National Republican Ticket

For President—
WILLIAM MCCKINLEY, OF OHIO.
For Vice President—
THEODORE ROOSEVELT, OF NEW YORK.

The Alabama is the seventh American battleship to be finished. Ten more are under way and six big cruisers are ordered.

Napoleon declined the suggestion of conquering China, the ground that the Chinese would acquire the art of war and become dangerous.

The petrifaction of a giant has been unearthed in Pennsylvania, and the Denver Post suggests that it was probably pulled off in some prehistoric campaign.

The Washington correspondent of The Citizen writes: "After many visits to the attorney general he promised that the judge for the Fifth Judicial district would surely be appointed within the next two or three days."

The democrats will hold a county convention on Saturday, Sept. 23, at the court house at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of selecting twenty-one delegates to attend a territorial convention at Santa Fe, Oct. 4, to nominate a candidate for delegate to congress. The precinct primaries will be held on Monday evening, Sept. 15.

Railroad managers have been compelled to withdraw free pass privileges to presidential candidates who chase about the country making speeches. They give notice that hereafter the candidate for president must pay his way. Bryan worked the roads so persistently and continuously that he grew burdensome as a deadhead.

VOTE OF MAINE.
The foolish notion of Mr. Bryan that the republicans were going to establish an empire in the United States, was intended to capture the vote of the New England states where his cheap money notions had been repudiated. The vote in Vermont and Maine shows that the people have no confidence in the family wails of Mr. Bryan and his conglomerated crowd of dyspeptic followers. The democrats refuse to follow him into the populist camp and he will be beaten in November as badly as poor old Greeley was slaughtered in 1872.

THE GALVESTON DISASTER.
One of the horrors of the year is the frightful disaster that has befallen the city of Galveston. Wind-swept and wave-tossed, the principal city of Texas is in ruins and thousands of its inhabitants killed by the falling water and drowned in the raging waters of the gulf.
Galveston, a city of 65,000 people, is located on a flat sandy island, twelve miles long and three miles wide at its widest part. The city, however, is on one of the points of the island, which is only one mile wide in the center of the city. It is separated from the mainland by an estuary or winding bay four miles long and twelve feet deep. The island of Galveston is cut without any connection with the mainland by four bridges which were from four to six miles long.

The storm of Saturday was the worst that ever struck the oddly located city of Galveston, but was not the first by any means. In 1858 a storm killed great waves entirely through the city. For eleven days it was cut off from communication with the mainland. Streets, foundations and sidewalks throughout the city are never secure except when built upon deeply driven wooden piles, on rock foundations twenty feet deep. The sand is continually shifting and buildings are continually being washed away by the waves. The city is a subject to change without notice.
During one of these occasions, hurricanes giant waves rush in from the gulf. Mountains of water weighing thousands of tons and as high as a one-story house roll in with fearful force. No ordinary structure can withstand their weight and momentum. Why it is that a city should have been built in such a place is difficult at this distance to understand. In other times than during these infrequent storms it is a city of modern facilities, great commerce and more metropolitan enterprise than is to be found in the average southern city.

FASNING OF THE PRAIRIE DOG.
The day of the prairie dog is passing, says the Topeka Journal. In a few years that picturesque little animal will be known only in picture books and in musty collections of stuffed animals. He will soon wave a farewell to the prairie and take his place by the side of the buffalo who lives only in the memory of the old frontiersmen. Every person who has lived in the west will be sorry when the prairie dog family has passed in its final checks. There is not a man now living who was called in the west who, in his boyhood days, did not try to make a household pet of the prairie dog and to these men the passing of the little animal is the removal of a boyhood playmate. Their villages have afforded amusement for many a western boy who would take more pleasure in them than an eastern boy would in the finest zoological garden, and the prairie dog, with its dogs, owls and rattlesnakes was a zoological garden not to be passed with a glance.

The agricultural department has decided that the dogs kill the grass and ruin good grazing land, consequently that department has put its chemists to work and they have discovered a poison which is put up in such tempting shape that well regulated and at other times peaceful prairie dog families will fight for the first bite. The extermination of the prairie dog has been ordered and he must go. The hole that knew him once has such a record for absolutely curing female ills and kidney troubles as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Medicines that are advertised to cure everything cannot be specific for anything. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will not cure every kind of illness that may afflict men, women and children, but it will and does cure all the ills peculiar to women.

This is a fact indisputable and can be verified by more than a million women.

If you are sick don't experiment, take the medicine that has the record of the largest number of cures.
