STATE FUNERAL.

Nation Joins in the Service at the Capitol.

Solemn Scene at Washington This Morning.

Every Honor Paid to Remains of the Martyred President.

APPROPRIATE RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 17.—The state funeral day of the late President McKinley opened sombre as the occasion. The sky was overcast, occasional spasms of rain fell and a soft wind barely stirred the signs of mourning on the building fronts.

About the White House the vigil over the dead was maintained throughout the night. Details of cavalrymen, artillerymen, and infantrymen, sailors and marines, were on guard around the grounds. In the east room a guard of honor watched over the dead. Members of the Loyal Legion and Grand Army of the Republic performed their sad duty. At the head of the casket stood an artilleryman and a sailor. At the foot a cavalryman and a marine. The second stage of the late president's journey toward a waiting grave at Canton was begun just a few minutes after 9 o'clock. An hour earlier the chief officers of the government, civil, military and judicial, began to arrive and many others whose names are familiar to the world over, came singly and in groups. Members of the diplomatic corps in court costume were among the early comers. Former President Cleveland and former Secretary of War Lamont were shown seats in the red parlor. Members of the senate committee and members of the supreme court in their robes of office followed. President Roosevelt arrived at 8:30, accompanied by his wife and sister, and went to the blue parlor, where they were joined by members of the cabinet. The president wore a frock coat with a wreath on the left arm. Mr. McKinley arose earlier than usual to prepare for the ordeal. She had rested quite well, but her pale face told plainly her sufferings. Senator Hanna came, leaning heavily on a cane.

A portion of many of the beautiful floral tributes sent to the White House were placed about the funeral casket. Conspicuous among them was a massive cushion, a floral tribute in the form of an army guard from the Grand Army of the Republic, and offerings from the Loyal Legion and other soldier organizations.

While men of note were arriving, the funeral escort, under command of Major General John R. Brooke, was forming immediately in front of the White House. Besides the regular soldiers, sailors and marines, the escort was made up of a detachment of the National Guard, members of the Grand Army of the Republic, Loyal Legion and kindred bodies of civic organizations and representatives of all branches of the national government, governors, state senators and staffs.

The streets were crowded. Wire cables strung along the entire route of march from the White House to the capitol kept the funeral procession. At precisely 2 o'clock the silent march was given and the body bearers reverently raised to their stately shoulders the funeral casket. As they appeared at the main door of the White House the marine band stationed opposite struck up the hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee." There was perfect silence throughout the march and as the last sad strain of music died away the throng in the building lifted their heads, but their eyes were wet.

As the hearse moved away the mourners entered carriages. Mrs. McKinley concluded to remain in her room. Slowly down the White House drive, through a fine, drizzling rain, the solemn cortege wound its way. The band played the dead march from Saul. A blast from a bugle sounded "March" and the head of the procession was moving on its way to the capitol. The casket in a black crepe hearse and drawn by six black horses, caparisoned in black net, with trailing tassels and a staid groom alongside the moving procession. As the veterans of the civil war passed the waiting hearse wheeled slowly into line and the guards of honor from the army and navy took up their positions on either side of the hearse and the funeral cortege proper took its appointed place behind the delegation of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The artillery band played a solemn dirge as with slow steps it led the sorrowful procession up the avenue. The people stood with heads uncovered and many bowed in apparently silent prayer as the hearse passed. A drizzling rain was falling.

SERVICES AT THE CAPITOL.

The funeral services at the capitol were simple and beautiful. They were the form prescribed in the Methodist church, an address and benediction, with two hymns.

At 10 o'clock Admiral Dewey made his appearance, accompanied by General Otis, General Davis and General Ruggles. He took up his station at the eastern entrance, where he was joined by other members of the guard of honor. At 10:40 the cabinet entered. Then to the strains of "Nearer, My God, to Thee," by the marine band outside, the casket was borne into the rotunda and placed upon the catafalque. Next came members of the family of the deceased, Abner McKinley leading. They were seated near the head of the casket. Mrs. McKinley, with General Wilson and his escort, sat in the first row. President Roosevelt was given a seat at the end of the row occupied by the cabinet. He appeared to be restraining his emotions with difficulty. When the noise occasioned by the seating of the late comers ceased, the choir softly sang "Lead Kindly Light" while every one stood in reverence.

At the conclusion of the hymn, Rev. Dr. Henry R. Taylor, presiding elder of the Washington district of the M. E. church, delivered the invocation. As the pastor ceased, Mr. Thomas C. Noyes led the hymn, "Some Time We'll Understand." When Bishop Edward Andrews, who had come from Ohio to say the last words over the remains of his life-long friend and parishioner, stood at the head of the casket and spoke in a sympathetic voice with many evidences of deep emotion. The address lasted a quarter of an hour, and as the bishop concluded everyone in the vast rotunda rose and hundreds of voices joined in "Nearer, My God, to Thee." It was an affecting moment. In the midst of the singing Admiral Killebrew advanced with silent tread and placed a beautiful blue floral cross at the foot of the casket. When the last notes died away the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Dr. W. H. Chapman, acting pastor of the Metropolitan church. This ended the religious service.

After the funeral services almost twenty minutes were required to clear the rotunda sufficiently to permit the admission of the general public. At 11:53 the people began to file by on both sides of the casket. No one was allowed more than a hurried glance.

INJURED BY THE CRUSH.

At 3 o'clock a tremendous crowd was surging toward the east entrance of the rotunda, thousands of people, many of whom were women and children, were caught in a crush at the foot of the main staircase. Inadequate arrangements for handling the crowd seemed to have been responsible for the disaster. Several women and children fainted. Many were borne into the capitol, where medical aid was rendered.

It is estimated that fifty women and children were injured to some extent, but most of them were able to go to their homes. A few were taken to the emergency hospital.

Whereas, The people of New Mexico have lost a loyal friend and a devoted citizen;

New Mexico demands Statehood from the Fifty-Seventh Congress.

The New Mexico Territorial Fair will be held in the city of Albuquerque, New Mexico, from September 15th to October 15th. Premium List will aggregate $100,000.

ALBUQUERQUE, SEPT. 17, 1901.

The Territorial fair will cost at least $20,000. It will be the very best exhibition ever held in the southwest.

The Citizen has no sympathy whatever with the professional lawmen who pose as the friends of humanity and live by the denunciation of American institutions.

Sovereignty in the United States resides in the people. It cannot be assassinated. The embodiment of magistracy may die, but American sovereignty is immortal.

Father J. H. Ralliere of Belen writes The Citizen that the name of President McKinley's assassin is spelled "Golgof" French and pronounced "golgothet" and means a dirty fellow.

Uncle Sam has reached fourth place in the strength of his navy, coming next after England, France and Russia. Little fellows like Chili are no longer reminding this country of its duty in regard to sea power.

The world must certainly be growing better by land strides. The Mexican government has declared war on gambling and has notified all its army officers and civil employees that they will be dismissed if found in gambling houses.

The smallest exhibit at the Buffalo exposition is the fig wasp from California. It can be seen only on a microscope. The insect is an important aid in producing the fruit and the United States government spent $16,000 in establishing it in the Pacific region.

Chili and Peru have both come to time and named delegates to the Pan American congress, which meets at the City of Mexico next month. This insures a representative gathering, at which it is hoped that something of general value to the new world will be evolved.

Anarchists henceforth will be marked men in every civilized nation. The wanton murders they have committed and in which they glory leave no room for doubt. They are organized assassins and to shed the blood of the innocent is their delight and their existence is a constant menace.

Billy Clarke, the famous catfish of the Washington club, is a former Santa Fe boy and he wants to come to the territorial capital and help with the territorial fair purse for his home town. With a little effort Santa Fe can strengthen its team and make the Cyclone sure winners at the territorial fair.

In the following paragraph M. P. Stamm describes himself to a dot: "There is and always has been and always will be a class of people who mistake their ignorance and bigotry for superior wisdom. They parrot like, repeat what some one else says, ignorant, or perhaps malicious, has told them, without the trouble of an investigation for themselves."

The Citizen last Saturday had an article in type describing the proposed mobbing of M. P. Stamm for his insulting card in reference to President McKinley. The article was suppressed at the request of Mayor Marron, Gov. Stover and other friends of law and order. Did Stamm appreciate the kindness? Not in the least. He is a little viper, with murderous thoughts, and has no more conception of kindness and fairness than the Czolgosz gang of assassins, to which he would belong if he lived in Chicago.

STAMM, THE "REFORMER."
M. P. Stamm, of this city achieved some notoriety last week by writing and publishing a card in the Journal Democrat, while President McKinley was on his dying bed, that the "political free booters die hard." The people of the city were much incensed over the brutality of the writer, and on Friday night it took hard work on the part of the law and order portion of the community to prevent him from being mobbed. A big crowd gathered in front of the Postal Telegraph company's office and it was proposed to tar and feather Stamm. It took active work on the part of several citizens to break up the crowd and prevent a disgraceful scene in the city.

We are glad to know Mr. Stamm wrote his card when he thought President McKinley was going to recover. He did not wish the death of the President—merely wished him to suffer for being a "freebooter," so that an anarchist and socialist could rejoice and point a moral and adorn a tale from the tragedy.

Mr. Stamm has lived in this city for twenty years and during that time he has belonged to all sorts of political parties. In 1886 he was a republican. Before that he had been greenbacker, prohibitionist and granter. He was elected recorder of this city in the republican ticket in 1886. Since then he has been a populist and general kicker, and now calls himself a socialist democrat. This appears to be the entered apostrophe degree to anarchy. Czolgosz, the assassin, belonged to both socialist and anarchist clubs in Cleveland, Ohio.

In practical affairs Mr. Stamm does not carry out his iridescent dream of humanity. He helped break the Albuquerque National bank, using the borrowed funds to gild the best corner lot in the city. While talking loud about helping whole nations of down-trodden people, he has never been known to help any individual suffer.

While he has changed and revised his political notions semi-annually he is so narrow-minded and egotistical that he never admits for a moment that he might be mistaken, and all

Fair Exhibit Assured.
Last Tuesday afternoon a meeting was called to discuss the question of sending an exhibit to the Territorial Fair. It was decided that in view of the fact that there would be a large number of industrial public men from all over the west at the fair, many of whom represent large monetary interests who are looking toward New Mexico for investment, it is of the most importance that Santa Fe county be represented on such an occasion. James A. Jackson of this place was elected as chairman of a committee for collecting and arranging exhibits, and Dr. A. B. Phillips of Dolores as his assistant, they two to select an exhibit.

Suit Against Zeiger.
Rufus B. McCrory has filed suit in the district court for $30,000 in damages. This suit is the outgrowth of the bloody feud between Charles Zeiger and Rufus McCrory fought in front of the Parlor saloon on the night of August 25 last, when McCrory was severely injured and his injuries which can only be satisfied with $30,000.

It will be remembered that in the fight Zeiger lacerated the wound McCrory with a sword cane—one wound in the shoulder and the other between the eighth and ninth ribs. The black passing club passed the fight's body. Plaintiff alleges that he was by reason of education and training capable of earning $150 per month. He has expended divers sums of money since his wounding and claims damages in the amount mentioned. W. M. Pettolani is attorney for McCrory.—El Paso News.

PROSPEROUS SAN ANTONIO.

Preparations Being Made for Output of Coal in Large Quantities.

Special Correspondence.
San Antonio, N. M., September 11.—This town is coming to the front as rapidly as any place in the territory, and judging from the improvements that are being made at Carthage, a coal camp nine miles east, business will be greatly increased within a few months. Today a 25-horse power engine built by the American Coal fields where it will be placed and operated by the American mines, a fine property owned by the Mesquite firm of Allaire, Myers & Co. of San Antonio. The Carthage mine, which is owned and operated by A. H. Hill and Co., general merchants, is also receiving a lot of attention at present. The work of installing a 25-horse power steam hoisting machine is now being done and in a few days the output of coal at this mine will be much larger than ever before. When the above named companies get their new machine in operation they contemplate shipping about 150 tons of black diamonds each working day in the week.

The San Antonio Fuel company, which recently acquired a fine piece of land in the Carthage district, have a small force of miners at work opening up coal deposits and placing the fuel on the dump. The firm will begin the shipment of coal in about two weeks, and as rapidly as possible they will employ as many experienced coal miners as room will permit.

Robert Law who is interested in the property of the San Antonio Fuel company, moved with his family to a nice little cottage at the coal fields today.

Charles Reed, who was proprietor of the Carthage mine, has been in time but sold his establishment to Maples & Morris a couple of weeks ago, has gone to Hansburg to work for the Alvarado mining company, a company with whom he is employed are adjusting new fans and a gasoline hoist at their copper mines, preparatory to the execution of extensive development.

Misses Duffy and Reed, prominent young ladies of this place, drove up to Socorro this week where they were pleasantly entertained for a few hours by friends.

Maples and Morris, the blacksmiths who embarked in business on the first of the month, have placed a new force in their shops and now they are ready to turn out any and all orders in a first-class, workmanlike manner.

In a few days Mr. Apolonia will hang out a sign near the Duffy hotel, which will bear the inscription, "The Only Meat Market in Town." The gentleman was out this week rounding up his cattle.
