THE QUAY TRIAL.

Much Expert Evidence Heard in the Celebrated Case.

Boss Croker Before an Investigation Committee in New York.

Gang of Oklahoma Desperados Sent to the Penitentiary.

SPAIN WILL BUILD WARSHIPS.

Philadelphia, April 14.—The fifth day's proceedings in the trial of ex-senator Quay opened with a re-examination of L. E. Hagen, handwriting expert. Hagen identified the handwriting of Cashier Hopkins in a letter. No mention of the contents or purport was made.

Albert B. Taylor, receiving teller, was recalled and identified the handwriting of Hopkins in the "black book" and "blue book," small memorandum books found in the cashier's private desk.

In the former are records of individual loans, in the other bank loans and records of collateral are entered.

State Treasurer J. S. Beeson, who has been in the office since May last, was called to identify the signature on a letter to H. C. Greenwalt, clerk in the treasurer's office. Cross examination by Mr. Suleider.

The world began to be charged in a bill of indictment with entering into a conspiracy with Senator Quay. Did you ever enter into conspiracy with Mr. Quay?" Beeson answered laughingly, "No sir."

The district attorney formally offered in evidence all books of the bank identified by the clerks, except the "red book," stating, however, that he proposed to offer that interesting volume immediately.

On the point raised by the defense the court ruled that the books of the bank will be admitted so far as they go to prove the conspiracy charged.

The defense appeared to offer to be limited to Quay's account or "alleged account" as the counsel put it.

Judge Hiddle determined that Goldsmith, a former clerk in the People's bank should be permitted to testify as to entries in the "red book," and their connection with the regular bank books.

The decision practically admits the famous "red book" as evidence against Quay.

Goldsmith in reply to a question by the district attorney, testified that the "red book" undoubtedly was a book of the bank.

BOSS CROKER.

He Testifies Before a New York Investigating Committee.

New York, April 14.—The most investigating committee resumed its session here today. Investigation of the city government has been continued.

Chiefly to the police and building departments and to efforts to ascertain the extent of the influence exercised by Tammany Hall, are you not?" asked Boss Croker.

"You are the leader of the political organization generally known as Tammany Hall, are you not?" asked Boss Croker.

"You are generally conceded to be, are you not?" asked Boss Croker.

"Well," said Croker, "I am not talking for myself. If others say I am, I am. Croker agreed with Moss that the government of the city and country depended upon the existence of political parties."

Moss asked if the leadership generally accorded Croker was not based largely upon the fact that he had the reputation of being a truthful man. Croker said he tried to be truthful. Moss asked Croker a number of seemingly immaterial questions regarding the organization of Tammany Hall, when Croker said sharply:

"There is no use making speeches. I am the leader of a party; I acknowledge it. All those people are my friends and I am going to stick to them all the time."

There was a roar of applause as Croker finished. "We will try to accommodate you, Mr. Croker," replied the counsel. Croker said he gave prominent Tammany Hall Democrats a certain amount of advice and direction; sometimes they followed, sometimes they did not. Moss read a list of Tammany schemers. Croker admitted that all or nearly all held prominent positions in the city government.

Croker denied that he dictated appointments. He conceded that he had probably greater influence with the municipal administration than any other citizen. Could tell nothing about contributors to campaign funds; rendered no account to the finance committee of Tammany, of which he was chairman, of the money disbursed by him; judicial candidates contributed to the campaign fund, but not by compulsion. Croker said his partner in the real estate business was Peter F. Meyer, who was also connected with the dock board.

Croker said his firm had nearly all judicial sales. "Then you are working for your own pocket?" "All the time, same as you are. To the victor belongs the spoils," said Croker. "And to the boss belongs the lion's share of the plunder?" sneered Moss. "No plunder, no," said Croker, "nothing wrong in receiving the profits of a campaign through appointment of the organization."

FIELD MAKES REPORT.

Receiver of Savings Bank Files Report With Court.

No More Witnesses to Be Examined By Beef Investigators.

Destructive Floods in Wyoming and Railroad Traffic Suspended.

HOOP-IRON TRUST FORMED.

Hon. Neil B. Field to day filed his report as receiver of the New Mexico Savings Bank & Trust company in the district court.

"The report shows that from May 7, 1895, to April 7, 1899, the receiver has collected from debtors and received from sales of property the sum of $66,167.74 and by way of interest and from return of property the sum of $27,303.82, making a total of $93,471.56, which sums he has deposited as follows: He has paid to depositors and debenture holders $62,719.54, for attorney's fees (including $49,414 paid to Childers & Dobson and $13,305 paid to Collins, Goodrich, Barrow and Vincent, Mr. Saint's attorneys, for services rendered to him during his incumbency) the sum of $3,117.60; for court costs, $1,324.36; for taxes, $428.32; for miscellaneous expenses, including insurance premiums, commissions upon sales of property, repairs, traveling expenses, etc., $1,943.31; for salary of the receiver, forty-seven months at $200 per month, $9,400.00, and there was a loss of $45 on Columbia bonds delivered by Mr. Saint to the present receiver. There remains in bank $1,320.17. The balance shown to be due in excess of this amount is due to the fact that checks issued and charged in this statement have not been presented for payment.

"There remains in the hands of your receiver uncollected claims amounting to $67,247.34, some of which are in litigation and the remainder of which are being collected as rapidly as the interest of the trust will permit.

"There are claims refused to judgment and unsatisfied amounting to $12,112.17; stocks and bonds, book value, $8,240.14, and real estate, book value, $10,180.45, making total assets, book value, $10,180.45; while there is due depositors $23,128.73 and debenture holders $13,880.29, a total of $37,009.02, with interest, so that, if the assets realize 50 per cent of their book value, all creditors will be paid in full, principal and interest.

In reference to that part of the petition of J. T. Schlick et al., asking that he be removed as receiver, Mr. Field says:

"Your receiver did not solicit the original appointment to this trust, and does not now desire nor ever has desired to hold the receivership if, in the opinion of your honor, some other person can better protect the interests of the creditors, but he protests that he has administered the trust with an eye single to the interests of those creditors and with a grave concern for the responsibility upon him and that results establish the wisdom of his course."

The receiver describes the system he adopted of keeping the records of his office, and shows that it would have been impossible for the funds of the National bank, where the funds were kept, and not one dollar of such funds has been so used or diverted by your receiver.

There are appended to the report three statements of the assets and liabilities of the bank, one when Mr. Saint took charge, October 12, 1895; one at the time the present receiver took charge, May 7, 1899, and one April 7, 1899.
