GERMANS DROP BOMBS ON U. S. AND BRITISH HOSPITALS; MANY DIE

(By Associated Press)

With the American Army in France, Thursday, May 30.—German aeroplanes made a perfidious raid on the area held by the American lines in Rheims last night. Bombs were dropped on all sides of one of the largest hospitals in a town many miles to the rear of the front. American and French wounded soldiers were carried to cellars and cared for by American nurses and members of the American Red Cross.

Only a few persons were injured by flying glass, as most of the windows in the hospital had been shattered by bombs dropped the previous night. Several private houses were wrecked and a number of civilians, including several babies, were killed and injured.

In some instances the bombs fell within thirty and forty feet of a hospital building, but fortunately there were no direct hits. A French nurse, her mother and two little sisters were killed in a house a short distance from a hospital.

Another nurse was standing on the upper floor of the hospital ministering to patients when a piece of bomb struck her, piercing her lung.

Five American nurses were in the same hospital. They were Miss Natalie Scott of New Orleans, Miss Helen Spaulding of Brooklyn, Miss Mary McAdoo of Atlanta, Miss Blanche Gilbert of Cleveland, and Miss Constance Cook of San Francisco.

With the British Army in France, May 31.—Another big British hospital was bombed by German airmen early yesterday morning and once more medical workers and some patients were killed or wounded.

The hospital caught fire after a large section of the building had been demolished by a bomb. A few women nurses were among the slain and their bodies together with those of a considerable number more of the personnel and patients buried in the ruins, according to the latest reports.

GERMANS MISTREAT THEIR OWN NERVOUS PATIENTS WITH ELECTRIC SHOCKS

Amsterdam, May 31.—Drastic methods employed by the German medical authorities in treating nervous patients in military hospitals in Munich resulted in revolts by the patients in which wards were wrecked, according to the Kroatische Volks-Zeitung. At Rosenheim, the hospital was burned by the rebellious patients. The paper adds that electric shocks of such strength are employed that the patients screamed in terror.

Uncle Sam's Aviators Have Sev-

Toul Front.

(By Associated Press)

With the American Army in France, Thursday, May 30.—There was much aerial activity on the front northwest of Toul today and two, if not three, German machines were shot down.

Lieutenant Edward Rickenbacker, the former automobile racer, put only strength above one machine, but resolute Lieutenant James A. Meissner of Illinois, after his machine had been damaged, fought hand-to-hand with his plane and three mosquitoes. After he had fired a hundred rounds into one of the fighters, it fell crashing to the ground. The lieutenant turned and attacked another which sought safety in flight. Meanwhile the remaining German machine had descended too low for Rickenbacker to chase.

As he was returning to behind the American lines Rickenbacker, after having shot down German airplanes coming toward him. He turned and saw Lieutenant Meissner, who had flown high, attack one enemy but from just as a sun and missile air plane attacked Meissner. Meissner's machine exploded with one of the enemy and a wisp of the American smoke was left. Meissner came down toward home when a man's voice panted saying that he was strafed, then flying off said Meissner.

Rickenbacker made a long dive and drove off the German with his machine gun, undoubtedly saving Meissner. The result took place over Toulon.

In another fight two American pilots were forced to withdraw because their gas became ignited but as they attacked the enemy.

Another pilot unconserved fire from machine and had fired six bursts without apparent damage and the enemy withdrew.

Later the Americans saw two enemy machines over Armentier. They attempted to get away as the Americans came up, but two Americans got on the tail of one of the enemy machines. Hundreds of bullets were fired into the fuselage of the German airplane and it crashed into a wood. The other enemy machine was chased down by an American and it was seen to overturn as it reached the ground. The results of several other combats have not yet been reported.

An American aviator was captured by the Germans in No Man's Land after his machine had been damaged in the fight, between five American machines and a German squadron. The American aviator was last seen going into the enemy trenches under cover of German rifles.

Captain Spencer added that the same lesson he was also on the last prepared by German secret agents of 4500 German men and women. Captain Spencer did not deduce that the horses named were sold to be subjected to cruel and inhuman treatment.

Captain Spencer said he was born in the United States and had served in the American army.

GERMAN FORCES SAID TO BE APPROACHING RIVER AT 2 POINTS

Center of Invaders' Army Keeps Moving Forward, Though at Slackened Pace; Movement Against Allied Flank Connects Present Line With Somme Battlefield; Several Enemy Attacks Break Down.

(By Associated Press)
London, May 31.—The Germans in their Champagne offensive in France have now reached the right bank of the river Marne on a ten-mile front, according to the statement given to the Associated Press today by the British general staff.

Keeping the tide of their advance in the center flowing strongly, although seemingly less swiftly toward the Marne, the Germans simultaneously have executed a stroke on the allied left flank that has extended the battle line westward and virtually linked up the present battlefield with that of the Somme.

The attack was delivered along the Ailette river, northwest of Soissons. Sweeping forward in the salient that projected between the Somme and the Aisne battlefields, the Germans drove the allied line back so that it now runs northwestward from the vicinity of Soissons, through Epagny and Blerancourt to the Oise river, apparently at its point of junction with the Oise canal about eight miles east of Novoy.

The Novoy area was included within the field of the German offensive in March, when the French established new lines along the Oise and the Oise canal to the east and southwest of that town after being driven back below St. Quentin. The German drive down the Oise valley toward Paris was then checked. The present offensive movement here suggests the possibility of its resumption.

The advance in the center has brought the Germans within two miles of the Marne at one point. Paris dispatches report: The wedge here appears increasingly narrow, however, and on its flanks below Soissons and Rethondes the enemy is reported firmly held.

The French war office announces the breaking down of enemy attacks in the Suissons area and to the south while on the allied right the line extending northwestward toward Rethondes from the neighborhood of Verzy appears virtually unchanged, the Germans failing in all their efforts to win ground.

The energetic defense on the right wing is exemplified by the battle of Thilliers, three miles east of Rethondes, where the Germans entered the town only to be driven out by a French counter-attack.

By such resistance the safety of Rethondes is momentarily safeguarded, but observers of the operations view its ultimate fall as apparently inevitable.

The probability of German penetration right up to the banks of the Marne in the center of the advance is likewise indicated in the news dispatches which mention the close approach of the Germans to Chateau-Thierry and Dhomers, both of which towns are on the Marne river. The civilian populations left Chateau-Thierry and some of the refugees left it have already passed through Paray for the interior.

On the British front the Germans are active with their artillery west of Amiens and in the Albert region to the north as well as on portions of the Flanders front, but no important movements of note are reported.

In the Verdun sector on the French front the Americans have carried out a successful raid.

Russian forces were active last night and this morning hunting villages beyond our lines without regard to military objectives.

The 2nd Russian reserves division, from which the Americans took prisoners in the fighting at Tantilly, is commanded by General the Baltic and Slav. This officer serves on both the Russian and western fronts and came to Tantilly between May 12 and 13. His division participated in the German offensive on the Marne in May 1915, which pierced the Russian front in Galicia.

We believe each issue gets better. We believe so largely because so many of the good folk of Rural New Mexico have written us such warm, encouraging letters. We feel as though we have already been more than rewarded for our efforts, for out of these letters have come the knowledge that we are giving to the ranch home and the farm home a paper that fills a want that has been neglected since the state was first inhabited. The letters have come from all classes, all sections, all

And He Girded Up His Loins

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

I was just looking, said the philosopher—the philosopher was a commercial traveler and sold shoes—I was just looking, he said, as he lit his pipe, put his foot on the window rail and tipped back his chair, so that he could gaze upon the passers-by as they walked along the sidewalk in front of the Commercial House—I was just looking at that soldier man who went by, and particularly at his legs.

Did it ever occur to you, he continued, that the first thing they do to a man, when they put a uniform on him for any kind of active service, is to eliminate pants?

You mean trousers? insinuated the school-teacher.

Sure, replied the philosopher. That's what I said, trousers, pants, you know.

The school-teacher smiled what's-the-usual, but kept still.

Pants, pursued the philosopher, are leg-clothes that flap. They are loose at the bottom. Nobody used to wear 'em in the good old days.

Can you think of Caesar or Alexander or Napoleon or Loney the Great wearing things like these we've got on? No, sir. They all had knee breeches. Or maybe, like old Socrates, went around in their underwear with a table-cloth for a wrap.

And in the Bible, whenever a man was getting ready to run or fight or rassle or anything, it says, And he girded up his loins and smote him, or whatever it was.

Girding up the loins is the symbol of efficiency. So is girding up the legs. Everything loose-flowing is supposed to be clamped down when you start anything.

A bicycle rider puts steel clamps around his ankles to hold his pants snug there. The chauffeur and the aviator and the soldier wear tight-fitting things up to their knees.

Everybody tightens up except sailors and women. And sailors roll up their pants when they swab the deck, and they probably wear 'em loose other times so they can shuck 'em quick when they have to dive.

And women are coming to it. I see these new women conductors on the street cars have pants and puttees or spats or whatever you call 'em.

It's a grand idea. I wish Hoover or Garfield or some other czar would issue an order prohibiting anything loose below the knees. Then we'd get busy. Have regular preparedness. A nation in knick-ernockers. Uncle Sam girds up his loins.

Some ideal! Eh, what?

Fashions for Americans

THE FROCK shown in the sketch features a three-fabric combination silk, available in rather generous quantities of the present time, is used for the main portion of the dress. The vest employs cotton, a sheer, fine batiste, and the same is used for the collar. The hemline of collar, sleeves, waist and skirt is of serge. In the frock as designed black taffeta, navy serge, and white batiste are combined. This would be especially becoming to a woman of slender figure, or at least to a woman whose hip curves are very slight. As will be noted, the bandings of serge and taffeta form a rather wide, straight girdle and give the dress a generally straight silhouette, the fullness of the gathered-on skirt running several inches below the normal waistline. The skirt is of the veil type, opening over a plain and narrow underneath skirt of taffeta.

Taffeta is distinctly a summer silk, and there is quite a marked demand for it this season.

A small fullness is let into the bodice of the frock shown, and except for the vest, the back is cut exactly like the front—that is, the girdle extends all around, and the arrangement of the gathers is also a feature of the back. The bodice fastens invisibly at the left front.

Now that really warm weather has come and the spring street frock of serge must be for comfort's sake, replaced by dresses of lighter weight materials, it may not be amiss to urge that good care be taken of the wool fabric frock. Wool materials will certainly be scarce in the fall, and the price scale is a constantly ascending one. Two and three fabric frocks will be very much the vogue again, and it is abundantly the part of wisdom to hold on to all wool fabric garments, with their make-over possibilities in mind.

PRIVATE DANNY IN FRANCE

By FRAZIER HUNT

WELL, tomorrow I guess we are going to leave this port and go back into the interior of France to a training camp and after we stay there a little while we will rejoin into the trenches and show the Germans how to really fight. We been in this old hell a week now and everybody is nuts to get to work and see some of the country.

I guess people who stay at home and never travel don't even know how different a certain land is from back home. In the first place everything is old—even most of the people you see around the streets. The buildings down here are never more than four or five stories high, and the streets are about as straight as a deep ditch, and mostly narrow and paved with cobble stone that's about 500 years old, and they got the funniest street cars and they ain't chiseled you 15 centimes which is three cents to ride anywhere on them. And you never see horses hitched like ours but one is always in front of the other and instead of two wheelless wagons, they got big high two-wheeled carts that are long and sleek, like they would upset if you looked at one end harder than the other.

In fact you wouldn't believe that everything could be so funny and different from the way it ought to be just take that language turmance what none of us soldiers can understand is why they have to call every thing by an odd name. Now there's an ordinary grocery store, do you suppose to a minute that those Frenchies call it a Groceries Store? They certainly do not, they call it an Epicerie. And how anybody who was looking for a grocery store would go into one of them places with a name like that is by me fed over the bones.

Little Stories for Bedtime

At the Very Last Minute.

NEVER had the little people of the forest forest been more excited than they were when they saw that Prickly Porky the Porcupine intended to come down on the ground where Buster Bear was waiting for him. It meant that Buster had got to do one of two things either he must make good his threat that he would shake Prickly Porky until every little spear fell off of his coat or he must confess himself afraid to touch Prickly Porky.

"Well never touch Prickly Porky" said Teddy Fox. "He's just as much afraid of Prickly Porky as I am. I'll tell no boasting and great size he'll find some excuse for backing out."

With this view of things, one of the others agreed. Still there was just a chance that Buster was so angry he would forget to be careful. There was just a chance that he might do what he had promised to do. So each one of the little people looking on held his breath as Prickly Porky finally dropped to the ground with a little groan and turned to face Buster bear.

Buster bear, some one spoke,

Just "A Thing Apart"

He is not young, not too professed himself, nor wise. I will quote a few points from his conversation with me:

"A woman may like kindness in a man but she never loves it. She loves courtesy. She loves to be tutored by doubts one moment. Then she loves to seek the quick answers the next.

"A woman may indignantly dismiss the ugly boy who won the girl in earlier days but is silent and docile when he is mentioned to her.

"A woman may indignantly dismiss the ugly boy who was the good in earlier days but is silent and docile when he is mentioned to her.

"A man or woman, I have found, is not the sort of creature that is wise on the outside of say. The sort of forty fives I usually learned that women cannot be taught. He knows that each one is an intricate puzzle to be solved by painstaking effort. The youth of another known it all. He can please any woman in five minutes. That is just the arrogance of youthful ignorance. It takes years of hard knocks to shake his confidence. Now my brilliant friend is a revelation.

With this view of things, one of the others agreed. Still there was just a chance that Buster was so angry he would forget to be careful. There was just a chance that he might do what he had promised to do. So each one of the little people looking on held his breath as Prickly Porky finally dropped to the ground with a little groan and turned to face Buster bear.

"Buster doesn't dare touch him," shouted Chatterer the Red Squirrel in a most provoking way.

"Of course he doesn't," cried Squeaky Jay. "He's afraid."

Buster was almost too angry to think. He reached out a big paw like a blash as he saw what he thought was a chance. But quick as he was Prickly Porky was quicker. What did he do? Why, he rolled himself into a prickly ball so that there wasn't a single place unprotected by those prickly little spears. Buster reached out and very carefully touched some of those little spears with his great long claws. At that very minute a sound came floating through the forest. Prickly Porky. It was a whistle the whistle of Farmer Brown's boy and it was coming which this country consents because of its relative failure to rear and to educate a healthy, virile and well-equipped race of children and young people.

There is no investment comparable to this, no national economy so fundamental. There is also no waste so irretrievable as that of a nation which is careless of its rising generation.

And the goal is not an industrial machine, a technical workman, a "hand" available merely for the increase of material output and the acquisition of a wage at the earliest possible moment, but a human personality, well grown and ready in body and mind, able to work, able to play a good citizen, the healthy parent of a future generation.

England's need is no less our need. We too must save our children, must give all of them a better chance than we have been giving to develop into happy, healthy and successful men and women.

The campaign now being conducted by the Children's Bureau and the women's committee of the national defense offers us a chance both to serve and to learn. For the children's sake for the nation's sake let us not miss the chance it offers.

In every community there are local committees at work co-operation with these can be effected through the municipal health authorities, or by writing to Dr. Jessie B. Perrotto, executive chairman, child welfare department, women's committee, council of national defense, Washington, D. C.

"A man or woman, I have found, is not the sort of creature that is wise on the outside of say. The sort of forty fives I usually learned that women cannot be taught. He knows that each one is an intricate puzzle to be solved by painstaking effort. The youth of another known it all. He can please any woman in five minutes. That is just the arrogance of youthful ignorance. It takes years of hard knocks to shake his confidence. Now my brilliant friend is a revelation.

With this view of things, one of the others agreed. Still there was just a chance that Buster was so angry he would forget to be careful. There was just a chance that he might do what he had promised to do. So each one of the little people looking on held his breath as Prickly Porky finally dropped to the ground with a little groan and turned to face Buster bear.

Hes a son, said Prickly Porky with a funny little growl. "Here I am all ready to be shaken until all the little spears fall out of my coat

"Buster doesn't dare touch him," shouted Chatterer the Red Squirrel in a most provoking way.

"Of course he doesn't," cried Squeaky Jay. "He's afraid."

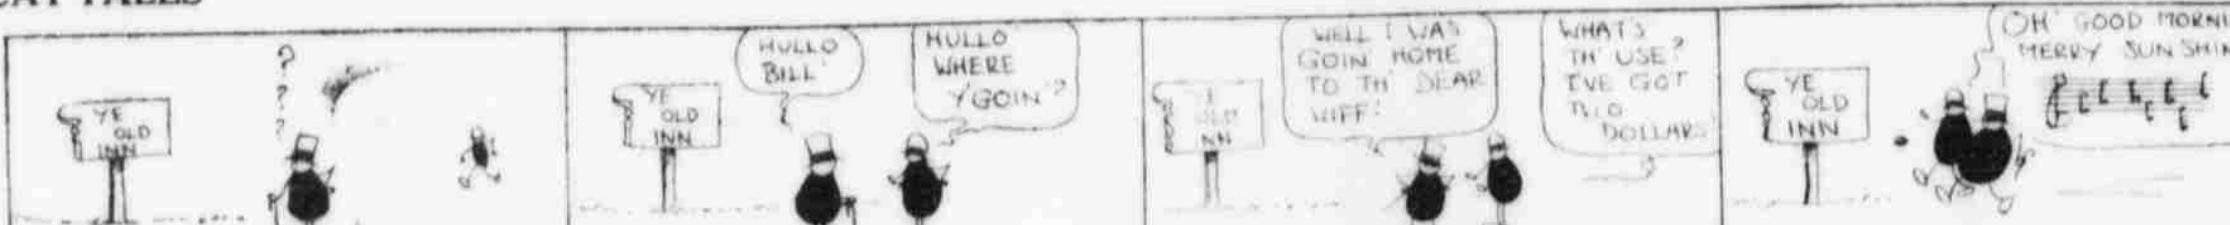

Buster was almost too angry to think. He reached out a big paw like a blash as he saw what he thought was a chance. But quick as he was Prickly Porky was quicker. What did he do? Why, he rolled himself into a prickly ball so that there wasn't a single place unprotected by those prickly little spears. Buster reached out and very carefully touched some of those little spears with his great long claws. At that very minute a sound came floating through the forest. Prickly Porky. It was a whistle the whistle of Farmer Brown's boy and it was coming

COUNTY'S QUOTA OF MECHANICS IS INCREASED TO 65

Thirty-five Have Volunteered and Draft Board Will Select Remainder This Afternoon; Will Entrain on Night of June 8.

Bernalillo county's quota under the call for mechanics for the national army has been increased. The draft board today received instructions from Capt. H. C. Head, legal adviser to the governor, to entrain thirty-five men. First instructions to the board stated that the county's quota would be fifty.

The raise was due to the fact that several counties were not able to supply the quota demanded of them. Only men who had grammar school educations and who had mechanical ability were eligible. These counties did not have enough registrants who met these requirements, so Captain Head asked Bernalillo to make up the deficiency, believing it would have no difficulty in supplying fifteen additional men on account of the location here of tuberculosis and the Santa Fe shorts.

The quota of mechanics will entrain here on the night of June 8. They must be at Camp Arky, Austin, Texas, by June 16.

The draft board has thus afternoon selected thirty men for the quota, thirty-five having volunteered. Those who were selected are:

GOLD POURING INTO WAR CHESTS OF THE EAST, SAYS RABBI

Bergman Reports Generosity of Patriots in Larger Cities, Where Great Prosperity Prevails; B Nai Brith Meeting a Success.

That gold is pouring into the war chests of eastern cities at an amazing rate, is the impression brought back home by Rabbi Louis Bergman who returned last night from the fifty-ninth annual convention of the B'nai Brith Lodge No. 2 of the independent Order of B'nai Brith held at Akron, Ohio, May 26-28.

"The large eastern centers are surpassing funds not only for national but also local needs brought about by the war," said Dr. Bergman today. "And they are overshadowing their quotas at a lively rate. For example, Akron's minimum was $1,000,000 and her citizens have already contributed $2,000,000. Cleveland's quota was $6,000,000 but her contributions amount to $11,000,000 and so on down the line."

The east is passing through a remarkable period of prosperity. Estimates are falling not far from one or two per cent for six months at one time, stated Bergman respectfully. But the B'nai Brith which is a Jewish benevolent organization that carries on the spirit, orphanages and other philanthropic enterprises, is devoting its chief energies this year to welfare work among soldiers and sailors and their families.

The badge of the convention was chevrons, named in a miniature banner as symbolizing Akron's principal industry. Louisville has been chosen as next year's convention city, and the rabbi is wondering how a bottle of whisky even in miniature may be converted into a frame for a badge.

Private Redding Will Speak Saturday Night

The date for the lecture by Private Jimmy E. Redding, member of Glenn and Pershing's expeditionary force, has been changed. He will speak Saturday night instead of tonight. The change was made in order that he might speak at the High School auditorium. The high school commencement exercises will be held in the auditorium tonight.

The date for the lecture by the B'nai Brith on trial in the district court, selected shortly before noon today in the admission of testimony by L. E. Shepherd, first vice president of the Order of B'nai Brith, was thrown out, the defense called it a witness. The attorneys for the plaintiff, Frank A. Murphy, contended that Mr. Shepherd's testimony would not be material.

Judge Herbert P. Reynolds, presiding at the trial, had not given his decision on the objection when counsel argued for the noon recess. He was expected to announce his ruling shortly after the conclusion of court at 2 o'clock. It is to continue the objection the trial probably will end soon afterward.

Judge Reynolds has not yet given his decision on the rule at the close of the trial. There is possibility that he may take it under advisement and not announce his findings until a later time.

Stake of Thousand Dollars Put Up in Goat Roping Match

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE TO THE HERALD
From ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—A thousand dollars in cash and good chili form one of the contributions which will contribute into the fourth annual round-up of the New Mexico cowboys. The round-up association, to be held here Saturday, June 3, Colored U. S. Dragoons, better known as Idaho Bill, will be here with a string of the mightiest mags he has been able to put up in many a round of the shooting west. The boys who attempt to ride these mags will either display good horsemanship or might be suddenly in such a soft spot.

Either Fred, citizen of Arkansas City, Kan., or J. A. Wright of Brady, Texas, will leave the country with enough money to make his way of an income tax collector. Each has put up a stock totalling $1000 that can beat the other coming goats. The one who loses his goat loses his mags.

There is no lack of talent interested in the show, despite the war. New Mexico cowboys are coming in droves to get a cut at the $1000 in prizes and because none but the largest roundups have survived this year, a lot of contest hands are writing in from all over the west that they are on their way. The roundup is to be made the occasion for a statewide patriotic demonstration.

High Court Judges

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE TO THE HERALD
From ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—The state legislature seems almost powerless to understand that an infant who has been sentenced to a 10-year term, and has been freed from the depths of the lowest court, must remain in prison while awaiting a new trial. The court feels that a sentence for murder in the second degree of from 10 to 20 years in the penitentiary, is a sentence of imprisonment for life within the meaning of those words as used in the section. The court takes another knowledge that as in 10 years a person of 20 years behind the bars is still of life.

The decision resulting from the application of the attorney of Charles W. Johnson, the young murderer, comes this week. Sentence of the number of 10 years was confirmed by Justice of the Peace on April 10 of this year in a hearing before

In the Chaves county court of justice A. Peterson, engineer of St. Louis, was acting in capacity of a constable prisoner consisting of a three-room dwelling house, windmill, garage, chicken house and other things, in which defendant was confined against his will, judgment of the court below was reversed and remanded.

The supreme court held that the purchaser from the government of public lands is entitled when he takes possession to the improvements on the premises as being part of the real estate.

Mora Tax Records Destroyed by Fire

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE TO THE HERALD
From ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—C. E. Strong's office in Mora on Wednesday destroyed practically all of the Mora county tax records. A duplicate set in file at the offices of the state tax commission was handed to the State Traveling Auditor A. C. Whittier who left yesterday for Mora with a full volume of figures.

Mr. Whittier will assist in writing up the rolls. In the second half of the year taxes are due today the work will be rushed in order to prevent mass collections. The census office is in an oldish building just back of the court house.
