CONTRIBUTORS

John J. Culley has bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of New Mexico and a doctorate from the University of Virginia. An earlier article on Japanese Americans received the Oscar O. Winther Award from the Western History Association. Culley wishes to acknowledge the support of the Organized Research Fund of West Texas State University, where he is professor of American history.

Robert W. Larson is professor of history at the University of Northern Colorado and author of New Mexico's Quest for Statehood, 1846-1912 and New Mexico Populism: A Study of Radical Protest in a Western Territory. His Populism in the Mountain West is forthcoming from UNM Press. "Territorial Politics and Cultural Impact" was part of an address given in Santa Fe on 18 April 1984 for the Men on the Rio Grande series, sponsored by the College of Santa Fe and the School of American Research.

Thomas L. Altherr is an associate professor of history at Metropolitan State College in Denver, where he teaches a variety of courses, including American environmental history. The present essay is from a proposed book on the Pajarito issue, 1900-1978.

Michael Welsh is currently on the faculty of the history department of UNM and also teaches in the Graduate Institute of St. John's College, Santa Fe. His article is from a forthcoming manuscript entitled, Mission in the Desert: The Albuquerque District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 1935-1985.

THE NEW MEXICO HISTORICAL REVIEW is owned and published quarterly by the University of New Mexico. Copyright 1985 by the Regents of the University of New Mexico. The journal's primary interests include the Spanish Colonial viceroyalty, Spanish exploration, and Spanish colonization efforts north of Mexico City; northern Mexican provinces to 1848; territorial and statehood of New Mexico; and all peripheral material deemed relevant to an understanding of these regions.
