London, Dec. 24.—The annual report of the board of trade on wages and hours of labor in the United Kingdom has been published from which it appears that the changes to wages during the year resulted in a net reduction. The amount of decrease, however, measured in weekly loss of wages, is very small, small in fact than for the four preceding years, while in the first half of the present year there was, on the whole, a decided upward movement. In the four years 1901, 1902, 1903, reductions in the rates of wages of steel either formed the predominant factor. In 1905 the wages in the industry continued to decline, but there was an important advance in the cotton trade and wages of glass, iron and steel and iron and steel manufactures during the year.

The report goes on to state, "taking into account the various data as to which the changes in 1905 came into operation the net decrease in the year's wages bill due to the changes recorded in this report, may be roughly estimated at $554,781, as compared with a decrease of $1,564,777 in 1904 and $1,915,950 in 1902. For the first half of this year $832,526 work people had a net increase in their wages,

BOR FOR BRAZIL

Portland, Me. Dec. 24.—A company has been incorporated under the laws of this state with an authorized income of $18,000,000 for the purpose of constructing and operating an extensive canal and lock system, to be 100 miles in length, from the mouth of the Amazon river for facilitating the shipment of freight to and from the interior of Brazil. Sir Wm. Yau Horne is president of the company which is composed mostly of New York financiers. The Federal government of Brazil has given its sanction for their operation on the Para river at Para, opposite the island of Marajo. Para is one of the principal commercial centres in north Brazil, and has a population of 150,000 persons. The syndicate has been granted the exclusive right to transport all goods and vessels entering the harbor.

mel Saturday to discuss plans was decided to take all possible steps to divert Jewish immigration to the west and with this object in view an association was formed. No effort would be made to encourage immigration but all poor Jews who arrive at this and other Atlantic ports were to have an opportunity to go to either east or west coast. The association was decided to establish agencies at the following ports: New York, New Orleans, Galveston, Texas, and other ports.

"Teddy Pell made love to me, for two years, desperate love. He said that he was in love with me, and I told him he was wrong. I told him all the time he was wrong. We had favorite tables at fashionable restaurants, we enjoyed many automobile rides, and we were frequently in the theater. Of course, I became deeply in love with him. For him I abandoned my musical career. While I learned the truth, I decided to break the suit."

"It is said that the wife of Teddy Pell, with her father, has impregnated him."

TINY TIM'S CHRISTMAS

The Yuletide Masterpiece That Has Made Countless Hearts Throb.

From "A Christmas Carol" By Charles Dickens

Then up rose Mrs. Cratchit, Cratchit's wife, dressed out but poorly in a faded dress and bonnet, but brave in ribbons, which she had made a goodly show for a poor woman, and she laid the cloth, assisted by Belinda Cratchit, second of her daughters, also brave in ribbons; while Master Peter Cratchit, plunged a fork in the saucepan of potatoes, and getting the corners of his nonpareil apron collar (Bob's private property, conferred upon him on his first day in the family) into his mouth, rejoiced to find himself so gallantly attired and yearned to show his little in the fashionable parks. And now two smaller Cratchits, boy and girl, came leaving in, screaming that outside the baker's they had smelt the goose and known it for their own; and banking in haggard thoughts of sage and onion, these young Cratchits danced about the table, and scolded Master Peter Cratchit for the delay, and for not getting the fowl roasted, and for not getting the fowl roasted, and for not getting the fowl roasted.

TRADE MARK

The above trade-mark, "The Old Chemist," which is blown in every bottle containing Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is your guarantee against fraudulent imitations and substitutes. In an interview a few days ago, Mr. Partridge, the veteran band-master, said: "Last April I took a sudden cold, and I was laid up with neuralgia in my shoulder, which brought on fever and took away my appetite, but by using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey I came out all right, and on Memorial Day I was leading my band and playing as well. I think your Malt Whiskey is just the medicine to tone up and keep up the strength of old people. Hoping your medicine will prove beneficial to others, I can truly recommend it as a valuable help."

Despite his advanced age, Mr. Partridge can still do as good work as men two score years younger. This is one of the thousands of cases where Duffy's Malt Whiskey drives out the germs of decay, and renders the system as healthy as that of a boy of twenty. This great tonic stimulant and elixir of life has been the means of prolonging the lives of thousands of men and women who cannot say too much in praise of it.

MERRY, MERRY CHRISTMAS

It is the day of all days, the one set apart by the customs of all climes, sacred to universal cheer.

Its origin is in the supreme statutes of nature, and its origin is in the human mind. While the Christ was yet unborn, our sun-worshipping ancestors, accepting the beneficent lengthening of the day at this time of year as a triumph of their god over the forces of darkness, instituted this festival of magnanimity and merry-making. And it has come down through the centuries, the growth of intelligence adding to its beneficence and the growth of religion perfecting its beauty. It is a festival that never is spent, no time, in age, no joy, but in the glad jubilee of all humanity, as natural as the breath of life.

To him who believes in Christ this is indeed the day of merry-making, for he celebrates not temporal good alone, but eternal emancipation of his soul from torment and the opening of his heart to the needs of his fellow men.

Merry, merry Christmas!
Joy to him who can be joyful, help to the poor, ministrations to the sick, consolation to the unfortunate, cheer to the discouraged, sympathy to the sorrowing.

These tender emotions well from sweet human nature, as pure water runs from a living spring.

For there is much good in man that was born in him. Love and hope, glory and joy, content and pain, tears and joy—the common elements of life—it is these which give birth to sympathy and kindness, the religion of the unregimented.

Good will toward men, self-sacrifice—these are the cornerstones of all religions and without which, no man can see his existence as an end in itself, they are of human nature and belong to all.

Yes, there are things of the earth, earthy things, but not such things as to give us hope of heaven, but if we use them rightly, be true to the best that is in us, and faithful to our fellows, we may have something like by removing much of evil and relieving much of sorrow in this world which is our own.

Merry, merry Christmas!

What may be our hopes or fears, dogmas, beliefs, this is the day of holy joy, the day we meet with kin and kind in countless festal, the gladdest day of charity, the wondrous day of giving gifts and cheery words, and being glad in making hearts of others glad.

Merry, merry Christmas!

CHILD'S OWN SEASON

The Christmas season, instead of being the gladdest time of the year, could be an intolerable bore, but for the joy of the children.

The exchange of presents and greetings among grown-up folk is far from what it is "cracked up" to be. It is a merely to-morrow-observing which most people are glad to do with.

If there were nothing else in Christmas giving than this, the happiest part of the Christmas time with all people in every town would be the day after. The signs of relief on that day would be sincere than all the smiles of the whole week before.

But the joyous laughter of the delighted children is the Christmas music that sets the heart-strings in quick vibration.

We call the Christmas bells sweet, but they would sound solemn and meaningless but for their accompaniment of joyous shouts and laughter of the little ones.

This joy of a child is the only perfect happiness in the world. And it is so easy to cause.

This is why Christmas, the day on which we all unite in giving joy to others, is the nearest approach mankind can make to a paradise on earth.

Let us remember that Christmas is supremely the day for the children, and that our own best joy must be in making them as happy as we can.

What a glorious feast of universal gladness the day would be, if every man and woman in celebrating gifts took care first of all to make at least one little child supremely happy!

God knows there is opportunity enough. If the children of your own friends are all supplied, there are plenty of children of the friendsless.

They swarm in the alleys, where the dollar that, if spent on some grown-up friend, would bring scarcely a smile of pleasure, will divide into a dozen gifts, bring shouts of joy from a dozen hearts to which joy is rare.

It is the sweetest music in the world.

FOR THE CHILDREN

At this happy Christmas time of the year, when all minds are turned to the children, alike of the nation, the community and the family, it is well to know that children are receiving more practical attention than ever before.

Child labor is being discussed from one end of the land to the other, and from the president in the white house to the poorest laborer in his humble hut. But there is another work for children which is progressing in the large cities. Chief among these is the crusade for pure milk.

This crusade in New York has already begun to bear rich fruit, not only in the saving of infant life in the metropolis but in the making of a wholesome and effective public sentiment in the same behalf in other communities in the country. Recalling the incident related of Dr. Child, who told the weeping mother who had informed him that "providence had removed her baby," "that providence had nothing to do with it," but that "bad milk had killed the baby," the New York Medical Record cites some statistics from New York, to substantiate the famous doctor's theory.

Recently published statistics issued by the New York board of health show that in 1881 the death rate from diarrheal diseases among children under 5 was 22.3 to the 1,000; in 1905 it was 14.9 to the 1,000. In the latter year, during the three months following June 10, the mortality from the same cause and under the same age limit was 1.98, this year in the corresponding period the death rate was 2.62. "Unquestionably," says the Record, "we must thank 'cleaner milk' for the saving in 1905 of many if not all of these 20 infant lives out of 1,000 that would have been lost in 1881, and of the 10 per cent reduction of infant mortality in the heated term of 1904 over that of the same period in 1905. And in this estimate we must not fail to consider the enormous amount of illness and distress not ending fatally by the use of wholesome milk."

When such happy results can be obtained by the operation of a humane law provided for securing a "pure milk" supply for the masses, it would seem that any community failing to employ such a law for the protection of innocence and infancy, is recreant to the duties good citizenship imposes upon it.

SPONGE NOT SPRING

August Belmont, of New York, has a "national income" in an income. He evidently he thinks he and his pocketbook are the nation.

In a speech before the Civic Federation, Belmont declared that if the great fortunes of the country are to be subjected to "punitive regulation" by an income and inheritance tax, then "the very springs of life will be dried up."

That happy phrase "springs of life" is peculiarly Belmont's. Cf. early, Belmont has in mind the water in his own stocks. Belmont's New York traction merger alone represents $200,000,000 in water. If this is to be poured under punitive regulation, there will be indeed a drying up of a considerable spring. And there are lots of others. But these are not the real springs of a nation's life. They are more like sponges, that swell up with water created by general industry. A good sponge would vastly reduce the sponge and send the water back to its proper place. This might be held on the sponge from the sponge viewpoint. But a sponge

That takes and takes water and never again expels it is a dead one, anyway.

The possible effects of the enactment of great fortune forms a subject that is open to almost endless dispute. But of all the opinions ever expressed, or likely ever to be expressed, on the subject, those of extremely rich men, who regard their own interests as being paramount to public interests, are the most worthless.

ALBUQUERQUE'S CHRISTMAS

The day before Christmas, ending on Monday, was in all parts of our country the most stirring and active day of the year. Especially was this the case in Albuquerque. There was hurrying to and fro. There was the hiding of various things about the house, in the drawers and in the closets. There were quiet shaggy dogs in the family, and the household for the time was filled in mystery. It was the last day in which to prepare for the coming of Santa Claus, and with many it was the first day, too, because Monday followed the holidays night day. In the evening houses were put in order for his reception. The Christmas tree was prepared. The stockings were hung up. The little folks went to bed with the intention of sleeping with one eye open to watch for the coming of Santa Claus, while the weary mother lay her head upon a pillow, happy in the anticipation of the joy coming to her darlings in the morning.

No one, says an exclamation, has ever seen the Christmas cheer who slips into the house to make happy the children and the more matured people. Some say he is a myth, but some say he is the cross-grained and the cranky talk that way. The gifts bestowed may be of little value, but they are priceless as remembrances. The spirit of Santa Claus should not be abused. His intention is only to give such presents as are useful and serve the purpose of making the receiver happier. If Christmas gifts are bestowed in this spirit, the coming of Christmas morning will always be a glad one to many hearts.

Yesterday, the real Christmas day, for which all the activity of the previous day was but the preparation, was characterized in this city by an almost complete cessation of labor, except upon the part of the busy housewife who prepared her sumptuous holiday feast, often enjoyed by visiting friends as well as the gathered family. But the sound of toll well high seemed, alike in store and market, and shop, and factory. There were but few in this city who were unable to have their own Christmas dinner, and those the Citizens undertakings, were bountifully supplied by the several benevolent organizations.

The custom of giving presents on Christmas, now so universally observed, some say has been derived from the old Roman Saturnalia, or feast of Saturn, at which it was customary for all of the members of a household to offer gifts to each other, and that, therefore, is not traceable, as has been sometimes claimed, to the New Testament account of how kings and wise men made their offerings to the infant Jesus. For the Christmas tree the world is indebted to the ancient Germans, who, during the continuance of their great feast of the winter solstice, hung large yule trees with rude gifts, decorations and lights. From them, too, came Santa Claus, Kris Kringle, Knecht Rapp and many other famous personages charged with the duty of bringing gifts to good children, as does also the beautiful fable that such offerings are brought directly by the sweet hands of the loving Christ child—the infant Jesus himself.

However these things may be, and their discussion is both needless and non-helpful, it is generally admitted that no description of the mirth and joy of an old English Christmas can be found in literature at all comparable to the following well-known extract from Mr. Walter Scott's "Marmion":

On Christmas eve the bells were rung,
That Christmas eve the songs were sung,
On that night in all the year,
Saw the stolen priest the chivalry rear.
Then opened wide the baron's hall,
To vassal, tenant, serf and all;
Power laid his robe and red and gold,
And ceremoniously bowed his head.
The harp with roses in her throat,
That night might village pastime choose,
All hailed, with uncontrolled delight,
And general voice, the happy night.
That to the cottage, as the crown,
England was Merry England when
Old Christmas brought his sports again.
'Twas Christmas brouched the mightiest kin,
'Twas Christmas told the merriest tale;
A Christmas gambol of would cheer
A poor man's heart through half the year.

The discussion is still going on whether the lack of transportation is due to the lack of cars, or of locomotives, or of tracks. ## FRISCO GRAFTERS IN BOLD SCHEME

An Investigation Asked For as a Ruse to Loot Relief Fund.

DECENT CITIZENS PROTEST
The Scandal Promises to Be a Juicy One For the Press.

San Francisco, Dec. 26.—The latest move in the war between the city officials and the grafters among the relief corporation members, whom the former blame for the investigation which will probably land them in the penitentiary, is a attempt to get control of the relief money. It develops that a petition is being circulated asking the mayor to investigate the relief work, and to take such measures as you deem necessary to the attainment of the objects and purposes for which the several million dollars were contributed.

The petition, has been obtained in large numbers, and contains a shameful misrepresentation of the facts.

From a reliable source it is learned that while the petition is directed to the mayor, he and his associates are paying for the printing of it and are using it as a means of raising money.

From what can be learned, it is the intention to get a large number of signatures and then, under pretense that he is acting in response to a popular demand, Schmitz will claim the right to appoint a new relief committee, and will get out of business those who are responsible for his being brought before the courts on a charge of having been faithless to the trust imposed in him by the voters of San Francisco.

The utmost secrecy has prevailed in the circulation of the petition, and only those in whom the League's league has confidence have been admitted to see it. This is Schmitz's one of the latest and boldest tricks that he has been attempting since the time Ruel endeavored to make himself district attorney.

That Schmitz is really trying to remove the relief corporation from power when the petition is filed is not understood. An attempt will be made to secure the National Red Cross, which has been attempting to raise money for the relief of the victims of the earthquake, and to get out of business those who are responsible for his being brought before the courts on a charge of having been faithless to the trust imposed in him by the voters of San Francisco.

This is Schmitz's one of the latest and boldest tricks that he has been attempting since the time Ruel endeavored to make himself district attorney.

That Schmitz is really trying to remove the relief corporation from power when the petition is filed is not understood. An attempt will be made to secure the National Red Cross, which has been attempting to raise money for the relief of the victims of the earthquake, and to get out of business those who are responsible for his being brought before the courts on a charge of having been faithless to the trust imposed in him by the voters of San Francisco.

The utmost secrecy has prevailed in the circulation of the petition, and only those in whom the League's
