On Sept. 14, the US Department of Labor and the Mexican Labor Secretariat approved a memorandum of understanding aimed at expanding cooperation and information exchange in labor affairs, such as employment security standards, and defining and enforcing child labor laws. Under a 1991 agreement, the two governments will create a commission to review implementation of cooperation programs and labor issues of bilateral interest. The commission, headed by Mexico's Secretary of Labor Arsenio Farrel Cubillas and US counterpart Lynn Martin, is to meet at least once a year. (Sources: La Jornada, El Universal, 09/15/92)
