HANGED IN EFFIC

Miners Remember J. Pierpont Morgan.

Steamers Collided in Deluth Bay.

Suburban Electric Car Ran Into an Engine.

TO GERMANIZE PROVINCES.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 7.—The hanging in effigy of J. Pierpont Morgan, in one of the streets of South Wilkesbarre, by a crowd of men and boys was the only incident to mar the stillness of the Wyoming valley this morning. After the effigy was hung the crowd cheered and pelted the object with stones until the police came along and dispersed the throng. All mining towns are very quiet.

The news that President Roosevelt could not find a way clear to take a hand in bringing about peace between the miners and operators was received with genuine disappointment. Today marks the end of the fourth week of the total suspension of coal mining and the miners and employers are farther apart than ever.

President Is Interested.

Washington, June 7.—The president today had a long conference at the white house with Senator Hanna on the coal strike. He conveyed to Mr. Hanna the idea he would like very much to do something toward settling the strike. Nothing definite, however, was decided upon. The president also sent for Carroll D. Wright, commissioner of labor, to give his views on the situation, and also what might properly be done by the government looking to a settlement of the controversy. Probably other conferences will be held and the president kept advised of the situation. He will be in readiness at any time to extend aid if it is found he can be of service in settling the differences that exist between the miners and employers.

After Sub Bosses.

Shamokin, Pa., June 7.—A mob of strikers late last night surrounded the homes of sub-bosses, Homer, Murphy and Rafter, and two Polish men, and built fires on which effigies representing the bosses were burned. The demonstration grew so vigorous the non-union men promised not to go to work today. The firemen at Luke Fiddler and Cambion collieries were stoned today.

Universally Obeyed.

Elkhorn, W. Va., June 7.—The general strike order has been universally obeyed in every field along the Norfolk & Western road. But few collieries are attempting to operate today and these that are, have not an eighth of the usual force at work.

The operators are endeavoring to keep the strikers away from the mines, where a few men are yet at work, but as yet no trouble has occurred. Probably 11,000 to 12,000 men are idle today.

Strike in Illinois.

Carbondale, Ill., June 7.—A strike involving 400 men of the Chicago-Carterville Coal company's shaft, which was begun today, may spread to every mine in the seventh district and possibly the state. The difficulty is over the scale of loaders and trimmers. The operators will appeal to the state operators' association and action will be taken by that body that may close every shaft in the district.

Skirmish Reported.

Huntington, W. Va., June 7.—A skirmish between mine officials and strikers is reported at Keystone and a mine boss killed. No one was named nor are particulars available.

STEAMERS COLLIDE.

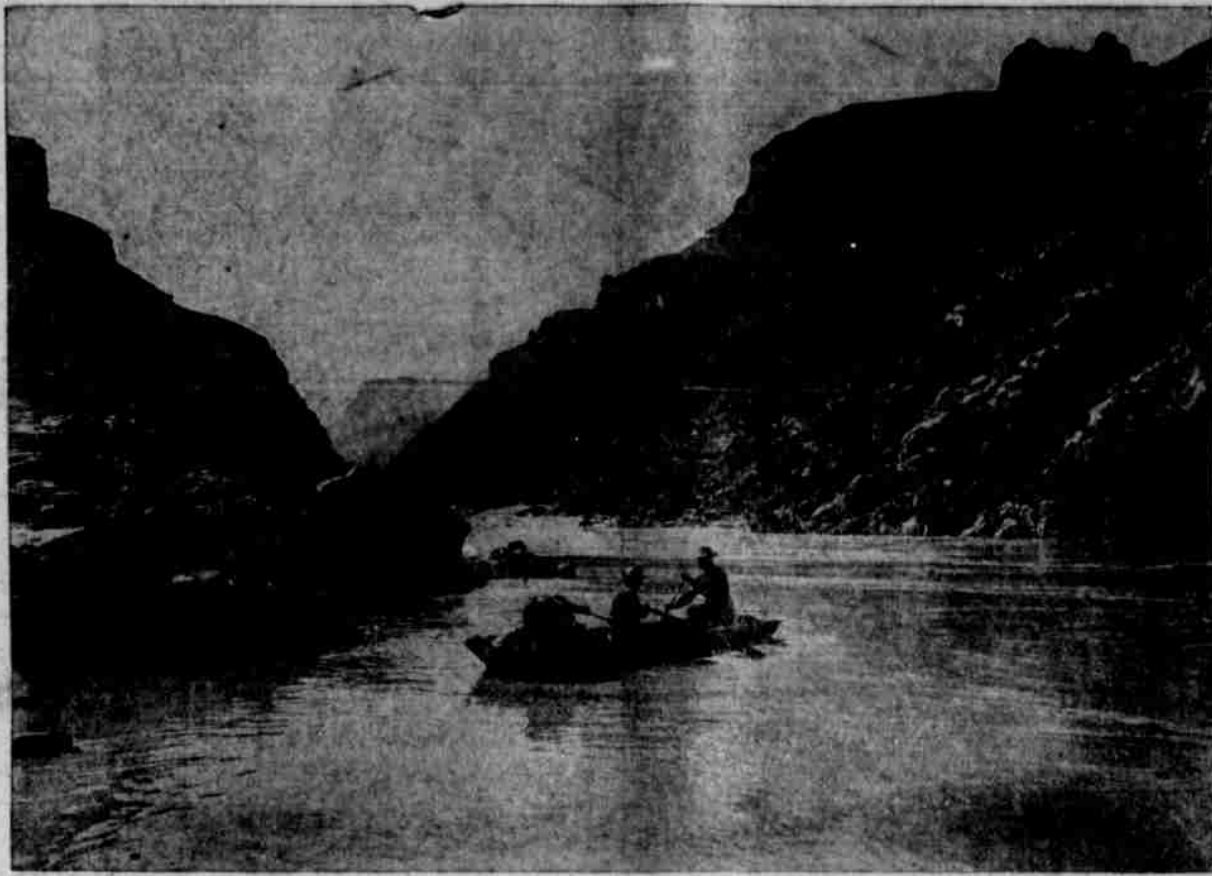

One Sank in Less Than a Minute's Time.

Duluth, June 7.—The whaleback steamer Thomas Wilson and wooden steamer George G. Hadley, collided in Duluth harbor today. The Wilson sank in less than a minute's time. The Hadley made a run for the beach and reached there none too soon. The life saving crew picked up several members of the crew of the Wilson but several are known to have drowned. None of the members of the night crew escaped.

A FATAL COLLISION.

Suburban Electric Car Ran Into an Engine.

St. Louis, June 7.—Twenty-five persons were injured, two fatally, in a collision between a suburban electric car and a Missouri Pacific engine at the crossing in East St. Louis. The men fatally injured are William Lazen, motorman on the electric car, and George Gibson, a negro laborer, who was on the front platform. The fireman and engineer of the railroad train were injured and removed to a hospital. Almost every one of the passengers on the trolley car were cut by flying glass or thrown against a door, window or seat. The injuries of the majority are slight, however. Inability to control the electric car, which ran into and derailed the engine, seems to have caused the accident.

Additional information from the scene of the wreck indicates that nearly forty-five persons were injured.

Germanize Provinces.

Berlin, June 7.—The lower house of the Prussian diet today passed on the third reading a bill providing for Germanizing the Polish provinces of Prussia.

MANY RESOLUTIONS.

Western Federation of Miners Declared for Woman Suffrage.

Denver, June 7.—The Western Federation of Miners this morning considered a number of resolutions. Woman's suffrage was endorsed and the members and working people generally are advised to work in the interest of woman's suffrage wherever possible. A resolution was unanimously adopted instructing the incoming executive board to confer with members of congress with a view of securing legislation for the government irrigation of arid lands of the west. A resolution also was adopted extending the sympathy and moral support of the federation to the striking weavers of Massachusetts and congratulating them upon their refusal to accept the "good offices" of the National Civic Federation with a view of settling the differences between the weavers and the mill owners. The convention will elect officers this afternoon.

SAN FELIPE DAY.

The Feast Will Be Held in Old Town Tomorrow.

Tomorrow, Sunday, June 8, the day celebrated in honor of the exalted saint, San Felipe de Neri, will be a gala day for the Catholics of Old Albuquerque. It will be feast day.

This evening at 7:30 will occur solemn vespers.

Sunday morning at 11 o'clock low mass will be held at the church. At 7:30 there will be music by the band and high mass will be held. In the afternoon at 4 o'clock there will be more music by the band, solemn benediction and procession. The celebrations of the day will close with a short, interesting program, beginning promptly at 8 o'clock p. m. Besides a short musical concert and fire works there will be pleasing addresses on appropriate subjects by Hon. O. N. Marron and Nestor Montoya.

SOMETHING WAS DIDDING.

Guns and Clubs Used in a Political Convention.

Welch, W. Va., June 7.—The republican convention for nominating a state senator here almost resulted in a riot. Guns and clubs were used. The chairman was carried from the hall, bruised and bleeding.

Trains Reported on Time.

No. 3 from the west on time. No. 1 of today, will arrive on time. First and second No. 1 of today, about four hours late. No. 7 of today on time. No. 99, local going south, carries passengers and will leave the city about 11 o'clock tomorrow.

Passengers coming from the east report bad washouts between Newton and Emporia, Kan., on Oklahoma division, repaired, and that trains will be running through on time tomorrow.

Building Contracts.

Several contracts were let yesterday. Architect J. L. LaDriere gave the contract for the excavation and foundations of Joe Barnett's new three-story brick block at Second street and Railroad avenue to C. A. Grande. The building will be 142x25 and will be one of the finest in the southwest.

The same architect let the contract for the new house of Frank Strong on North Twelfth street, to John Hart. The contract for plumbing was secured by Brockmeier & Cox.

ITS ULTIMATION.

The Santa Fe Will Not Allow Strikers to Return to Work.

STRIKERS HOLD MEETING.

The officers of the Santa Fe railway have at last declared themselves. They have taken no uncertain position in regard to the boilermakers here and at Needles and have made a flat footed announcement of just what they intend to do. The statement issued by the officers is given below. From its reading it will be seen that the striking boilermakers here and at Needles are discharged from the whole Santa Fe system for all time to come. The statement which reached here from the Los Angeles conference yesterday morning is as follows:

"It appears that the rate paid boilermakers at Needles is 37½ cents an hour. Winslow being the only other division point where wages for similar work is as high on the whole Santa Fe system. The rate quoted is 2½ cents per hour more than is generally paid for this particular kind of work. Recently the men at Needles made a demand for 40 cents an hour. The concession was refused and the committee that waited on the Santa Fe division management was informed that the 37½ cent an hour rate was being paid at Needles, and at Winslow because of presumed undesirability of those two stations. For a similar reason, the Southern Pacific pays the same rate in its shops at Yuma."

"In the meantime a mechanic at San Bernardino had been instructed to go temporarily from that place to Seligman. In transmitting the order the man affected was informed by mistake that his transfer was permanent. He declined to make the change desired, and his associates left their work. When the facts were explained to those in charge, the dissatisfied employee was told that his change was only a temporary affair, notwithstanding which the men refused to work until further demands were met."

"Later the San Bernardino men informed the railway management that they would be compelled to remain until the demands made by the boilermakers at Needles had been complied with. This could not be conceded, for reasons that must be apparent, and as no boilermakers could be obtained it has been thought advisable to close down the shops at San Bernardino and at Needles."

"How long the lockout will be continued is problematical, as we are determined that the men now out shall not return to work. Those men whose services are required have been notified, by their respective foremen, and the old hands and married men will have, as far as possible, such work as can be provided."

Machinists and Boilermakers Confer.

The machinists union of this city invited the striking boilermakers to confer with them at their lodge rooms in Allen's hall last evening. The meeting was one of straight business. There is only work at the local shop for ten machinists and the remaining thirty-four who are left without employment are beginning to wonder how long the present trouble is going to last. With this idea in mind that body of workmen asked the boilermakers to say how long they intended to hold out. To this question the strikers replied that they could not make definite answer for their reason that they had taken their stand and the settlement, if there was to be one, remained with the railroad company.

At the meeting there were forty-six machinists, which number includes the dozen men who still have employment at the local shop, and those who were laid off Tuesday.—San Bernardino Sun, June 5.

AFTER HER CHILDREN.

Mrs. Spencer Took Them to Jacksonville, Illinois Yesterday.

WERE STOLEN FROM HER.

Mrs. Franklin P. Spencer, of Jacksonville, Ill., yesterday got possession of her three children whom she had not seen for over a year, put them on a train and was miles away before the husband, who had taken them away from her, ever knew she was in the city. As it was feared the husband might follow her, and as she was acting under legal advice, The Citizen was requested to say nothing of the case last night in order that full opportunity might be given for her escape.

Some time ago there was trouble in the family and one morning Carter told his wife he was going to take three of the children for a drive. They did not return by night and Mrs. Spencer realized she had been abandoned and robbed of her children. Two were left to her. Every effort was made to trace the man, but he had covered his tracks too well. One of the little ones at home died and Mrs. Spencer was distressed over the three.

A few weeks ago a letter written in a scrawling hand reached the grandmother in Jacksonville, complaining of cruelty and telling where they were living. The chief of police telegraphed Marshal McMillin, who located the man here working under the name of R. W. Carter.

Carter has become well known here as he threatened suit against the board of education, sued Nick Matz for assaulting his son and had brought suit against his wife for divorce and the custody of the children. The suit was brought under his right name and the required publication was made in an old town Spanish weekly paper. It was the only English in the paper, and Marshal McMillin saw it.

Carter, or Spencer, is employed on the new depot.

His wife came in on one of the delayed trains and from a safe distance saw him go to work. A hack was waiting, and the children, overjoyed to be with their mother, were driven to the depot and started east. Less than a block away the father was at work.

When he returned home at noon he suspected what had been done and learned that his wife had been here, but he did not know that she had left town. Thus far he has made no attempt to follow them.

APPROPRIATION MADE.

Money Provided for the Omnibus Public Building Bill.

Washington, June 7.—At the opening session of the house today, Mr. Cannon, chairman of the committee on appropriations, asked unanimous consent to consider a resolution to authorize the conferees on the sundry civil appropriation bill to insert the necessary appropriations contained in the public buildings omnibus bill. He explained that about $6,000,000 should be the appropriation for the sundry civil bill on account of the omnibus act which was signed yesterday. No objection was made and the resolution was adopted. The house then resumed consideration of the anti-anarchy bill. Mr. Patterson, of Tennessee, offered an amendment to include judges of the supreme court on the list of those who are murdered while engaged in the performance of their official duties should be made punishable by death. He thought the lives of members of the supreme court should be considered as sacred as those of cabinet officers or foreign ambassadors.

The Crump amendment was lost. Mr. Crumpacker, of Indiana, offered an amendment as a new section providing that any person who should kill a president-elect or vice president-elect should suffer death. Mr. Ray declared the amendment unconstitutional, as the court had decided that until inauguration a president was a private citizen. The amendment was defeated, and several other amendments were defeated.

ALL WERE HELD.

"Bat" Masterson and His Confederates Up Against It.

New York, June 7.—William Masterson, known as "Bat" Masterson, James Sullivan, J. C. Sanders and A. P. Frank who were arrested yesterday charged with being concerned in a "brace" faro game, were held today on the charge of aiding and abetting gambler's games and inducing men to go to their rooms to play games of chance. Bail in each case was $500 and Masterson and Sanders were released, the other two going to the Tombs. Further examination was set for Monday. One of the alleged victims of the prisoners, George A. Snow, a preacher in the Mormon church, is said to have lost $28,000 in Chicago and detectives in the case today sought to have the prisoners held on an affidavit charging them with swindling Elder Snow in Chicago, but the court said it could not be done, as there was no evidence here as to what had occurred in Chicago. An additional charge of carrying concealed weapons was made against Masterson. He said when his revolver was taken away from him, that he had lost his best friend.

LOCAL PARAGRAPHS.

The children's day services of the Lead avenue Methodist church will be held at the Sunday school hour, 9:45, instead of in the afternoon, as before arranged. Those desiring children baptized should be present at that time.

Andres Romero and David Duham will leave tomorrow for the Romero sheep ranch, located about forty-five miles north of McCarthy's station on the Santa Fe Pacific. Mr. Denham has the contract to put up for Mr. Romero a fourteen foot windmill.

Washington, June 7.—In the senate today, Mr. Depew delivered an address in advocacy of a bill appropriating $10,000,000 for the purchase of 2,000,000 acres of land for a national forest reserve in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee. Mr. Depew said the project is favored by President Roosevelt. He predicted unless a reserve is established, within ten years the great hardwood forests within the reserve will be destroyed entirely.

BOERS REJOICED

Sang "God Save the King."

The Kansas Anti-Trust Law Upheld.

Court Martial is Recommended for American Naval Officers.

VILLAGE DESTROYED.

Cape Town, June 7.—The surrender of more than 1,500 Boers is already reported from various points. Commandant Fouché brought into Craddock, Cape Colony, his commando, consisting of 36 Free Staters and 219 rebels. Fouché is ill. Commandant Conroy's men, on hearing peace had been concluded, threw their hats in the air, cheered King Edward and sang "God Save the King." These incidents dispelled the fear expressed that Cape Colony commandos would refuse to accede to the peace terms. General Christian DeWet is personally superintending the surrender of the Boers in Vredfort, Orange River colony, district. General Schalkburger, former acting president of the Transvaal, is the guest of the governor of Natal at Pietermaritzburg and in an address at the burghers' concentration camp, asked them to make the best of the situation and forget and forgive the past. He pointed out the hopelessness of continuing the struggle and urged the Boers to accept and act in accordance with the terms of surrender, which he intended to uphold and desired them to work for the good of South Africa.

Kruger is Proud.

Amsterdam, June 7.—It is reported here that Mr. Kruger declined the facilities offered by Great Britain for his return to South Africa, but accepted Queen Wilhelmina's proffer of a Dutch vessel to convey him to South Africa when he decides to return there.

LAW WAS SUSTAINED.

Validity of the Kansas Anti-Trust Law Was Upheld.

Topeka, Kan., June 7.—The Kansas anti-trust law was affirmed by the state supreme court today. The decision was what is known as the grain trust case. E. J. Smiley, secretary of the Kansas Grain Dealers' association, was arrested under the provisions of the anti-trust law and convicted and fined $500 and given a jail sentence. The case was appealed to the supreme court and the validity of the anti-trust law attacked.

COURT OF INQUIRY.

Court Martial Recommended for Three Officers of the Navy.

Washington, June 7.—The navy department this morning gave out the following statement concerning the court of inquiry which investigated the case of the American officers arrested in Venice:

The court of inquiry recommends the trial by court martial of Lieutenant John Dorrige, U. S. N.; Captain Robert F. Wyndie, U. S. M. C., and Assistant Surgeon Robert E. Ledbetter, U. S. N., on the charge of unbecoming behavior in public; and that no further action be taken in the case of Cadet James C. Kruss, U. S. N., and Private Wilfred Langley, U. S. M. C. Admiral Crowninshield has disapproved the opinion and recommendation of the court of inquiry where it is adverse to the officers on ground there was not sufficient evidence.

There will be no further proceedings in this case, according to the present intention of officials. The grounds upon which Admiral Crowninshield disapproved the finding, namely, insufficiency of evidence, would not, it is believed, give any cause for offense by the Italian government. The admiral does not find the Italian court erred, but does find that situated as the Chicago is, it is not possible to secure evidence which would justify the assembling of a court martial.

A Village Destroyed.

Vladikavkaz, Russia, June 7.—The village of Cambulata, in the mountain pass of the Uch range, was destroyed by a landslide. A large rent suddenly appeared on the mountain which shortly afterward toppled over on the village and neighboring farms. The inhabitants escaped.

Officers Elected.

Denver, June 7.—The American Labor Union this morning completed the election of officers. The list is as follows: President, Daniel McDonald, re-elected; vice president, D. F. Oshea, Cripple Creek, Colo.; secretary-treasurer, Clarence Smith, Butte, Mont., re-elected; executive board, F. W. Ott, of Wyoming; F. W. Walton, of Idaho; H. M. Banker, of Colorado; W. P. Hughes, of Washington, and F. J. Pelletier, of Montana. The question of headquarters will be decided upon this afternoon, after which the convention will adjourn sine die.

By a vote of 30 to 31 it was decided to retain headquarters at Butte, Mont.

The Citizen publishes today a complete account of the commencement exercises of the New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, held last Wednesday. From a local point of view, the graduating talk of J. S. Because of the discovery that ophthalmia is prevalent among a large portion of the pupils in the public schools of New York city, the board of health has placed it on the list of contagious diseases, and physicians hereafter will be compelled to make reports of each case found in their private practice. Through investigations made in two of the public schools, where the eyes of about 2,000 children were examined, it was found that at least 10 per cent had the disease. In one of the schools 20 per cent of the children were afflicted, and in the other 15 per cent.

Delegate Rodey has introduced a bill providing that land heretofore donated to New Mexico for construction of reservoirs and improving the flow of waters of the Rio Grande river may be disposed of by the territory in such manner and amounts as may be provided by territorial law for the purpose of construction of reservoirs and impounding of waters of any or all streams of New Mexico. The right to impound and use these waters for irrigation and other useful purposes is recognized by the bill and granted to the territory or any other person or corporation authorized under its laws.

ACTUALLY INFECTIOUS.

The American congress of tuberculosis, which has been in session at New York, adopted a resolution declaring tuberculosis "an acute infectious disease," also the following resolutions:

"Whereas, Tuberculosis is an infectious disease ordinarily communicated from person to person by means of the dried sputum of a consumptive patient; and

"Whereas, The spread of tuberculosis could be largely controlled by proper care of such sputum and the enforcement of comparatively simple measures; therefore be it

"Resolved, By the American congress of tuberculosis, that the health authorities be urged to designate to the widest extent possible through the public press and otherwise, correct information as to the manner in which this disease is produced, and the means to be employed for its prevention.

"Resolved, That we believe it to be the duty of the national, state and municipal governments to enact rational methods for the prevention of tuberculosis, and we recommend the establishment of institutions for the care of indigent consumptives.

"Resolved, That there should be state and municipal supervision of all public conveyances for the transportation of passengers, and in view of the fact that spitting on the floors of public conveyances favors the spread of tuberculosis and is injurious to the public health, it is recommended that transportation companies be induced to pass and to enforce rules against this act.

"Resolved, That appropriations should be requested from state and municipal governments for the publication and distribution of literature as a means of education in the prevention of the spread of tuberculosis.

"Resolved, That all cases of tuberculosis should be reported by the attending physician to the health boards for the purpose of disinfecting of houses occupied by consumptives."

WIDOW WANTS A HUSBAND.

A newspaper of Tokio, Japan, recently published the following advertisement:

"I am a pretty woman. My luxuriant, curly hair envelops me like a cloud. My figure is as slender as the branch of a willow tree, and my body just as supple. My face is smooth and shining like the satin sheen of flowers. I am a widow and sufficiently wealthy to walk hand in hand through life with a husband. If I should find a good-looking, pleasant, intelligent and well educated lord and master, who also possesses good taste, then I would be ready to unite myself with him for life and share the pleasure of enjoying with him the eternal rest offered by a tomb of red marble."

Here is a chance for some good-looking American who is unable to make a living for himself to get a pretty wife with plenty of dinero to take care of him for life. The average man may not be caught by a "figure as slender as the branch of a willow tree," but then there is the supple body, the flower-like face and money enough to enable the husband to walk through life and take an occasional ride on the trolley cars, and these attractions are sufficient to cause a worldly man to fall in love with a very slender figure. Then there is the tomb of red marble to sleep in after life's fitful fever is over.

The offer of the pretty Japanese widow is not a bad one, but the trouble is that the men who would be willing to accept it haven't enough money about their clothes to take them to the widow.

READ ALL OF THIS.

You Never Know the Moment When This Information May Prove of Infinite Value.

It is worth considerable to any citizen of Albuquerque to know the value and use of a medicine, for if there is no occasion to employ it, in the meantime, frail humanity is subjected to so many influences and unforeseen contingencies that the wisest are totally unable to gauge the future. Know then that Dr. Doan's Ointment will cure any case of hemorrhoids, commonly known as piles, or any disease of the rectum or skin, generally termed eczema.

Mr. C. L. Kline, of 1851 Champa street, Denver, Colo., says:

"In 1883 in Minneapolis I had my feet frozen or suffered from chilblains or something akin to them, which drove me half crazy with itchiness. I have often taken off my shoe, threatened to tear out my toes, and do what I could I was unable to check the aggravation, but alone cure it. I bought a 50 cent box of Doan's Ointment at my druggist's, used it and it cured me. If anyone in Denver wishes to know more about Doan's Ointment send them to me for a personal interview."

"I suffered from dyspepsia and indigestion for fifteen years," says W. T. Sturdevant, of Merry Oaks, N. C.

"After I had tried many doctors and medicines to no avail one of my friends persuaded me to try Kodol. It gave immediate relief. I can eat almost anything I want now and my digestion is good. I cheerfully recommend Kodol." Don't try to cure stomach trouble by dieting. That only further weakens the system. You need wholesome, strengthening food. Kodol enables you to assimilate what you eat by digesting it without the stomach's aid. J. H. O'Reilly & Co., and B. H. Briggs & Co.

The building of this canal would open up to settlement this large tract of land and be the means of increasing the population and taxable wealth of the county many fold.

That Lame Back

You can hardly straighten up, the back feels so sore. There's a chance that it is kidney "trouble," and that is something which it is dangerous to neglect. The best medicine for disease of the kidneys is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

The use of this medicine has resulted in some remarkable cures. It increases the activity of the blood-making glands, purifies the blood and relieves the kidneys from clogging impurities. "I feel it my duty to let you know that I have recently advised a young gentleman who was suffering badly with kidney and bladder disease to try your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' He bought four bottles from our druggist here, and after he had used the first bottle he began to improve. Sometimes he was unable to walk ten steps, now he can ride any horse without any pain in his back and he looks as well and sound as a young boy. His age is only 25. He has suffered for nearly three years, and several other doctors called the case incurable, but I had confidence in Dr. R. V. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I have been offered one hundred dollars several times already for my kind advice, but I would not accept it because I want everybody to know what Dr. Pierce's famous medicine can do. "This testimony is absolutely true, and the reason I haven't mentioned the young gentleman's name is because he doesn't want to have his name published."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." The sole motive for substitution is to enable the dealer to make the little more profit paid on the sale of less meritorious preparations.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets stimulate the action of the sluggish liver. They should always be used with "Discovery" when there is need of a laxative.

fees will be in full bloom next month. Judge N. G. Layton is visiting at Phoenix this week.

A few cases of whooping cough are reported among the little children of Flagstaff.

Frank D. and B. R. Eaman, of Detroit, Michigan, arrived recently and will remain during the summer. The young men are nephews of the well known stockmen, C. B. and T. H. Eaman. Frank D. Eaman is an editorial writer on the Detroit Free Press.

The J. M. Dennis Lumber company at Rhoades have rebuilt their box factory, which was destroyed by fire. New machinery is being received and installed, and in a few weeks the factory will be running. The sawmill is running full time and everyone about the place is busy.

The fire department was called out twice during the week. The first call was to put out a fire at the Cook building, adjoining the Pioneer drug store. The fire had gained some headway, but was promptly extinguished by the Pioneer hose company. The other blaze was a stable and corral on the Toler lot, near the railroad track, and it was allowed to burn. Both fires were said to have been caused by sparks from the Santa Fe locomotives.

From Hot to Cold.
Dysentery is prevalent everywhere in summer and is due to miasmatic poisons, and begins abruptly with inflammation of the mucous lining of the large bowel. In America the disease is common, but properly treated does not result as seriously as in the tropics. Perry Davis' Painkiller is the best known remedy and the most efficacious in the treatment of dysentery.

THE GRAND CANYON.

Nowhere in the World Has Its Like
Been Found or Seen.

AN EDITOR'S OPINION.

The following is an extract from an article published in the Woodland, Cal.,
Home Alliance, by a member of the California Passenger association, which visited the canyon a couple of weeks since:

Pursuing our journey we reach Williams, where we leave the main line and take the Grand Canyon railroad to the canyon's rim. It is a three hours' ride over low hills and occasional gulches, through Coconino forest, one of the natural parks peculiar to Arizona, forests of pine, free from undergrowth. The air is light and agreeable temperature, always exhilarating, and the journey is a novelty and a delight. We arrived at the hotel at the head of the Bright Angel trail
Wednesday at 10 a. m.

There was no hint or sign of the canyon until we found ourselves right up on its rim. The most unearthly scene ever looked upon, too stupendous to describe in words. A vast chasm before which one stands with neither speech nor language, feeling as if a slide had been suddenly withdrawn, permitting us to look into another world. The scene was so different from what we had expected—so unlike anything that we had ever seen. What was spread out before us was seventy-five miles of the canyon, a chasm thirty-three miles wide at the top. As we look across from the top on which we stand to the other side and see nothing but intervening space, we instinctively draw back. Looking down we see a great trough eighteen miles wide and from 5,000 to 7,000 feet deep, or having a vertical depth of nearly one mile.
But it is not straight and regular like a trough. For before us is every form of architecture man ever conceived, and many he never made use of. Castles and domes, great walls and battiements, turrets and amphitheatres, too vast to compare with anything ever seen. Looking down into the great depths below we catch a glimpse of the Colorado river which looks like a tiny stream, although it is 300 feet wide.
On the trail below we see what appears to be two small pasteboard boxes, but what are really two large tents.
The willow trees about fifteen feet high surrounding the tents, look like grass. After viewing all this it is impossible to realize the immensity and wonderful depth of the canyon until you go down into it and see the river, which is still hundreds of feet deeper than the canyon. Those who have visited the Yellowstone and Yosemite, say that they, wonderful as they are in precipices, are babies besides the peerless gorge, and some go so far as to say that twenty Yosemite's would be lost in this immense gorge.

With the building of the branch from Williams, came an influx of visitors and now hundreds of visitors stop over and make the trip to the canyon. This makes Williams the coming town of Arizona. The travel to the canyon is growing to such an extent that it will be necessary to run at least two trains a day each way this summer. All visitors spend time and money there.

The town has now a population of 2,500, elevation 6,750. Its principal resources are lumbering, mining and stock raising.

Dennett, deceased, for $380 for service rendered in doing housework at home of Dennett for several years at $2 per week, the court, on trial of the case, held claimant entitled to recover only for period of six months immediately prior to decedent's death, for which an express contract was established.

In matter of claim of Josephine J. Gutierrez against estate of H. L. Warren, an appeal from probate court, the court on motion of the administrator of the estate of H. L. UNIVERSITY NOTES.

This week examinations have been in progress at the university and although some of them were quite hard, the students all fared very well in the final issue.

All the seniors succeeded in making all requirements and two were granted certificates by the faculty, although they have not allied themselves with the class. Miss Lillian Huggett will receive her diploma for having completed the preparatory work of the school, and Miss Nora Tanner, who a number of years ago took the commercial course and then went to Arizona, has since completed the work through correspondence and will receive the diploma from that department.

The senior class has been decorating Colombo hall today and the class colors are distributed everywhere. The hall looks very pretty.

Sad Death.

Mrs. L. B. Baxter, mother of Mrs. F. Folsom, wife of night yardmaster of the local Santa Fe yards, died at her daughter's home at 230 North Walter street at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Spring Fever.

Spring fever is another name for biliousness. It is more serious than most people think. A torpid liver and inactive bowels mean a poisoned system. If neglected, serious illness may follow such symptoms. DeWitt's Little Early Risers remove all danger by stimulating the liver, opening the bowels and cleansing the system of impurities. Safe pills. Never gripe. "I have taken DeWitt's Little Early Risers for torpid liver every spring for years," writes R. M. Everly, Mountville, W. Va. "They do me more good than anything I have ever tried." J. H. O'Reilly & Co., and B. H. Briggs & Co.

The board of town trustees held a very busy session in which several important matters were disposed of. H. J. Dague was appointed marshal, and arrangements were made for collecting the dog tax, and for suppressing the dangerous practice of throwing stones on the streets of the town.

Within the past two weeks more than $20 worth of damage has been done to the vacant property owned by Gen. C. F. Easley in the south part of town, by two or three boys who have wilfully and maliciously smashed the windows and otherwise injured the buildings. The kind of work is a disgrace to any town, and the perpetrators should be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Last Friday night a team belonging to the Cochiti company was driven over from Albemarle by Al. Munkers and hitched in front of J. G. Creager's store. While he was in the store the team broke loose and went home, leaving Mr. Munkers to leg it over the hill. The rig sustained no serious damage.

They claim to be well impressed with the advantages of the district and we believe the trade will be consummated within a very few days. Good times ahead.

With the completion of the Woodbury mill, the early erection of an immense plant by the Navaho company and the invasion of the district by Colorado capital, namely, the Stratton people and the Telluride Reduction company, will come the greatest wave of prosperity ever known to sweep over any portion of the territory. The cattlemen in those districts are anxiously waiting for the rainy season to start in as it will save a large number of cattle for them.

Trout Fishing is Reported to Be Good, the Fish Being of Good Size.

H. U. Mudge, general manager of the Santa Fe railway, and Secretary of State Clark, of Kansas, are enjoying an outing on the beautiful upper Pecos. They arrived at Winsor's ranch on Tuesday.

Mr. Winsor was in Santa Fe buying supplies. He says that the river is in fine condition and that the catch of trout this season thus far has been most satisfactory to visitors, the fish being above the average in size. Several one and a half and two pounders have been landed. Last fall Mr. Winsor secured 500,000 rainbow trout from the government and placed them in the stream near his place. He also placed 1,000 of these in the big lake on the eastern slope of Mount Baldy. These will provide great sport in a year or two.

New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts,

MESILLA PARK, NEW MEXICO.

Ninth Annual Commencement, June 4, 1902.

The ninth annual commencement of the New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, down in the productive Mesilla Park, took place Wednesday, June 4, 1902, in the McFie hall of the main college building.

It was at the hour of 11 o'clock, a. m. that President Foster, with the faculty, graduates, and board of regents filed onto the rostrum and took seats, the hall having been appropriately decorated with flowers and evergreen, products of the famous Mesilla valley.

After the orchestra had rendered "Sunshine in January," Rev. W. A. Cooper, who took Ex-Governor L. Bradford Prince's place as a member of the board of regents, stepped forward and delivered the invocation. This was followed by an overture from the orchestra, and then

Extract from Thesis—"The Kindergarten; Its Origin and Development," by Miss Elizabeth Foster, as follows:

When the Nineteenth century opened schools were in a most deplorable condition. Schoolmasters were ignorant and brutal, believing in the old adage, "Spare the rod and spoil the child." The teachers were taken from the ranks of the broken down. Failure in everything else had always the resource of school keeping. Charles Dickens has given us vivid pen pictures of the horrible condition of the English schools, and those of other countries were on a par. This system, or rather non-system of schools, continued until about the middle of the century, when the reformation movement began. It resulted from the efforts of a few earnest men.

One generation after another produced an educational reformer, each succeeding educator basing his principles upon those of his predecessor. Prominent among these were Pestalozzi and Froebel. They saw the need of change in the schools and sought a way to accomplish it. Pestalozzi believed that it could be done by sympathy between the parent and child, and by a system of discipline based on love. Froebel took the principles of Pestalozzi for a foundation, and upon these he built his own reform. He gave his whole strength to the work of the child's early years, and was especially fortunate in the name he gave to his system, "kindergarten," meaning literally a garden of children. In nature's garden, plants expand and grow to best advantage under the warmth of sunny skies and the quickening power of genial rains; for mother nature knows well under what conditions she rears her best results. In Froebel's garden of children, thought is growing, intellect unfolding, and character forming under the quickening power of loving instruction, and careful direction. The gardener stirs the soil, to give the sun and air free access. The kindergarten stirs the child's mind to action by her interest in his little world, her sympathy quickens growth in all his powers, and the human being expands under this influence as a flower opens in the sunlight.

The kindergarten was the result of much patience, diligence, and forethought; but more especially was it the expression of a deep and true love for children. Pestalozzi was without doubt the originator of the idea, but he lacked the ability to express his thought in action. He had already established a school in a small German village, when Froebel conceived his idea of teaching. Having long admired Pestalozzi's scheme of education as well as the brilliant intellect of the man himself, Froebel became his pupil and lived in close touch with the teacher and his principles for two years. This wonderful pupil of Pestalozzi's was a great lover of nature, and this love brought little children nearer to him. He taught school for some time, but felt that he was not accomplishing what he ought, and he was restless because his undertaking was not larger. While occupied with other things, his thoughts still dwelt with the little children, and he sought some way of aiding them. His own early life had been so desolate of love, and so lonely, that he strongly sympathized with childhood's wrongs. The lack of means so crippled his early endeavors, that they seem failures. He worked for some years to evolve a system that should embody his principles of education, and finally brought forward what is now known as the Froebelian system. Out of this grew his kindergarten. The name came to him almost as an inspiration, and no longer as there are little children, the kindergarten will be a memorial to Froebel.

By studying nature and humanity Froebel came to the conclusion that the development of children and plants were analogous. He saw that a plant could be bent into any shape and trained to grow in any way, when young, but later on, it would break under training and could be changed only with difficulty. Under his interpretation of creation, the laws of growth and development that govern plant life, govern child life. He believed the early years to be the educational period, most vitally important to the whole aftergrowth; and he sought, in nature's garden, to learn the secrets of the springtime. Life is motion; growth, directed motion; interest creates spontaneity, and strength results from unity. Childhood is a period of intense activity; so Froebel planned the plays, the gifts, and the occupations.

Environment surrounds the future; children, whose surroundings are brutal or degrading, rarely rise above this level; on the contrary, those brought up where nature's beauty and sweetness are never lost sight of, have a tendency to rise to higher levels and grander things. "The child is father to the man," and men make nations; these rise or fall, moved by the spirit of mankind. The Great Teacher, when on earth took a little child and set him in the midst of the learned ones, saying: "Except ye become as one of these," There is no nobler calling than that of training little children. Foremost in this work was Froebel, who ranks as one of the world's greatest educators, for while he took as a basis the principles that had been advocated by earlier reformers, he added many of his own, and elaborated a system that tends to make humanity better and stronger. He not only reformed the schools, but he brought out beliefs, which, if lived up to, would change the world. They were not tenable in Froebel's time; nor are they yet accepted in the full sense necessary to world reformation; but the ideas of brotherhood and unity embodied in Froebel's kindergarten, have strong, deep-rooted roots that will nourish and sustain them, until justice in the spirit of Christ shall govern the nations of the earth.

After the reading of the above interesting paper on "The Kindergarten," Mrs. Thos. Brannigan sang as a solo, "One Morning, On So Early."

Extract from Thesis—"An Exposition of the Theater," by Theron Catlin Bennett followed:

In our digestion and appreciation of the present we seldom revert to origin. In fact few of us are interested in the origin; but we are satisfied if we accept the present.

The theatre as we know it today had a purely religious origin. It was in Greece 600 years before Christ. Odes were chanted at the festival of the god Dionysus who was the deity of vegetation and giver of earth's increase. The chief sacrifice offered on this occasion was a goat, so these odes were called goat songs, tragodia, hence our word tragedy. This performance was participated in by 16-30 people, some of the participants of the God being known as Selenvi, who were of comic shape in body having horses ears and tails. There were also the maenades women who were clad in the skins of goats or fawns, who clashed symbols, waved torches and garlands, beat hand drums and blew shrill flutes. Such ecstasy of worship brought the vine to be the chief attribute of Dionysus, and wine became useful in simulating this necessary part of the ritual. So Dionysus ultimately grew to be the god of wine, known in Latin as Bacchus.

This performance had as many acts as there were changes of masks, which seldom exceeded three changes. Plots grew slowly and finally Euripides wrote a complete narrative, the Alcestes, in 438.

These same Greeks traveled through the villages and sang lively choruses in honor of their harvest god. These choruses were called komodia village songs, hence our word comedy. Comedy was propagated in Greece, but it was not nourished like tragedy in Greece. Comedy was nourished in England and France; but it was not perceptible till the crusades in the eleventh and twelfth centuries, when mental activity began in all branches; in commerce, politics and the arts. Thus began tragedy and comedy, the first two elements of the theatre.

In the instructive pages of Mr. Maurice Albert we can trace the propagation of two more elements, the opera comique and the melodrama. Mr. Albert traces the steps by which the showmen came first from exhibits of walking, then they speedily broke out into song and dance; but the showmen relied upon acrobatics as an important element in the delight which they gave to those who paid to see their performances. These performances were main features of a fair held at different seasons in Paris. When the fair outlived its usefulness and was abandoned, more than one of its theaters was firmly established on the boulevard, to remain to this day the home of melodrama, born nurtured and brought to maturity in the fair.

From the same primitive song and dance in the same kind of variety show in the same hundred years (18th-19th centuries), was developed the opera comique, not merely the comic opera which is often only buffoonery and glitter, but the finer form of which "Crown of Diamonds" may be taken as the type and of which "Mignon" and "Carmen" are later examples. But the opera comique it is true is not wholly the child of this folk theatre of the fair, but there was another child, the child of the comedie italienne, a folk theatre established in France to afford shelter for Italians driven from their native country. The banished Italians put music to improvised comic plays, which became known as the "Comedia dell'Arti." These Italians in their primitive opera freely mingled acrobatics with dramatics, and their clown while soaring on some high tone had to turn somersaults as well as crack jokes. So the origin of the opera in Italy, as many presume, is false. Some Italians were connected with it, but it was under French support, in France, that these Italians helped to propagate the germs which ultimately grew into opera.

We now know the propagation of all the elements which gave to us this ultimate growth—our present theatre. Let us summarize.

The tragedy, or goat song, and comedy, or village songs, through purely religious motives originated in Greece 600 years before Christ but comedy did not develop till fifteen centuries later in England.

The melodrama and opera were children of France, born at the annual fairs of Paris, and these children were not born until 100 years ago.

What is this ultimate growth? Is it detrimental or beneficial to the progress of civilization.

Wm. Dean Howells says: "In the stage civilization is greatly concerned for the morals and education of the public are directly influenced by this art. The stage is fast becoming recognized as a direct influence upon the morals and education of the public. So I say that the play house should become a national institution, run by the government to teach those now reaching maturity, just as the government's high school teaches the youth.

Theatre the nation may teach lessons to those who come to their senses too late or were prevented by poverty to take advantage of the instruction offered in our countries high schools. The theatre would not teach algebra or Latin, no! But do you not acquire a sense of morality in your high school education? Yes, and you all agree with me that there is more algebra and Latin acquired than this sense of morality. So I strenuously uphold that the stage has a work to do which no other force can accomplish. The church does good and has had an important part in the progress of civilization; but the church does not reach the masses—it does not teach the masses. This is not such a terrible world and utopia is not so far off as some think.

We need a little more patience, a little more charity for all, a little more devotion, a little more love; with less bowing down to the past. We need a brave looking forward to the future, with more confidence in ourselves and more faith in our fellows.

Is not that what ministers of the gospel have cried for centuries?

The theatre is place where the sense of morality can be taught. I am not to try to go into details to show how this can be done, but I emphasize the fact that it can be done. I refer to the editorials of Rev. Charles Sheldon of Topeka, Kas., who says that "the theatre must become the nation's school to teach to you and me a higher sense of morality." Also watch for articles in the magazine from Brander Mathews, Columbia's rhetorician. He writes extensively on this question and one splendid article may be found in the August number, 1900, North American Review. The thoughts and theories of today may become the rubbish of tomorrow. You cannot build a Chinese wall around the human intellect. Hence for me this proposition has no terror. If good, the people in time will accept it; if found otherwise, they will in time reject it, and in this as in all else affecting the welfare of the race, it is safe to trust the good sense of the people.

The public is not always right, but it is right oftener than anyone else.

The theatre as a teacher of morality as a means to the end, which end is utopia, I say that the theatre as this means is in its infancy. It is being tried in Kansas City, Chicago and the states of Central America. Whether the teacher as a teacher of morality is one of the great world's altar stairs that slope through darkness up to God, as its advocates sincerely believe; or whether the slopes tends in the opposite direction as its detractors assert, it is not my purpose to inquire now, for time and time alone can determine.

Under the immortal declaration of the fathers of our republic, as well as under constitutions and laws, this is a land of liberty filled with liberty loving people, who hate oppression and love fairness and justice. Hence the theatre as a means to teach morality and lift the nation to a higher plane of progress and education may be upheld or opposed precisely under the same rights and under the same public duties.

Sir Walter Scott long ago recognized the theatre as a means to utopia as the end. He wrote, "I know of no calling that so purifies one's character, that gives an opportunity to raise the standard of morality as that of the stage." God bless the stage and its people, for it has the nation's destiny in its hands.

And Colonel Major, "one of the most soul stirring marches, was then rendered by the orchestra, followed by Abstract of Thesis—"Zaraguetra," by Miss Elizabeth Coleman.

The action of the two act comedy, "Zaraguetra," is supposed to be of the present day and take place in the house of Don Indalecio, a wealthy farmer of the province of Salamanca. He and his wife, Dona Dolores, are the guardians of the orphan cousins, Maruja and Carlos. Dona Blasa is the sister of the village priest and is quite anxious for her son, Pio, to marry Maruja. Dr. Satrio, the country physician, and Zaraguetra, the money lender of Madrid, from whom the play takes its name, completes the cast of characters.

The play opens with the lady of the house and her niece, Maruja, preparing a room for the reception of Carlos, who has written them of his severe illness in Madrid and of the necessity for his removal to Paris for surgical operation. Don Dolores and Don Indalecio, who by the way is a great gourmand, go to the station to meet their sick nephew, who coming by another way misses them and finds only his cousin, Maruja, and the servants at home. Upon entering the door Carlos reaches the center of the room, feigns a weakness and faints upon the shoulder of Maruja, who cries: "He has fainted. Help! Help! What shall we do? Dear! Dear!" and Gregoria, the servant, says: "At least you will have the pleasure of dying in the arms of your family." The servants rush out in search of doctor and uncle and aunt, whereupon Carlos strangely revives and becomes himself again to the great surprise of Maruja, to whom he says:

"Maruja, dear little Maruja, cousin of my soul, if I should reveal to you a most profound secret, would you be capable of keeping it?"

"Well, I should say so."

"You are the only person in whom I can confide. I need some one to help me. My condition, believe me, is most serious."

"Not so bad as that Carlos. You are not so ill as you believe."

"Why, I am not ill at all," says Carlos.

"What!" exclaims Maruja.

"Why I have a bomb proof constitution."

"What do you mean?" asked Maruja, astonished.

"That is the secret. Hear the list which I have been making up on the train and which constitutes the catalogue of my infirmities," whereupon Carlos reads the list of his debts in Madrid, which includes the butcher, the baker, the candle stick maker, and worst of all, Don Hermogenes Zaraguetra. Sum total, 4,075 pesetas.

Well, Carlos in the end secures the help of Maruja to persuade their aunt to give him 4,000 pesetas, with which to make the supposed trip to Paris.

Unfortunately, Dr. Satrio happens in and after thorough examination and diagnosis, proclaims Carlos well and sound, except for a possible nervous affection, and a strange brown coating of the tongue, which, while unknown to the village doctor, was in reality caused by eating the chocolate bon bons which had constituted the sole food of the student since leaving Madrid. The doctor prescribed vigorous exercise, absolute fasting, except for sugar and water, which regulations the anxious aunt rigorously enforces upon the half famished student. While the aunt is gone in search of fresh milk and the uncle is gone, Carlos comes down from his room and Maruja, who has been with a half chicken, boiled ham, pickled trout, bread and wine. She also relates the story of how Pio wishes her to inform his mother, Dona Blasa, that Carlos and she, Maruja, are engaged to be married in order that he, Pio, may be free to pursue his studies for the priesthood, unmolested by the insistence of his mother, that he pay the court to Maruja. Maruja considers this proposal an absurdity, but Carlos insists in all seriousness upon its reasonableness, whereupon ensues the delightful little love scene, without which no story, novel, play or experience is complete.

That night while watching over him his aunt bears Carlos' mother in his sleep the name of his bitterest enemy Zaraguetra. In explanation to which Maruja claims that Zaraguetra is the name of Carlos' physician in Madrid.

Following the directions of Dr. Satrio, Carlos goes out for a vigorous walk, carrying gun and game bag. While he is gone his arch enemy, Zaraguetra, who is the guardian of the payment of the notes which Carlos owes him, Zaraguetra has the habit of pretending deafness to escape the reproaches of his victims and the approaches of unprofitable customers. The fond uncle and aunt, taking him for Carlos' beloved physician, receive him with great cordiality and insist upon entertaining him during his stay in their midst. Intent upon preparation for his homecoming to the wine cellar after having given full instructions to the servant for dinner.

Zaraguetra goes into Don Indalecio's study to write a letter to his sister.

Carlos finds Maruja upon his return and she informs him of the appearance of Zaraguetra upon the scene, to his consternation and dismay. He determines to flee, but while Maruja goes for the money needed for his escape, Carlos changes his mind and decides that Zaraguetra shall furnish the fugitive. He gets his gun and when Zaraguetra comes in he threatens him with immediate execution unless he forthwith departs.

The servants and Pio enter as Zaraguetra leaves and thinking Carlos mad through a nervous attack, subject him and lock the door. Don Indalecio and Dona Dolores came up and after great lamentations over the supposed madness of their nephew, Indalecio runs for Dr. Satrio. Pio starts to the drug store, Dona Dolores and Gregoria run to the kitchen to make a soothing decoction, leaving Maruja alone in the room. The latter opens the door and tells Carlos to run. She goes up stairs and throws him his coat and a kiss from the window. Zaraguetra happens back to see if the coast is clear and seeing Carlos and the open door of the wood room enters the latter to escape the former, whereupon Carlos turns the key and enters an adjoining room. The all return with the doctor who prescribes a hydropathical application as the best means of becoming the unsettled mind of the invalid. Perico brings the garden force pump and Pio a tub of water, with which they, respectively, through the transom give the miserable Zaraguetra a thorough drenching. He enters and is exposed by Carlos, who comes on conveniently to make a climax and the whole results in a striking tableau. Carlos confesses both his debts and his love. Zaraguetra is paid, the paternal blessing is vouchsafed and in punishment for Zaraguetra's deception, Don Indalecio declares that he will eat alone the repast prepared for Zaraguetra. Let them bring on the feast, and so say we all.

After the young lady had been generously applauded, Miss Frances French stepped forward and spoke the following extract from Thesis on

"Victor Hugo's Development of the French Novel."

What Victor Hugo has contributed to the French novel is admirably represented in his development of "Les Misérables." "His work is the highest point of the humanitarian tradition of French genius." The spirit of the work is prompted by a democratic conception of the ideal. The whole idea is modern. That he is a thorough student of sociology; that he understands human nature, its emotions, its passions, its aspirations; that he is a skillful workman in the dissection of the workings of the human heart, is easily discerned by the reader of "Les Misérables." Hugo gave direction to and led whatever arrangements were greatest and most influential in the generation of 1830 and identified it with his own mastery and commandant talent.

To give in this detailed account of the plot, its complexities, its wonderful mechanism, its subtle skill in setting forth the contrast of characters, is impossible. Let us now look into the character of Jean Valjean and see if Victor Hugo has succeeded in bringing out some of the ideas which he wished to promulgate.

It is hard to imagine a character so grand and noble and at the same time so pathetic as that of Jean Valjean.

If Jean Valjean was an ignorant man, he was not weak-minded. The profundity of the thoughts—the questions and the answers which were revolved and examined in his mind, as described by Hugo, are almost beyond the human intellect. The force and strength of his decisions are sometimes criticized as being bigoted and untrue to life. Those who thus criticize him, to my mind, do not understand him. He had radical opinions, 'tis true; opinion which were new to society in general. He hated the sham, the hypocrisy which prevailed in French society. He was pleading for the unfortunate; for more humane laws; he was pleading for a closer union of the moral and civil laws.

Since his infancy he was a street gamin who had never heard a kind word nor received a friendly look. When but a child he had to support a little family of brothers and sisters. In a moment of desperation, impelled by the starving cries of his brothers and sisters, he stole a loaf of bread, for which act he was imprisoned nineteen years. As a result of this unjust sentence a bitterness and a deep-seated spirit of revenge arose in his heart which was only dispelled by the kindness of the good Bishop Myriel. 'Tis true he violated a civil law, but who can say he violated an ethical law? Had the courts looked into the soul of their little culprit; had they felt the responsibility of the future of that small child—would not the results have been different? This boy, whose only offense was the stealing of a loaf of bread to satisfy the hunger of those depending upon him, was hurled into prison with criminals of the worst class; lived for nineteen years—the most plastic period of his life—in an atmosphere contaminated by the presence of vile degenerates. Could you expect a plant, deprived of the sunlight and the fresh air, nurtured in a poisonous atmosphere, to blossom forth into a pure and fragrant flower? Would it not take some time to restore that flower to its natural condition? Is not a human life just as delicate in its mechanism as a flower? Does it not require just as careful nurture? Should then we allow our youths to be put in prison, where they come in contact with evil men? This is a question which Victor Hugo brings before the public. This is the question which is being discussed by the sociological leaders of the day. In time, Jean, however, through his own will power, turned out to be a very good man. Yet had he been a weaker brother, the environment of his early life would have made him a different man.

One contemplates the study of Victor Hugo's works with a certain degree of fearfulness, so vast and so mighty are they. "The Critic," says Hugo, "has only to judge of the intrinsic goodness of the book, and not of its conformity to certain pre-established ideas." In my remarks and criticisms I shall attempt to follow as far as possible this principle.

Victor Hugo is a master in the literary field. So nearly do the pages of his novel touch upon all branches of literary work that it can be truthfully said that "Les Misérables" contains examples of the historical, the narrative, the lyrical, the dramatic, and the realistic. He has given rise to a style which holds sway over the century.

As a rule, Hugo's paragraph arrangement is almost the perfection of clearness. The paragraph is begun with some indication of its contents, it is consecutive and keeps rigidly to the point.

Victor Hugo's profusion of figurative language is perhaps the most striking monument of his originality and power. Figures of contrast are a marked feature in his style. As a means of special emphasis interrogation is a large element in his mannerism.

"Among all the writers of mankind Hugo is the one who has invented the greatest number of similes, and those the best carried out, the most striking, the most magnificent." Most of them go to the making of his vivid powers of description. For the battlefield, for the appearance of the individual, for the description of character—for everything in fact that needs describing he finds an animated similitude.

"As a satirist he is direct, trenchant, terrible, a swordsman whose weapon draws blood at every stroke." There was a certain amount of homesickness in his satirical remarks.

His magnificent mastery of words facilitates the giving of distinct foregrounds and backgrounds to his paintings. Take for example what is considered one of the finest descriptions of its class ever written, his description of the battlefield of Waterloo.

In the book wherever description lives, there the events move. We see it all. Each scene is present to us. The characters live, too. Bishop Myriel, apostolic as he may be, is no lay figure. Jean Valjean is a man of very real flesh and blood. Poor Fantine, one seems to know; Cosette very well; and Marius as a "jeune premier" of a very French type. The royalist grandfather of Marius, M. Gillenormand, is also genuine enough, if somewhat caricatured. Javert, the ideal policeman, and Gaverche, the little street Arab, the town sparrow of Paris, are two characters which not only live as individuals but as types.

As a narrator Hugo is singularly lucid and striking, and possesses in full the story-teller's gift of awakening and retaining interest. "By turns sublime and playful, roughly strong and daintily delicate, full of love, passion and a sweet, fatherly tenderness—he seems to touch at will all the organs of our nature." His conversations are lively and affable and are of the proper length not to be tiresome and monotonous. The story does not lag and so well is the enthusiasm kept up that any defects in thought are lost sight of.

Victor Hugo's power of genius is not denied. Rare and facile mastery of the resources of language was his. Power of expression such as is given to but one or two in a generation—that was his, also. Fascination—rarest gift of all—that, too, was his. He teaches every reader after a true and lasting fame that abiding influence is only possible to genius when allied with utter sincerity.

This was followed by Mrs. E. O. Wootton singing "The Magic Song" as a solo.

Extract from Thesis—"Test of Some New Mexico Building Materials."

Since man first learned to use weapons in his defense, and houses for shelter, he has been intimately concerned with the strength of materials of construction. In the early part of his career the materials used both for defense and shelter were exceedingly simple. A stone tied at the end of a club was one of his first weapons, and his shelter was made of rough logs and thatch work; but even in this simplicity the materials used must have been selected because they were strong, and proportioned with reference to the different loads and stresses to which they were to be subjected. As time passed, the needs of man became more complex. Because of social advantages and for his mutual protection villages, then cities, were formed; and for means of communication and commerce railroads from place to place, and bridges to cross rivers were necessary. Man's conception of materials—both natural and artificial—and their uses, broadened, and for every increase in size and complexity of structures erected, consideration of available material was necessary.

Granite must be selected because of its durability; marble, for polish; and wood, because of its adaptability and the ease with which it can be worked. In no case could the question of strength be left out, and the question of economizing in the amount of material used is of primary importance.

It is under the stress of quite modern necessity, however, that the problem of using materials to the greatest advantage in securing strength has come to be of prime importance in the mind of the designer, and today in the erection of structures, and machines, no matter what other objects are in view, the designer must consider to what straining actions they are to be subjected, the amount of material necessary to resist this strain, the safest material to use, and the best disposition of it. The simplest method of ascertaining the strength—say of a bridge or boiler—is to apply to it a greater testing load than it will be expected to carry when in actual use. Before a bridge is opened to general traffic it is tested by running loads, or a train of locomotives over it, of whole length, and before steam is placed in a boiler it is put to a hydro-static test greater than the indicated gauge reading of the boiler. This method of testing though in use today as a guarantee of safety, does not give the engineer a true knowledge of what the bridge will actually stand; nor does it make him acquainted with the different physical and chemical properties of the materials used. In other words, the information acquired by this class of testing does not give all the specific information desired. It is the desire for this specific information that aid in construction that has led engineers to study small specimens and to determine what effect different mixtures or varying compositions will have on the strength of materials, and the machines used to determine these strengths are called testing machines.

There are two objects in view in any test—one is scientific, the other commercial. In scientific testing the object is to determine physical constants, to find out the density, the elastic limit, the yield point, and the coefficient of elasticity of a material.

The object of commercial testing is to determine the quality of a material used in any special construction. For this purpose samples are taken from different portions of the stock, and tested by methods approximating the scientific as nearly as practicable.

Whether the quality meets the demands of the specification is determined by testing. It is because of this fact that a great variety of testing machines are coming into more general use. The consumer tests the product to see if it meets the required demands; the manufacturer tests the raw materials. In this way higher standards in construction works are established. Thus, a practical knowledge of the properties of materials is essential to the mechanical and civil engineers of today. On their judgment depends the welfare of both consumer and producer. Even the public at large are concerned; for the safety of the structure built is also in their hands.

The object of this thesis is to test a few of the building materials used in New Mexico; such as wood, brick, rock, cement and others. The tests, about eighty in all, were performed on an Olsen testing machine of 60,000 pounds capacity. In order to give an idea of how these tests were carried out a portion of that section on tests of bricks will be given.

During late years there has been a decided increase in the amount of brick used in building construction, due no doubt to the fact that they are practically indestructible, either by the action of the weather, the presence of acids in the atmosphere, or by fire. Moreover, they can be made any size, are light, and consequently easily handled. Bricks are made of a mixture of clay and sand, or a silicate of aluminum. This sometimes contains an admixture of oxide of iron and the carbonates of lime and magnesia. The presence of sand prevents cracking, shrinking, and warping; but experience shows that over 25 per cent of sand in a brick ruins its cohesive power, and makes it brittle. Both the oxide of iron, and carbonate of lime act as a flux which fuses the constituents of the brick together; but an excess of either will make the brick run and lose its shape. The quantity of iron also has a great influence on the color of the brick.

Bricks are either hand or machine made, and in all cases, as the tests showed, the machine made bricks are by far the superior.

The different bricks tested were obtained from kilns in this locality, as well as both machine and hand made brick from Albuquerque and Las Vegas. An individual test of each brick was made to determine both its crushing strength and its absorption. The absorption test was made as follows: The brick was first carefully weighed, then immersed in the water; at the end of twenty-four hours it was taken out, all surface water carefully wiped off, and the brick weighed again. The results obtained are given in tabulated form No. 11.

In order to ascertain the crushing strength of brick, the samples selected were imbedded between two layers of plaster of paris. By this means it was possible to obtain two perfect parallel planes to which the load was applied, without injury of any kind to the brick.

The results are given in tabulated form 3.

The valley made bricks stood the lowest tests, which was 16,000 pounds for a brick 2 1/4 x 8 x 4 inches, or 484.48 pounds per square inch. From this it is calculated the valley made brick would support a wall 640 feet high with no factor of safety. Allowing a factor of safety of five, which is generally customary, it would be safe, allowing for no other strains, to build a wall 130 feet high.

Good Results From New York's Campaign Against Expectoration.

CONSUMPTION DECREASING.

The anti-consumption law now being enforced by the New York board of health has within the past few days been made more stringent than before.

Don't spit on the sidewalk is the new command of the board of health.

The wonderful results accomplished by the board of health since it began its crusade of prevention are sufficient to warrant the new step which it has taken.

From 1884 to 1896—thirteen years—there were 78,943 deaths from consumption in New York city, an average of 6,072 a year.

Estimating the value of a human life at $2,000 (the figure set by the board of health), this has meant a loss to the community of $12,144,000 a year.

The active work done by the health board has greatly reduced these figures. The percentage of cases of consumption last year was only 2.56, as against 5.98 between 1881 and 1886.

The board was stirred up to take its recent step by Dr. Herman M. Biggs, who called its attention to the diseases caused by those who expectorate in public places.

"Many a consumptive," said Dr. Biggs, "owes his death to this preventable habit."

Three years ago the health board began an anti-spitting crusade. Ferries, trolley cars, "L" cars, stations, etc., were protected by the new ordinance. It has now gone a step further and included "all sidewalks" in its public notices.

In order to find out whether the anti-spitting law was being enforced, the Sunday World recently made a thorough investigation, aided by Dr. Ernest J. Lederle, president of the board of health; Clark Bell, president of the Medico-Legal society; Dr. Herman M. Biggs, the well known authority on consumption, and by a number of special policemen belonging to the health department.

Though the day's work resulted in no arrests it brought out very forcibly one fact:

New York has learned the lesson taught to it by the anti-consumption crusade. This was evidenced by many incidents which occurred during the tour made by the health officers.

For instance, on Broadway car No. 2,304, a well-dressed man who wanted to expectorate got up and went out on the back platform of the car, preferring to lose his seat rather than run the risk of being arrested.

On car No. 3,100, of the Eighth avenue line, a man about to expectorate on the floor suddenly remembered the sign, looked up at it, and left the car rather than violate the law.

At Sixth avenue and Fifth street Health Officer Joyce found it necessary to reprimand one man just as he was stepping off the car. The rebuke was taken in good part and no arrest was made as the offense was not considered grave.

At the Manhattan entrance of the bridge it was found necessary to call the attention of a thoughtless young man to a sign on the platform, and other people were reprimanded on the Fifth avenue elevated train at Fulton ferry and on the boat crossing from New York to Jersey City.

The only places which heretofore have needed attention are the ferry boats, ferry houses, the platforms of some stations and the stairways leading to these platforms. Commissioner Lederle has now made those places safe.

The whole story of just what has been accomplished is told on this page in the series of special interviews given to the World by Dr. Ernest J. Lederle, president of the board of health; Clark Bell, president of the Medico-Legal society; Dr. Herman M. Biggs, the noted authority on consumption and chief pathologist of the board of health, and by Health Officer Ellis.

By Ernest J. Lederle, M. D., Ph. D., President of Board of Health.

At present the health department of New York is doing all it can to educate people by giving them a knowledge of the fact that consumption and other diseases may be spread by unsanitary habits. It is all a matter of education, however, and I look forward to the time when it will no longer be necessary to threaten people with fine and imprisonment for not observing the rules of common cleanliness.

Even as it is a man thinks twice before he spits once in the street car or on the deck of a ferry boat.

The average number of arrests per week since the law went into effect has been thirty for both New York and Brooklyn.

In most of these cases the magistrates before whom the delinquents were brought imposed fines of $1 each upon about twenty out of the thirty people brought before them. In eight of such cases sentence was suspended; the remaining two were discharged.

Up to a short time ago certain magistrates were inclined to take a rather lenient view of the situation. "I spit myself," said one of the judges, in discharging a prisoner. The usual method of judicial punishment is a reprimand for the first offense.

Some of the judges seemed to be of the opinion that each man is entitled to one spit—that is, if it is the first offense and he promises not to repeat it, he is let off.

By Health Officer Ellis.

Whenever we went out last year we could find violators of the sanitary law against spitting without having to look for them. Now we have to watch like hawks in order to catch any one in the act.

The principal places for these offenses were on the surface cars and in the elevated trains. But now spitting is principally confined to the ferry boats and to the stairs and other approaches leading to the elevated trains.

The average number of arrests last year was about fifty a day. Now it is scarcely more than five or ten, and in these latter cases it is only done by absent-minded people or strangers who do not know the law.

If an offender who has violated the law in a ferry house is taken before Magistrate Pool, the judge usually makes the officer bring up also the superintendent of the ferry house. He asks the latter whether or not he has provided cuspidors in the ferry house. If these have been provided and the offender has not used them, the magistrate imposes a fine. Both Magistrates Mot and Zeller are inclined to be lenient. The Brooklyn magistrates do not seem to look upon the offense as gravely as do those in Manhattan. They seldom either fine or imprison people.

By Clark Bell, President of the Medico-Legal Society.

I am in favor of adopting every possible method of preventing the spread of tuberculosis. The American congress of tuberculosis, which meets next month in the city of New York in joint session with the Medico-Legal society, will discuss the subject of keeping streets and public conveyances free from danger from the spread of consumption.

Our city regulations in respect to the prevention of spitting in the public conveyances, upon streets, and especially in depots, is one of the best forward movements for the suppression of tuberculosis that has ever been inaugurated.

It is drawing the attention of all scientists and those who have the care of other cities, to New York and the action taken by this city is being imitated by many other municipalities.

All scientific authorities concur in the opinion that sputum is one of the most dangerous sources of infection. The fact that consumption is a communicable disease is now recognized by the government of the United States, as is shown in the regulations recently adopted for the prevention of the immigration of those suffering from this disease, especially in its advanced stages. The courts have recognized this view and have sustained the government in its position.

The whole theory of the crusade now going forward in all civilized countries to prevent the spread of tuberculosis is based upon the fact that it is the duty of every government to take legal steps and lawful means to avert and prevent the spread of this terrible disease.

It seems to me that it must be a campaign of education. Most of the people do not seem to understand the danger that comes to them by neglecting to prevent the spread of this disease by every means which legal regulations and special legislation will accomplish.

Let any one for a moment read the returns from the various health departments and see the enormous death rate which this single disease presents. It is greater than any other disease with which humanity is afflicted.

It seems difficult for people to realize the propriety of doing any action whatever in conformity with legal regulations. But where the health of the community in general is involved it is the part of common prudence to take such steps as will insure the prevention of the spread of the disease to the utmost ability and the law-making power.

By Dr. Herman M. Biggs, Pathologist of New York Board of Health.

Consumption is well recognized now to be an infectious and communicable disease under unhygienic conditions. It is easily communicated from one person to another.

There is no doubt that one of the chief sources of communication is the habit of expectorating in public places. Millions of people, perfectly healthy, are every day subjected to possible infection by thoughtless people who are ignorant of or violate the most elementary principles of hygiene. The measures taken by the board of health to awaken people to a sense of the great danger have done a vast amount of good. An educational publicity of the work that is going on is needed now.

The disease which is most widely known and most fatal is consumption, technically called tuberculosis. It is the cause of one-fourth of all the deaths among human beings during adult life, and probably more than one-half of the world's population which reach adult life contract this disease at some time.

The usual channel of communication for consumption is the expectoration of persons whose lungs are affected by tuberculosis.

Here are some remarkably instructive statistics on consumption in Manhattan and the Bronx. They tell their own story:

In 1881 the death rate from tuberculosis was 4.92 per cent; for the five years from 1881 to 1886 it was 5.98 per cent; from 1886 to 1890 3.50; from 1890 to 1896 3.11; from 1896 to 1901 2.56.

This shows a gradual decrease, which is very noticeable for the last two years.

The total number of deaths from tuberculosis in 1898 for a population of 3,272,418 was 3,265; whereas in 1901, for a population of 3,535,517, it was only 9,412, demonstrating the fact that although the population had increased, there was a material decrease in the statistics.—New York World.

Read It in His Newspaper.

George Schaub, a well known German citizen of New Lebanon, Ohio, is a constant reader of the Dayton Volkszeitung. He knows that his paper aims to advertise only the best in its columns, and when he saw Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised therein for lame back, he did not hesitate in buying a bottle of it for his wife, who for eight weeks had suffered with the most terrible pains in her back and could get no relief. He says: "After using the Pain Balm for a few days my wife said to me, 'I feel as though born anew,' and before using the entire contents of the bottle the unbearable pains had entirely vanished and she could again take up her household duties." He is very thankful and hopes that all suffering likewise will hear of her wonderful recovery. This valuable liniment is for sale by all druggists.

To Fight the Smelters.

A big co-operative company has been organized in Kansas City for the purpose of maintaining the price of lead and zinc ores. The company proposes to break the power of the smelter trust in the southwest. William Phillips of New York is back of the enterprise, and the organization has been capitalized for $10,000,000.

For biliousness use Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They cleanse the stomach and regulate the liver and bowels, effecting a quick and permanent cure. For sale by all druggists.

Las Vegas are quite homologous in structure and well made. That standing the best test was one of buff color, which did not rupture under a load of 60,000 pounds for a half brick. Both machine and hand made brick are manufactured in Albuquerque and Las Vegas, and the great superiority of the former can be realized from the tests.

Conclusions.

After performing this series of tests the following conclusions were deduced: That New Mexico is gifted with a variety of building stones of which the standing on an average of 4,000 pounds per square inch under compression; and that most of these sandstones have silica as a cementing material.

That the brick manufactured in the valley of the inferior quality, standing but 16,000 pounds of brick or 5,000 pounds per square inch; and that the Albuquerque and Las Vegas bricks, both hand and machine made, are of good quality, standing, on an average, respectively, 80,000 and 120,000 pounds each.

That the quality of the Atlas and German Portland cements, as shipped into this territory, at least those packages received by the college, from which the samples were taken, stood the tests required in government specifications, namely: that the tensile strength of cement should be from 300 to 400 pounds after standing one day in air, and six in water, and that at least 90 per cent of cement should pass through a sieve of 10,000 meshes to the square inch. Furthermore, that cement which is allowed to set under water is by far stronger than cement that is allowed to set in air; for this reason cement in air should be kept as moist as possible; again, that cement, after standing two weeks was about 4 per cent stronger than that standing one week; showing the value of allowing cement to set well before use.

That Texas pine is about 12½ per cent stronger per square inch than Alamogordo, Arizona or Las Vegas; Alamogordo pine standing better tests than the last two, which are about of equal strength; further that green timber stands just half as much load as a piece of well cured timber, the pieces being of the same material.

Lastly, that the cast iron test pieces from the El Paso foundry were of good quality and stood a tensile strength of 23,800 pounds per square inch, being above the average for cast iron, which is 20,000 pounds.

The orchestra then rendered the waltz "Isabel," which was followed by Mrs. Wootton, Miss McFie and Messrs. Wootton and Brunner, singing as a quartette "The Dream" and "The Lotus Flower."

The address to the graduating class was eliminated by the non-appearance of Hon. J. Francisco Chavez, the territorial school superintendent, who telegraphed that he had missed the train.

The diplomas to the graduates were presented to them by Hon. G. A. Richardson, president of the board of regents. Mr. Richardson also presented diplomas to the post graduates, Matthew Hill and Alfredo Sanchez.

This was followed by the orchestra playing "Creole Belle," a beautiful two step, after which the assembled guests surrounded the graduates and wished them all the happiness imaginable for future years.

Virulent Cancer Cured.

Starting proof of a wonderful advance in medicine is given by druggist G. W. Roberts, of Elizabeth, W. Va. An old man there had long suffered with what good doctors pronounced incurable cancer. He believed his case hopeless till he used Electric Bitters and applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve, which treatment completely cured him. When Electric Bitters are used to expel bilious, kidney and microbe poisons at the same time this salve exerts its matchless healing power, blood diseases, skin eruptions, ulcers and sores vanish. Bitters 50c, Salve 25c at all druggists.

Yaquis Not Engaged in General Uprising.

The reported ambush of Governor Torres and his forces by Yaquis is not based on facts, says a telegram from Tucson, Ariz. Torres was in Hermosillo Tuesday and parties who have just returned from the district where the alleged rebellion exists say that there is no uprising of Yaquis there. The trouble is confined to a few who refuse to conform to the order of the Mexican government, calling for registration of all Yaquis. The Mexican government has no fears whatever of an uprising. The foregoing was obtained from a gentleman who dined with Governor Torres Tuesday morning in Hermosillo.

Approved the Plans.

The board of education last night approved the plans prepared by Architect E. B. Cristy for enlarging the Second and Fourth ward schools. Bids for the work will be opened next Thursday at 8 p. m.

Happy Time in Old Town.

"We felt very nappy," writes R. N. Bevil, Old Town, Va., "when Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured our daughter of a bad case of scald head." It delights all who use it for cuts, corns, burns, bruises, boils, ulcers, eruptions. Infallible for piles. Only 25c at all druggists.

Fifty Suicides in One Month.

Fifty persons committed suicide in Chicago in the month of May. This is the largest number ever recorded, according to the health department. In the same period there were 134 deaths from Bright's disease, which also is unprecedented. The excessive and steadily increasing mortality from these two causes, as well as from pneumonia, the department's report says is attributable to the baneful effects of the influenza poison, which is said to be a subject demanding a share of the attention paid to consumption.

Cholera Morbus a Dangerous Disease.

In many instances attacks of cholera morbus terminate fatally before medicine can be procured or a physician summoned. The safe way is to keep at hand a reliable medicine for use in such cases. For this purpose there is nothing so sure as Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. W. E. Bosworth, of Lafayette, Ala., says: "In June, 1900, I had a serious attack of cholera morbus and one dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy gave me relief in fifteen minutes." For sale by all druggists.

"One Minute Cough Cure" beats all other medicines I ever tried for coughs, colds, croup and throat and lung troubles," says Dr. D. Scott Currin, of Loganton, Pa. "One Minute Cough Cure" is the only absolutely safe cough remedy which acts immediately. Mothers everywhere testify to the good it has done in their little ones. Croup is so sudden in its attacks that the doctor often arrives too late. It yields at once to One Minute Cough Cure. Pleasant to take. Children like it. Sure cure for grip, bronchitis, coughs. J. H. A Curious Freak.

Last week we examined a most curious freak of nature in the way of a young goat. This anomalous creature had one head, four ears, no eyes, nose nor mouth, eight legs, two backbones, two breast bones, and two tails. It breathed through one of the ears, but only for a few hours. It had two hearts, two pair of lungs, two livers, one stomach, and two sets of small intestines.

This freak was born in Kinsley's herd of Angora goats and has been preserved by our local taxidermist, James Fay.—Farmington Times.

Interesting to Asthma Sufferers.

Daniel Bante, of Ottumwa, Iowa, writes: "I have had asthma for three or four years and have tried about all the cough and asthma cures in the market and have received treatment from physicians in New York and other cities, but got very little benefit until I tried Foley's Honey and Tar which gave me immediate relief and I will never be without it in my house. I sincerely recommend it to all." Alvarado Pharmacy.

Many new roses have been introduced recently. The Queen of Edgely is identical with the American Beauty in every respect except in color, which is a much lighter pink. When the Liberty variety is well grown we have everything desired in the way of a crimson rose. The flower is large, retains its color for a longer period than the ordinary rose and does not require a high temperature to force it. Consequently this variety can be grown more easily than the average hothouse rose. We have never succeeded to our complete satisfaction in growing the most perfect crimson roses in the bright sunshine of New Mexico except under shade.

Proteids—the elements that build and renew the tissue of our bodies,—our bone—flesh—fat—muscle—blood—nails—hair—teeth.

Carbohydrates—the elements that give nerve energy—working energy—"go."

The

Doctor says:

Two kinds of energy in our food. One makes up for wear and tear on the human engine—other makes it go.

In WHEAT only 1 unit of body-building energy to 7 units of "go."

In SCOTCH OATS 2 units of building force to 9 units of "go."

The "go" element won't build tissue—or (constitution)—but if you have a good reserve of tissue (good constitution) you can always draw on it for "go."

Scotch Oats (Cook 20 minutes) gives you this strong reserve.

Wheat does not.

W. A. Freeland, one of the efficient men at the local freight depot, and left last night for a month's visit to his friends at Temple, Texas.

A. S. Woodruff, a former resident of Albuquerque, but late of Tucson, Ariz., is returned to this city and accepted position as blacksmith in the Santa Fe shops.

Lantry Brothers, contractors, will begin next week the work of ballasting the Santa Fe road from Raton to Las Vegas. The material will be taken from the quarries at Watrous.

John Van Lew, a machinist with the Santa Fe Pacific at Needles, his mother and sister, spent yesterday in the city, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Reynolds. They were bound for their old home at Roanoke, Va., for an extended visit.

W. C. Grout, formerly saw-filer in the mill at Topeka, but for several years employed in the Albuquerque shops of the company, has just closed list of several days with Topeka and has gone to Chicago to attend a brief time.

The Citizen has received a copy of "Guide Book of the Canyon of Arizona," just published by Fred. Harvey. C. Bicknell is the author. The publication is considered by competent critics to be the best book yet printed in the Grand Canyon.

W. H. Simpson, chief of the advertising department of the Santa Fe, arrived in Williams last Saturday and stayed at the Canyon till Thursday, when he returned to the city and made his trip in company with E. Lamb, of the summit of Bill Williams, which he believes will be a great drawing card in the near future.—Williams News.

Thomas Madden, who was foreman of the boiler shop at Albuquerque, N. M., until a few days ago and who was elected to go to San Bernardino, Cal., to take a similar position, has been placed in the position of the Santa Fe at San Bernardino. It has been suggested from good sources that Madden, who is a foreman of boiler-makers at Fort Madison, Ia., will be appointed to a similar position on the eastern grand division.

To provide means for important extensions to the Gulf of Mexico, and possibly toward the Pacific coast, the stockholders of the Rock Island at their annual meeting voted to increase the capital stock from $60,000,000 to $75,000,000. This is the largest increase since the consolidation in 1890. The stock was then $41,960,000; in 1896 it was increased to $46,500,000. In 1899 it was raised to the authorized limit of $50,000,000. Last June it was increased to $60,000,000. The funded debt in the meantime has been increased from $17,500,000 to $68,000,000.

In the suit at El Paso of Valente Mendoza vs. the Atchafalaya, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad company the jury returned a verdict in favor of the defendant. The case has been on trial in Judge Goggin's court for the past two days. The plaintiff claimed $15,000 for the loss of his right foot, which was crushed by the switch engine when he was getting off of the foot-board in front of the cowcatcher. He was riding in from the smelter where he was employed. Negligence on the part of the plaintiff and that he had no right to ride on the engine were the main grounds of defense.

Saved From An Awful Fate.
"Everybody said I had consumption," writes Mrs. A. M. Shields, of Chambersburg, Pa. "I was so low after six months of severe sickness, caused by fever and asthma, that few thought I could get well, but I learned of the marvelous merit of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, used it, and was completely cured." For desperate throat and lung diseases it is the safest cure in the world, and is infallible for coughs, colds and bronchial affections. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. It will be the fastest long distance train in the world, making the 980 miles between New York and Chicago in exactly twenty hours, including all stops. There will be an excess fare of $8.

Santa Fe Short Cut.
Chief Engineer Jones, of the survey, has been doing work on the proposed line of the Santa Fe short cut, stopped off between trains in the city this morning, while en route from Sabinal to his home at Las Vegas. Mr. Jones says that there are three corps doing work on the proposed line at present, and that they are making the second survey.

One corps is working over by Fort Sumner, one near Torrance on the Rock Island, and the other on the Rio Puerco near Sabinal.

When The Citizen reporter remarked that it looked as though the Santa Fe had decided to build by Sabinal, Mr. Jones replied: "Not necessarily," and also said that there would be several other surveys made before they would decide.

SOCORRO.

Interesting Notes From the "Gem City," South of the Metropolis.

Special Correspondence.
Socorro, N. M., June 6.—T. Vanslyk, live stock agent for the Santa Fe railway at El Paso, was a Socorro visitor today. Van has an eye to business and is a jolly good fellow with it.

District court will no doubt close the regular term this week. Next week will be given to the hearing of a big mining suit transferred from Lincoln county to this court. As a large sum is involved and a bitter fight will follow, Ferguson and Childers, of Albuquerque, are the opposing attorneys.

The county commissioners in session this week are looking to the betterment of the public roads of the county.

Fruit in the valley around Socorro promises well this year. Landlord Yunker, of the Windsor hotel, informs your correspondent that his orchard near the city will yield him at least 40,000 pounds of prunes in addition to other fruits.

Dr. E. C. Blinn, owing to the death of his wife some time ago, has given up his practice here and will devote his time to mining in other parts of the territory.

A number of Albuquerque people who have been employed here during the term of court were seen to depart for home today.

The haying season is well on in the valley and the alfalfa crops of this county will be large and the quality is good.

Joe Wiggins, of San Marcial, charged with murder before this court, pleaded guilty to murder in second degree and was sentenced to the pen for life by Judge McMillan.

The district attorney, with the assistance of one Julian Baca, who made himself conspicuous for the number of indictments he swore to during United States Marshal Hall's term, for the fee there was in it, filed complaints against all the saloonmen and merchants of the county handling liquor under the Sunday law today. The fact that the grand jury for the term had adjourned without finding any indictments in such cases, would indicate that the community was satisfied, but these two important personages were not.

Was Wasting Away.

The following letter from Robert R. Watts, of Salem, Mo., is instructive. "I have been troubled with kidney disease for the last five years. I lost flesh and never felt well and doctored with leading physicians and tried all remedies suggested without relief. Finally I tried Foley's Kidney Cure and less than two bottles completely cured me and I am now sound and well." Alvarado Pharmacy.

FIERCER FIGHT.

Clarence Dixon, Formerly of Albuquerque, Engaged in a Fight at El Paso, Texas.

One of the fiercest fist fights that has been seen in El Paso for some time occurred last night in front of the Bank saloon, in the blind alley between the Bronson block and the Lobby saloon. The dispute is said to have arisen over a quarrel about a woman. The participants were Leonard S. Putnam, a well known young business man of this city, and Clarence Dixon.

No one is able to tell exactly how the scrap started, for when the crowd began to gather the combatants were at it hammer and tongs. The fighting kept up for fully ten minutes and fists were the only weapons. Both men were bloody when the contest was over and the laurels were about even. Putnam handled his dukes in fine style, according to all accounts, and would have bested his antagonist had not Ed Dixon, a brother of Clarence, interfered. This turned the crowd in favor of Putnam and friends of both parties put an end to the fight.—El Paso Times.

Ten Years in Bed.
R. A. Gray, J. P., Oakville, Ind., writes: "For ten years I was confined to my bed with disease of my kidneys. It was so severe that I could not move part of the time. I consulted the very best medical skill available, but could get no relief until Foley's Kidney Cure was recommended to me. It has been a Godsend to me." Alvarado Pharmacy.

Healthy Mind in a Healthy Body

Stomach and brain affect each other. A sick stomach sours the disposition and prevents sleep and brain rest, and a sick brain sours the stomach and clogs the bowels. Men of sedentary habits, brain workers who don't get much exercise, have sick stomachs and bowels, and wear out their brains and nerves.

"I work in the office and don't get as much exercise as I should, and when I feel bad I just take a Cascarets which always makes me feel alright."
—J. R. Rohan, Q. & C. Route, Crescent, Ky.
"I had a torpid liver for months. I bought a box of Cascarets in Washington and have not only been put in perfect health, but have gained considerable weight."
—Harry Hodgson, Rockville, Md.
"Cascarets were the only medicine I had with me when I beat the world's record as 'Champion Corn Husker of America,' husking 270 bushels in 19 hours."
—E. C. Kimberlin, La Harpe, Ill.

"Some time ago, while I was in Millersburg, Pa., Mr. Freck, the landlord, was afflicted with severe pains in the stomach. I insisted upon his taking a Cascarets before going to bed and next morning he passed a box of Cascarets and a tape-worm 45 feet long came from him head and all."
—Chas. E. Condon, Millersburg, Pa.

"Cascarets cured me radically of dyspepsia and headache and my weight which before was 120 is now 150 lbs."
—R. Navarro, Biloxi, Miss.
"I find Cascarets beneficial after a spell of hard work, clearing the brain as well as the bowels, and also working off soda in good shape."
—E. C. Stokes, Philadelphia, Pa.

A man who keeps his bowels regular with Cascarets Candy Cathartic, that is without strain or violence, can keep strong and healthy without much exercise. A famous professor in Jefferson Medical College used to advise his students: "Trust in God and keep your bowels open!" That's God's own wisdom, for when the bowels are regular and the digestion strong and healthy, then the system is safe and the brain and nerves will have inexhaustible elasticity and life.

At Auction.
A car load of fine horses and Jersey cows, Tuesday afternoon, June 10, at 1:30 o'clock sharp, at Trimble's red barn. This stock is from the celebrated Manning breeding farm at Independence, Kan. It consists of saddlers, double and single drivers and high grade Jersey cows that are all fresh; and some with calves at side. They have no superiors as butter and milk producers. This stock is too fine and costs too much money to sell at auction, but a press of business at home compels Mr. Manning to make this sacrifice and everything will positively go without reserve. It will be a pleasure to Mr. Manning to show stock and hitch horses for prospective purchasers before sale. See him at the red barn.
