A GIGANTIC MINING SWINDLE

A Receiver to Be Appointed for the American Mining and Investment Company.

THE LIABILITIES $2,500,000

The Assets of the Concern Will Not Exceed $1,000—Its Net Profits Foot Up to $250,000—Headquarters at Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 18.—The affairs of the American Mining and Investment company, against which the attorney general proceeded two weeks ago, are to be brought to an end at an early date. Attorney General Douglas and his assistant, C. W. Somers, for the state, and Albert H. Hall, representing the creditors of the company, and Attorney Van Valkenberg, representing the company, appeared in Judge Pond's court, when it was agreed that a receiver be appointed, the charter be vacated and the existence of the company terminated. In its formal answer to the charges, the company admitted that it was unable to pay its just debts. The appointment of a receiver will be made today.

It was developed in the course of the discussion relative to a receiver that the company had liabilities to the amount of $2,500,000, and assets not to exceed $1,000. First, the American Mining and Investment company was incorporated with a capital of $10,000, of which amount $1,000 only was paid in. This company it is claimed, merely acted in the capacity of broker or agent and sold mining shares for a percentage or on commission.

Next, the men who appear as incorporators of the American company organized and incorporated under the laws of South Dakota, the Kettle, the Curlew boundary camp and the Queen Bee Mining companies and capitalized them for an aggregate of $65,000,000. This stock was disposed of through the American Mining and Investment company. The attorney general calculated that the company's net profits footed up to about $250,000.

A GOOD SESSION OF COURT

Nine Indictments Were Found and Three Convictions Were Had—Grading on the New Bisbee Road—Praise for the Court Officials.

Special Correspondence New Mexican. Deming, June 17, 1901.—The first term of court for Luna county opened June 16, and adjourned on June 15. The grand jury brought in nine indictments and refused to find bills in five cases. In the case of the Territory vs. Chas. Langdon, charged with burglary, Langdon was convicted and sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. Ysabel Somborno pleaded guilty to having stolen 25 head of cattle from Mrs. Brule. He was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary. Teodoro Alles, indicted for uttering a forged order to which he had attached the name of S. Holstein, pleaded guilty and was given one year in the penitentiary.

The case of Murray and Deane, charged with having broken a seal on a car with the intention of robbery, was tried and the defendants were acquitted.

Information of six violations of the liquor law was filed and a fine of $15 and costs were imposed in each case. The judge in discharging the juries, complimented them upon the efficient manner in which they had discharged their duties.

Judge Parker will go from Deming to Silver City to hear the case of Jose Sanchez under sentence to be hanged, who has set up the plea of insanity. From there he will go to Albuquerque to hear some cases in chambers in that city.

The cases of Martin Hardin, brought from Grant county to Deming on a charge of venue, represented by Judge Walthall of El Paso and Messrs. Ashenfelter and Owsley, were continued to the next term of court upon the application of the defendant.

Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Byron, a reception was tendered Judge Parker and the bar. About fifty persons were present. It was a most enjoyable affair. Mrs. Judge Field, Mrs. J. A. Mahoney, and Mrs. Frank Thurmond assisted Mrs. Byron in receiving.

Luna county's first grand jury by a unanimous vote refused to receive any remuneration for services.

Judge Parker is the kind of a judge who deserves praise; he disposes of business rapidly and carefully, with an eye single to the good of the county.

The many Deming friends of District Attorney W. H. H. Llewellyn were pleased to have him among them. The major is a very agreeable gentleman and an efficient official.

Clerk Mitchell and Stenographer Holt made many friends while here. E. E. Burdick reports many parties camped on the Gila. As a consequence trout fishing is very poor.

Judge Seamon Field has just returned from Colorado. While there he disposed of over seven hundred head of cattle.

J. A. Mahoney will change the Wormer block he purchased some time ago, into an up-to-date hotel.

F. M. McMahon will erect at once a neat five-room adobe cottage on Spruce street.

The bar fixtures and furniture for Tracey and Hanigan's Acquaarium saloon, are being put in place. They have also received new furniture for the bar. When completed there will be nothing finer in that line in the southwest than these.

Grading on the new line of the new Bisbee road continues steadily. This road will be of very great importance to southern New Mexico and particularly so to Deming.

At the school election Judge Seamon Field was elected for the three years' term; J. A. Mahoney for the two years' term, and Henry Meyer for the one year term. The vote in favor of these gentlemen was unanimous.

A MINER'S SAD DEATH.

John T. Pritchard Fell Down the Shaft of a Mine.

John T. Pritchard, one of the best known miners in the Chloride district, Sierra county, was found dead on a bench in the shaft of the Treasure mine. Pritchard had been hoisting water from the mine, and, falling to come to supper, Superintendent Santry investigated and found his mangled remains about 300 feet from the surface.

Water was hoisted from the shaft with a skip and as the skip was off the ways, it is surmised that Pritchard had gone down to put on the tracks again, and, losing his balance, had fallen into the shaft. In the fall the body landed on the third bench of the shaft. His head was mashed into a pulp and death must have been instantaneous.

He was about 65 years of age and is said to have had a family in Wales, from whom he had been estranged for years.

Pritchard had lived on the Comstock in early days and belonged to a Masonic lodge at that place. In 1876 he had trouble with a Gold Hill constable and in the quarrel that ensued, the constable, Humphrey Symons, was killed. For his crime Pritchard was arrested and came near being mobbed by the friends of the dead officer, but was spirited away to Carson City, where he was tried and convicted, serving a sentence in the Nevada penitentiary.

TUESDAY, JUNE 18.

New Mexico Demands Statehood of the 57th Congress.

Of Right and in Justice New Mexico Should Be a State.

New Mexico should be admitted to statehood. She is entitled to this by every consideration of fairness, equity and justice.

The rotten apples that came to the surface in New Mexico politics during the past few months have sunk out of sight again.

The Republican party in New Mexico is stronger than ever before, thanks to President McKinley's wise action in the appointment of a governor on Saturday last.

Mr. Jefferson Reynolds, the well known Las Vegas banker, stands well with President McKinley. They were school boys together and the president knows Mr. Reynolds well. Knowing him he trusts him.

National Committeeman Solomon Luna is quite subdued and unostentatious, but possessed of a good deal of nerve, firmness and common sense. He is the right man in the right place and the Republicans of New Mexico should keep him in his present position as long as he desires to stay.

Almost every city, town and hamlet in New Mexico is making arrangements for a patriotic celebration of the Fourth of July. A point for statehood could be made if at every one of these Fourth of July celebrations strong resolutions in favor of statehood were passed. The opportunity ought not be allowed to slip.

Delegate B. S. Rodey advocated the claims of the people of New Mexico to be heard in the appointment of a governor, consistently and efficiently while in Washington during the past two weeks. The people wanted Governor Otero reappointed and Mr. Rodey did his best to bring it about. Bernard Shannon Rodey is all right.

It is very plain that the science of naval architecture and steam engineering is an exact science in the best sense of the word with the men who have designed these massive ships and their machinery. It is believed that these tests have been more thorough and conclusive than those of foreign services, and that they show that in real power of steam endurance American battleships are the best in the world.

But they are not the swiftest. Let nobody run away with that delusion. The Illinois is a record breaker, but she is a record breaker under the starry flag alone. There are more than half a hundred foreign battleships that are swifter than she is, some of them a great deal swifter. The reason of this is obvious enough. It is no discredit to American designers or American engineers. This nation has thus far deliberately subordinated speed in its line of battle to other and more essential qualities. The United States has given its ships moderate steam power, but it has also given them the heaviest guns and the heaviest armor afloat.

The salient characteristic of the American battleship is not swiftness, but strength. Individually and as a fleet, the American battleships are distinguished by their ponderousness as compared with European navies. Of course, the heavier a vessel is the more difficult it is to drive her, and this government has wisely on the whole, been content to produce ships of immense fighting force, believing that American admirals will never want to run away, and that when once battle is joined a knot or two of speed will make small difference.

Though the Illinois is capable of 17.31 knots, the British Magnificent and Majestic, launched several years ago, are capable of 17.6 and 17.9. The Mars has made 17.7 knots, the Jupiter 18.4. Six British battleships, the Canopus, Godolph, Ocean, Albion, Glory and Vanguard, have a speed of from 18 to 19 knots. Later British battleships have attained 19 knots and over.

Nor is the British service the only one which boasts of first class battleships swifter than the American. France has the Charles Martel of 18.13 knots. The Jaureguiberry and the Carnot have made 17.65 and 17.9 knots. The Charlemagne, St. Louis and Gaulois are 18-knot vessels. Germany has an 18-knot ship in the Kaiser Friedrich III. and others in the Kaiser Wilhelm II. and Koenig Wilhelm. The newer German ships are quite as swift or swifter.

It seems odd, but little Italy has a small fleet of battleships which can outsteam the Americans. The Ammiraglio Di St. Bon and the Emanuele Filiberto are 18-knot vessels. The Silius is said to have made an average of 19.3 knots under natural draught, and the Sardegna has the remarkable average of 19.6. The thirteen-year-old Re Umberto has a speed of 18.5, and the Lepanto, eighteen years old, once the largest battleship in the world, is credited with a speed of 18.4.

Russia's crack battleship Retvizan, built by the Cramps at Philadelphia, has a speed of 18 knots and more, and the other new Russian craft are hardly slower. Japan's four battleships are fairly equal to 18 knots. Indeed, there are few first class battleships built within the past half dozen years which are as slow as 17 knots.

If it were a question of racing, the American armored fleet might perhaps be beaten by that of any one of the other naval powers, although no foreign battleship has ever made such a magnificent long voyage record as the Oregon. American officers believe that there is a staying quality in American engines which makes the difference in speed between American and foreign armorclads more apparent than real. But when it comes to power of guns and weight of armor, the advantage is overwhelmingly with the massive Americans. The British battleships which have a knot or two more record-speed than American gain it at the cost of sacrificing battery and protection. The Illinois, for example, carries four 12-inch and fourteen 6-inch guns as compared with the four 12-inch and twelve 6-inch of the Magnificent or Retvizan. In actual fighting the Yankee armorclad would, therefore, have an undeniable advantage. The British Majestic has a 9-inch water-line armor belt; the Illinois, from 9 1/2 to 16 1/2 inches.

In all this insistence upon weight and strength American designers have but adhered to century-old traditions. When the Constitution whipped the Guerriere, in 1812, British officers complained that the Yankee frigate was a "disguised battleship"; that her sides were as thick and her guns as heavy as those of a two-decker of Nelson's. So the fault, if fault it is, is an old one, tried in many wars. American fighting officers of today, like Rear Admiral "Bob" Evans, delight in it.

But the navy department has found a way to make the newest ships faster without robbing them of armor or of guns. It has done this by increasing their size, and thus providing more space for fuel and machinery.

Speed and Strength in Battleships.

Speed is very desirable in battleships when attained at the sacrifice of power and invulnerability then it reduces a battleship to a mere cruiser. The Illinois, the latest of the new battleships of Uncle Sam to try her speed has made a record in speed and yet is the most powerful battleship afloat. She has far exceeded its rigid contract requirements despite the fact that no no generous money premium for speed is offered.

The ships go right on attaining a rate far in excess of their designed power and the expectations of the government. Indeed, the increase is with something like mathematical regularity. The Indiana made 15.4 knots; the Massachusetts 16.2; the Oregon 16.7; the Iowa, with a thousand extra horse power, 17.07. Then came the Keokau with 16.81, the Alabama with 17.1, the Wisconsin with 17.17. Now comes the Illinois with 17.31.

It is very plain that the science of naval architecture and steam engineering is an exact science in the best sense of the word with the men who have designed these massive ships and their machinery. It is believed that these tests have been more thorough and conclusive than those of foreign services, and that they show that in real power of steam endurance American battleships are the best in the world.

But they are not the swiftest. Let nobody run away with that delusion. The Illinois is a record breaker, but she is a record breaker under the starry flag alone. There are more than half a hundred foreign battleships that are swifter than she is, some of them a great deal swifter. The reason of this is obvious enough. It is no discredit to American designers or American engineers. This nation has thus far deliberately subordinated speed in its line of battle to other and more essential qualities. The United States has given its ships moderate steam power, but it has also given them the heaviest guns and the heaviest armor afloat.

The salient characteristic of the American battleship is not swiftness, but strength. Individually and as a fleet, the American battleships are distinguished by their ponderousness as compared with European navies. Of course, the heavier a vessel is the more difficult it is to drive her, and this government has wisely on the whole, been content to produce ships of immense fighting force, believing that American admirals will never want to run away, and that when once battle is joined a knot or two of speed will make small difference.

SEVEN YEARS IN BED.

"Will wonders never cease?" inquire the friends of Mrs. C. Pease, of Lawrence, Kas. They knew she had been unable to leave her bed in seven years on account of kidney and liver trouble, nervous prostration and general debility; but three bottles of Electric Bitters enabled her to walk, she writes, "and in three months I felt like a new person." Women suffering from headache, backache, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, fainting and dizzy spells will find it a priceless blessing. Try it. Satisfaction is guaranteed by Fischer Drug Co. "Is God's Good Blessing"

"I feel that God has blessed Dr. Acker with special knowledge to prepare that grand medicine called Acker's English Remedy for Throat and Lung Troubles. It saves children every time when they are attacked by croup. Every mother should know about it, and I will tell about my experience. I had a darling boy of four years to die with croup. My doctor did all he could, but the child could not be made to vomit. That was before I knew of Acker's English Remedy. After I did hear of it, I got a bottle. When our little eighteen-months-old girl was stricken with croup, I gave her this medicine, and inside of twenty minutes she vomited and was better right away. During the winter she had croup four times, and it brought her through each time all right. I myself, had bronchitis pretty bad, and Acker's English Remedy cured me completely. Before I close, I want to tell you of my neighbor's boy, named Jobe Nana. He had bronchitis, too. He got worse all the time. My husband went over to his house and told him about my case. Then his mother went to town, got a 50-cent bottle of Acker's English Remedy, and he took it. He came over to our house a few days later and said he understood by my letter why I think so much of Acker's English Remedy. I repeat that God's blessing must surely have been bestowed upon Dr. Acker."

Missouri Code Pleading

By Mr. Everett W. Pattison,

(Author of Pattison's Complete Digest.)

Nearly 600 Pages, Price, $6. Delivered.

This Book is a Very Important One for all Lawyers

It sets forth, as succinctly as is consistent with clearness, the present condition of the law governing pleading as interpreted by the courts of last resort in Missouri. The decisions are mostly those of the Missouri courts; though in some instances illustrations have been drawn from the decisions of other code states.

The Author Thoroughly Believes in the Advantages of the Code System of Pleading.

He further believes that precision and exactness are even of more importance in code pleading than in pleading at common law. For, while it is true that the common law requires the utmost strictness in adherence to forms, yet, if its forms are followed, the practitioner need have little fear of attack upon his pleading, even though that pleading should totally fail to inform his opponent as to the real points in issue. On the other hand, the very object of the Code is to compel parties to make clear the grounds upon which their right to recover, or their defense, is based. The lawyer who is well grounded in the rules of pleading will surely have the advantage in litigation. The constant study of this valuable work, familiarity with the rules set forth in it, and with the decisions enforcing and interpreting those rules, cannot fail to make one a good pleader.

SPECIAL OFFER—To those who buy both books at once, we offer Pattison's Pleading Form Book (Price, $5.00) if ordered within the next 30 days for $4.00 additional, thus offering the two works, giving all there is to be said about Pleading in Missouri.

The Sun Becoming Extinct.

An eminent scientist has startled the world with the declaration that the heat of the sun is being exhausted. He assures us, however, that it will be many centuries before it takes place. In the meantime we should try and make the best of life and enjoy it while we have the opportunity. This, however, is impossible unless you have good health and especially a strong stomach. Use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters to keep the stomach in order and you will be happy. It cures dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, aids digestion and keeps the bowels regular. It has been the standard medicine of the American people over fifty years. Insist on having the genuine with our Private Revenue Stamp over the neck of the bottle.

But something lingers of remembered grace—
A touch, a tone—the beauty of your face.
And waits of dark locks clustering o'er your brow.

"Fore Heaven, 'tis something in this world of strife
To find this color coming from the clod:
Who knows a violet is the breath of God.
Who reaps rare roses from dim vales of rest,
From all the terror of the world apart,
And while the red thorn bruises her dear breast
Hides it within cloisters of her heart.

Give me the violets and the lilies white;
The lilies, with their languor, still and deep!
Give me the dews that make the daisies white,
Give me the poppies that are fain of sleep.

Give me the dreams! And let me think the skies—
Arched in great blue, or darkening from above.
In all their gloom—in all their mysteries—
Hold no name dearer than the name of Love!

A COMMENDABLE BETRAYAL

By C. M. Stevens.
(Copyright, 1901, by Authors Syndicate.)

DILLIE LOWE grew like a solitary wild flower in a wilderness. Her father was a Black Hills gold seeker, and failing in that began to raise horses in the edge of the Dakota Bad Lands. When the soldiers of Fort Meade had made the place comparatively safe, he sent for his wife and four sons to join him. Dillie was then too young to know much of events, and when she was 16 there had been little for her to remember but horses, herders and Lieut. James. And yet she was far from being unaccomplished. She could lasso and cut horses out of the herd equal to the best of them, and she read all the most popular magazines, although they were two or three months old before Lieut. James could get them to her.

Dillie was past 18 when the interest of Lieut. James in her plainly passed beyond furnishing a pretty girl with magazines and books. The immediate cause that brought this interest to the surface was the shock produced on Lieut. James when he arrived one day with a bundle of magazines and books tied to his saddle and found Dillie at the lower end of the sand-draw-eating buffalo berries with How Grimes. The lieutenant was a handsome young man whose fine military bearing added greatly to his appearance, but How Grimes was a rollicking westerner, born to the ways of the pioneers, and he was said to have a half dozen ranches, each of them with horses enough to make him an acceptable squire for any of the belles of the plains.

Dillie began to introduce the two young men when she saw a look in the lieutenant's face that froze the words on her lips.
"We have met before," he said, stiffly. "Perhaps Mr. Grimes will remember the affair—at Red Gap."

"Very well," replied How Grimes with as polite and expressive a movement of the head and hand as the free and easy manners of the plainsman possessed. "Old dog Tray nearly got his death that day for being in bad company. I have always wished for a chance, lieutenant, to thank you for giving me the benefit of the doubt. Those horsehieves did me a sorry trick and I would like nothing better than to pay them back in their own coin. Did you ever find the owner of the horse they traded me?"

"O, yes," replied the lieutenant; "he taught up with us about an hour after you so cleverly departed and I imagine it would have gone rather hard with you if he had been able to find you."

Lieut. James turned his horse abruptly and went on to the house. When Dillie came in he was about to leave for the fort, although it would be nearly midnight before he could arrive there, and it had always been his custom to stay over night. Plainly something was very much wrong and Dillie had a good cry over her first real sorrow. Her mother said she must expect such displays of jealousy in men, and that the good standing of How Grimes was too well verified for her or her daughter to feel any doubts about him, besides she was not sure that it was a good thing for a girl to marry a soldier, who was liable to be shot almost any day.

After that How Grimes came frequently, considering that it was nearly a hundred miles to his nearest ranch, and the lieutenant came more often, although his duties at the fort were very exacting.

Dillie was quite distracted, and at the end of a year when How Grimes asked her to be his wife, she was almost beside herself trying to know her own mind. Fortunately, the two young men had not met each other at her house since the first day, and neither had ever mentioned the other.

How Grimes was coming on the 1st of May for his answer, and the more she thought and wept over what she should say the more fixed became the belief that she did not and could not love him enough to be his wife. Her father and mother were both furious that she should let such a good chance for a husband go by. They argued that chances did not grow as thick as sand grass.

But the eventful day had come and Dillie heard the rollicking laugh of How Grimes as he passed the plainsman's badinage with her father at the stable just over the hill. Somehow the laugh sounded like a menace to her happiness. She looked out of the window and saw her little pony nipping the grass in the valley toward the road, and an impulse seized her to slip out to it with saddle and bridle and thus earn a respite till after dark from meeting the lover concerning whom there had arisen in her so suddenly such an unaccountable aversion.

A few minutes later she was galloping away as if she were flying from an impending disaster. Just outside of the valley containing her father's ranch was a series of sand hills, and when she reached these, she flung herself from the horse upon the soft buffalo grass and gave herself up to thought.

The sun had just disappeared behind the distant hills, she realized that she must return home and bravely face her fate with the inevitable answer against this man. Her pony came at her call and she was about to mount when the measured thump of a horse's hoofs beat upon her ears. The next moment a familiar form appeared around the side of the hill and Lieut. James rode up to her.

"What can you be doing here at this hour?" he asked, with earnest solicitude. His tone went through her like a sword and she felt as if she would fall, but from the support of her restless little horse.

"I—I can't tell you," she stammered, "not just now."

He sprang from his horse and came up to her side.

"Perhaps this is a providential meeting," he said, more gravely than he was accustomed to speak to her. "Do you remember my words when I met you that time with How Grimes?"

She shuddered and answered him almost inaudibly.

"I am now in possession of proof that he is the leader of the gang of horse thieves which we have been trying for a year to exterminate."

He did not see how his words blanched her face, but he noticed that she straightened up and compressed her lips, as if struggling with some strong emotion. He attributed it to doubt.

"You know," he continued, "that I have never mentioned his name to you, for I could not do so without casting suspicion on a man whom I as yet had no means of proving guilty. In the last few days I have learned with the deepest regret that he has been a frequent visitor here, and since morning I have been following his trail in this direction."

Dillie was dumb. She had been unable to speak, but listened with eyes opened wide in a mental maze of conflicting emotions.

"I have proofs that are enough for me and the law, but you may need more. If he is innocent he will not resist arrest; if he is guilty, he will risk death to escape. Will that be convincing to you?"

She inclined her head in reply.

"Then there will be a fight, and someone will be killed," she said, almost in gasps.

"There are only two ways in which a fight, and maybe a death, can be avoided. None of my comrades are likely to reach here before morning. If I take him alone, I must come upon him suddenly, say for instance in case you are talking to him, you leave the room on some excuse, and I suddenly enter in place of you. If I would then get the drop on him, and if he is innocent, no harm will be done anyone. Or, if he is anything to you, when I arrive an hour after this, he will be an hour ahead of me on his way to freedom. Let me help you mount your horse."

In a moment both were in their saddles. Lieut. James gave her a parting salute, turned and spurred his horse back on the trail around the hill.

An hour later Lieut. James rode up to the door, and was met by Dillie's father.

"My daughter is anxious to see you in our sitting-room," he said, hurriedly, in a low tone. "I don't understand it, but she seems too anxious about it for us to press any questions just now. Bob, take the horse, and, lieutenant, you come with me."

The ranchman led the way into the sitting-room, which was dimly lighted with a small lamp. He went hurriedly out, leaving the lieutenant in some suspense as to what might follow. In a few minutes the door leading to the parlor opened and Dillie, with a faltering step, appeared. Leaving the door slightly ajar, she came by the lieutenant without speaking, but stopped as she opened the outside door. She looked earnestly and anxiously for a moment at the handsome young soldier and then pointed toward the parlor door.

As soon as she was gone, he drew two revolvers from under his cloak and, with one ready in each hand, advanced to the parlor. Through the chink left open in the door he saw that the end of the room at his right was unoccupied. If the man was there he must be near the left end. He flung the door back and cried: "Hands up!" to the man at the table.

Grimes, with one spring, was across the room to the chair on which was hanging his belt. Instead of shooting his man, as the lieutenant was justified in doing, he leaped after him and dealt him a blow on the head that stretched him unconscious upon the floor, but not before the desperado had caught up a revolver and turned it accurately enough to send a bullet into his assailant's shoulder. When the family reached the parlor, Grimes was severely tied. The soldier found a very capable nurse, and a month before Grimes was taken to the penitentiary, she became his wife.

It may be that the claims made for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription seem almost too great to women who in years of suffering have found no help in doctors or medicines. But it is to be remembered that no claim is made for "Favorite Prescription" which is not substantiated by thousands of women cured by its use. Its effects are truly wonderful. It wipes out past years of pain as a sponge wipes a slate.

Favorite Prescription is the great medicine for women. It establishes regularity, dries enfeebling drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It is the best preparative for maternity, making the baby's advent practically painless.

"When I wrote to you in March, asking advice as to what to do for myself," says Mrs. E. L. Reynolds, of Guffe, McLean Co., Ky., "I was expecting to become a mother in June, and was sick of the time. I had been sick for several months. Could not get anything to stay in my stomach. On the 27th of May I was six months, and threatening all the time with this. Had female weakness for several years. My hips, back and lower bowels hurt me all the time. Had numbness from my hips down. Had several hard cramping spells, and was not able to do any work at all. I received your answer in a few days, telling me to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I took three bottles, and before I had taken it a week I was better, and before I had taken it a month I was able to help in the house. On the 27th of May my baby was born, and I was only sick three hours, and had an easy time. The efficacy of Dr. Pierce's medicine for it has cured me."

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Candidates for Teacher Must Have a First or Second Grade Certificate.
The board of education met last evening at the court house. All members were present, President Canuto Alarid being in the chair.
An invitation to the board from the Sisters of Loretto to attend the Loretto Academy commencement exercises on the evening of June 19, was read and accepted.
The president appointed the standing committees of the board as follows:
Finance, T. B. Catron, Celestino Ortiz, Manuel Delgado, Supplies, Celestino Ortiz, E. S. Andrews, Nicanor Baca, Teachers, J. V. Conway, 2. L. Bartlett, Nicanor Baca, Buildings and Grounds, Celestino Ortiz, John V. Conway, Manuel Delgado, Judiciary, E. L. Bartlett, T. B. Catron, E. S. Andrews, Auditing, Nicanor Baca, Celestino Ortiz, John V. Conway.
All communications and applications regarding teachers' positions were referred to the committee on teachers.
The superintendent of the schools read his annual report which showed quite an advancement in interest, enrollment and daily attendance. The average daily attendance last year was 409.6; this year it was 464.6. The total enrollment last year was 692; this year it was 742. There was also quite an improvement in the order and general deportment of the pupils during the year.
County Superintendent J. V. Conway and City Superintendent J. A. Wood were instructed to enforce the provisions of the new school law regarding teachers' institute and teachers' examinations, which all teachers of the city and the county must attend. The board passed a resolution that teachers for the city schools of Santa Fe will be required to secure either a first grade or a second grade certificate.
E. S. Andrews moved that all teachers must have a first class certificate so that Santa Fe, the capital, be not the only city in the territory that permits a lower grade than a first class certificate teacher to teach, but his motion was voted down.
The board authorized a tax levy of five mills for the support of the schools. This is the same as last year. The next meeting of the board will be held on the first Monday in July at which time the election of teachers will take place.

An Expression of Gratitude.
The Woman's Board of Trade and Free Library Association take this opportunity to make public their deep appreciation of the kindly feeling which prompted the young men who played in the baseball game between the clerks and the printers, to send them the sum of $6. At the meeting of the board the sum was received with a vote of thanks and put to the use of the benevolence committee. At the same meeting a resolution was carried by a majority of the board to the effect that as the organization was started and carried on with the object of improving and helping in every way to advance the best interests of the city and as a body, they could not feel that Sunday games tended to that end that for the future they must decline to receive money made by games played on Sunday.
