According to an Oct. 12 report by the Chamber of Deputies treasury committee, the government allocated 24.8 trillion pesos (US$7.873 billion) to federal agencies and institutions over the first half of the year. The commission said the largest subsidies for institutions directly controlled by the government went to CONASUPO (Compania Nacional de Subsistencias Populares), the state-run basic foodstuffs processing and marketing company, and the national railroad Ferrocarriles Nacionales de Mexico. Institutions indirectly controlled by the federal government which received the largest subsidies were the public school system and the Universidad Nacional Autonoma de Mexico (UNAM).
