GONE TO REST.
Louis Huning Succumbs to Pneumonia—Funeral Thursday Morning.

Louis Huning, aged 67 years and 8 months, expired at his home in Los Lunas last evening at 5:30 o'clock. He was a native of Pennsylvania, two weeks ago and his condition became worse in spite of the physicians' efforts to stay the progress of the disease. His sons, Louis and Franz, both residents of this city, were notified a few days ago of their father's illness, and together with their mother and two young sisters, remained by the side of their loved one until his soul passed to the unknown beyond.

Louis Huning was born in the little town of Meane, province of Hanover, Germany, in 1834, and came to America when quite young. When 20 years of age he journeyed from the Missouri river to New Mexico with ox teams and settled on a piece of land which he ever after called his home. Two brothers, Franz Huning, of El Alamo, and Henry Huning, of Show Low, Ariz., preceded him to the wilds of the southwest and they have been united in the same final preparation.

By his indomitable energy and persistence, Louis succeeded in accumulating a goodly share of this world's material. His property consists of fruit, agriculture and grazing lands in Valencia county, together with several tracts of sheep, which were given his entire attention prior to his illness, and when he was called upon to close his eyes forever he had made his final preparations for the disposal of his property. He was one of the best known citizens of the territory, liked by every one and often relieved those in distress. In his death central New Mexico and especially Valencia county, loses a loyal friend.

The time of the funeral has been arranged for 11 o'clock on Thursday morning, at the residence, and all friends of the family and deceased are invited to attend. Interment will be made in the Los Lunas cemetery.

Last night after the announcement of Mr. Huning's death, Undertaker F. O. Strong was summoned to Los Lunas to embalm and prepare the body for burial.

The Former President is Very Sick.

Crazy Alabama Lawyer Shoots His Client.

Iowa Public Men Say Gov. Shaw Will Accept Treasuryship.

WOOL MARKET FAIR.

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 24.—Mrs. Grover Cleveland makes the following statement today concerning the health of the former president: "Reports published in regard to Mr. Cleveland's health apparently have been construed as indicating his entire recovery. This is shown by a renewal of all sorts of applications for all sorts of things which can hardly be considered even by a man in robust health. He has already received several epistolary chateausments at the hands of those who are impatiently awaiting for answers to letters which should never have been written. While Mr. Cleveland's health is such as to entirely relieve his friends from any apprehensions, he is yet far from well, and has not been able to leave his room for nearly five weeks."

SUDDENLY DEMENTED.
Alabama Lawyer, While at Trial, Shoots His Client.

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 24.—William Little, lawyer and former consul to Honduras under Cleveland, today seriously wounded William L. Dodd, president of the Southern Mutual Aid association. Little had been representing Dodd on trial on the charge of using the mails for fraudulent purposes in connection with the Birmingham Debutante Adoption company. Little became suddenly deranged and fired every chamber of a revolver at Dodd and his brother, James L. Dodd. Only one bullet took effect. Dodd will recover.

TREASURY PORTFOLIO.
Has Been Offered to Governor Shaw, and He Will Accept.

Washington, Dec. 24.—Gov. Leslie M. Shaw, of Iowa, to whom has been offered the treasury portfolio, is expected to arrive here tomorrow. The general impression among Iowa public men of this city is that he will accept the portfolio. Whenever Shaw will assume the duties of the position, Secretary Gage will turn over the administration of the treasury to him. Secretary Gage has not yet announced his plans for the future.

WOOL MARKET.
Prices on the Boston Markets the Past Few Days.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 24.—A fair demand for wool with prices firm obtains here this week. There has been some speculative buying on the part of dealers and any cheap lots available have been snapped up. Good lots of fine medium territory are being sold on the auction basis, 42@43c, with one at 45c, and staple, 44c@45c. There has been more doing in fleece wools this week and prices are firm.

THE MISTLETOE.
From time immemorial, in all Christmas and New Year rejoicing, mistletoe has held its place, not alone as a "stealing touch," by which name it is still known to a large class of rustics, but in more distant times as associated with worship, and having magic powers attributed to it.
With the Persians the sacred mistletoe was part of their creed—an object of worship also still known in parts of India. In Scandinavian mythology it figures largely. Father, son of Odin, the Al-Father, a young deity as half god, was slain by a piece of mistletoe, a proof in those dark ages of his magic powers.
The earliest annals of England tell of the veneration for this curious growth. One Druidical priesthood, said to be sprung from the Magi of the East, held the mistletoe as their most sacred possession. This was more especially the case when the parasite was found growing upon oak. Mistletoe was regarded as a cure for human ills generally, and was used in the early days of the Druids as a charm against evil spirits. The Druids called it by a name signifying "all-healing." Its medicinal properties are now considered doubtful, though it has been found to be efficacious in certain cases of epilepsy.
We hear from Pliny and others of the solemnity of the festival of the cutting of the mistletoe in the early days of our island. This festival was held about the middle of March, "on the sixth day of the moon." The 10th of March was at that time New Year's day, and the festival was held as near that date as the moon (whose full radiance was necessary for the proceeding) would allow. An added solemnity attended the cutting of the mistletoe from an oak, which tree, the Druids announced, God loved more than any other.
On the festival day a grand procession was formed to the grove, two white oxen being led, fastened by the horns to the oak. A white-robed Druid then climbed into the leafless branches and with a golden knife cut the mistletoe, which was received by another member of the priesthood, also clothed in white and standing below. At this time, the oxen were slaughtered and other religious rites performed. The gathered branches were used in many ways, different parts of the plant being made into nosegays, decorations and febrifuges, by processes in which times and seasons, and many incantations, were supposed to add to its medicinal power.
Mistletoe, at the present time figures almost solely at Christmas festivities. It grows in our southern and midland counties as a parasite on certain forest trees, such as yew, holly, lime, poplar and elm, but rarely is it found on oak. It is probably propagated largely by birds, who are very fond of the berries. Bird-life is made from mistletoe berries. Its name comes from the A. S. mist, "glue," and "twig," the meaning is obvious to any who have squeezed a berry, the juice being like thick gum.

ORIGIN OF SANTA CLAUS.
While the Santa Claus myth has long been associated with the festivities of Christmas, historically speaking, the saint who became synonymous for Christmas giving had absolutely no connection with the anniversary itself. Santa Claus being the corruption of St. Nicholas, who was bishop of Myra, in Asia Minor, during the fourth century.
St. Nicholas was a man who was as wisely known for his generosity and charity as for his piety, and there are many pretty legends that show him to have been the friend and protector of the young. It was by such deeds and generous acts that St. Nicholas exhibited his care and affection for children, and when he died on December 6, 243 A. D., he was made their patron saint.
While the use of the mistletoe and holly, as well as that of the Yule log, are customs which may be traced to the day of the Druidical observance of the festival of Yule, the Christmas tree is not such a heathenish plant, for its appearance in Yuletide celebrations was not until long after the last sacrifice of the Druids had become a decidedly misty tradition. Of course, it is generally admitted that this tree first appeared in Germany; but, while the date is still a matter for controversy, it is positively known that the first English child to enjoy a Christmas tree was Mary, the daughter of Henry VIII, and Catherine of Aragon, who was afterwards known as Bloody Mary.
When she was 4 years old, the king gave orders that the following Christmas should be a most merry day for her, and one of the decorations in the great hall of Greenwich palace was a rosemary bush with red jewels and silver ornaments and lighted with rushlights. And from that little bush, set up for the amusement of a small royal maiden who was destined to become a queen, has grown the Christmas tree that is now such a conspicuous feature of all Christmas celebrations.

FOREST RESERVES.
The National Forest Reserves of the United States now cover an area of nearly forty million acres in the first reserve, that of 1,200,000 acres in the Yellowstone National Park, being set aside by executive decree in 1891. These reserves are not merely for the cutting of the timber upon them, but insure its scientific management so that it is harvested with a view to future cuttings, and what is most important, that the tracts be kept intact as woodlands. All the forest reserves are situated in mountain regions and on great watersheds where, by their covering and protection of the soil, they act as natural storage reservoirs regulating the flow of the streams which issue from them, and to a large extent preventing violent and disastrous freshets.
One of the secondary but important effects of these forests upon the water-sources is their filtering action, by which the amount of sediment which would otherwise be washed into the streams is held from them. In these days of large storage reservoirs which must more and more become the feature of successful irrigation enterprises, freedom from silt and sediment in the streams is of the utmost importance, as has been repeatedly shown in investigations of the hydrological survey.
It is impossible to force, much less to estimate, the national development, especially through agriculture and irrigation, which these forest reserves will assist in bringing about, or to calculate the great increase in population, property values and business activities destined in time to result from them.
To the credit of the Denver merchants, every one of them who believe in printer's ink, and they all do, gave each and every newspaper of that city a "stealing touch," by which name it is still known to a large class of rustics, but in more distant times as associated with worship, and having magic powers attributed to it.
The Citizen wishes its thousands of readers a "Merry Christmas."

PINOS ALTOS.
Interesting Notes From a Good Camp in Grant County.
Special Correspondence.
While the Pinos Altos gold mining has closed down at Pinos Altos, that famous camp is holding its own as to mining activity. The Stanley mine, just above the camp, is being run on surplus ore from the Pinos Altos Gold Mining company.
Dimmock Brothers are running their concentrator on the low grade ore from their famous Silver Cell mine and are running the high grade through their smelter. They are also doing considerable placer mining. The Silver Cell is one of the largest silver producers in the southwest, solid blocks of silver have been taken out by the owners.
William McAllister is working quite a force of men on the Arizona and is shipping considerable gold ore daily.
Laird, Holak & Carter have a very promising outlook in the Colwell mine in the Burro mountain district upon which they have a lease. They are at present an enormous body of fair grade copper ore in sight, and in a short time, or as soon as the copper market improves, they are making considerable shipments of high grade copper ore to their concentrator at White Sulphur, and shipping their high grade smelter ore to the smelter at Silver City.

The Value of a Life
In the good (?) old days of pirates and brigands men were carried off and held for ransom, and enormous sums were often paid by the relatives and friends of those held in captivity. With the advance of civilization, however, piracy and brigandage and the payment of ransoms have become things of the past, but how often would a family, or a business house, pay thousands of dollars for the return of a life lost had been taken.
The great majority of men realize this to a certain extent, and carry assurance to protect their family or their business, and yet but few men carry assurance that is really adequate for either purpose. Many a man earning from three to five thousand dollars a year, and carrying five or six thousand dollars of assurance, and securing himself that he has made ample provision for his family. But has he? The larger sum, six thousand dollars, will produce, at 4 per cent, for the support of the family the meager income of $240 a year, or very nearly so a week. How about you? You carry insurance? But is it adequate?

Christmas Night.
SOME say that ever "gained that season comes
Wherein our Savior's birth is celebrated.
This bird of Dawning singeth all night long;
And then they say no spirit dares stir abroad;
The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike,
No fairy takes, no witch has power to charm,
So hallowed and so gracious is the time.

IN THE WRECK.
Mrs. Balduz Writes of Her Experience in a Frightful Wreck.
Mrs. Susan Balduz, in a letter to her brother, Orrin McCowan, tells of the recent horrible wreck on the Southern Pacific road, in the following graphic words:
"San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 20.—I am here safe and sound, and thank God for it. I was in that terrible wreck. Such an experience one does not care to repeat. All the passengers had retired for the night, even the conductor and porter on the sleepers. Running along smoothly at ordinary speed, when the crash came. Such a tearing, splintering crash is difficult to explain, yet everyone was awakened. In an instant, standing speechless and immovable in the aisle, waiting to see what was to happen. The train stopped at the next instant. When the brakes man came on the train, his face torn and bleeding from gashes on his face and head, hands with the skin torn completely off, we realized the awfulness of the situation. The conductor shouted, 'Everybody off the cars, the train is on fire.' He followed the unfortunate brakemen through the train, telling the passengers to gather their grips and bundles together and get off. The cries and groans of the poor suffering were heartrending to hear. The men pushed the coaches that were not burning away from the fire, and we were glad to get in them away from the coal and fix a comfortable place to lay the wounded.
The engine of the north bound passenger train was standing on top of the cars.
So badly and I am here alive. However, not one stitch of clothing can we call our own, except what we now have on our backs. I am glad that we have been spared. Lovingly,
SUSAN."
"I wish to say that I feel I owe my life to Kodol Dyspepsia Cure," writes H. C. Christensen of Hayfield, Minn. "For the last several years I have been troubled with dyspepsia so that I could hold nothing on my stomach. Many times I was unable to retain a morsel of food. Finally I was advised to try Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and I began to improve from the first bottle. Now I am cured and recommend it to all. Digests your food. Cures all stomach troubles. J. H. Saved at Grave's Brink.
"I know I would long ago have been in my grave," writes Mrs. S. H. Newsum, of Decatur, Ala., "if it had not been for Electric Bitters. For three years I suffered untold agony from the worst forms of indigestion, water-brash, stomach and bowel dyspepsia. But this excellent medicine did me a world of good. Since using it I can eat heartily and have gained 35 pounds. My indigestion, loss of appetite, stomach, liver and kidney troubles, Electric Bitters are a positive, guaranteed cure. Only 50 cents at all drug stores."

HERE IN ALBUQUERQUE.
How Christmas Will Be Observed in the Territorial Metropolis.
Christmas will be celebrated in Albuquerque, the metropolis of New Mexico, with various public and private functions.
In the houses of the more fortunate there will be the usual parties and dinners; for the poor, the unfortunate, the invalids at the hospitals, the prisoners in the county and city jails, arrangements have been made by the Non-Sectarian Benevolent society and by proper owners so that they will be amply cared for.
In the afternoon, Cresceus will perform at the fair grounds, and as the Driving association has arranged a matinee of races there will be in attendance a crowd of sport-loving people.
Col. Hopkins, the popular postmaster, tells The Citizen that he has sent Christmas presents away by the car loads, and that he has been great. "The incoming mail," he says, "has brought Christmas packages galore, but, as an evidence of prosperity," continued Mr. Hopkins, "the outgoing mails, in future to say, have carried more Christmas presents than ever before in the history of the city. It is one of the unfailing signs of prosperity. Everybody seems to have money and they are remembering their friends, absent, as well as present."
Colonel Powell, the efficient Wells Fargo express agent, who will on January 1 assume his new duties as route agent, informs The Citizen representative that the business of the local office has been absolutely immense during the past week or ten days in the handling of Christmas packages, going and coming, and that John Sackett, who has been delivering the mail, and the clerks at the office, have been kept exceedingly busy.
