A few random thoughts from your editor as 1990 draws to a close. How did you like the results of the recent elections? In New Mexico two competent contenders vied for the governorship. Veteran Governor Bruce King bested young and interesting, Frank Bond. New Mexico stood to benefit, I firmly believe, from either man. Mr. Bond is young enough to succeed Mr. King eight years down the New Mexico political road. To be sure Governor King must run for reelection in four years, but in a strongly Democratic state, throughly honest, sound, politically astute, Bruce King will be almost unbeatable for reelection in 1994. Hang in there Frank Bond; I would like to see what you can do for New Mexico as its Governor.

To my disappointment arch-bigot Jesse Helms was returned to the U.S. Senate. We are all the losers.

While not excusing Presidential inap­titude over the budget/deficit issue, I express a personal view of Congress as it has recently attempted to deal with national concerns: individual intelligence, collectively turkeys.

In the last issue I failed to express my personal gratitude to Mark Harberts for gathering together the material and planning the layout for the WMR Awards issue of New Mexico Architecture.

This past fall saw the passing of a close friend and colleague of many years. Mildred L. Britelle died on September 7, 1990 at the age of 85. Mildred became actively involved with New Mexico Architecture when her late husband Miles Britelle, Sr., AIA assumed the role of Advertising Director with the March-April 1960 issue. She served as our Financial Secretary and Circulation Manager until the fall of 1979 when she assumed the additional burden of Advertising Director. She continued to serve the magazine faithfully and efficiently until she retired in 1984.

We can never find ways to justly honor Mildred Britelle for her long years of dedicated labor in the often financially troubled arena of magazine production. No words that I can write can speak adequately to the homage due. I regret that I must say - Goodbye Mildred.
