THE HOTEL CHAPLAIN A UNIQUE FIGURE IN NEW YORK IS MAY NOT HAVE BEEN

REV. DR. HENRY M. WARREN

New York, Nov. 10.—When the wayfarer in New York, the "loneliest city for the stranger," needs in a hurry the services of a minister, the hotel clerk calls the Rev. Dr. Henry Marsh Warren.

Rev. Warren is known throughout the city as the hotel chaplain. He is a preacher without a church. His whole time is occupied with ministering to the spiritual needs of the wayward transient visitors of the metropolis.

Dr. Warren originated his field of work and he calls the hosts of the city his parish of All Strangers.

Dr. Warren has the haven many clergies have sought. He believes in marriage when it is lawful and when the ceremony is the demand of two warm hearts. Recently he closed in wedding W. J. White, the Cleveland gun millionaire, and Mrs. Helen Rhodden Mahoney of Chicago. The gun millionaire's first wife had divorced him twenty years before Dr. Warren was called in. Mrs. Mahoney was also divorced.

"When a couple is in love I care not whether they have been divorced 40 years or 40 years, I will gladly marry them." This was the hotel chaplain's comment when asked whether he would have married white had he known the circumstances.

"Many couples come to me," said Dr. Warren, "admitting that they are clergies. I ask them if they are really in love and if they have the legal right to marry. If I find that they are really in love and that they are legally free, I do not hesitate to marry them. As a rule, clergies flee from family objections. It is not unusual for them to say, Dr. Warren, if you do not marry us, we will live together without being married. I believe they mean this. They are dry in love and are desperate. I am glad to unite them in wedlock. In my mind I cannot recollect technical objections."

On Sundays, Rev. Warren holds services in the parlors of some of the hotels. The guests are invited and he always has well attended meetings.

Probably no minister in this city has poured out to him a greater volume of confessions. It is no uncommon thing for the hotel chaplain to be called from his bed to the room of some young fellow who, after a period of debauchery in which he has disgraced himself and family, is requesting him to perform a pastoral service desired. Address 48 West Ninetyfourth street. Telephone 25 Riverside.

His work includes giving advice in difficulty, sympathy in trouble, comfort to any who desire to live a better life, consolation to the suffering, bereaved and dying. We perform wedding ceremonies, conduct funerals, administer the holy communion, and hold public as well as private religious services.

Many come to my home in the depths of despair. I listen to their pathetic story, try to give them hope, tell them I will be their friend and guide. I give them a book and often pray for them and often I shed tears with them.

Several have later told me they believed that led them to me, for they were on the verge of suicide, but the friendly word spoken and sympathy extended had saved their life.

Our Sunday evening hotel services will begin on November 11, at the El Paso hotel, to be followed on each Sunday evening in the various large hotels where there are so in the habit of going to church have kindly told us of having received much help in this way.

We could do a much larger work if our means would permit. We trust the day may be not far distant when we shall have a chapel, never closed, where the stranger in need of a friend may find one. We wish to distribute many Bibles and good literature among hotels and strangers and shall broaden our field of usefulness as the necessary means are supplied.

THE REV. DR. HENRY MARSH WARREN.

DR. WARREN WRITES ON HIS LIFE WORK

Sincerely a day passes but several people who are far from home and must with accidents, or die, and in many instances they would have no one to extend kindness and attention to at such times if it were not for this chaplain which we founded and organized a few years ago. The feasibility of such a work will be readily appreciated by any who have ever been ill or in trouble in a great city and alone. The class we especially aim to assist are ladies and gentlemen, of culture and refinement who are in New York on business or as tourists. In all the leading hotels there can be found a neatly framed card on which is printed: "Whenever our patrons and friends are in need of the services of a clergyman, the management would refer them to our chaplain, Rev. Dr. Henry Marsh Warren, who will be glad to perform any pastoral services desired. Address 48 West Ninetyfourth street. Telephone 25 Riverside."

CANAL ZONE COMBINES FEATURES OF PLEASURE RESORT AND MINING CAMP

By Victor M. Hughes. Special Correspondence. Panama, Nov. 10.—It requires no stretch of the imagination to see the Panama Canal as a pleasure resort and a mining district. The pleasure resort feature is mainly physical. There is the big three-story frame hotel of fragile construction, designed only for "fair weather" use. You see its sister at every summer resort in the states. Up hill and down dale are cottages so lightly built that they resemble children's playhouses. They are perched on stilts. On the broad verandas that run the full length of the buildings are hammocks, wicker rocking chairs, swings and hammocks.

But the spirit of the mining camp, as well as some of its physical aspects is here. No man is in the zone with the purpose of making his home. It's the "take" he's after. The average miner, blacksmith, machinist or other mechanic, if he works hard enough may here make from $200 to $250 a month. The rest is his "strike."

The word "strike" sounds up from the blasting pit, the rock, the train yards, the mills and along troops the army, kind old, content, carefree, unpretentious—highly intelligent: they are, usually, the son of the tropics or their descendants.

MAY NOT HAVE BEEN SECRET SERVICE MAN

Caldwell's Home and Friends Still Remain a Mystery in Albuquerque.

HE CARRIED NO WEAPONS Telegram States He Lives in West Virginia—A Letter Follows.

(Saturday, November 10.) Although eight telegrams have been sent by Undertaker A. A. Borders to so many different addresses found in letters and memoranda among the effects of Charles C. Caldwell, whose body arrived here Thursday evening from Albuquerque, where he was run over and killed by a train, possibly No. 7, early Thursday morning, no word which establishes that the man had relatives or a fixed place of abode has reached him. At this time the undertaker is still awaiting instructions as to the disposition of the body.

A single telegram has been received, but it throws no light upon the mystery. It is from Mrs. J. C. Glass, of Azusa, Cal., and reads that the man resided in West Virginia and suggests that the body be buried by the county. A letter follows, the telegram reads, from developments today it appears that Caldwell's connections will remain a mystery until the letter arrives, which may disclose important particulars regarding him.

A letter written to J. E. Huddleston, of Washington, D. C., the secret service man, which Caldwell recommended, and a postscript to the letter which reads, "I am working on a postoffice job" together with a star which contains "U. S. Detective," reads in the belief that Caldwell was a secret service official. The letter was wired yesterday, but there has been no reply.

Word from the Denver office of the secret service states that Caldwell was unknown there. No revolver was found among Caldwell's effects, or cartridges, or anything of the kind. These circumstances give rise to the doubt that Caldwell was connected with the secret service. An unfinished letter to Judge J. J. Jackson, of Parkersburg, W. Va., which reads, "This man wants a recommendation to a Mark Baker, Sweet Springs, Monroe county, W. Va., confirms the report from Mrs. Glass that he lived in West Virginia.

William McGugin, bookkeeper for the water company, is from Parkersburg, W. Va. He is acquainted with Judge Jackson there and knows of a Caldwell family which lives at Parkersburg. They are wealthy people but there is nothing to establish that the dead man is related to them. They have been telegraphed.

Caldwell's baggage contained a number of letters and some books. These showed he had been engaged at some occupation for which he was paid by the hour. It was impossible to determine the nature of the work or the location of it from the men's words.

Among the contents of his suit case are several pieces of wearing apparel of good quality, three pairs of heavy rubber shoes with full soles, which might indicate that he has been roughing it.

Unless the undertaker receives some favorable replies to the messages he has sent, it is likely Caldwell will be buried at the expense of the county.

Later—Undertaker Borders received a telegram from Judge J. J. Jackson of Parkersburg, West Virginia, late this afternoon which reads: "Don't know any man named C. A. Caldwell."

FIFTY HOMESSEKERS FOR ESTANCIA VALLEY J. C. Maxwell and E. A. Riley, immigration agents of McIntosh, the thriving little town in the Estancia valley, arrived in Santa Fe Wednesday night after a trip through Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma, bringing with them some fifty farmers who are seeking homes in the southwest. The party left Thursday via the Santa Fe Central railway for McIntosh, in the vicinity of which the settlers intend to secure homesteads. The greater part of the homeseekers came from the country near Newkirk and Kildare, Oklahoma, Wichita, Hutchinson and Lyons, Kansas and Holden, Missouri. In speaking of the party, St. Newell said:

"We found it very easy to induce the farmers to come to the Estancia valley and look over the country. The most of the crops are harvested in the middle west and the farmers have little to do. There are a number who could not leave this month but who are coming later. We expect to bring several hundred settlers to the Estancia valley by next spring."

A Year of Blood. The year 1907 will tend to remember in the house of F. M. Tackett of Alliance, Ky., as a year of blood, which flowed so copiously from Mr. Tackett's lungs that death seemed very near. He writes: "Severe bleeding from the lungs and a frightful cough had brought me to death's door, when I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, with the astonishing result that after taking four bottles I was completely restored and as time has proven permanently cured." JEMEZ RESERVE A SLENDID RANGE

In Most Excellent Condition.
Valuable Timber Lands Contain Much Lumber.

Reserves are located in Forest Superintendence on the Jemez and Pecos river forest reserves. Frank J. Phillips, an expert forester connected with the bureau of forestry at Washington, D. C. Mr. Phillips recently finished a tour of inspection of the Jemez reserve and was satisfied in his opinion of its excellent condition. He found everything in good condition, and was especially pleased to note the splendid shape of the ranges. He went from Santa Fe on a similar mission to the Lincoln forest reserve, and while on that trip he was making his headquarters temporarily at Captain. Mr. Phillips is now in the Jemez reserve. He traveled on horseback from one district to another, making notes of the surroundings as he went. His observations and suggestions will be compiled in the form of a report which his inspection for the season is ended.

Close, Careful Scrutiny of Conditions. Mr. Phillips wishes to impress it upon the minds of the people that forest reserves are of great benefit instead of being a detriment, as many are supposed to believe. He gives the reasons why an intelligent interest in which he also takes part, the big government forest near here.

The Jemez forest reserve was established to serve as a permanent timber supply and secondary for its great protective value to soil and water. From both of these standpoints it is one of the best forest reserves in the United States and under the conservative management of the forest service will prove of the greatest possible benefit to New Mexico. The policy of the forest service is one of conservative utilization rather than destruction. The United States as a whole has suffered more from its forest fires and timber trespass than any other country on the globe, and every day the forest service organizations throughout the west are giving striking examples of the benefits resulting from careful management rather than uttering other forests.

Merchandise Timber on Jemez Reserve.

The Jemez reserve is estimated to contain 2,575,000,000 feet of merchantable timber and 15,000,000 feet of non-merchantable timber. Nearly one-half the reserve is available for grazing to at least some extent and portions of the reserve constitute the best grazing lands in the territory. The region will always mean an important factor in supplying a definite supply of forage to the stockmen, and it is to the mutual benefit of stockmen and ranchers to prevent overgrazing and the subsequent deterioration in water supply.

No watersheds of direct importance to cities and in need of forest planting exist in the Jemez forest reserve. There is, however, nearly five sections of land on slopes north of Tama and in the region surrounding Tama, and anything done to increase the water supply throughout the growing season or to prevent deterioration of soil will work a benefit to the stockmen. Practically all the land in both these localities has at one time supported dense forest growth and it is the policy of the forest service to replant these areas as soon as possible. Most of this work will undoubtedly be performed by a technically trained man, with the assistance of the forest rangers and a body of common laborers.

Efficient Body of Forest Rangers. The men Supervisor Leon P. Neill has selected in both the Jemez and Pecos river reserves are as efficient a body of forest rangers as can be found anywhere in the United States. They are not only capable of withstanding the rigors of ranger life, but are well trained in their duties and are willing workers. Incidentally it is a fitting compliment to Mr. Neill that all the rangers are enthusiastic in their work and him and his manner of carrying out the reserve administration.

MINERS' HOSPITAL OPENED SATURDAY

The Miners' hospital, one of the finest institutions of the territory was opened to the public last Saturday under very propitious circumstances. The building, which is of pressed brick, three stories in height, was built by appropriations of the territorial legislature at a cost of almost twenty thousand dollars, and the furnishings have cost over two thousand dollars more. The hospital grounds, which comprise ten acres, were donated by the Maxwell land grant company, and constitute a beautiful public building. The grounds adjoin the city of Ilaton on the south, and north close to the hills, overlooking the mesa away to the east and south. The grounds are being beautified and will be handsomely kept.

There are a number of eligible patients waiting for admission to the hospital at present, and as soon as these are admitted and the number determined, vacant rooms, if any, will be used for such patients as may apply. Mrs. J. Van Houten is president of the hospital board, and has proven an untiring worker in behalf of the institution. Dr. A. A. Streiber is secretary and treasurer and has been a member ever since the organization, having been a one-year member and assisted in the selection of the site. Dr. Hodeler was later appointed to serve a five year term, and is a valuable member of the board. M. M. White, of Polson, another member of the board, has taken a very active interest in the welfare of the hospital. C. A. Tammie, of Las Vegas, is also an energetic worker for the good of the institution. G. D. Lyon, of Raton, has been a member of the board for some time having been ap-

JUSTIN HEAD, INDIAN MURDERER, SURRENDERED

AT JEROME AND EXPRESSES NO
SORROW FOR BLOODY CRIMES.

A special dispatch from Jerome, Arizona, dated November 10, says Justin Head, the Indian who murdered five other Indians and a squaw on the Verde came into Jerome Saturday morning and gave himself up to the local authorities. The man was almost exhausted and was bleeding from a score of wounds made by his knife. He fled through the woods and over the mountains. His feet from head to foot in one solid mass of cuts and bruises and at the time of his surrender he was half-frenzied from want of food and water.

After Head's wounds had been attended to and he had been given food and drink he talked quite freely to the officers and told of the killings in detail in a matter-of-fact manner showing absolutely no feeling.

The guard that led up to the first murder occurred on the upper Verde at Cottonwood and was over a squaw. Head said he then went about thirty miles down the Verde where he killed the other four Indians and the squaw in protecting himself from capture.

In addition to the above he shot another Indian shattering his arm at the elbow and fired a shot at a squaw who was holding a papoose in her arms the bullet passing between the woman and child.

The man seems completely cowed and begs the officers to protect him from the Indians whom he fears will kill him. He expresses no sorrow whatever over the bloody deeds, his only feeling apparently being one of fear for his own safety.

State Laws.

Territorial Game Warden Griffith arrived here last night from Santa Fe and joined Page B. Over, deputy territorial game warden, who presented him to the Duke City. They will discuss this evening for a rather indefinite destination. Game wardens have a habit of suppressing their intentions from the press and the replies of the two officials to inquiries regarding where they were going were evasive. Mr. Griffith consented to discuss the proposed amendments to the game laws, which will probably come up in the next legislature, however.

According to the statements of Mr. Griffith, there is a growing sentiment among sportsmen in New Mexico to have the territorial game laws made more stringent and to exclude non-resident hunters from shooting or fishing in the territory who do not pay a license for the privilege. Sportsmen generally throughout the territory are also favoring a change in the proposed amendments to the law which will require resident hunters to pay a small license fee to the territorial game warden in order to be permitted to hunt or fish in the territory. The law which will require the non-resident hunters to pay a small license fee to the territorial game warden in order to be permitted to hunt or fish in the territory.

A SENATOR IN JAIL--BURTON GETTING FAT BEHIND BARS

SENATOR BURTON; FRONT VIEW OF JAIL, AND CHIEF HAYWARD.

THE SENATORIAL PRISONER IS DEPRIVED OF MIGHTY LITTLE BUT OUTDOOR EXERCISE DURING HIS SIX MONTHS' RETIREMENT--A VISIT TO THE IRON-CLAD JAIL AND A DESCRIPTION OF BURTON'S LIFE THERE.

Iron-clad, Mo., Nov. 12.—Jail life is being borne faintly enough by ex-Senator Burton. Formerly lean and slender, he is getting fat.

He is in excellent health, eats the best food procurable in this favored section, breathes plenty of pure air of the Ardenian valley of Missouri, reads the newspapers, writes letters, sleeps well, has his faithful wife for a visitor two or three times a day, and admits he feels like he is on a vacation.

Burton's surroundings are a veritable jail-like—little cramped cell with dingy backwork iron bars and bare whitewashed wall. But he has a carpet on the floor in the cell and a comfortable bed, and his wife is a good thick one. Besides, he enjoys a degree of exclusiveness being quarantined with John, an ex-convict, as cell mate.

Burton states his health is excellent, and says: "Why shouldn't I get fat?"

Reads the Bible. Neither Burton nor his devoted wife have shown a tremor since the former's incarceration. He is now for pleading the case of the B. & O. Grain & Securities Co. before a government department for a fee. It is said that Burton and his wife here in Christian science teachings that inspire them with a philosophical view of the proceedings. Burton reads the Bible.

He reads the Bible a great deal. Sometimes in the evening he will bend forward with his head on his knees and pour over familiar chapters. Now and then his spectacles will fall from his nose and he will wipe the glasses and comment to his cell mate about something which has particularly impressed him.

Jokes in jail. Burton never goes outside of the corridors and has never been outside but once since being put in jail. Sheriff J. L. Marshall says: That was the morning after five minutes to look after some legal documents. He was accompanied by a deputy sheriff.

His little jail duties consist of carrying coals from one side of the jail interior to the other, watering the flowers in pots, sweeping the corridor and his cell, and keeping up the fire.

Then Burton likes to tell jokes too. He has traveled extensively and has a good memory, and it is some of the time he tells a joke or two. Burton caught of something that occurred when he toured the islands of the Pacific.

His wife visits him.

The federal government pays 12 1/2 cents per meal eaten by its prisoners in the Iron-clad jail, but Senator Burton doesn't eat three-for-40-cents meals. He is allowed to have his food prepared at a hotel a block away from the jail under the supervision of his wife, who has the reputation of being the best wafflesmith in Abilene, Kan., and expert at any other kind of culinary product.

Here are some of the typical Burton meals:

BREAKFAST: Oatmeal, Sliced Bananas, Fried Apples, Veal Cutlets, Fried Potatoes.

Fried Corn Mush, Bread and Butter, Coffee.

LUNCH: Well-dressed Roast Beef, Candied Sweet Potatoes.

Baked Macaroni with Cheese, Apple Pudding, MILK.

BRAND: Cream of Wheat, Beefsteak (carefully broiled), Mutton Chop, Fried Potato Cakes.

Waffles, Apple Pie, Toast, Hot Water.

Mr. Burton takes the meals to the jail himself. She is usually accompanied by a handsome, black-haired girl of 19, Dorothy Mitchell, a niece of Burton, who is staying with her at the hotel. The former senator always embraces and kisses his wife, a little woman of unassuming appearance.

WAS CHRIST'S BIRTH FROM A VIRGIN? WAS

The Question Discussed by the Congregational Union in Fair Haven.

ENGLAND'S QUEEN IS IN AN AUTOMOBILE SMASH UP

London Has the Worst Street in the World and the King of Liars.

Special Correspondence.

BY WILLIAM TRUE HAWTHORNE.

London, Nov. 12.—The "Virgin Birth" was among the subjects discussed by the Congregational Union at the autumn convention in Wolverhampton.

As might be imagined, great interest was taken in the theological treatment of a topic of such tender human interest. The natural delicacy of the discussion was perhaps the more attenuated by reason of the presence of many lady delegates to the conference, a fact that was deplored by some of the speakers.

They expressed regret that the subject had been brought forward in the presence of a mixed company, and because it was hardly an assembly of experts.

Rev. Dr. R. W. of Norwich, said it was only in recent years that the Virgin birth had been denied, and a considerable number of thinkers maintained it possible to reject the miraculous birth, and yet accept the theory of the incarnation.

That position, he said, made the miracle of the incarnation all the more difficult to believe.

The evidence of the ages supported the Virgin birth. Those who denied the divine origin of Christ still led to account for Jesus, and if his birth was to be explained by natural causes, he remained a greater mystery than ever.

Dr. Forsyth, who more than once deplored that the discussion had taken place in the presence of ladies and reporters, especially the latter, differed from many of the arguments brought forward by Dr. Barrett. If a belief in the Virgin birth was necessary for the purpose and fullness of redemption, that belief must be held.

On the other hand, if it could not be shown to be absolutely necessary for the idea of redemption, then they might reserve an open mind on the subject.

The chairman, Rev. Dr. Bartlett, of Oxford, said the divine creative act might accompany birth under other conditions. They should keep their minds open, but open both ways.

Other speakers regarded the matter as an open question, and suggested that further discussion might throw light on the very difficult question, Dr. Barrett, who stood almost alone in his view, to reply maintained that the Virgin birth was an integral part of the incarnation itself.

The discussion closed without any of the lady delegates having risen to lessen masculine perplexity by presenting the question with all the lucidity and logic that leads the feminine mind intuitively to the right conclusion.

Queen in Auto Smash-Up.

The royal automobile in which Alexandra was going to Sandringham castle the other day met with a mishap which almost cost her life. A fire which broke out in the motor, and her companions great alarm. A fire which broke out in the motor, and her companions great alarm.

The royal travelers had to alight and finish the journey to the station in a dog cart.

The queen left Sandringham castle, accompanied by Princess Victoria and Col. Sir John D'Almeida, and the accident occurred when the motor car had gone about four miles.

Fortunately, a four-wheeled dog cart was seen approaching, and the royal party pressed it into service. Hastily entering the cart, her majesty directed a driver to take her to the railway station with all speed.

The dog cart was accordingly trotted along at something less than the automobile limit, but quite rapid enough to land the party at the station, none the worse physically for their exciting adventure. It then carried the party to Sandringham and the south.

Worst Street in All London.

The worst street in London, if not in the world, is authoritatively declared to be Grosvenor street, Soho.

On the relations of the police with the public as to ill-treatment of persons under arrest, Police Inspector McKay gave a word picture of the notorious locality over which his authority extended. The people who gaze in at the street every night, he said, are nothing less than a pest.

He said that the police were the most of the greatest possible evils which were the human beast. They were mostly foreigners, and were divided into two gangs on racial lines, French and Italian on one side and German and Irish on the other.

A bitter feud existed, and frequent clashes between them occurred. They hated the police, however, worse than they hated each other, and joined hands against the authorities whenever the latter sought to clean the streets of the mob which nightly claimed possession there.

As to charges of police brutality, the inspector said they had to act quickly in making arrests, and the foreigners would use a knife or a pistol at the slightest provocation. Then there was the additional danger that in making a capture of a foreigner some friends of the prisoner would rear up behind and strike him. Corruptive statements as to the desperate condition of things in Grosvenor street left no doubt to the minds of the members of the committee that they had happened upon the most lawless place in all the great city.

Blow to Municipal Ownership.

London, Nov. 12.—The municipal ownership of the city's gas supply has been given a severe setback at the borough election of the other day.

The defeat of the progressives was, indeed, as overwhelming as the downfall of the Tories at the late parliamentary election, with this significant difference, that the moderates, who won, are Tories under another name, while the progressives are Liberals, also thinly disguised under another name.

SONS OF ELI TEASE CAMP, RULIER SEEV

AUTHOR OF NEW FOOT BALL RULES DEFENDS INNOVATIONS IN THE GAME--YALE'S CHANCES THIS YEAR SEEM FULL OF ADVANTAGE.

By Martin E. Pew.

Special Correspondence.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 12.—Yale's early mixed foot ball eleven should be a position of advantage in the season's series of games, under the new rules. Walter Camp, the inventor of the new system, is here acting as general advisory coach.

Chasing the pigskin under the laws of 1909 is to the old timers, like a man leaping into the unknown.

Camp's regulations have brought forth enough condemnation, even here on his own ground, to bring a hot blush to the most amiable.

Camp is a Yale man and lives here. It was one of the interesting phases of the early foot ball season to witness his desperate efforts to coach the sons of old Eli and bring out in practical play the rules he had promulgated.

There is an apparent long reach to enthusiasm in the new Yale foot ball song, it attempts to cover a wider range of doubt, and runs:

(Air—Just the Same Old Story)

It is just the same old foot ball—

Over since the game began—

Yale a-winner, Harvard losing—

Try and stop it if you can!

It is just the same old foot ball—

It will always be the same—

You may change the rules but we're not fools—

It's the same old game!

Despite the dubious handsomening of the old coaches, who contend that the new rules give undue advantage to light, fast and nimble players, Camp insists that the new regulations will work out to the equal benefit of all and improve the sport. He said:

"It was to be expected that the devotees of the old game would hesitate in approving the new rules. In the practice play, however, we have seen how great the change is for a general development of the game. Where the rules are having a fair tryout we are getting rewards. It is certain that in place of the old mass play, which had as its object constant possession of the ball, there has now been opened a wide field for brilliant trick plays, double passing, forward passes, short kicks and long runs.

"In a word, the new rules are in favor of heat, open play, calling forth the most artificial skill, and they oppose the heavy force play which has been so frequently the cause of disaster.

"What the new era will mean to the players, it will certainly meet with the approval of the spectators, for the rules make possible an element of excitement in the game which has heretofore been lacking. As a means of steady gain mass plays have been made almost useless by the rule to gain ten yards in three downs instead of five.

"Actual play is, of course, the best test, and we shall see."

It would seem that the lesson C. Jones had been supposed to learn in the Jones camp. The famous Jones brothers, "Tad" and "H." from whom the blue camp carried great things, at least a maintenance of their past records, are both in bad shape.

"H." Jones held up a strong and steady Yale last year, but early in this season he sprained his ankle and is now in that member of his little frame that he has been denied practice.

"Tad" Jones, who has the reputation of being one of the most famous quarterbacks in the history of the game, was also hurt early in the season. He was considered as especially fitted for the revised order of play, being a snappy worker, with a good head, understanding of what his feet are about. He is at work, but not in true form.

Yale's strength undoubtedly lies in her back field. She is light on tackle, she counts much on Howard Roome, who will play full back here this year, coming from Princeton. He is one of the best punters and kickers in the country, and averages 35 yards in his strong on line kicking. Young Knorr, the son of Philander C. Knorr, at right half back, is fast gaining a reputation as a drop kicker. In the preliminary work he kicked three place kicks. They call him the "human egg." Great long passes, he is a fast runner, and one of the best backs Yale ever had.

A. K. Bridges, guard, held down the front end of a trolley car in this city last winter to keep in form for the elementary election, with this significant difference, that the moderates, who won, are Tories under another name, while the progressives are Liberals, also thinly disguised under another name.
