and candy store people will have to overhaul their soda water stock and eliminate the popular drinks containing opium. There are several proprietary articles which contain opiates now going over the soda fountains in large quantities. The public in most cases does not suspect the presence of this drug. The new law will require that the signs tell the public the amount of opium contained in the drink sold over the counter.

AN INTERESTING GOSSIPY CHAT

With Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture, an ENTHUSIASTIC FARMER OF IOWA

Special Correspondence.

If you walk down Massachusetts avenue this afternoon you will find the air is heavy with the scent of the dying blossoms of the lilacs trees," said Secretary of Agriculture Wilson. "Did you notice that? And around Dupont Circle the Magnolia blossoms are just dropping. Did you notice that?"

After an unsuccessful attempt to find his disgust because I had not noticed, he continued:

"They are all my intimate friends. I can hardly say we speak as we pass by, but we always nod."

"Are you very fond of lilacs?" "I love all those fellows. I know them when they were little, young things, many years ago. When I was born in congress, and I drive through every afternoon when I have finished my work, pass the time of day with them, and receive their salutations. Trees are the best friends a man can have. It never matters to them in the least whether I am feeling stuff about something or whether some very good news has just reached my ear. They always bend their pretty heads, particularly if the wind happens along to remind them of their manners."

Beauty of Washington. "They make the capital very pretty."

"Washington is one of the most beautiful cities in the world," repeated the secretary. "It is already the heart of the nation's politics, and the scientific center, and it is rapidly getting to be the social center also."

"But the women here need to go to Iowa. They are the prettiest creatures in the world already, except the western girls, but they need a year in Iowa to improve their figures, and their complexions. They need to be able to jump on a horse and race around a big farm, getting some good air into their lungs, and some color into their cheeks."

"Why, most women think they are already very pretty," I protested. "They are pretty, but they might be prettier. An old man, you know, has to tell the truth."

"An old man should have learned to tell it more diplomatically."

"Not so," declared Mr. Wilson. "I am in charge of Uncle Sam's agriculture, not state department."

"Well, if you don't like Washington girls then you are very hard to please."

His Ideal Woman. "I'm not too hard to please in women folk. I want a girl who can ride a horse, no matter how hard she kicks; then when it comes dinner time she must gallop up to the house, hop off, (in the house so he won't get away, and go in to see that dinner is ready and things in order for the home-coming of the men. If she is a farmer's daughter she ought to be able to climb up on a reaper and run it like a man."

With which modest demand Secretary Wilson leaned back reflectively.

"And I suppose she must have all the drawing room accomplishments, too."

"Oh, yes, she must be able to play the piano, and paint, and she must have had a college education."

"You won't find her," I said, with conviction, but Secretary Wilson only smiled enigmatically.

"Where you ever in Iowa?" he demanded. "Yes, weren't? Then you don't know anything about it. We have women like that in Iowa."

Longing for His Farm. "But it isn't her women that call me back to Iowa, for you know I'm an old man now, but it is my farm out there, that I tended myself before I came to Washington. The old trees on my farm I planted when I was a very young man, and I feel like I'm attending a family reunion when I go out there to see them. I have my son write me when the spring comes which ones of the old fellows are showing their age, and if any enterprising ones are starting new branches, or if some old one, perhaps, has grown discouraged and died."

"Every man carries in his heart some longing to get on a farm, whether he was ever there before or not, and you can imagine how I, who lived there all during my boyhood, and made their first attachments of my life, should get homesick for the old place again, and resolve to go back there as soon as I can."

"So you won't stay in Washington after your work here is finished?"

Washington Won't Hold Him. "Not one minute longer than I can help," was his emphatic reply. "In less than twenty-four hours after I have said 'good-by' to the department of agriculture, I'll be on a train that is spinning toward Iowa. There are some things that a man never forgets, and never ceases to want, and that is what lies nearest to my heart. You'd never think to see me humming around the department over yonder that I was sighting all the time for an old farm out in Iowa, but that is true."

"I have taught my sons the science of farming, and the love of it was born in their bones. If I had my way there would be a department in every American college which would teach a boy the properties of the soil, and the wonderful things you can do with it."

"But would you highly educate a man and then put him on the farm to live?"

"If he had the proper education you couldn't keep him off the farm," replied Secretary Wilson with the whole-hearted enthusiasm he would have us believe to be the peculiar property of Iowa.

Then, in order to keep himself from getting homesick he began to make fun of Washington. "Everybody here is very lazy. The only people here who ever hurry are the fellows who rush in to take a new office, and even they only hurry for a few days."

"Why do you know, I believe if I stayed here fifteen or twenty years longer, I might get lazy myself!"

"GIRL IN THE PIE" A VICTIM OF STANFORD WHITE

BRIEF REIGN OF A BEAUTIFUL CHILD MODEL, WHO WAS THE QUEEN OF AN ORGIE IN GOTHAM.

Special Correspondence:

New York, July 9.—Among the picturesque and pathetic incidents in the career of Harry Thaw's vengeance was the luxurious entertainment, now remembered as "The Girl in the Pie" banquet, given in the studio of Jas. H. Brown.

This "little spread," as Brown called it, was one of the entertainments so common among the fast set in New York. Artists and men about town, with several notorious "fashionable" women, attended. The spread cost $350 a plate, and was a feast worthy of the gardens of Lullus as regards the hospitality displayed.

When the drinking and eating had become a wearisome task, at the approach of dawn, four negro entered bearing a huge pie, which they placed on the table before the politely yawning guests. A faint stir was observed beneath the crust, just as the orchestra struck up the air of the nursery rhyme:

"Sing a song of sixpence, a pocket full of rye, Four-and-twenty blackbirds baked in a pie."

As the strains increased in volume the movement of the crust became more noticeable and finally when the eye of every guest was centered upon the huge piece of confectionery, the

he was burst asunder, and from the inside there emerged the beautiful figure of a young girl, clad in black gauze draperies. She turned her pretty childish face upon the astonished guests, and poised as a bird about to fly, while two dozen golden canaries, released by her hand, flew about the room.

Then, when the tableau was complete, a man forced his way to the side of the table, and with a smile assailed the child to the floor. The man was Stanford White.

Susie Johnson, a child model, then 15 years old, was "The girl in the pie." She lived with her mother at No. 104 Eighth avenue. On the night of the banquet she disappeared, and remained in hiding for three years. Efforts of the police to find her were unsuccessful.

At last she returned to tell a story of revolting mistreatment and degradation by the man who met his death at the hands of Harry Thaw.

"When I was lifted from the pie to a seat at the table I found myself queen of the revel," she said. "It was dazzling at first, but in the end it became a sad quagmire."

"Mr. White was kind for a time, but when he went to Europe he instructed his clerks to get rid of me with as little trouble as possible. I never saw him again."

Turned into the streets to live as she might, this girl, not yet 16, finally married, but her husband when he heard of her part in the "pie" banquet dropped her in the street, and finally deserted his girl wife without attempting to avenge her.

AMERICA

CHANGING JOHN BULL

American Methods, Inventions, Products and Women Now Control.

CHINA FREED FROM OPIUM

In England 149 People Were Buried Prematurely Last Year.

Special Correspondence

London, July 6.—A very rare conception of the extent of the American "invasion" of England may be gained by the following which appeared recently in one of the most conservative of the London weekly publications:

"Twenty years ago the English hated everything that was American. The American woman, we insisted, was the most vulgar in the world; the American man the most abominable; the American institutions were detestable; the innovations, inventions, and improvements that came from the United States were unworthy of serious attention. The commodities America produced were generally considered their journalism was villainous. The craze for money which existed in America was regarded with the greatest contempt.

"We now think altogether differently. The United States, it is generally admitted, is a very great country. The American woman is being re-evaluated; the American man has wholly altered our character and that of our business. British institutions are being reconstructed in accordance with those of the United States. American innovations, inventions, and improvements abound in every direction, and in many instances, the commodities exported by America have a larger sale here than have those we produce ourselves. American journalism reigns supreme, and every English man and woman is a money-mad.

"John Bull gives his American desk at the office, closes his final instructions to the American manager of his business, travels home in an American car on a railway reorganized by an American capitalist. He spends his front door with an American wife, and is welcomed home by his Americanized wife. He has American meat for dinner, goes to see an American play at the theatre that has an American manager, and between the acts has American drinks at an American bar. He reads his American newspaper, he retires to bed, and switches off his American light!

Opium Cured Removed.

England is to consent at last to the removal of the opium trade which has imposed upon China more than one hundred years ago. The country's annual revenue from the tax upon opium produced in India and sold in China is enormous. Last year it was over $25,000,000. It was to secure this revenue that England for more than one hundred years denied China the right to prohibit the importation of opium.

The Lausanne conference, however, has consented to put an end to England's shameful traffic in opium and awaits word from China.

Opium is the dried juice of the poppy grown in certain parts of India under strict regulations. The average under poppy cultivation is limited by law, the present limit being 927,300 acres.

The cultivation of opium is carried on only under license from the government, which fixes a price at which the grower must sell his crop to government opium agents, who ship the stuff to the government factories. Only a small proportion of the prepared opium is consumed in India, being handled by the export department, while the bulk is sold by monthly auctions at Calcutta for export to China.

Thus a high revenue is derived by Britain from its opium monopoly, chiefly supported by the terrible vice of the Chinese.

Oxford University Saves Money.

The accounts of Oxford University for 1905 have just been presented to the convocation, and they exhibit a surplus for the first time in many years. At the end of 1904 there was a deficit of $14,500, but this has been converted into a credit balance of nearly $100. It is, therefore, justifiable to hope that at the end of the present year there will be a surplus of nearly $15,000, as the full benefit to be expected from the recent raising of the fees has not yet been realized. The total receipts during 1905 amounted to $1,717,825, including $25,000 from the University Press.

New French Opera Great Hit.

Messieurs' miracle opera "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame," which was produced at Covent Gardens two weeks ago has made a great hit. The music is praised for its freshness and suitability to the naive story written by Morris Lannau. It is the story of Jean, a juggler, who becomes a monk to get absolution for his offenses and is snubbed at by his brother monks for his ignorance.

Jean, who is distressed as to how he shall pay honor to the Virgin, may do it with the only gifts he possesses. When alone in the chapel he sings before her shrine the best songs in his repertoire, which are folk songs of the fourteenth century. In the end he dances a frantic bourree.

The monks, who have been disturbed by the noise, enter and denounce the juggler for his sacrilege, but the statue of the Virgin glows with a strange light and the voices of angels are heard. The hands of the statue move in the act of blessing the prostrate Jean. He does not see the miracle, but does hear, knowing that his worship has been received, and an angel shines forth above his head. Little, the new tonic from Brussels, sings the part of Jean and gives a fine interpretation of the character. It was for this opera that a donkey was needed for the juggler, but the Covent Gardens management, after many efforts, failed to secure one strong enough to bear Little's great weight.

Clothes on Yearly Contract.

Clothing by contract is the latest worry-saving scheme to be put into operation here. Englishmen may now be supplied with suits, hats, gloves and hosiery for a fixed annual payment, in installments if desired. A West End clothiers' company offers to contract for keeping a man well dressed for $100 a year. That may sound absurdly small for a man living in New York or Chicago, but clothing is very much cheaper in London than on the other side of the Atlantic. The supply includes one evening suit, one frock coat suit, one cutaway coat suit, one sack suit, one flannel suit and two overcoats.

For a fixed quarterly payment a customer keeps his wardrobe supplied with shirts, underwear, collars, neckwear, gloves and hats, with four suits and two overcoats per annum.

Silence Cure for Nerves.

The silence cure is now prescribed for nervous women. It consists in setting apart one hour of the day in which the patient must not utter a word. The hour must be spent alone in a perfectly quiet room.

A well-known nerve specialist says: "The woman with nerves talks twice as quickly as her more phlegmatic sister. If nervous women can be induced to hold their tongues, and allow not only the body but the brain to rest for an hour a day, we shall see less about neuritis and nervous breakdowns."

The silence cure is advocated as a preservative of beauty as well as of nerves, as it is calculated to delay the advent of wrinkles.

Buried Before Death.

One hundred and forty-nine persons were prematurely buried in 1905, according to certificates read at a meeting of the London Society for the Prevention of Premature Burial. It was found that as many as 115 were buried alive, ten as disoriented, three narrow escapes from dissection, two embalmers alive, one cremated alive. One member urged that there should be waiting mortuaries, such as they have in Munich and other German towns, where bodies could remain under strict sanitary conditions until the first signs of putrefaction—the only trustworthy sign of death.

SALESMEN OF SAN FRANCISCO OPEN FOR BUSINESS.

San Francisco, Cal., July 6.—The salesmen of this city, who survived the earthquake and fire, and were kept closed ever since by order of Mayor Schmitz, with a view of preventing drunkenness and disturbances in the stricken city, were reopened yesterday. They were kept closed Wednesday, as it was not considered safe to open them during the excitement which usually accompanies the celebration of the Fourth of July. The police authorities have the situation well in hand and there were no serious disturbances today, although the saloons were patronized quite liberally.

FAKE CHICKEN THIEVES' THRILLING EXPERIENCE.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 6.—Two colored boys, who were impersonating chicken thieves for the benefit of some moving picture men along York road, had a bad quarter of an hour yesterday with some residents in the vicinity, who took the make believe for reality, and visited the supposed culprits with condign punishment in the shape of sundry cuffs and blows. As a result, one of the boys, Philip Johnson, 12 years old, had one rib broken and his scalp lacerated.

The picture men, representing a New York company, made a contract with Philip P. Schirley, on York road, to use his place as the theater of the imaginary raid on the chicken yard. Koch with a squawking fowl under his arm, Johnson and a companion ran down the road, from the ostentatiously plundered chicken house, while the picture men chased them in counterfeit rage. The affair was so realistic that some neighbors, in righteous indignation, fell upon the luckless boys and pummeled them until they were rescued by the picture men.

MEETING OF NEW YORK STATE FINANCIERS.

Blue Point, N. Y., July 6.—The annual convention of the New York State Bankers' Association opened yesterday at the Hotel Champlain. Alfred H. Curtis, the state president of the association, called the convention to order and delivered his annual address. The convention will remain in session two days, and many prominent speakers will deliver addresses, among them P. A. Vanderslip, of New York; S. R. Flynn, of Chicago; and H. E. Holland, of New York. The last evening the annual banquet took place at the Hotel Champlain, while this evening there will be an open air concert. The grounds of the hotel will be brilliantly illuminated. After the adjournment of the convention many of the delegates will take a trip to Lake Placid and a visit to Ausable Chasm.

TENNESSEE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS MEET.

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 6.—The Christian Endeavor Society of Tennessee opened its four days' annual convention here yesterday. The attendance is large, and all parts of the state are well represented. The local Endeavorers have made extensive preparations for this event and have arranged an unusually interesting and attractive program. Some of the most prominent speakers in the state have been secured for this meeting. The meetings are held in the Second Presbyterian church. It was at this same church that the first convention of the Christian Endeavor Association of this state was held ten years ago.

THE SALTON SEA IS STILL ON THE RISE.

The daily rise of the Salton sea is now estimated by government engineers at 46 of an inch every twenty-four hours, which equals 140,000 acres feet of water. The estimated area covered is 500 square miles, or twice the size of the sea the first of the year.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE FARMINGTON FAIR.

At a meeting of the citizens the other night the following were selected as an executive committee to take charge of the Farmington fair and agricultural show this fall, viz.: A. M. Edwards, J. A. Hubbard, R. G. Graft, A. M. Amundson, C. E. Stevens, W. M. Danberg and William Butler. Another meeting will be held when the committee will organize and discuss plans of advertising. Interested persons are requested to meet with them.

WHAT ONE BLIND WOMAN HAS ACCOMPLISHED.

Entered blind institution at 18.

Honor member of many classes.

Graduated with distinction.

Entered University of California.

Graduated from social science course.

Mastered four languages.

Became expert in athletics.

Instructor in San Francisco public schools.

Entered Hastings College of Law.

Admitted to the bar.

Practiced law.

Discovered musical talent.

Began cultivation of her voice.

Now a study in Italy.

Aspires to fame on concert stage.

Special Correspondence.

Boston, Mass., July 6.—Being deprived of her sight from infancy has not deterred Miss Christine LaBarraque from entering upon a professional career. She has been graduated from the University of California, admitted to practice law in the state of the Golden Gate, is master of four languages, and is now going to Italy to prepare herself for the concert stage. All of this she has accomplished in the brief period of 27 years. During her course in the college of law, the blind woman taught in the public schools of San Francisco.

Upon her return to this country she hopes to be heard in oratorio. She has the voice of a dramatic soprano. "I should much rather have lived in security as a good lawyer," says Miss LaBarraque. "I shall hope that I may give pleasure as a singer, but the law is the profession I should have chosen as my work. I loved it, and I love music, but the law more."

By her manner, Miss LaBarraque does not betray that she is sightless.

MISS CHRISTINE LABARRAQUE.

In college she was interested in athletics, and took exercise on the apparatus with the rest of the girl students. She is an enthusiastic horsewoman, and never permits anyone to rein her horse when riding. Her companion just gives her a hint as to the turns in the road. She is a great admirer of color. Her apartment is filled with beautiful pictures, and she talks of them with enthusiasm. She is becoming more and more known by the name of "the blind lawyer" or "the blind singer."

My course lay through the department of social science. The study which caused me the greatest difficulty was mathematics, especially when I came to differential calculus and analysis. Then I thought I should have to give up, but finally I secured the instruction of one of the junior mathematicians, and all went well after that.

A blind man or woman can make a place in the world. All that is needed is a determined will and plenty of patience.

"ORIGINAL FLORODORA SEXTET" MARRIED AND SETTLED DOWN

EVELYN NESBIT, NAN PATTERSON AND MABEL GILMAN, CENTERS OF TRAGEDY, WERE NOT IN THE FIRST SIX THAT BECAME FAMOUS.

New York, July 6.—Florence Evelyn Nesbit-Thaw, the woman in the case of the roof garden tragedy at Madison Square the other night—the protegee of the victim and the wife of the murderer—is being mentioned as a member of the now famous original "Florodora Sextet." The statement that she was one of the six is an error.

While the beautiful little "brother" who is now shouldering a great share of a crushing tragedy did make her first stage bow in the opening night of the "Florodora" production, it was not as one of the famous sextet, but as one of the little Spanish flower girls who tripped onto the stage at the rise of the curtain.

"If there had been six times six girls in the original 'Florodora' sextet," said John C. Fisher, the producer of "Florodora," today, "the number would not be half large enough to account for the girls who were the press agents and newspaper men have declared were members of the original six. Every show girl who attained notoriety, enviable or otherwise, is branded a member of the original 'Florodora' sextet."

"Nan Patterson was one of these, yet she never saw the original six. Mabel Gilman did, and so on a score of others. As a matter of fact the six girls were Marie Wilson, Margaret Walker, Vaughn Texamith, Margaret Relyea, Agnes Wayburn and Daisy Green. Most of them married well, and they are now out of the profession. Not one of them ever did anything to cause unfavorable notoriety.

White Got Her a Job.

"As for Evelyn Nesbit, I remember her very well. She was one of the most graceful and beautiful girls on the stage, and secured her position in the 'Florodora' company through the friendship of Stanford White and Geo. W. Lederer, the manager of the show at that time. She was kept out of the sextet, however, by her diminutive size.

Evelyn's father had died leaving a rather involved estate, and it was necessary for her, a girl of 12, to help her mother. The child's beauty had previously attracted the attention of Philadelphia photographers for whom she had done considerable posing, and from that work she drifted into the vociferous of an artist's model. It was at a gathering of artists, models and theatrical people one night that White formed the acquaintance of Evelyn."

CRUSHES OUT HER LIFE UNDER CAR WHEELS.

ITALIAN WOMAN, DEPENDENT, CHOOSES A HORRIBLE MANNER OF COMMITTING SUICIDE AT LORDSBURG.

Along with her 16-year-old child as what seemed to her an insupportable distance from her husband and friends, an Italian woman who recently came to this country committed suicide by throwing herself under the wheels of a southbound passenger train at Lordsburg, N. M.

The details of the suicide are remarkable in the extreme. The woman, after being put off the train, which she mistook for the train for Clinton, handed her pocketbook to her little girl and, taking off her bonnet, rushed toward the moving train as if to throw herself under it. The little daughter, driving her mother's intention, ran after her, grabbed her and pulled her back. But, persistent in her determination to die, the mother shoved the girl aside and threw herself under the train, half way across the track. In an instant the wheels had passed over her, almost severing her body.

Conductor Frank Zwiek brought the train to a stop and had the remains taken to Lordsburg.

The name of the woman is so far unknown to the authorities. She left El Paso three days ago on No. 42, with a ticket to Clinton, where it is said she was going to meet her husband, who is said to be working there.

Reaching Lordsburg, she left the train to make her way to her home, which she had left behind her for more than a day without taking her train, and finally took No. 9 of the Southern Pacific, bound for the coast. When Conductor Frank Zwiek saw her ticket a few seconds after the train left, he pulled the bell cord and stopped the train.

The woman was put off and told to go back to the depot and wait for the Clinton train. As the S. P. passenger again pulled out the woman, confused by her surroundings, suddenly became crazed and committed the rash act which caused her death.

The accident happened Tuesday afternoon. Southern Pacific officials are investigating the case with the hope of learning the woman's identity so that relatives may be notified. The child is being cared for by strangers at Lordsburg.

ARIZONA PROPHET APPEARS IN CINCINNATI.

HE QUALIFIED AS SERGEANT AT ARMS OF TERRITORIAL LEGISLATURE.

Rev. W. A. Cuddy, who claims to have been an Arizona politician and a soldier in arms of the territorial legislature, is now in Cincinnati, the guest of C. S. Mason, director of the religious work for the Y. M. C. A., says the Phoenix Republic. If Mr. Cuddy was ever a politician in this territory, he has been reformed a long time, for he says he has been engaged in preaching for twenty-three years without a cure. In an interview he said that in his experience politicians are the hardest men to impress with the beauties of religion, for the reason that they cannot be made to believe that there is such a thing as truth.

Mr. Cuddy is something more than a preacher, he is a prophet. Among his predictions are these: A great revolution in Europe in five years; universal war to follow an agreement to arbitrate; a new Napoleon will rise and conquer the world. In his own words, he says: "The Napoleon of all will come. The Napoleon will be worshipped as a divinity while he lasts. The millennium will come in 1921."

Mr. Cuddy bases his prophecies on the twelfth and thirteenth chapters of Revelation and, perhaps, too, on his own knowledge gained by his association with Arizona legislators of an improvement of the future.

Increases of Salary of Internal Revenue Officials.

Collector of Internal Revenue Henry P. Bardahar was pleasantly surprised Tuesday morning when he read his Washington mail. His satisfaction extended to Office Deputy James J. Goutely and to Deputy Collector Rich. and DeWolf, as soon as he had informed them of the contents of an official communication from Commissioner Yerkes. The pleasant news was no less than that a handsome increase of salary for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, which had been allowed the collector and the two minor officials named was granted. Mr. Bardahar will receive $200 more per annum than they have up to the first of June of the present year. The increase in salary to the collector and the two deputies was brought about by the fact that the volume of business of the United States Internal Revenue office for the district of New Mexico and Arizona has greatly increased and therefore more work and more attention to duty are necessary and required.

Distribution of Joint Statehood Law.

Under house joint resolution No. 182 of the late session of congress, 50,000 copies of the Hamilton joint statehood law will be printed for distribution by the house committee on territories in New Mexico and Arizona and 25,000 copies will be also printed and used for distribution in Oklahoma and Indian territory by the same committee. The distribution for New Mexico and Arizona will be in charge of Delegate W. H. Andrews and will be made from Santa Fe. It will be hard work and will demand the services of extra clerks, but Delegate Andrews will see to it that the copies are sent out promptly and where they will do the most good in the two territories.

Mr. Newcomb has been offered two better positions, one in Albuquerque and one in Socorro county, but has not yet made up his mind which one to accept.
